

THE MIXER AND SERVER

OFFICIAL JOURNAL
OF THE
Hotel and Restaurant Employes' International Alliance

— AND —
Bartenders' International League of America

AFFILIATED WITH THE
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

JERE L. SULLIVAN, EDITOR

VOLUME XXXI

PRESS OF
ROESSLER BROS., CINCINNATI, O., U. S. A.

2

INDEX

	Page
No. 1. JANUARY
Editorial:
1922	1
Between Ourselves (Keep the Crepehangers on the Move)....	2
Official:
Reminder to Secretaries.....	3
Charters Issued During December, 1921	4
How They Stand.....	4
Deaths During December, 1921..	4
Lost Membership Books for De- cember, 1921	4
Information Wanted—Walter Mor- gan	4
Monthly Letter and Decisions of President Flore	5
Financial Report of Secretary- Treasurer Sullivan	8
What Our Organizers Are Doing...	12
The Forum:
I See By the Papers.....	21
Abolish Unemployment.....	31
Predictors Confused.....	37
Billy Boyle Dead.....	37
Chat of the Craft:
A Decision Against Picketing.....	39
Whatever You Are (Poem).....	39
A Soft Answer.....	39
Believes in the Use of Printers' Ink	40
The Chease Brothers.....	40
A Definition of Liberty.....	40
We Tender Gracious and Generous Thanks	40
The Raindrops on Your Old Tin Hat (Poem).....	41
Why Pull a Boner?.....	41
Here's Recipe for Jugged Hare..	41
Get the Union Label Habit (Poem)	42
Let Us Tighten Up on That Citi- zenship Record	42
The More the Merrier.....	42
To the Half Million (Poem).....	42
Getting It Over.....	42
"Forget But Don't Forget".....	43
New U. S. Public Health Service Hospitals	43
Do You Fit in?.....	44
Those Were the Days.....	44
Have the Old War Club Ready for Advertising Fakery.....	44
Cheer Up, Fellers, There is Still a Chance	44
Sonnet	44

Correspondence from Local Unions:

Local 13,	San Antonio, Texas.....	46
Local 58,	New Orleans, La.....	48
Local 62,	Fresno, Calif.	52
Local 100,	Cleveland, Ohio.....	55
Local 152,	Minneapolis, Minn.	47
Local 175,	Buffalo, N. Y.	49
Local 196,	Buffalo, N. Y.	51
Local 279,	Philadelphia, Pa.	50
Local 299,	Burkburnett, Texas	45
Local 329,	Lynn, Mass.	49
Local 459,	Victoria, B. C.	49
Local 468,	Los Angeles, Calif.	52
Local 650,	Dallas, Tex.	47, 50
Local 763,	Rochester, N. Y.	46
Local 815,	Salt Lake City, Utah.....	50

Miscellaneous:

New Year's Card.....	2d cover
Shinney on Your Own Side.....	3d cover
"Open Shop is a Fraud," Church- man Asserts	3
Doctors Listen Cheerily as Dry Law is Panned	7
Well! Well!	7
Golden Rules	20
Watches With Two Hour-Hands ..	52

	Page
No. 2. FEBRUARY
Editorial:
There is Safety in Numbers.....	1
Between Ourselves (The Frowse).....	2
Official:
Negligent Secretaries	5
How They Stand.....	5
Deaths During January.....	5
New Charters	5
Lost Membership Books During January	5
Information Wanted—Walter Miles	5
Monthly Letter and Decisions of President Flore	6
Financial Report of Secretary- Treasurer Sullivan	9
What Our Organizers Are Doing...	13
The Forum:
I See By the Papers.....	21
Search and Seizure.....	31
The New Fight for Liberty.....	31
Obedience to Law.....	33
Must Be Reasonably Clean.....	34
Where Do You Fit?.....	35
Domestic Quarantine and Venereal Diseases	35
How the "Hub of the Universe" Voted	36
It Didn't	36
It is the Union Does These Things.....	36
Raised on Rum.....	36

Chat of the Craft:

Spring is Coming.....	37
The American "Blam" Association.....	37
Increase Your Vocabulary.....	37
The Auto Vamp Speaks (Poem).....	38
That Marvel, Your Watch.....	38
Get Their Number Now While the Getting is Good.....	38
Don't Get Chesty.....	38
Gumming the Cards.....	39
Proposed Oregon Fair Still in Em- bryo State.....	39
Unanswered Letters.....	39
Scooting Through the Air.....	39
Resolutions for 1922 (Poem).....	40
Unfortunate Omissions.....	40
United States Navy Nearly 100 Per Cent Pure American.....	40
A Tip to Press Secretaries.....	41
For Mrs. Joe LaFlam (Poem).....	41
Agitating Evasion of Our Laws.....	41
What It Really Means.....	42
Movie Magnates' Wisdom.....	42
The Labor Leader's Job.....	43
Happyland (Poem).....	43
The Spirit That Counts.....	44
Good News From the Rose City.....	44
Cheese Brothers.....	44

Correspondence from Local Unions:

Local 7,	Chicago, Ill.	54
Local 23,	Omaha, Neb.	46
Local 30,	San Francisco, Calif.	56
Local 106,	Cleveland, Ohio	43
Local 118,	Akron, Ohio	51
Local 135,	Tulsa, Okla.	61
Local 158,	Wichita Falls, Tex.	53
Local 175,	Buffalo, N. Y.	50
Local 196,	Buffalo, N. Y.	52
Local 216,	Toledo, Ohio	50
Local 223,	Des Moines, Iowa.	55
Local 237,	Pittsburgh, Pa.	53
Local 279,	Philadelphia, Pa.	49
Local 286,	Peoria, Ill.	48
Local 307,	Providence, R. I.	54
Local 308,	Portland, Me.	47
Local 329,	Lynn, Mass.	50
Local 459,	Victoria, B. C., Can.	55
Local 468,	Los Angeles, Calif.	55
Local 471,	Albany, N. Y.	45
Local 579,	Dayton, Ohio	56
Local 681,	Long Beach, Calif.	47
Local 705,	Detroit, Mich.	51
Local 748,	Fort Worth, Texas.	56
Local 763,	Rochester, N. Y.	49
Local 815,	Salt Lake City, Utah.	52

	Page
Miscellaneous:
Assurance or Impudence.....	2d cover
Somebody's Sister	3d cover
Appeal For Relief.....	4
Chaulmoogra Oil and Leprosy....	8
Fractional Responsibility	12
St. Louis Aldermen Vote for Sale of Beer and Light Wines.....	20
Whoosa Dubb?	56
Prospective Treat for Our Readers	56

Halftone:
John R. Huber, Local 286, Peoria,
Ill. 48
Complete Roster of Local Unions, 57-64

No. 3. MARCH

Editorial:
Members Who Have Ability.....	1
Between Ourselves (The Proper Way)	2
Official:
How They Stand.....	4
Charter Issued During February, 1922	4
Lost Membership Books for February, 1922	4
Deaths During February, 1922....	4
International Auditors	4
Letter and Decisions of President Flore	5
Financial Report of Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan	8
What Our Organizers Are Doing...	12

The Forum:

I See By the Papers.....	19
The Mexican Government Should Be Recognized	31
Law or No Law.....	32
Outbreak of Lawlessness.....	33
Prohibition Scare Heads.....	34
The Open Shop—An Analysis.....	35
“Denatured Americans”.....	36
Alfalfa.....	37
The “One Big” Union.....	37
Fanatical Majorities Infringe Up- on Right of Minority.....	38

Chat of the Craft:
Poetic Ad Tip.....	39
Quicksand's Characteristics.....	39
They Won't Come to You.....	39
Have They Changed or Have We?.....	40
"Today and Forever" (Poem).....	40
A Genuine Loss to Our Organization.....	40
A Million-Dollar Structure.....	41
May and December.....	41
Twinkle, Twinkle.....	41
Shades of the Pioneers!.....	41
Another Missourian.....	41
Elizabeth Ford (Poem).....	42
What a Difference a Few Hours Make.....	42
Ostrich Feathers Never Plucked Until Quills are Dried.....	43
Release (Poem).....	43
The New Broom Sweeps and Speaks.....	43
Praise Indeed.....	44
The Piker.....	44
The Monkey Glands (Poem).....	44
What Local Union Officers Should Know.....	44
The Way We Do It in Our Town.....	45
The Shamrock (Poem).....	45
An Inquisitive Individual with a Purpose.....	46
The Ruling Passion (Poem).....	46
When a Feller Needs a Friend (Poem).....	46
Ain't It the Truth?.....	46

THE MIXER AND SERVER

INDEX—Continued

	Page		Page		Page
Correspondence from Local Unions:		Getting An Early Start.....	43	Chat of the Craft:
Local 1, New York City, N. Y.	47	Now is the Time (Poem).....	43	In a Friendly Sort of Way (Poem)	41
Local 7, Chicago, Ill.	47	The Oldtimer.....	44	Another One of the Old Guard
Local 58, New Orleans, La.	50	Last Gasp of the Hot-Stove League		Passes On.....	41
Local 59, Milwaukee, Wis.	48	Before Adjournment.....	44	Some Class to Seattle Union Cooks	41
Local 106, Cleveland, O.	54	The Armies of Night.....	44	Home.....	41
Local 109, Newark, N. J.	54	Father Time Beckoned Again.....	45	We Wanted a Change and We Got
Local 135, Tulsa, Okla.	51	The Next Convention City.....	45	It (Poem).....	42
Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.	53	An Aberration (Poem).....	45	Real Eyes for the Blind.....	42
Local 198, Buffalo, N. Y.	52	Your Investment in the Union.....	45	California Reminders.....	42
Local 216, Toledo, O.	56	Pertinent Statistics.....	46	Big and Little Guys (Poem).....	42
Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	51	The Onus of the Bonus (Poem).....	46	Wuxtreel Read About It!.....	43
Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	55	Keeping in Touch with Old Friends	46	Will Hays' New Job.....	43
Local 329, Lynn, Mass.	56	The Knockers (Poem).....	47	Your Little Wife (Poem).....	43
Local 413, Tucson, Ariz.	51	What's the Matter with Kansas?	47	Footprints.....	43
Local 459, Victoria, B. C., Can.	47	Tell It to Your Secretary.....	47	"The Government To Be" (Poem)	44
Local 466, Wilmington, Del.	55			History of Labor Day.....	44
Local 471, Albany, N. Y.	52	Correspondence from Local Unions:		The Cheese Brothers.....	45
Local 480, Ft. Worth, Tex.	50	Local 2, Brooklyn, N. Y.	51	Five Hundred Delegates is Some
Local 592, Winnipeg, Man., Can.	51	Local 33, Seattle, Wash.	53	Crowd.....	45
Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.	49	Local 51, St. Louis, Mo.	56	Brainless Bankers Butting Into
Local 815, Salt Lake City, Utah.	49	Local 106, Cleveland, O.	54	Business of Wage Fixing.....	46
Yoder, Wyo.	53	Local 167, Cleveland, O.	49	Sincerity.....	46
		Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.	55	Day Dreams (Poem).....	46
Miscellaneous:		Local 196, Buffalo, N. Y.	52	Are You An Asset or a Liability
A Regular Fellow.....2d cover		Local 216, Toledo, O.	55	to Your Union?.....	46
"Peg".....3d cover		Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	50	Lest We Forget.....	47
Remember the Worm.....	3	Local 307, Providence, R. I.	48	Brotherhood (Poem).....	47
The Dream River.....	7	Local 311, Astoria, Ore.	54	Men 200,000 in Excess of Women
Helping Your Local Officers.....	11	Local 329, Lynn, Mass.	48	in Japan.....	47
Half-tone:		Local 492, Quebec, Que., Can.	51	"Dam the Secretary" (Poem).....	47
Louis Techner, Local 109, New-		Local 466, Wilmington, Del.	52	Do Not Repeat This Summer.....	47
ark, N. J., Absconder.....	54	Local 471, Albany, N. Y.	52	"The Hotel Lobby" (Poem).....	48
		Local 539, Charleston, S. C.	54	Attendance at Meetings Part of
		Local 659, Dallas, Tex.	56	Your Duty.....	48
		Local 815, Salt Lake City, Utah.	55	Legalized Bootlegging.....	48
		Yoder, Wyo.	56	Tax-Dodgers.....	48
No. 4. APRIL
Editorial:		Miscellaneous:		Correspondence from Local Unions:
"Look Before You Leap".....	1	Hammer or Horn.....2d cover		Local 7, Chicago, Ill.	61
Between Ourselves (Tips).....	2	When, Where and How.....3d cover		Local 31, Oakland, Cal.	50
Official:		Facts About Coal Miners.....	8	Local 106, Cleveland, O.	60
How They Stand.....	4	Burke's Impeachment of Hastings	4	Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.	58
Charters Issued During March,		$25,000 for the Woman Who Made		Local 189, Portland, Ore.	49
1922.....	4	Hash for Mark Hanna.....	7	Local 216, Toledo, O.	62
Deaths During March, 1922.....	4	And He Called Himself a Sport.....	11	Local 219, New York City, N. Y.	54
Lost Membership Books for March,		What Does He Look Like?.....	56	Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	57
1922.....	4			Local 239, Seattle, Wash.	63
Letter and Decisions of President		Half-tone:		Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	59
Flores.....	5	Christian Koch, Local 167, Cleve-		Local 307, Providence, R. I.	61
Financial Report of Secretary-		land, O.....	49	Local 327, Peoria, Ill.	62
Treasurer Sullivan.....	8			Local 329, Lynn, Mass.	49
What Our Organizers Are Doing... 12				Local 337, Cheyenne, Wyo.	62
The Forum:		No. 5. MAY		Local 397, Parsons, Kan.	55
I See By the Papers.....	15	Editorial:		Local 466, Wilmington, Del.	63
The Ditch.....	29	What We Promise.....	1	Local 484, Chicago, Ill.	61
The Unknown.....	31	Between Ourselves (Why They		Local 705, Detroit, Mich.	63
Old-Time Dishwasher is Gone		Quit Keeping Step).....	2	Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.	56
from San Francisco.....	32			Local 788, Springfield, Ill.	64
Rapid Growth of the Labor Bureau		Official:		Local 815, Salt Lake City, Utah.	58
The Disrupter's Policy.....	36	How They Stand.....	4	Local 865, Chicago, Ill.	54
Making Ready for the Future.....	37	Lost Membership Books for April.		Yoder, Wyo.	60
Encourage Apprentices to Become		Charters Issued During April.....	4
Inquisitive.....	37	Where is Edward Teller Coumbs?		Miscellaneous:
Don't Quit.....	37	Deaths During April.....	5	Warning or Prophecy?.....2d cover
In Praise of Carrots.....	37	Henry A. Zimmer, of Local 413.		Quacks.....3d cover
Home Brew.....	37	Short in His Accounts.....	5	A Tip to the "Oh, Shush" Guards	5
		Letter and Decisions of President		Get Acquainted.....	5
Chat of the Craft:		Flores.....	6	Perhaps This Will Make You Re-
The Spring Invasion.....	38	Financial Report of Secretary-		member.....	12
The Retort Courteous.....	38	Treasurer Sullivan.....	9	Doubting Thomases.....	12
Getting Ready for Big Game.....	38	What Our Organizers Are Doing... 13		Seattle Man is Exposed.....	16
Fort McHenry.....	39	The Forum:		Region of Absolute Silence.....	64
Centennial of Birth of Grant In-		I See By the Papers.....	17	This is Interesting.....	64
spires Muse.....	39	False Data Filed by Dry Body.....	30
Shall We Repeat and Make Good		A Tip for Proprietors and Waiters		Half-tones:
This Time?.....	39	Gompers Urges Modification of		Edward Teller Coumbs.....	4
Maybe So and Perhaps (Poem)...	40	Dry Enforcement Statute.....	32	M. Schachter, Local 219, New
When Writing to Your Friends.....	40	Crowd Cheers Denunciation of		York City, N. Y.....	55
Cheese Brothers.....	40	Dry Law.....	33	Charles S. Lowy, Local 219, New
What's the Answer?.....	40	Scheme to Undermine American		York City, N. Y.....	57
Then the Alarm Clock Went Off.		Labor Unions is Exposed.....	35	Leopold Pollak, Local 219, New
"Canada Profits by Rum Running"		Attitude of the American Federa-		York City, N. Y.....	58
"Tommy" West's Latest Song....	41	tion of Labor on Prohibition.....	35	George F. Anderson, Local 279,
Nothing Like Trying to Please....	41	An Act to Make Church-Going		Philadelphia, Pa.....	59
Protection of Roquelort Cheese....	41	Compulsory.....	36
If You Have Two Eyes, Keep 'Em		Lays Blame on Prohibition.....	37	Editorial:
Both Working.....	42	From the Patron's Viewpoint.....	38	Get the Label-Boosting Habit...	1
Teaching History By Song.....	42	Evolution of Catering in New York		Between Ourselves (Monthly Let-
The Wind in the Chimney (Poem)		Scabbing on the "Dicks".....	40	ters).....	2
Whassa Matter, Fellows; Punc-				Official:
ture or Blowout?.....	43			How They Stand.....	5

INDEX—Continued

Digitized by Google

THE MIXER AND SERVER

INDEX—Continued

	Page		Page		Page
Clearing the Bases.....	50	The Weak Spots (Poem).....	45	Information Wanted—Jack Voirol,
The Goods (Poem).....	50	"Them Days Have Gone Forever".....	45	Thomas Locke Kennedy, Max
The Cheese Brothers.....	50	What Labor Does.....	46	Glanzer, Allen Middleton and
Pendulums and Men (Poem).....	50	Skirts (Poem).....	46	Robert Willey.....	6
Give This Idea the Double "O".....	51	"This Will Bring You Back".....	47	Monthly Letter and Decisions of
Mistaken Identity.....	51	The Flapper (Poem).....	47	President Flore.....	7
Losing Trace of Members.....	51	What's the Answer?.....	47	Financial Report of Secretary-
Knocking Ahead of Time.....	51	Always Be the Best (Poem).....	48	Treasurer Sullivan.....	9
On Beyond (Poem).....	51	What Some of Your Bosses Think
		The Old Rag Carpet (Poem).....	48
Correspondence from Local Unions:		The Achievement of the Unorgan-		What Our Organizers Are Doing...	13
Local 33, Seattle, Wash.....	55	ized.....	48
Local 106, Cleveland, O.....	56	The Union and "Me".....	49	The Forum:
Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.....	54	Thank God for Fools (Poem).....	50	I See By the Papers.....	17
Local 177, Cincinnati, O.....	52	Just by Way of Comment.....	50	Humanity—Just People.....	36
Local 239, Seattle, Wash.....	55	Fame (Poem).....	50	Facts for Workers.....	37
Local 242, Charleston, W. Va.....	54	Organizer Bob Lyons Puts Can-		White Lunch Control Sold in East
Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.....	52	ton, O., on the Map.....	50	"Spirit of '78".....	45
Local 468, Los Angeles, Cal.....	56	Shooting Guff via the Chapeau		How It Feels to Be a "Scab".....	46
Local 815, Salt Lake City, Utah.....	54	Route.....	51	Battle Opens in San Francisco
		Salesmanship.....	51	Against Volstead Act.....	47
Miscellaneous:		Louisiana Adds Another Union to		History Repeats.....	48
Just a Hungry Dubb.....	2d cover	Its Credit.....	52	Inside the Earth.....	49
Having a Cracking Good Time		The Corner Cuddlers.....	52	Determined to Be the Leader in
.....	3d cover	Brownwood, Tex., Added to the		the "Bonanza" State.....	49
Disraeli.....	4	Roster of the Organization.....	52	Beer Price in Paris.....	49
The Solitudes (Poem).....	4	Because I Had a Friend (Poem).....	53	Knocking Wood.....	49
The Union Label.....	6	"Ain't It a Grand and Glorious		The Short Cut.....	49
Conductor's Dream (Poem).....	6	Feeling?".....	53
Prohibition Law Scored in Speech		I Will (Poem).....	53	Chat of the Craft:
by Judge Powell.....	9	Whose Fault is It?.....	53	The Statesman (Poem).....	50
Trees (Poem).....	13	In New York City.....	54	How Many Statesmen Have We in
Fables with a Moral.....	13	Cooks Prepare for Rainy Day.....	54	Our Ranks?.....	51
Hunting the Funny Story to Its		Without a Card (Poem).....	54	Hiding Your Light Under a Bushel
Lair.....	17	Coming or Going.....	54	Brings No Reward.....	51
Where is Hell? (Poem).....	57	Clean Overalls.....	55	The Quitter (Poem).....	51
		A Heavy Burden.....	55	Speaking of Big Things—Consider
Complete Roster of Local Unions, 58-64		Two Notices.....	55	U. S. Railways.....	52
		Famous Last Words.....	55	Why Not Try This Method This
		Kissin' 'Em (Poem).....	55	Winter?.....	52
		The Strike of "22" (Poem).....	56	The Lone Star State Reaching for
		Forty-two Thousand Spies in U.		the Top.....	52
		S. Pay.....	56	Hang Up the Tomahawk.....	52
		The Strongest Safety Vault.....	56	One-Way Traffic (Poem).....	53
		A Transformation.....	56	Were They Real Union Men?.....	53
				Them Days Are Gone Forever
No. 9. SEPTEMBER		Correspondence from Local Unions:		(Poem).....	54
Editorial:		Local 7, Chicago, Ill.....	59	Show Them How the Big Towns
To the Fellows That Can't.....	1	Local 58, New Orleans, La.....	60	Put It Over.....	54
Are You a Live Wire?.....	1	Local 106, Cleveland, O.....	61	The Derby Course.....	54
Live Wires.....	1	Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.....	63	Use Your Head (Poem).....	55
Why Be a "Selling-Plater".....	1	Local 207, Portland, Ore.....	61	Hot Stuff.....	55
Between Ourselves ("And Board")	2	Local 234, Detroit, Mich.....	59	The Story Hour.....	55
Official:		Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.....	60	Bottles (Poem).....	56
International Auditors.....	4	Local 300, Toronto, Ont., Can.....	62	Not So Very Funny at That.....	56
Deaths During August.....	4	Local 310, Portland, Ore.....	8	Try It.....	56
Lost Membership Books for Aug-		Local 327, Peoria, Ill.....	62	Decisions to Be Handed Down by ust.....	4	Local 468, Los Angeles, Cal.....	62	the High Commissioner of the
How They Stand.....	4	Local 556, St. Paul, Minn.....	63	Theater.....	57
A. F. of L. Letter.....	5	Local 637, Manitowoc, Wis.....	64	Must Learn How to Swim if They
Union Label Trades Department of		Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.....	57	Would Graduate.....	57
A. F. of L. Letter.....	5	Jackson, Mich.....	61	His Song of the Light (Poem).....	57
Information Wanted—Robert Du-		New York City, N. Y.....	64	Something to Ponder Over for a rand and Dan Ryan.....	6			Few Hours, or Longer.....	58
Monthly Letter and Decisions of				Folk Song (Poem).....	58
President Flore.....	7			Brandywine Creek.....	58
Financial Report of Secretary-				One Lesson Which the Strikers
Treasurer Sullivan.....	9			Learned.....	59
What Our Organizers Are Doing...	13	Miscellaneous:		The Hawkeve State Adds a New
		Did You "Muff" This One?..2d cover		Local to Its Roster.....	59
The Forum:		"Come-Back".....	3d cover	When You and I Were Young.....	60
I See By the Papers.....	17	Black Magic of Mongolia.....	3	Maggie.....	60
Facts for Workers.....	33	A Tribute to Elizabeth Maloney.....	6	Music Hath Charms.....	60
Evidence to the Contrary.....	36	This Government is no One-Man		Little Bo Peep Lost Her Sheep.....	60
All Pay Dues.....	38	Affair.....	6	It Can Be Done Again.....	60
Railroads Again Fail in the Na-		Stripes.....	6	Chicago Unions Getting Ready for tional Crisis.....	38	Justice—for Whom?.....	12	Next August.....	61
Using Force Without Stint.....	39	Prunes and Calories.....	16	They Were Drummer Boys.....	61
The Fundamental Issues.....	40			When Everybody Put Their
Nervous Breakdown.....	41	Half-tone:		Shoulders to the Wheel and
Limestone Diet for Wives Will		William Van Horn, Local 7, Chi-		Pushed.....	61
Make them Amiable.....	41	cago, Ill.....	59	Business is Business.....	61
Foster Emerges from Cover as a				Did He Have a Kick Coming to
Red Agitator of the First Order.	42			Him?.....	62
Armistice Day, November 11.....	42	Editorial:		The Reason.....	62
		Fight Not Over.....	1	Truth (Poem).....	62
		Between Ourselves (An Incident).....	2	In the "Sage Brush" State.....	62
Chat of the Craft:				Making It Easy.....	62
The Battle Cry of Freedom (Poem)	43	Official:
Did You Ever Notice It?.....	43	Acquire the "Show-Me" Habit.....	5	Correspondence from Local Unions:
The Wolverine State Comes to the		Deaths During September.....	5	Local 2, Brooklyn, N. Y.....	69
Front.....	43	Lost Membership Books for Sep-		Local 5, New York City, N. Y.....	71
Smiling Faces.....	43	tember.....	5	Local 7, Chicago, Ill.....	66
The Little Brown Hen (Poem).....	44	Charters Issued During September		Local 51, St. Louis, Mo.....	72
Taking Care of the Job.....	44	How They Stand.....	5	Local 62, Fresno, Cal.....	64
Indifferent Service a Menace to the		Notice to Officers and Members.....	6	Local 106, Cleveland, O.....	66
Organization.....	45

No. 10. OCTOBER

THE MIXER AND SERVER

INDEX—Continued

	Page		Page		Page
Local 239, Seattle, Wash.	64	A Father to His Son (Poem)	53	What Our Organizers Are Doing ...	18
Local 265, Bristow, Okla.	65	Slipping the "Bird" to the Organ- izers	53	The Forum:
Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	67	The Once Over	53	I See By the Papers	22
Local 402, San Diego, Cal.	63	From the Four Points of the Com- pass	54	Who Got the Money?	38
Local 468, Los Angeles, Cal.	63	The Farmer and His Cat.	54	"Just a Cold"	44
Local 484, Chicago, Ill.	66	Call It a Nut Idea if You Will, but Try It Out.	54	Chat of the Craft:
Local 765, Detroit, Mich.	65	Voluntary Penalizing for Absentee- ism	55	The Nativity (Poem)	45
Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.	69	Must Be Expecting Labor Troubles in the Gem City	55	Just a Little Kindness	45
New York City, N. Y. 70		How Much Talent is There Secret- ed in Your Local Union?	55	The American Legion	46
Miscellaneous:		I Was Going To (Poem)	56	Our Question Box (Poem)	46
A Small, Sick Union in a Great Big Town	2d cover	Arkansas Adds Another Local to Its Roster	56	Taking a Look at Last Year's Records	46
Glad to Come, Reluctant to Depart	3d cover	Making a Discovery	56	Ain't It Dreadful? (Poem)	47
San Francisco's Famous Cafes	4	Ring True? (Poem)	56	"The Closed Union Shop is Justi- fiable"	47
The Ladder of Success	4	You Maka Me Laugh, Fel.	56	Minneapolis Trades Unionists on the Job	47
Do Labor Papers Pay?	6	Laws Unfair to Labor	57	They Came Back	47
Making 'Em Sit Up	8	The Hoe-Down (Poem)	57	Mirror Glances (Poem)	48
Cafeteria Trays (Poem)	12	Missouri Means "Log Canoe," Not "Big Muddy"	57	Our Mirror Dictionary	48
When the Dollar Was in Flower ..	12	The Passing of Andrew Dugar ..	58	Ruffles	48
Three Fundamental Principles ..	16	Dig In, Brother; and You, Too, Sister	58	The Empire State Adds a New Union to Its List	49
To Keep Young	18	Did You Ever Notice the Differ- ence?	58	His Reason for Picking Another Town	49
A Real Cosmopolite	72	United Hotels Broadening Their Field of Activity	58	The Workingman's Soliloquy (Poem)	50
The Spies of Monte Carlo	72	Correspondence from Local Unions:		A Habit That Would Be Dis- pensated With	50
Half-tones:		Local 2, Brooklyn, N. Y.	67	Where Did You Get That Word Camel?	50
John W. Delaney, Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	67	Local 7, Chicago, Ill.	65	The Test of a Man	51
Alfred E. Manning, Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	69	Local 17, Los Angeles, Cal.	59	Who Was that Fellow We Just Passed?	51
Thomas J. Morris, Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	71	Local 106, Cleveland, O.	64	Oklahoma Steps Up Another Rung in the Ladder	51
No. 11. NOVEMBER		Local 109, Newark, N. J.	67	Compensation (Poem)	51
Editorial:		Local 142, El Dorado, Ark.	60	What a Trained Observer Lamps During a Day's Stroll	52
Thanksgiving	1	Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.	67	Speeds	52
Do You Expect More Than You Give	1	Local 220, Eureka, Cal.	67	It Pays to Be Civil	52
Knowledge is Power	2	Local 237, Pittsburgh, Pa.	66	Letter to Santa (Poem)	53
Between Ourselves (An Aggravat- ing Problem)	2	Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	63	Tally One for the Buckeye State ..	53
Official:		Local 300, Toronto, Ont., Can.	68	The Curse of Self-Pity	53
How They Stand	6	Local 536, Minneapolis, Minn.	66	Not a Pleasant Situation	53
Deaths During October	6	Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.	65	What Are You Afraid Of?	54
Lost Membership Books for Oc- tober	6	Local 861, Billings, Mont.	61	Have You Promised to Help Dur- ing the Coming Year?	54
Charters Issued During October ..	6	New York City, N. Y. 62		Without You, Love (Poem)	54
Appeal Not Sustained	6	Los Angeles, Cal.	60	Chicago Unions Donning Their Hustling Clothes	54
Information Wanted—John Ray- mond Murphy, Norman Minor, Mr. Vaughan, Anthony Harri- gan, Al. Farnum	6	Miscellaneous:		He Who Serves (Poem)	55
Monthly Letter and Decisions of President Flore	8	Paying the Price	2d cover	He Didn't	55
Financial Report of Secretary- Treasurer Sullivan	11	I Don't Think	3d cover	Why Wait; Begin Now; The Ear- lier the Better	55
What Our Organizers Are Doing...	15	Why is a Bartender?	5	My Heart (Poem)	55
The Forum:		Just a Little Jazzbo Blues for a Change	7	Asking Protection for an Imitation The Good Loser (Poem)	55
I See By the Papers	20	If You Start, Be Sure You Finish.	7	Correspondence from Local Unions:
Apple Water	37	The Real Difference	10	Local 7, Chicago, Ill.	62
Facts for Workers	38	A Verdict	10	Local 34, Boston, Mass.	59
Workers' Gains Trifling	44	All Hail, Columbus	10	Local 45, Reno, Nev.	62
How to Detect Fake Co-operatives	45	Patrons Can Not Eat the Fixtures Protect Your Investment in Your Union	14	Local 106, Cleveland, O.	60
Foster Admits Being Paid for Ef- forts to Ruin American Labor ..	46	Ingersoll on Whiskey	19	Local 135, Tulsa, Okla.	62
Chat of the Craft:		Fought at Last	19	Local 175, Buffalo, N. Y.	57
These Figures Should Settle the Dispute	47	Charles Iffland is Dead	19	Local 177, Cincinnati, O.	60
When the Yellowtail Bite (Poem).	48	Rays of Sun Have Curative Value	68	Local 188, Pittsburgh, Pa.	59
The Other Fellows Think Pretty Well of It	48	Labor Unions Always Pay Up ..	68	Local 196, Buffalo, N. Y.	56
Just Think of It	48	New Manager Predicts Success ..	68	Local 239, Seattle, Wash.	64
A Journalistic Nightmare (Poem)	48	Half-tone:		Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.	58
Get the Habit That Will Help You Win	49	Louis Teichner, Newark, N. J.	67	Local 307, Providence, R. I.	57
Seven Ages of Man	49	No. 12. DECEMBER		Local 468, Los Angeles, Cal.	63
The Old-Time Journeyman a Won- derful Teacher	49	Editorial:		Local 503, Kansas City, Mo.	64
Tenting on the Old Camp Grounds (Poem)	50	A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year	1	Local 505, Columbus, O.	60
As an Organization, Are We Tent- ing on the Old Camp Grounds?	50	Between Ourselves (Book and Card Concealers)	2	Local 670, West Frankfort, Ill.	61
A Crazy Recitation (Poem)	51	Official:		Local 719, New York City, N. Y.	56
You'd Think We Were Trying to Borrow Money	51	How They Stand	5	Local 763, Rochester, N. Y.	57
Another Job for the Cook	51	Reminder to Secretaries	5	New York City, N. Y. 64
The Hidden Shibboleth	51	Lost Membership Books for No- vember	5	Miscellaneous:
To Wider Fields	52	Charters Issued During November	5	Did You Ever Hear a Floor Talk?	2d cover
The Widow's Mite	52	Deaths During November	5	Have You Had Your "Coffee and" This Morning?	3d cover
What the Census Shows	52	Information Wanted—Peter Zeli- coff	5	Report of A. F. of L. Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee ..	4
		Report of International Auditing Board	7	Christmas Seals	17
		Monthly Letter and Decisions of President Flore	10	Half-tones:
		Financial Report of Secretary- Treasurer Sullivan	14	International Auditors	9
				Samuel Gompers, President, A. F. of L.	17

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

This is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance
and
Bartenders' International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 1.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, JANUARY 15, 1922

Press of Reesler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.
Cincinnati, Ohio

REGISTERED

REGISTERED

REGISTERED

REGISTERED

"Still Believe in Signs?"

"Still on the Map"

Wishing you and yours a Happy and Prosperous New Year 1922

Jane L. Sullivan.
(Watch us Grow)
Digitized by Google

VOL. XXXI

CINCINNATI, JANUARY 15, 1922

No. 1

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD
 At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 19, 1918.

Printed by
 Roessler Brothers,
 Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
 Building,
 Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor

Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE	President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH	First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN	Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY	Third Vice-President
509 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY	Fourth Vice-President
183 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL	Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO	Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY	Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG	Eighth Vice-President
500 S. State Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN	General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

1922

Welcome to our city.

Make yourself to home, but don't overlook the fact that

We are filled to the nozzle with that good cheer stuff.

We had it in 1914 and every year since, even during the war.

But just wishing did not get us anywhere, we know.

And we also know that, if we did not remain on the job hustling,

We'd have as much chance to talk about our union as a fellow in

That place down below where expert coal shovelers are always busy,

Have of complaining of Cold Feet.

We are fed up on promises, now we are out to see some of the promisers,

Jacks and Jills that have been waiting for something to happen.

It's happened all right, all right, and we don't like it worth a dang.

We heard the promisers sing "soft and low," wait, wait and then wait.

Some of us are Waiters, in fact we get paid for waiting,

You didn't think of that did you? Well, we did, and we are Still thinking, and out loud at that.

No crime in thinking, is there? Well, maybe not, but what do you

Suppose we think of men and women too, who are always ready to slip

Over and lick up the cream, but unwilling to provide the fodder for

The cream producing animal.

Yeh, we are glad to meet you, 1922; don't get the idea that because we Start off by telling you a few yards of troubles, that our hand clasp

Isn't on the level, for it is a sure enough greeter's grip we slip you.

We just wanted that bunch sitting on the fence to hear what we said.

Some of them are hard of hearing, they wear woolen socks, and they

Keep their mazuma—which means money in most towns—tied up and

Refuse to loosen up; especially to maintain a union of their Crafts. But Mr. New Year, we are telling you that before you Scramble off stage on the night of December 31 coming, we are Going to convert a lot of the fence sitters or knock the Fence from under them. Yeh, and we mean that little thing too! Again we say, welcome kiddo 1922, just watch our smoke during the year, For we have oiled up the old bus and taken on a load of fuel, Enough to make the grade. Get us on that! All right, kiddo 1922, get Going and see if you can keep step, for we are the bunch that Boasted of "Knowing How" a few years ago, and haven't forgot how. If you doubt that, just keep your peepers on us while we travel along. Same to you, see you later when you begin to feel the sun.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Did it ever occur to you that one of the toughest jobs on this mundane sphere for a regular fellow to tackle every day in the year, is trying to overcome the insidious work of the natural-born crepehanger and wet blanket slinger? Well, it is, and the unbroken colt that slaps his sig at the bottom of these monthly confabs knows it and obtained that knowledge from an experience running for quite a number of years.

Just let one or a couple of the crepehangers and wet blanket spreaders edge into a live, thriving and hustling local union, permit them to get in about an hour a day around either rendezvous where the bunch hangs out, or at the rest or reading rooms of the local union, and you can bet four million eight hundred thousand rubles, which is equivalent to eighty-five cents in sure-enough Uncle Sam's mazuma, that the crepehanger will have a 5-5-3 combination working inside of a fortnight, and nary a chance to pump out the sunken battleships or make them seaworthy for moons to come.

Why is it that a frowsie that could not hold a job swabbing tin plates and tin cups in a railroad contractor's feed shop will ramble into one of our local union headquarters, fill the cavity in his face with a chew borrowed from some of the regular fellows, sit back in his chair, look wise for a moment or two and then proceed to "I'll tell the world" why this and the whereof of that, and quietly shoot enough guff to transform a lot of pleasant-faced catering industry wage earners into about as morose and crest-fallen an aggregation as ever missed the last boat on a wet night the latter part of November.

Can you offer an answer? Do you know the reason why? If not, then you are one of the folks that we are looking for and hope that you will stick with us until we finish this bit of conversation.

In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the crepehanger or wet blanket slinger has as little idea of what he is chewing the rag about as a three-year-old kid knows of the mechanism of a wiggling tin monkey which is set in motion by his daddy, after the aforesaid parent has wound up a spring. The crepehanger is a penance inflicted upon live ones, for somehow regular folks with smiles on their faces causes something on his insides to irritate something connected with his tongue and that portion of his anatomy being balanced like a teeter-totter, just bobs up and down until it is exhausted.

In many respects we resemble a fellow that we knew some years ago; he was what some folks call a hypochondriac. If he was met in the morning as he came on duty and advised that he did not look any too well, he began to show symptoms of ailment in accordance with the suggestion of the fellow that advised him he was not looking well. If that man had two more such salutations, it was pecans to pickles that he would go to the boss and tell him that he had to lay off because of not feeling well.

We have unions that act exactly like that poor devil. Just let a wet blanket spreader circulate among the members for a day or two and permit him to sing his favorite dirge without being called to time, and that union is on the way to the cleaners. That is not a rash statement based on guessing; it's fact, and there are numbers of instances where the dope injected by the crepehanger put the union down and out, despite the fact that there was no other immediate cause for its dissolution. An iconoclast will break images; he loves to disabuse the minds of men who carry certain conclusions; he enjoys reciting facts and offering illustrations to convince one that long-carried viewpoints are based on unsubstantial foundation.

He is not, however, a destroyer in the true sense of the word and should not be confused with the damp blanket manipulators or crepehangers.

Why, oh, why do we permit these "God help us we are lost if some one does not sling us an anchor or a ton of cork" to clutter up our chairs and space in the headquarters of our local unions? Any one with half an eye must admit that they are no use to themselves, and as workers at the industry, they simply ain't. We have a lot of sympathy for hungry men and women, but we are allowing that feeling to pull us into ruts and permit the industry to become saturated with no-account sons of guns who are not now and never will be skilled, high-class workmen. Why do we open our arms to fellows who have nothing to recommend them to us but an empty bread basket?

Once they fill their gullets with good food, what do they do for you? You and I know that 99 per cent of them hang around eat shops in the hope of grabbing off a job where they can get their three squares a day. If they had enough sense to pound sand into a rat hole there might be a chance for us to teach them the rudiments of the business and develop them into passably good workmen, but there is a vacuum under their hats and all the powers that be will be unable to fill that space with think stuff.

You who have your bump of generosity well developed will no doubt regard that trimming as harsh, but is it?

Why should the catering industry be the oasis for the castoffs of every trade and calling? We had to live down that serf stuff many years ago; we will have quite as difficult an impediment to overcome if we do not take heed and call a halt—and that right soon.

Other lines of endeavor attract young men of clean habits and some education; why not ours?

Who is at fault? Have you ever sifted right down to the bottom the reasons why we are afflicted with an oversupply of incompetents of the frowsie type? Get your think works employed on the task and make up your mind it's time to stop it.

Nail these fellows who are peddling that "What's the use stuff" and in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred they are one or the other—unskilled workers or fearful that they will be forced to dig down into their jeans for the coin to pay monthly dues. They know that if the union skids and topples over there won't be any one to question them one way or the other, and they hope for the day to come when the union will lose prestige and control.

Yes, there is another element, the would-be savers of the organization—fellows that devote a lot of time trying to locate alleged abuses in the management of the local union or the parent body; but most of us know where they fit in; we have their number and at the proper time they will make a most ungraceful bow, hurry to that little furnished room, take paper and pen in hand and write to one or the other union-wrecking agencies seeking transfer to other pastures which know them not.

Some of these almost-smooth fellows have been performing their stunts for several months; they have figured to the penny how far we are able to go; they have prepared calculations for the thoughtless few that follow their lead, which calculations prove beyond question of doubt that our organization was due to hit the toboggan as early as last June. The fact that it is "still on the map" confounds them, necessitating many explanations that hardly explain. Surrounded as we are with all these forces, or elements we begin the voyage over the roads of 1922 with confidence, for we know what these elements are unable to know or absorb—and that is that our organization is composed of at least ninety-eight per cent of real stickers, men and women who acquired the Missouri habit early in life and persist in demanding blue prints and general specifications before they swallow the dope prepared by these "What's the Users."

Just to prove that they are barking up the wrong tree, our boys and girls everywhere under the jurisdiction of our International Union, are either on the job or rolling up their sleeves preparatory to getting busy; for they are determined to make this organization grow as fast as ever and they propose to teach the cheap trouble-makers that this is one aggregation that can not be lured with pie-counter promises or prospective rewards some time in the "sweet bye and bye."

Mr. Crepehanger and you, Mr. Wet Blanket Spreader, here is your hat and there is the door; get a fast move on yourself before some of our fellows begin to stretch their arms, for they might take a notion into their heads that they would like to see how far they could knock one of you, for they figure that you are mentally light and may be physically underweight.

We have quit sliding, girls and boys; we've dug our heels deep enough to make a turn safely and we ARE ALL ON OUR WAY BACK, and we know that you are right in line with us. See how many converts you can line up during the year, and try and keep the crepe hangers on the move while at the same time you keep water away from the blanket tossers.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

"OPEN SHOP IS A FRAUD," CHURCHMAN ASSERTS.

By REV. J. A. RYAN

Professor of Moral Theology and Industrial Relations, Catholic University of America.

Washington.—The open shop may be a good thing or a bad thing. All depends upon the kind of open shop one has in mind.

According to the ordinary definition the open shop is an establishment in which employes may belong to a union or remain outside it without any sort of coercion from either the employer or the union.

For purely abstract purposes this definition may suffice. For practical purposes it is worse than worthless. It is positively and disastrously misleading.

Following are two practical definitions of the open shop. The first is this: An open shop is an establishment in which men are not coerced either to enter or to leave the union, but in which the employer deals with the union as representing those of his employes who comprise its membership.

In this arrangement, the employer does not put pressure upon his non-union employes to join the organization, while the union strives to increase its membership only by methods of persuasion.

This is the kind of open shop sanctioned and enforced by the National War Labor Board during the war.

Lose All Gains.

Here is the second practical definition: The open shop is an establishment in which no pressure is put on employes to leave or enter the union, but in which the employer refuses to deal with the union or its authorized representatives.

If the employer concedes collective bargaining to any group of his employes, he negotiates with them as employes only, not as members or representatives of the union. The obvious effect of this policy is to make union membership almost, if not quite, worthless.

Why should men pay dues to the union, attend union meetings, and undergo the other inconveniences involved in union membership if they cannot use the collective power of the union to make bargains with the employer? They might as well belong to a golf club or a society for esthetic advancement.

In a word, this kind of open shop permits the union to exist, but not to function.

"Open Shop" a Fraud.

Now this is the kind of open shop which the "open shop movement" of 1920 and 1921 has had in mind, and has endeavored by all sorts of methods, honest and dishonest, to popularize and to put into operation.

The essential dishonesty of that movement lies in the fact that very few of its promoters and advocates ever told the public frankly their kind of open shop would exclude collective bargaining with the union.

Some of us have recognized this pernicious feature of the movement from the beginning.

Everyone who has seen the "open shop" put into operation during the last year, especially in the building industry, has learned the true nature of the "open shop" by actual observation.

Wherever it has been formally adopted, or rather imposed during the last year, the "open shop," or the "American plan," means no dealing with the union and no adequate collective bargaining. Hence it is essentially anti-union, anti-labor and anti-social.—Cincinnati Post.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

REMINDER TO SECRETARIES.

Don't forget to send in information as to "time, place and date of your meetings, name and permanent address of the secretary," so that same can be published in the February issue of the MIXER AND SERVER. Have the foregoing in our possession by January 25, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARTERS ISSUED DURING DECEMBER, 1921.

365 M, Sapulpa, Okla. (re-org.) G. W. McDonald
406 M, Wortham, Texas F. A. W. Hofling
511 M, Orange, Texas Myrtle Berry

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HOW THEY STAND.

California	35
Pennsylvania	28
New York	28
Texas	28
Illinois	26
Washington	20
Massachusetts	17
Ohio	15
New Jersey	15
Missouri	14
Canada	13
Oregon	11
Minnesota	11
Oklahoma	11
Colorado	10
Wyoming	10
Connecticut	9
Wisconsin	9
Montana	9
Kentucky	6
Arizona	6
Louisiana	6
Idaho	5
West Virginia	5
Iowa	4
Indiana	4
Michigan	4
Utah	4

Maryland	3
Nebraska	3
Arkansas	3
Rhode Island	3
Kansas	3
Tennessee	3
North Dakota	3
District of Columbia	2
South Carolina	2
Virginia	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

DEATHS DURING DECEMBER, 1921.

Local 3—James Tate.
Local 20—John J. Hansberry.
Local 30—Fritz Brunneman, N. S. Nielson, P. Rouquier, D. M. Grammater.
Local 77—Timothy O'Leary.
Local 109—A. Tettelbaum, F. DeMar.
Local 115—Mich. Mathews, John Wood.
Local 237—Arthur H. Payne.
Local 329—Hannah Mahoney.
Local 400—Mrs. Julia H. Fleese.
Local 638—Leon Bridson.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR DECEMBER, 1921.

Local 19—Tim J. Dwyer.
Local 115—Michael Phillips, Chas. M. Hugh.
Local 361—Louis Richter.
Local 424—Nora Coaley.
Local 490—Earl McIntire.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INFORMATION WANTED.

Any one knowing of the present whereabouts of Walter Morgan, a hotel worker, last heard from at Hot Springs, Arkansas, will confer a favor on his sister by conveying information, or urging Walter Morgan to write her. Address, Mrs. J. H. Hall, 2112 Irwin Street, Knoxville, Tenn.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., December 26, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—

"You've smiled when days were sunny—
You've smiled when days were gray—
You've made folks mighty happy
As you've traveled on life's way;
And so this happy wish I send
To you, good friend and true—
Just as you've smiled on other folks
May fortune smile on You!"

The smiles of a new year are with us; to some they are sunny while to others they are gray—sunny or gray, they are smiles, and that is what our boys and girls are doing with the coming of this new day. We enjoyed prosperity and we have met with reverses, but we have always set our foot forward and today like times gone by, we are determined that our organization shall move forward and upward and that nothing shall stop our progress, and that our aims and aspirations to do good, are going to bring forth gratifying results.

Ambition is the life of trade and so with organization; with ambition, improved economic conditions will crystallize, without ambition we gravitate towards a state of lethargy from whence emanates waste and lost energy. Which shall it be?

January first of each year brings with it new pledges and promises; some are kept throughout the year, while others are forgotten before the sun sets in the West of the same day. Let us neither pledge nor promise ourselves to be true and faithful to our organization throughout the year, but in place of that, let us put into actual practice a real sincere and whole-hearted plan of co-operation, one that will stick in all kinds of weather, in the climate where sunshine, fruits and flowers bloom forth their ray and fragrance the full year round or, whether it's in a climate holding forth four seasons, with its mantle of God's driven snow to bless our path with purity in this the season of meditation and rejoicing. To co-operate with each other, to be faithful, to be sincere, is a trinity of thought which, if transferred to our every day life, will make for us and ours a life of happiness, blessed with more of the worldly goods than has as yet been our privilege to enjoy.

Co-operation does not mean selfishness; that is where many of us made our mistake. We believe in co-operation when it means something for ourselves, but when we have ours, we forget all about the rest of the world. That is not the spirit; we should, of course, give consideration to ourselves, but when our wants have been cared for, our thoughts should then go out to our co-workers—how can we best make their life happier; that should not only be the Christmas spirit, but should prevail throughout the year.

How can we make others happier? Isn't that a pretty epigram and would not our lives be all the better for its universal practice? Let us see what we can do in the next twelve months to put that into actual practice. How can we start ourselves off on such a charitable mission? Very simple; a smile, kind thoughts, co-operation; with those mottoes to guide and lead us in our work and daily life, we can not help but by its application to make ourselves and others happier and all the more satisfied that this world is not one of selfishness, but of happiness with environments that make for unity and better things in life.

Our industry is passing through a transition state—many innovations and combinations are presenting themselves, all of which are mostly brought forth, to eliminate labor or strengthen the arm of capital in the control of labor. What are we doing to meet that transition of our industry? I fear most of the men and women in the catering industry are looking on with amazement and whispering to themselves—Where is it all going to end? "Where is it all going to end?" That is the real problem that we must try and solve and we can not solve it unless we co-operate and show some ambition in our local union; sitting on the side lines and waiting for some one else to solve the problem for you is not going to bring the answer, roll up your sleeves and dig in and you will soon learn for yourself the truth that a few moments before was befogged with much mystery.

To the officers of our local unions, both new and old, let me say, that much of the burden of success or failure of an organization rests upon your shoulders, you can hold or destroy the confidence and respect of your members by your actions and conduct. Make your person and presence acceptable and congenial, always keeping in mind that you are representing the men and women of your organization and answerable to them for your deeds and activities—and this thought must of necessity go forth to our members; respect, co-operation and good will, are among the things that officers expect from you and much of the success of their work and the accomplishments of your organization will depend upon these gifts. Let us repeat here:

"You've smiled when days were sunny—
You've smiled when days were gray—
You've made many folks mighty happy
As you traveled on life's way."

My expenses for the month are as follows:

Postage	$ 6 00
Christmas seals	2 00
Telegrams	1 03
Total.....	$ 9 03

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,118.

December 1, 1921.

MR. JOHN KACIKAS, Superior Cafe, Billings, Mont.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed against you by Local 861 of Billings, for accepting employment in an unfair house while holding membership in Local 862 of Rawlins, Wyoming. You are hereby adjudged guilty of the charges made against you and penalized in the sum of $25.00 and suspended from membership in this International Union.

Local 862 is hereby directed to so record your membership on their roster and to report same on their next monthly report.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,119.

December 10, 1921.

MRS. VELA SMITH, Secretary, Local 730, 12 Central Bldg., Bremerton, Wash.:

DEAR MADAM AND SISTER—I have before me the protest of Local 730 against the membership of Brother J. J. Phillips in Local 349 of Auburn, Washington, it being alleged that he was a suspended member of Local 730 when he secured his membership in Local 349. We are advised that the said brother is now a suspended member in Local 349; we failed to get a statement from Brother Phillips, but we find that Local 349 in which he was initiated was not chartered by the International Union until some months after his suspension in Local 730; we therefore sustain the protest of Local 730 and do hereby cancel the membership of J. J. Phillips in Local 349.

With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,120.

December 12, 1921.

MR. ROBERT MURPHY, Secretary, Local 23, 108 So. Fourteenth St., Omaha, Neb.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 6th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"A member of the union was promoted to managership in a restaurant, applied for and was granted a withdrawal card, within the same month he was reduced to his former position as cook and deposited his withdrawal card—what was or is the status of his membership?"

When the member became the manager of the restaurant he was not entitled to a withdrawal card, however, the local union issued him a card and he accepted the same, that action severed his membership and in order to renew said membership he would have to deposit the said card and pay the International reinstatement fee by withdrawal card of $2.00.

With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,121.

December 19, 1921.

MR. A. E. MANNING, Secretary, Local 237, 1011 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 16th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Is a member in good standing entitled to hold a delegateship to the Central Trades Council, when he is not working at the craft and financially interested and working at another business?"

A member in good standing can retain active membership regardless as to whether he is employed in our crafts or some other industry, so long as he remains an employee. If he becomes an employer or proprietor, he ceases to be an active member and automatically becomes a passive member and as such is not entitled to a voice in the affairs of the local union, nor to serve as an officer of the local or as a delegate to any of its affiliations.

The term proprietor or employer is not applicable to members engaged in managing or operating social club privileges in connection with the headquarters of a local union.

With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision 1,122.

December 21, 1921.

MISS MINNIE DUNCAN, 5701 Whittier Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of the local joint executive board of Cleveland, Ohio, which board sustained the action of Local 107 in finding you guilty of violating a rule governing the control of extra work. The decision of the local joint executive board is sustained and your appeal denied.

With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision 1,123.

December 21, 1921.

MISS JESSIE MILLER, 11620 Griffing Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of the local joint executive board of Cleveland, Ohio, which board sustained the action of Local 107 in finding you guilty of violating a rule governing the control of extra work. The decision of the local joint executive is sustained and your appeal denied.

With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision 1,124.

December 21, 1921.

MR. WILLIAM M. WARREN, Secretary, Local 485, 889 Looney Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your request for a decision on the following:

"Can a member of the local who has resigned or been discharged from the sleeping car service, retain his membership in the local union?"

If an employe of the sleeping car service becomes a member of your local union, he secures a property right in the benefits of your organization and you can not take that from him, so long as he complies with the laws of the International Union and the local of which he is a member. He can retain his membership regardless as to whether he is employed in the sleeping car service or some other craft or calling, so long as such employment is not in conflict with the teachings and principles of our International Union.

With season's greetings,

Faternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

DOCTORS LISTEN CHEERILY AS DRY LAW IS PANNED.

Medics Hear Both Sides of the Question.

If the violence and duration of applause be taken as a truthful gauge of an audience's sentiments, those present at the meeting of the north side branch of the Chicago Medical Society last night at the Virginia Hotel set their seal of approval upon the use of alcohol both as a medicine and a beverage content when used in moderation.

The same gathering which evinced its approval of a scientific paper read by Dr. Arthur A. Small upholding alcohol as a therapeutic agent, applauded enthusiastically the remarks of Attorney Clarence Darrow, Lincoln Steffens, and Horace Bridges, who variously pictured the prohibition amendment as a farcical law generally ignored, one of the "most dangerous pieces of class legislation ever enacted," and even as a menace to the continued stability of industry and of the government itself.

Preble and Sadler for "Dry" Side.

On the other side the prohibition law was upheld by Dr. Robert B. Preble and State Senator Frank P. Sadler, both of whom urgently pleaded for its stricter enforcement.

Dr. Samuel C. Henry, secretary of the National Association of Retail Druggists, asked for the hearty co-operation of the medical profession in combatting attempts by certain politicians at Washington to enact legislation requiring the medication of all alcohol before it is withdrawn from a bonded warehouse.

"Such a law would cripple every pharmacy in the United States," he said. "You know a man cannot prepare medicines in the interest of the public through your services unless he can get alcohol. All sorts of restrictions have been placed upon us, and I ask you as American citizens if we are going to sit idly by and allow greater restrictions to be placed in our way?"

Has a Medicinal Value.

After pointing to the value of a moderate quantity of alcohol as a food or source of heat and vital energy, Dr. Small attested to its value as a hypnotic, an anodyne, an anesthetic, an antipyretic, a diaphoretic, and a diuretic, citing various illnesses in which it had been employed efficaciously.

"As to the use of alcohol in moderate quantities by healthy persons," he said, "we see two extremes of opinion. It is violently condemned by extreme total abstinence advocates and allowed with apparently as reasonable argument by others. Personally, I am of the opinion that a moderate amount of alcohol with the evening meal reduces the mental and physical tension following the hard work of the day and renders that individual more fit for his next day's labor."

In his argument Senator Sadler pointed to the decrease in number of inmates at the Bridewell as proof of the benefits of prohibition, but admitted there had been considerable crime, attributing this to the effect of the war and the automobile, which he characterized as "the greatest contributor and the greatest invention ever made as an aid to robbery." This point was quickly seized by Mr. Darrow, who followed.

"Prohibit Autos?"

"The logic is very obvious," he said. "There should be a law for the prohibition of automobiles, so that those who enjoy them may be restrained in order to prevent others from using them wrongly."

Mr. Darrow traced the source of the prohibition movement to the puritanical idea that "all pleasure is sin." He asserted the entire country is in the throes of a revival of every kind of blue law with "such brainy philosophers at its head as Billy Bryan and Billy Sunday." The next move, he predicted, would be no Sunday theaters or Sunday motoring.

Not an Honest Movement.

"This entire prohibition movement," he declared, "has not been an honest movement but a law forced on the statute books by holding our legislators and congressmen in terror of lost votes. Men cannot be men unless they are free to exercise both good judgment and bad judgment. Unless they are free they cannot be men."

A study of the Russian revolution, Mr. Steffens said, showed prohibition of intoxicants by the czar to have been one of the chief contributing causes.

Mr. Bridges insisted there had been fifty-seven ways in which the liquor question could have been dealt with.

"But we have picked out the one course that was, is, and forever will be impracticable," he said. "To destroy that free obedience to the law upon which free governments and democracies are founded is a dangerous thing. When people are treating the violation of a law as a jest there has been done a thing of deadly import."—Chicago Tribune, December 2, 1921.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

WELL! WELL!

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—An old oaken bucket which hangs in a most innocent and ancient appearing well in Stamford Township has led to a disclosure which is making even the prohibition agents of this district sigh with regret.

For weeks dry officials have known that the contents of the iron-bound bucket carried a twenty-mule power kick. So they investigated.

Descending the well with the aid of a ladder, several members of the sponge squad found a secret door at the bottom which led to a well-constructed underground chamber. Here they found a still in full operation turning out a brand of bootleg whiskey which has made this arid section an oasis for months.

From now on the old oaken bucket will live only in song and memory.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR DECEMBER, 1921.

Local No.

1 W, New York, N. Y. Nov., 1921
2 W, Brooklyn, N. Y. Nov., "
3 B, New York, N. Y. Nov., "
4 B, Hoboken, N. J. Nov., "
5 W, New York, N. Y. Nov., "
7 W, Chicago, Ill. Nov., "
8 B, Denver, Colo. Dec., "
10 W, Hoboken, N. J. Nov., "
11 WC, New York City Oct., "
12 M, San Antonio, Tex. Dec., "
13 M, Little Rock, Ark. July, "
14 W, Denver, Colo. Nov., "
17 W, Los Angeles, Cal. Nov., "
18 C, Denver, Colo. Nov., "
19 W, Kansas City, Mo. Nov., "
20 W, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "
22 M, Butte, Mont. Nov., "
23 C, Omaha, Neb. Oct., "
25 M, Hot Springs, Ark. Nov., "
28 M, Vancouver, B. C. Nov., "
29 B, New York, N. Y. Nov., "
30 W, San Francisco, Cal. Nov., "
31 M, Oakland, Cal. Nov., "
32 M, St. Joseph, Mo. Dec., "
33 C, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
34 M, Boston, Mass. Nov., "
39 M, Pittsburg, Kan. Nov., "
41 B, San Francisco, Cal. Oct., "
43 M, Pueblo, Colo. Oct., "
44 C, San Francisco, Cal. Nov., "
45 M, Reno, Nev. Nov., "
48 WS, San Francisco, Cal. Nov., "
50 M, Fairmont, W. Va. Dec., "
51 B, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "
58 W, New Orleans, La. Nov., "
59 M, Milwaukee, Wis. Nov., "
61 M, Tacoma, Wash. Oct., "
62 M, Fresno, Cal. Nov., "
64 B, Milwaukee, Wis. Dec., "
66 C, Buffalo, N. Y. Nov., "
68 B, Cincinnati, O. Nov., "
69 M, Galveston, Tex. Nov., "
70 B, Brooklyn, N. Y. Nov., "
72 W, Cincinnati, O. Nov., "
74 M, Aurora, Ill. Oct., "
76 B, Syracuse, N. Y. Dec., "
77 B, Boston, Mass. Nov., "
78 B, Uniontown, Pa. Jan., 1922
79 B, Louisville, Ky. Nov., 1921
81 B, Holyoke, Mass. Nov., "
84 B, Taunton, Mass. Aug., "
85 B, Lowell, Mass. Nov., "
89 B, Chicago, Ill. Nov., "
90 B, Lawrence, Mass. June, "
92 B, Marlboro, Mass. Dec., "
93 B, Haverhill, Mass. Nov., "
100 B, New Bedford, Mass. Dec., "
101 M, Great Falls, Mont. Aug., "
102 B, Granite City, Ill. Dec., "
106 M, Cleveland, O. Nov., "
107 WS, Cleveland, O. Nov., "
109 M, Newark, N. J. Nov., "
110 M, San Francisco, Cal. Nov., "
111 M, Oatman, Ariz. Dec., "
112 WS, Boston, Mass. Nov., "
115 B, Philadelphia, Pa. Dec., "
117 B, Belleville, Ill. Nov., "
118 M, Akron, O. Sept., "
119 M, Silverton, Colo. Nov., "
120 B, Utica, N. Y. Aug., "
124 B, Trenton, N. J. Sept., "
126 B, Oneonta, N. Y. Dec., "
128 V, Superior, Wis. Dec., "
131 B, Newark, N. J. Nov., "
134 B, Scranton, Pa. Nov., "
135 M, Tulsa, Okla. Nov., "
141 M, Visalia, Cal. Nov., "
142 M, Eldorado, Ark. Nov., "
143 M, Omaha, Neb. Nov., "
149 B, Newport, Ky. Dec., "
150 W, Syracuse, N. Y. Nov., "
152 B, Minneapolis, Minn. Nov., "
154 M, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Nov., "
156 B, Paducah, Ky. Nov., "
157 R, Woonsocket, R. I. Aug., "
158 W, Wichita Falls, Tex. Nov., "
159 B, Meridan, Conn. Dec., "
161 M, Brockton, Mass. Nov., "
163 B, McKeesport, Pa. Oct., "
167 C, Cleveland, O. Nov., "
168 M, Amarillo, Tex. Nov., "
171 B, Rochester, N. Y. Dec., "
172 M, Henryetta, Okla. Oct., "
175 B, Buffalo, N. Y. Nov., "
177 C, Cincinnati, O. Nov., "

Local No.

180 M, San Jose, Cal. Nov., 1921
181 B, Easton, Pa. Dec., "
188 B, Pittsburgh, Pa. Dec., "
189 W, Portland, Ore. Nov., "
190 B, Bethlehem, Pa. Oct., "
191 B, Aurora, Ill. June, "
195 M, Kingman, Ariz. Sept., "
196 W, Buffalo, N. Y. Nov., "
197 B, Hamilton, Ont., Can. Nov., "
199 B, Jamestown, N. Y. Dec., "
200 B, Hartford, Conn. Nov., "
201 M, Haverhill, Mass. Sept., "
203 C, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "
207 C, Portland, Ore. Nov., "
208 RRM, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "
210 M, Abilene, Tex. Nov., "
213 M, Herrin, Ill. Nov., "
216 M, Toledo, O. Nov., "
217 B, New Haven, Conn. Dec., "
219 W, New York, N. Y. Dec., "
220 M, Eureka, Cal. Nov., "
222 B, Dayton, O. Dec., "
224 B, Des Moines, Ia. Oct., "
226 B, Erie, Pa. Dec., "
228 M, Lincoln, Neb. Oct., "
230 M, Albany, N. Y. Nov., "
230 M, South Bend, Tex. Dec., "
231 WS, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Dec., "
234 C, Detroit, Mich. Nov., "
236 M, Goose Creek, Tex. Oct., " 237 M, Pittsburg, Pa. Nov., "
239 W, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
240 WS, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
242 M, Charleston, W. Va. Sept., "
244 M, Grand Junction, Colo. July, "
246 M, Oklahoma City, Okla. Nov., "
249 WS, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "
251 M, Dickinson, N. D. Aug., "
253 B, Alliance, O. Dec., "
254 W, Waterbury, Conn. Nov., "
256 B, Bridgeport, Conn. Sept., "
257 M, Livingston, Mont. Oct., "
258 RRM, New York, N. Y. Nov., "
259 B, Edwardsville, Ill. Oct., "
261 WC, Louisville, Ky. Oct., "
262 B, Newcastle, Pa. Dec., "
264 M, Lake Charles, La. Sept., "
266 C, Kansas City, Mo. Nov., "
268 SCP, Chicago, Ill. Nov., "
269 B, South Norwalk, Conn. Oct., "
271 M, Petaluma, Cal. Nov., "
273 M, Springfield, Mass. Nov., "
279 W, Philadelphia, Pa. Nov., "
283 SCP, Denver, Colo. July, "
284 B, Los Angeles, Cal. Nov., "
285 B, Providence, R. I. Nov., "
286 B, Peoria, Ill. Nov., "
288 MRR, New Orleans, La. May, "
290 M, Salem, Mass. Nov., "
294 M, Yakima, Wash. Nov., "
295 M, Wheeling, W. Va. Nov., "
298 M, Wenatchee, Wash. Nov., "
299 M, Burkburnett, Tex. Nov., "
300 W, Toronto, Ont., Can. Oct., "
303 M, Electra, Tex. Nov., "
304 M, Hartford, Conn. Oct., "
305 WS, Portland, Ore. Nov., "
306 M, Williston, N. D. Nov., "
307 M, Providence, R. I. Nov., "
308 M, Portland, Me. Nov., "
311 M, Astoria, Ore. Oct., "
312 R, Chattanooga, Tenn. Dec., "
315 W, Montreal, Que., Can. Dec., "
316 M, Centralia, Wash. Nov., "
318 B, Putnam, Conn. Dec., "
319 M, Sioux City, Ia. Dec., "
322 B, Racine, Wis. Nov., "
323 M, Palestine, Tex. Nov., "
325 M, Duncan, Okla. Nov., "
326 C, Pittsburg, Pa. Nov., "
327 W, Peoria, Ill. Nov., "
328 DCE, Oakland, Cal. Sept., "
329 M, Lynn, Mass. Nov., "
330 M, Twin Falls, Idaho. Dec., "
332 M, Greenville, Tex. Nov., "
332 M, East St. Louis, Ill. Nov., "
325 WE, Toledo, O. Sept., "
336 M, Huntington, W. Va. Oct., "
337 M, Cheyenne, Wyo. Nov., "
338 M, Knoxville, Tenn. Nov., "
347 WS, Buffalo, N. Y. Oct., "
349 M, Auburn, Wash. Dec., "
353 WC, St. Louis, Mo. Nov., "

Local No.

356 B, New London, Conn. Dec., 1921
357 WS, Rochester, N. Y. Nov., "
361 B, Allentown, Pa. Nov., "
364 M, Pendleton, Ore. Nov., "
365 M, Sapulpa, Okla. Dec., "
376 B, South Chicago, Ill. Nov., "
378 B, Bakersfield, Cal. Dec., "
380 M, Bisbee, Ariz. Oct., "
382 C, Brooklyn, N. Y. Nov., "
382 RRM, Louisville, Ky. Sept., "
384 SCP, Oakland, Cal. Nov., "
386 SCP, Kansas City, Mo. Sept., "
387 M, Ft. Dodge, Ia. Sept., "
389 B, Carnegie, Pa. Aug., "
391 M, LeGrand, Ore. Nov., "
392 MC, Mobile, Ala. Dec., "
394 M, South Chicago, Ill. Aug., "
395 M, White Plains, N. Y. Nov., "
397 M, Parsons, Kan. Nov., "
398 M, Manchester, N. H. Nov., "
399 M, Ranger, Tex. Nov., "
400 M, Spokane, Wash. Nov., "
401 M, Randsburg, N. M. Oct., "
402 M, San Diego, Cal. Nov., "
403 M, Breckenridge, Tex. Dec., "
404 M, Santa Rosa, Cal. Aug., "
405 M, Bonham, Tex. Dec., "
406 M, Wortham, Tex. Dec., "
407 M, Manchester, N. H. Dec., "
408 M, Buffalo, N. Y. Nov., "
413 M, Tucson, Ariz. Nov., "
417 B, Mt. Pleasant, Pa. June, "
419 M, Ottawa, Ont., Can. Oct., "
420 B, Kansas City, Mo. Nov., "
424 M, Klamath Falls, Ore. Nov., "
425 M, Sherman, Tex. Nov., "
426 M, Wallace, Idaho Nov., "
427 C, Missoula, Mont. Nov., "
429 B, Portsmouth, O. Nov., "
434 WS, Toronto, Ont., Canada Oct., "
436 M, Chico, Cal. Nov., "
437 M, Indianapolis, Ind. Nov., "
438 B, Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Dec., "
439 M, Vancouver, Wash. Oct., "
440 M, Montreal, Que., Can. Nov., "
442 M, Raton, N. M. Nov., "
449 B, Altoona, Pa. Nov., "
451 M, Everett, Wash. Aug., "
457 MF, Butte, Mont. Nov., "
458 C, Minneapolis, Minn. Nov., "
459 M, Victoria, B. C., Can. Nov., "
466 B, Wilmington, Del. Nov., "
468 C, Los Angeles, Cal. Nov., "
470 W, Schenectady, N. Y. Nov., "
471 M, Albany, N. Y. Oct., "
472 M, El Reno, Okla. Nov., "
474 M, Edmonton, Alta., Canada Nov., "
476 M, Marshfield, Ore. Sept., "
479 B, LaCrosse, Wis. Dec., "
480 DCM, Ft. Worth, Tex. Nov., "
482 B, Butler, Pa. Oct., "
483 M, Ottumwa, Ia. July, "
484 WS, Chicago, Ill. Nov., "
485 RRP, Memphis, Tenn. Dec., "
487 SDD, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
488 B, Jersey City, N. J. Nov., "
489 M, Galesburg, Ill. Sept., "
490 M, Tucumcari, N. M. Nov., "
491 B, Atlantic City, N. J. Nov., "
492 M, Quebec, Que., Can. Nov., "
496 SDD, Portland, Ore. Nov., "
500 M, Beardstown, Ill. Oct., "
503 WS, Kansas City, Mo. Nov., "
508 M, Atlantic City, N. J. Nov., "
509 M, Chickasha, Okla. Nov., "
510 M, Pocatello, Idaho Oct., "
511 M, Orange, Tex. Dec., "
512 CM, Bonham, Tex. Dec., "
513 M, Baird, Tex. Dec., "
516 B, Chillicothe, O. Nov., "
520 WS, Charleston, W. Va. May, "
521 M, Mandan, N. D. Sept., "
523 B, Kenosha, Wis. Nov., "
524 M, Miles City, Mont. Oct., "
528 MF, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
529 M, Bellingham, Wash. Dec., "
531 M, Jefferson City, Mo. Dec., "
532 B, Baltimore, Md. Nov., "
536 M, Minneapolis, Minn. Nov., "
538 RRM, Seattle, Wash. Nov., "
539 CC, Charleston, S. C. Nov., "
540 M, Modesta, Cal. Nov., "
543 M, Hibbing, Minn. Nov., "
544 M, Douglas, Wyo. Oct., "

Local No.		Local No.		Date Local
548 M. St. Paul, Minn.	Dec., 1921	809 M. Lewistown, Mont.	Dec., 1921	5 673 Supplies, bal. due Oct.	11 50
550 M. Bakersfield, Cal.	Oct., "	810 WS, Atlantic City, N. J.	Sept., "	report	7 20
552 CC. Richmond, Va.	Oct., "	811 M. Altoona, Pa.	Dec., "	5 756 Oct., supplies	50 40
556 C. St. Paul, Minn.	Oct., "	815 M. Salt Lake City, Utah	Nov., "	5 808 Oct., cash	37 45
557 M. Greybull, Wyo.	Dec., "	820 MC, Atlantic City, N. J.	Nov., "	5 848 Nov., buttons	21 80
560 M. Vallejo, Cal.	Oct., "	828 SCP, Salt Lake City, Utah	Oct., "	5 876 Nov., buttons	10 20
561 M. Sacramento, Cal.	Nov., "	831 MC, Asbury Park, N. J.	Dec., "	5 111 Stamps	3 00
567 M. Olympia, Wash.	Nov., "	836 WC, Baltimore, Md.	Nov., "	5 556 Oct., supplies	51 70
568 RRM, Portland, Ore.	Oct., "	841 MF, Tulsa, Okla.	May, "	5 406 Charter and outfit.	20 50
569 B. Harrisburg, Pa.	Oct., "	842 M. Casper, Wyo.	Nov., "	6 12 Nov.,	44 80
571 M. Idaho Falls, Idaho.	Nov., "	844 B. Staunton, Ill.	Dec., "	6 28 Supplies	20 00
572 M. Stockton, Cal.	Nov., "	845 B. New Kensington, Pa.	Nov., "	6 78 Dec., supplies	8 10
575 W. Jersey City, N. J.	Nov., "	846 M. Sheridan, Wyo.	Sept., "	6 189 Nov., supplies, bound	68 70
577 M. Mexia, Tex.	Oct., "	848 M. El Paso, Tex.	Nov., "	M. & S.	5 20
578 WS, Pittsburgh, Pa.	July, "	849 M. Lusk, Wyo.	Oct., "	6 219 Nov.,	43 90
579 M. Dayton, O.	Sept., "	852 B. Tiffin, O.	Dec., "	6 253 Dec., supplies	4 00
581 M. Ogden, Utah	Oct., "	853 WWC, Boston, Mass.	Sept., "	6 262 Nov.,	3 40
582 SCP, Los Angeles, Cal.	Nov., "	854 B. Jeanette, Pa.	Oct., "	6 310 Nov., supplies	24 10
583 RRM, Chicago, Ill.	Nov., "	857 B. Laramie, Wyo.	Dec., "	6 336 Supplies	4 50
584 M. Topeka, Kan.	Nov., "	861 M. Billings, Mont.	Nov., "	6 399 Oct., supplies	20 30
586 M. Coalinga, Cal.	Nov., "	862 M. Rawlins, Wyo.	Nov., "	6 509 Nov., supplies	16 05
588 M. Shreveport, La.	Nov., "	865 C. Chicago, Ill.	Nov., "	6 550 Oct.,	77 20
589 M. Bloomington, Ill.	Dec., "	876 M. Laramie, Wyo.	Nov., "	6 771 Nov., supplies	50 15
590 B. Fond du Lac, Wis.	Nov., "			6 106 Nov.,	155 40
592 M. Winnipeg, Man., Canada ..	Nov., "			6 402 Oct., buttons, supplies.	85 60
593 WS, Minneapolis, Minn.	June, "			6 175 Nov.,	17 60
595 M. La Junta, Colo.	June, "			6 199 Dec.,	5 80
597 M. Calgary, Alta., Can.	Nov., "			6 531 Dec., supplies	3 25
600 C. Duluth, Minn.	Sept., "			6 181 Nov., supplies	13 60
606 MC, Indianapolis, Ind.	Nov., "			6 279 Nov.,	99 40
610 MC, Charleston, S. C.	June, "			7 58 Nov., supplies	42 40
611 MC, Williamsport, Pa.	Dec., "			7 74 Oct.,	21 20
612 M. Helena, Mont.	Nov., "			7 77 Nov., supplies	56 40
616 HM, Sacramento, Cal.	Nov., "			7 161 Supplies	3 50
618 M. Anacortes, Wash.	Nov., "			7 177 Supplies, stamps	56 80
623 M. Muskogee, Okla.	June, "			7 188 Bal. due Nov. report.	6 00
626 M. Walla Walla, Wash.	Oct., "			7 242 Sept.	16 80
627 B. Cairo, Ill.	Dec., "			7 315 Oct., Nov.	46 15
630 WS, St. Paul, Minn.	Nov., "			7 395 Nov., supplies	8 85
631 M. Phoenix, Ariz.	Sept., "			7 413 Nov., supplies	20 60
634 ML, Minneapolis, Minn.	Nov., "			7 561 Nov.,	108 60
637 B. Manitowish, Wis.	Nov., "			7 536 Supplies	5 00
638 M. Haynesville, La.	Nov., "			7 20 Supplies	5 00
639 WS, Los Angeles, Cal.	Nov., "			7 76 Nov.,	8 60
659 M. Dallas, Tex.	Nov., "			7 365 Charter and outfit.	15 00
669 MC, Shreveport, La.	Oct., "			7 81 Nov.,	10 35
673 M. San Bernardino, Cal.	Nov., "			7 466 Oct., Nov., supplies	17 60
676 SDD, Vancouver, B. C.	Nov., "			8 5 Bal. due Oct. report.	3 50
680 M. Miami, Ariz.	Nov., "			8 44 Supplies	50 00
681 M. Long Beach, Cal.	Nov., "			8 48 Bal. due Oct. report.	8 25
682 B. Elizabeth, N. J.	Nov., "			8 59 Bal. due Oct. report.	4 50
683 RRM, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Oct., "			8 230 Nov., buttons, supplies.	10 15
685 B. Eau Claire, Wis.	Nov., "			8 259 Oct.,	3 40
680 B. Owensboro, Ky.	Nov., "			8 299 Nov.,	13 00
692 M. Virden, Ill.	Nov., "			8 339 Nov.,	14 00
695 M. Brawley, Cal.	Aug., "			8 519 Oct.,	9 00
705 W. Detroit, Mich.	Nov., "			8 347 Nov., buttons	18 00
709 M. Mt. Clemens, Mich.	Nov., "			8 442 Nov.,	12 40
712 MC, Kansas City, Mo.	Sept., "			8 449 Nov., supplies	16 40
714 B. Joliet, Ill.	Dec., "			8 532 Oct., Nov., supplies	16 10
717 W. Baltimore, Md.	Nov

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date	Local		Date	Local		Date	Local
10	876	Supplies, stamps, cash.	15	50		27	7	Nov.	219	80
10	586	Supplies, bal. Oct. re-				27	19	Nov.	44	20
		port, cash.	9	00		27	58	Supplies, bal. due Nov.
10	592	Nov. supplies	24	75				report	12	50
12	19	Bal. due stamps.	4	50		27	76	Supplies	1	50
12	30	Nov.	413	80		27	154	Nov.	14	40
12	39	Nov.	21	65		27	196	Nov.	51	20
12	50	Dec., supplies	23	90		27	234	Supplies	2	41
12	119	Nov.	2	40		27	207	Nov.	112	80
12	128	Nov., supplies	24	75		27	246	Nov.	41	00
12	210	Nov., supplies, cash.	12	90		27	294	Nov.	27	00
12	213	Nov.	14	95		27	330	Bound M. & S., sup-
		Rein. Harry Strom, Lo-						plies, buttons, stamps	32	40
		cal 651	12	50		27	337	Supplies	5	00
12	298	Nov., supplies	45	45		27	364	Bal. due supplies.	4	75
12	323	Protested check	1	60				Bal. due rein. Lillian
12	323	Oct., Nov., supplies.	3	70				King, Local 628.	1	00
12	329	Nov., supplies	53	30		27	436	Nov., supplies	12	20
12	490	Nov.	8	40		27	305	Bal. due Nov. report.	3	00
12	611	Nov., Dec.	4	20				Rein. Carrie Stickel, Lo-
		Frank Meloy, Local 631	5	00				cal 796	3	50
12	637	Nov., supplies	6	15		27	468	Supplies	15	00
12	680	Nov., supplies	16	35		27	487	Nov.	85	40
12	815	Supplies	8	50		27	491	Oct., Nov., supplies.	38	50
12	279	Supplies	10	00		27	542	Nov., supplies	28	30
12	48	Nov.	182	00		27	595	Supplies, buttons	6	50
12	135	Nov., supplies	36	60		27	685	Nov.	2	40
12	364	Nov., supplies, buttons,				27	809	Dec.	12	00
		stamps	26	80				Rein. Mrs. Olive Hind-
12	638	Protested check	19	40				man, Local 411.	3	25
12	638	Oct.	14	80		27	557	Dues Pearl Ridgeway.	2	00
12	842	Supplies	26	00		27	62	Nov.	142	60
		Rein. J. A. Reynolds,				27	459	Nov., supplies	30	20
		Local 775	13	35		27	638	Nov., supplies	11	50
12	234	Protested check	63	86		27	Joe Patterson, M. A. L.	3	00
12	234	Rein. of local, supplies,				27	Joe Smith, M. A. L.	2	00
		bal. due May report,				27	556	Acct. indebtedness Henry
		cash	86	14				Thompson	8	00
12	305	Nov., stamps	86	20		28	338	Nov.	2	40
12	538	Oct.	10	00		28	680	Stamps, supplies	11	50
12	612	Nov., supplies	36	20		28	583	Nov.	24	40
12	730	Oct., supplies	38	85		28	222	Dec.	27	60
13	23	Supplies	5	00		28	402	Dues Henry Burch.	1	25
13	325	Nov.	18	20		28	451	Aug., supplies	39	85
		Rein. Lillian King, Lo-				28	266	Nov., supplies, buttons.	67	30
		cal 628	6	25		28	228	Nov.	2	00
13	457	Nov.	68	50		28	64	Dec., supplies	9	90
13	468	Supplies	10	00		28	268	Nov.	64	00
13	560	Supplies	10	00		29	33	Nov.	112	20
13	583	Supplies	2	00		29	180	Nov.	46	80
13	861	Nov., supplies, bound				29	279	Supplies	1	00
		M. & S.	60	50		29	286	Supplies	3	00
13	295	Oct.	9	6

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date	Local		Date			Date
826 Nov.	2 40		7 Tax	468 32		31 R. B. Hesketh, L. J. E. B.,
828 Oct., supplies	12 10		7 Union Label tax	100 00		Seattle, Wash.	100 00
834 Nov.	51 80		8 Protested check, Local 327.	48 43		31 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.,
458 Nov.	68 20		9 Protested check, Local 223.	19 70		Local 135	20 00
539 Nov.	9 45		9 John J. M. Devitt, Local 466	2 07		31 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O. Lo-
8 Nov., Dec.	3 20		10 Clerks	68 00		cal 7	40 00
22 Nov.	32 80		10 Protested check, Local 480.	23 93		31 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Lo-
32 Dec.	10 20		12 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.,			cal 865	40 00
70 Nov.	33 00		Local 135	20 00		31 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Lo-
78 Jan.	5 60		12 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Lo-			cal 728	20 00
89 Nov., supplies	38 60		cal 7	40 00		31 John Taylor, L. S. O., Lo-
109 Nov.	47 80		12 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Lo-			cal 68	20 00
110 Nov.	222 80		cal 865	40 00		31 Robt. Freeland, Death Claim
115 Dec.	121 60		12 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Lo-			No. 11823, Local 748	50 00
131 Nov.	24 60		cal 728	20 00		31 Morris Engel, Death Claim
143 Buttons, supplies	5 40		12 Buttons	21 05		No. 11829, Local 219	50 00
111 Dec., cash	10 35		13 E. R. Whitted, L. S. O., Lo-			31 Mary C. Williams, Death
Bal. due rein. James C.			cal 538	50 00		Claim No. 11822, Local 829	50 00
McLaughlin	6 45		13 Seals	33 97		31 Martin L. Sholtzberger, Death
161 Nov., buttons	51 10		15 A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	150 00		Claim No. 11333, Local 449	50 00
171 Dec.	18 40		15 P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 Hugh B. Piper, Death Claim
216 Nov.	10 00		15 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	150 00		No. 11336, Local 115	50 00
230 Dec.	4 40		15 Mary Dempsey, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 Chas. F. Muller, Death Claim
231 Nov., Dec.	10 40		15 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	150 00		No. 11337, Local 719	50 00
254 Nov.	6 00		15 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 John Stock, Death Claim No.
285 Nov.	20 60		15 Mrs. D. A. Hurley, Intl. Org.	150 00		11338, Local 117	50 00
349 Dec.	3 20		15 Harley Johnson, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 Ella J. Snyder Griffin, Death
376 Nov.	9 20		15 Wm. Mackenzie, Intl. Org.	150 00		Claim No. 11307, Local 402	50 00
378 Nov., Dec., supplies	11 30		15 Wm. Kavanagh, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 Patrick J. Dorrell, Death
397 Nov.	26 00		15 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	150 00		Claim No. 11339, Local 64	50 00
403 Oct., Nov., Dec., sup-			15 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org.	150 00		31 Jos. Wikin, Death Claim
plies	28 70		15 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150 00		No. 11341, Local 561	50 00
405 Buttons, supplies	3 30		15 Mitchell Reid, Death Claim			31 Geo. Krause, Death Claim
471 Oct., supplies, cash	34 15		No. 11310, Local 288	50 00		No. 11342, Local 561	50 00
476 On account	5 00		15 Maggie Mack, Death Claim			31 Jere L. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas.
508 Nov.	33 20		No. 11315, Local 332	50 00		No. 11342, Local 561	400 00
516 Stamps	5 80		15 Franz Bruneman, Death			31 Janitor	15 00
528 Nov.	2 00		Claim No. 11323, Local 30	50 00		Stamps	146 81
557 Supplies	1 70		15 Mrs. Julia Fleese, Death			Towel supplies	1 15
630 Nov., supplies	22 80		Claim No. 11326, Local 400	50 00		American Ry. Express Co.	144 78
639 Nov.	55 60		15 George Smith, Death Claim			Telegrams	5 00
676 Nov.	5 20		No. 11327, Local 866	50 00		Office supplies	4 08
12 Dec.	49 20		15 James Tate, Death Claim			Total	$12,655 65
203 Nov.	11 25		No. 11328, Local 3	50 00		Cash on hand Dec. 1, 1921.	$35,899 53
208 Oct., Nov.	41 40		15 Joe Bochaty, Death Claim			Liberty Loan Bonds	95,460 07
468 Supplies	10 00		No. 11330, Local 119	50 00		Canadian Bonds	4,975 00
474 Nov., supplies	60 80		15 Sells J. Grace, Death Claim			Receipts for December, 1921	14,591 49
538 Nov., supplies	14 00		No. 11331, Local 115	50 00		Total	$150,926 09
567 Nov., supplies	13 60		15 Edward Owheeler, alias			Expenditures for December,
788 Supplies, stamps	20 00		Forrest Denver, Death			1921	12,655 65
862 Buttons, supplies	5 75		Claim No. 11332, Local 18	50 00		On hand Jan. 1, 1922	$138,270 44
142 Supplies, cash	10 80		17 Clerks	68 00		In Death Fund Dec. 1, 1921	$133,840 94
Rein. F. E. Hicks, Lo-			19 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.,			Appropriated to Death
cal 570	7 25		Local 135	20 00		Fund, December, 1921	2,698 54
5 Nov., supplies	77 00		19 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Lo-			Total	$136,539 48
150 Nov., supplies	31 60		cal 7	40 00		Drawn from Death Fund,
88 Supplies, bound M. & S.	7 75		19 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Lo-			December, 1921	1,000 00
83 Nov., supplies	3 75		cal 865	40 00		In Death Fund Jan. 1, 1922	$135,539 48
128 Dec.	23 20		19 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Lo-			In Defense Fund Dec. 1, 1921	$712 31
219 Dec., supplies	62 55		cal 728	20 00		Appropriated to Defense
479 Dec.	7 40		19 John Taylor, L. S. O., Lo-			Fund, December, 1921	1,749 03
571 Protested check	12 75		cal 68	20 00		Total	$2,461 34
571 Nov.	9 00		19 Duplicator	5 50		Drawn from Defense Fund,
589 Dec., supplies	45 60		24 Clerks	170 00		December, 1921	1,298 55
865 Supplies	4 50		27 Printing and mailing M.			In Defense Fund Jan. 1, 1922	$1,162 79
Interest	181 89		& S.	2,429 93		In Con. Assmt. Fund Dec.
Total	$14,591 49		27 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.,			1, 1921	$1,204 10
			Local 135	20 00		Appropriated to Con. Assmt.
			27 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Lo-			Fund, December, 1921
			cal 7	40 00		Total	$1,204 10
			27 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Lo-			Drawn from Con. Assmt.
			cal 865	40 00		Fund, December, 1921
			27 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Lo-			In Con. Assmt. Fund Jan.
			cal 728	20 00		1, 1922	$1,204 10
			27 John Taylor, L. S. O., Lo-			In General Fund Jan. 1, 1922	$364 07
			cal 68	20 00		In Death Fund Jan. 1, 1922	135,539 48
			28 Protested check, Local 588.	16 10		In Defense Fund Jan. 1, 1922	1,162 79
			31 Clerks	72 00		In Con. Assmt. Fund Jan.
			31 Edward Flore, Gen. Pres.	485 85		1, 1922	1,204 10
			31 A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	230 16		Total	$138,270 44
			31 P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	162 81
			31 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	158 50
			31 Mary Dempsey, Intl. Org.	153 00
			31 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	174 20
			31 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00
			31 Mrs. D. A. Hurley, Intl. Org.	158 20
			31 Harley Johnson, Intl. Org.	180 19
			31 W. F. Kavanagh, Intl. Org.	153 45
			31 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	151 40
			31 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org.	158 46
			31 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	162 64
			31 Wm. Mackenzie, Intl. Org.	248 41
			31 Geo. Petty, defense, Local	200 00
			400
			31 Jesse K. Keller, L. J. E. B.,	200 00
			St. Louis, Mo.

EXPENDITURES FOR DECEMBER, 1921

Date
1 Rent	$151 35
1 Supplies	695 10
1 Buttons	455 78
1 Ben F. Parker, Local 74	6 48
1 Clerks	68 00
3 Insurance	4 58
2 Typewriter Exchange	28 25
5 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.,
Local 135	20 00
5 Fred Regan, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
5 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
5 John C. Staggenburg, L. S.
O. Local 865	40 00
5 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
5 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00
5 Protested check, Local 571.	12 75
5 Magazine sub.	7 50

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 26, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

November 28, in company with Brother Peabody of Local 865, canvassed cooks in nine of the South Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of the L. J. E. B.

November 29, canvassed waiters and waitresses at the Great Northern Hotel. Attended meeting of Local 7; four reinstated, three initiated. In company with Brother Parker of Local 7, went to Aurora, Illinois, where we attended an entertainment and dance given by Local 74; very enjoyable evening. Sister Madge Argo of Local 801 acted as master of ceremonies.

November 30, canvassed cooks and waiters at the Brevort Hotel and Stillson's Restaurant; one reinstatement. In company with our committee, and Brothers Fitzpatrick, president of the C. F. of L. and Victor Olander, secretary of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, attended a conference with the colored ministers. Made arrangements for another meeting with them.

December 1, in company with Brother Peabody, canvassed the cooks in some of the South Side places; two applications. Attended meeting of Local 865; four initiated, five reinstated.

December 3, canvassed bartenders in several of the South Side places; one reinstatement. Attended grand ball given by Local 865; big crowd present, very enjoyable evening. Hundreds of the members of Local 865 were present at this entertainment, bringing their families with them, and a general good time was had by all.

December 4, attended meeting of the C. F. of L.

December 5, in company with Brother Sawyer, business agent of Local 89, canvassed bartenders in some of the Loop places; three applications.

December 6, in company with Sister Alexander, business representative of Local 484, canvassed waitresses in some of the Loop lunchrooms; one application. Canvassed waiters at the Morrison Hotel and State's Restaurant; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; three reinstated, two initiated.

December 7, in company with our committee, held conferences with three of the Loop Restaurant proprietors, asking for the union wage scale and conditions for our members. We secured an agreement with one of them; another conference with the other two later. Attended meeting of Local 583; two initiated.

December 8, conference with our attorney, Mr. Fred Smith, in the interest of Local 865. In company with Brother Emerson, business agent of Local 7, canvassed waiters in some of the Loop places; two reinstatements.

December 9, canvassed in the restaurant at the Polk Street Depot. Several promised to reinstate. In company with Brothers Parker and Organizer Campbell, held conferences with some of the cabaret managers on the South Side, who employ a large number of colored waiters. Attended meeting of the executive board of Local 7.

December 10, in company with Brother Peabody, canvassed cooks in a number of the West Side places.

December 12, canvassed waitresses in some of the Loop lunchrooms; secured three applications for Local 484 in one of the O'Donnell and Wilder places.

December 13, in company with Brother Emerson of Local 7, canvassed waiters in some of the large Loop places. Quite a number promised us that they would reinstate later on. Attended meeting of Local 7; two initiated, three reinstated. In company with Brothers Campbell and Parker held conference with the proprietors of four of the large South Side cabarets, where about 125 colored waiters are employed; we were successful in getting one of the proprietors employing 18 waiters to agree to unionize. See the others later.

December 14, in company with Brother Peabody, canvassed cooks in eight of the South Side places; several promised to join later. Went to Aurora, Illinois. In company of Sister Argo of Local 801, attended meeting of Local 74; addressed meeting of Aurora Central Labor Body.

December 15, in company with Brother Parker, visited the several headquarters of the butcher workmen who are on strike at the stockyards. Canvassed employes in some of the West Side places; one application. Attended meeting of Local 865; three reinstated.

December 16, in company with Brother Emerson, canvassed waiters at the Morrison Hotel, Stillson's Restaurant, and State's Restaurant; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of the executive board of Local 7. Attended meeting of Local 484; two initiated.

December 17, canvassed waiters in five of the North Side places; two reinstatements.

December 18, attended meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

December 19, canvassed waiters and waitresses in eight of the South Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of the L. J. E. B.

December 20, in company with Brother Emerson, canvassed waiters in several of the Loop places; one reinstatement. Attended meeting of Local 7; two initiated, two reinstated. In company with Brother Staggenburg, eighth vice-president of our international union, Brothers Peabody and Parker, went to Joliet, Illinois, where we attended a splendid meeting of Local 801. After addresses by the visiting delegation and the installation of the officers for the ensuing term by Brother Staggenburg, a dance was held and a fine luncheon served. I desire to take this opportunity to thank the officers and members of Local 801 for their fine turn-out at the meeting, the good time had, and we won't forget the fine feed. I think I can join with the rest of the visitors from Chicago in saying, when anything like this comes off we are ready to be invited again.

December 21, in company with our committee, held a conference with the proprietor of the Moulin Rouge; see him again. Canvassed waiters and cooks in four of the North Side places; one reinstatement. Attended social given by Local 484; enjoyable evening.

December 22, held conference with our attorney, Mr. Smith, in the interest of Local 865. Canvassed waitresses at the Great Northern Hotel and La Salle Depot. Went to South Chicago. Attended bazaar and social given by Local 394. Good crowd present; grand success.

December 23-24, canvassed waiters and cooks in the Loop and south side places; great number promised to join later; one reinstatement for the waiters. Held conference with the officials of Local 484. Attended meeting of the executive board of Local 7.

My expenses for the month were as follows:
 Two trips to Aurora, Ill., and return..... $4 32
 One trip to Joliet, Ill., and return..... 2 53
 Inter-city care fare..... 4 42
 Postage for month..... 44

Total.....$11 71

With best wishes to the officers and members of our international union and hoping that the year of 1922 will be a prosperous and happy one for all.

Fraternally yours,
 E. W. PARLEE,
 International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--89-8-83-13-8-15

DETROIT, MICH., December 27, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows:

November 30, working on books of Cooks' Local 234. Same evening reported for our crafts at session of Detroit Federation of Labor.

December 1, with President Geo. Miller and Recording Secretary A. Eppler, looked up discrepancies of former business agent, Jas. Palmer of Cooks' Union, who disappeared, and whose shortage is expected to amount to over $500. He forged checks of local; he was bonded and warrants are issued for his arrest.

December 2, assisted new business agent, A. Friedrich of cooks' union, also discussed action of C. L. U. with committee in regard to the organizing of culinary workers in kitchens of schools here.

December 4, attended meeting of workers at Labor Temple; principal speaker was Wm. Foster, who handled the steel strike.

December 5, assisted new business agent, A. Friedrich, and President G. Miller, cooks' union, on books, reports, etc.; also presided at meeting of executive board of waiters' union, accepted resignation of Business Agent F. Grubb and appointed F. Wright to act until election can be held.

December 6, with three delegates, called on proprietor of Main Restaurant in regard to enforcing wage scales; attended special meeting of L. J. E. B. and waiters' local; serious business transacted; in evening attended executive board meeting of cooks' local.

December 7, with Sister C. Edmunds, called on girls employed at new English Tea Room, report progress. Evening, addressed federation of labor.

December 8, assisted old and new business agents of waiters' local on books and reports; called on proprietors of English Tea Rooms in company with Brothers Archene and Friedrich of cooks' local; were promised they would give our members employment. In evening attended regular meeting of cooks' local; employment secured for four union waitresses at Avon Tea Room. Sister Edmund's persistency noted by results obtained.

December 9, with three representatives, signed up Main Restaurant for cooks' and waitresses; also called at Joseph's Restaurant in regard to non-union cook who agreed to join Local 234. Presided at meeting of waiters' local; resignations of all officers accepted.

December 10, with Business Agent A. Friedrich, cooks' local, secured one reinstatement.

December 12, worked with special auditors, Brothers Winters, McGee and Koenig on accounts of waiters' union and club.

December 14, special meeting of waiters' local which was an exciting one; nomination of officers; some nominations were contested on legal grounds and referred to General President Flore. Waiters' Hall was packed to the door, and if we could have more such lively sessions the bosses would soon give up the idea of believing the workers were falling for the open shop agitation.

December 15, assisted Business Agent Friedrich and Recording Secretary A. Eppler on international union reports; attended special meeting of cooks' local, called because some members wanted to strike a certain house, but cooler heads decided a better plan and the saner plan achieved desired results.

December 16, with Sister C. Edmunds, secured two applications and one reinstatement at Newcomb's Tea Room. Went to Mt. Clemens to attend meeting of culinary workers and returned to midnight session of waiters' local in Detroit and installed officers at a stormy session. The writer was requested to leave chair by some not pleased with my rulings, but majority decided otherwise; minority later agreed I was fair and impartial, and so we started Local 234 and 705, cooks and waiters, with a new set of officers, who have past experience to guide them.

December 17, attended monthly dance of waitresses' local.

December 18, attended mass meeting of packing house employees on strike.

December 19, with Brother Archene, treasurer cooks' local, called on proprietor English Tea Rooms; undecided about changing from women cooks to men. Attended meeting new board of trustees, waiters' local who are planning a better system for control of funds.

December 20, in company with Brother Wright, waiters' local, addressed meetings of plumbers, steam fitters, carpenters, and lathers' unions in interest of our membership.

December 21, canvassed Ueeta, Delmont, Walkers' chain of restaurants; attended meeting of Detroit Federation of Labor same evening; interesting session.

December 22, attended joint board meeting in regard to Kosher restaurants; also executive board meeting of waiters' local and the installation of officers of cooks' local.

December 23, reported to committee of action of Detroit Federation of Labor on matters concerning our crafts. Also addressed important meeting of waiters' local; one application, 1 initiation.

December 24, with Business Agent P. Erickson of waiters' local, called at Strykers and Frontenac: collections and seeking employment for holiday for out-of-work members; met with success.

Statler Hotel is at it again, having reduced waiters on extra work from $2 to $1.25—a 75 cent reduction on each job.

Expenses for the month are as follows:

To Mt. Clemens and return.....	$0 52
Postage for two months.....	46
City and inter-city car fare.....	4 20
To McIntire Printing Co., printing 500 circulars for colored mass meeting, as per receipt enclosed, overlooked from June 10, 1921	8 00
Total.....	$13 18

Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM F. KAVANAGH,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., December 26, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

November 27, I arrived in Terre Haute and canvassed the restaurants and soft drink places; only found two or three that thought they should be organized.

November 28, went to Clinton, Ind., and got in touch with the secretary of the trades council; we called on the culinary workers who asked us to call a meeting which was arranged for December 3; left for Indianapolis same evening.

November 29, held a conference with the proprietor of the Ohio Hotel Restaurant. This Greek put a card in his place during the miners' convention last September—he said that's what he wanted it for; I removed the card and Local 437 placed a fine on all his employees. It won't be so easy when the miners come back here next February. Two of our members went into business for themselves; formerly they objected to college students working where they were employed—but now it's different since they became proprietors. Local 437 will have to give them some advice.

November 30, arrived in Terre Haute and addressed central trades council, and made a request that they make a noise in the different places where they eat and drink; also tried to have them form a label league but received no response. Addressed carpenters' meeting.

December 1, went to Linton and addressed meeting of our local. Some of the members were talking about giving up their cards, they could not see what good the union was doing for them. Well, here is what it did for them: Before they were organized they worked long hours and received small wages. Since organizing they have increased their wages 50 per cent, and I proved the union did it for them. After the meeting I was invited to attend a nice spread, and I wish to thank the officers and members for the courtesy shown me.

December 3, arrived in Clinton and canvassed the restaurants and soft drink places. I sure got the surprise of my life. Every place in town is run by ex-members of the miners' union. I concluded there would not be much trouble in organizing a local, but as soon as the announcement appeared in the daily paper regarding the meeting, the proprietors notified their help that they would reduce wages if their help joined the union. Oh, what card men they must have been to say they believed in unions. Well, no one showed at the meeting hall; their threat had accomplished its purpose.

December 4, arrived back in Indianapolis, and found our members not giving the officers any assistance, and it's no use to ask organized labor. While some of the members of the Trades Council are doing all they can, it is very little moral support the rank and file is giving us. I attended meeting of Local 437 which was the poorest meeting I have attended so far. I pleaded with them to wake up.

December 5, accompanied Brother Harris to several places, where the colored culinary workers are employed, and as usual, promises are what we received.

December 6, accompanied Brother and Sister Wring to the carpenters' and moulders' meetings.

December 7, arranged meeting for the domestic workers for December 9.

December 9, only a few women showed up for the above meeting and agreed to hold several meetings in the near future.

December 10, I addressed the Lathers' and Bakers' Unions, and with their assistance I was successful in placing a card in three places run by Mr. Corockovitch.

December 11, addressed the Post Office Employees; also the stereotypers. Brother and Sister Wring and President Fields accompanied me.

December 12, attended Trades Council meeting, and it was a good meeting. Secretary Frank Duffy of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters, Mr. Ensley of the Chamber of Commerce and Organizer Wirthall of the Barbers, addressed them and it's going to be continued at every meeting, having speakers from both sides. God knows we have lots of them in Indianapolis.

December 13, sent letters to every eating place in the city so that the proprietors would know we could furnish them with good mechanics; also the telephone number.

December 15, was called to Muncie. Secretary Dunn of the building trades said our people wanted to be organized. I soon found he had made a mistake. Left for Indianapolis.

December 18, held two meetings with the domestics, and hope in the future to send for a charter. It is almost impossible to have them meet because they work nothing less than 15 hours every day.

December 19, attended dance given by Local 437. It was poorly attended by our members, but was a success.

December 21, attended meeting of Local 437. Left for Terre Haute that night. Canvassed the soft drink places, hotels and restaurants. Bro. Paul Hurt of Springfield, Illinois, assisted me giving circulars to our people, and received over fifty promises that they would attend. Some labor leaders of Terre Haute also promised to be there, but not one man or woman showed. Every kind of a trade is organized there but ours. There are 82 restaurants, 50 saloons and about 600 men and women working at our trade. All are satisfied.

December 23, arrived back in Indianapolis and got busy with our people once more.

December 24, tried to get in touch with the colored cooks in the hotels, especially the Severn and the English. They all wear stripes on their sleeves for long service and think more of them than they do their wages or long hours.

The following is my expense account for the month:

November—

27—Indianapolis to Terre Haute.....$ 2 79
28—Terre Haute to Clinton and return.. 98
28—Terre Haute to Indianapolis..... 2 79
30—Indianapolis to Terre Haute..... 2 79

December—

1—Terre Haute to Linton and return.... 2 68
3—Terre Haute to Clinton and return.. 98
3—Terre Haute to Indianapolis..... 2 79
15—Indianapolis to Muncie and return... 3 68
21—Indianapolis to Terre Haute..... 2 79
23—Terre Haute to Indianapolis..... 2 79
Postage for the month..... 1 15

Total.....$26 21

Yours fraternally,

ROB'T. LYONS,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

VANCOUVER, B. C., December 24, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month.

November 24 to 29 worked with the business agents of Locals 28 and 676. Unsettled conditions required all of our time and attention.

November 29 received a telegram to proceed to Victoria to assist in signing up the wage scale for the next six months. Held a special meeting of the local that evening, at which it was unanimously voted to maintain the present scale of wages. Left for Vancouver at midnight to attend special meetings of Local 28, called for the purpose of considering a request from some of the employers for a reduction in our wage scale. Both afternoon and evening meetings were well attended. After a careful survey of conditions in general the local decided to grant a 10 per cent reduction, to take effect on December 4 and remain in force until May 31, 1922.

November 30 received another urgent call from Local 459, Victoria. The majority of the restaurants there had decided to institute the open shop fad. Went over on the midnight boat, and the following morning in company with Secretary Gordon we signed up five restaurants. We spent considerable time in putting our case clearly before those who insisted on the open shop. In each and every case we were told that the wages would be maintained, however, we are well aware that these same proprietors have been peddling the same bunk for years.

December 1 called out the crews of New England and Maryland Cafes. We advised those working in Kelway's Cafe that our card was taken out, but regret to say two of our members in that house showed the yellow streak, commonly called "scab." However, I believe the boys and girls in Victoria will look after them.

December 2 and 3 worked with the officers of Local 459. Left for Vancouver on the afternoon boat to attend the regular meeting of Local 676, as the beer question was at an acute stage. We are hoping to the last moment that our agitation for the past twelve months would convince the law makers at Victoria to grant the people of this Province, what was properly voted on, beer and light wines, to be distributed in a manner that would enable us to get a drink of wholesome beer without going to the expense of packing a dozen bottles to a hotel or private house. The session closed at Victoria without any action on this important matter, except to amend the Liquor Act, giving full power to government agents to prosecute people already encouraged to consume whisky at exorbitant prices.

Local 676 has put up a splendid battle to maintain their organization, and even now refuse to be discouraged. Good luck to them, and personally I feel the justice of their claim will be rewarded.

December 5 to 7 assisting Local 28. The election of officers was held on the 7th, the result being an almost new slate, the most important contest being that of business agent, conceded to Andy Graham by a large majority.

December 8 to Victoria on urgent call, as further trouble had developed. On arrival I found Secretary Gordon laid up with a bad cold. Two of those who had previously come out on strike had gone back to work. We worked on this case that evening, and had the satisfaction of getting them to sign up; we also signed up the Westholme Hotel, this leaving us with only three of the original houses against us.

Worked in Victoria till the 13th, and assisted in every way possible to straighten matters. We called a special meeting to deal with those who scabbed on the boys and girls on strike, and hope our membership will scan the MIXER AND SERVER very carefully, and not overlook those birds whose names will appear.

December 13 to date my time has been fully occupied assisting our locals in this city, attending meetings, etc. We are at a stage now when our members must realize that petty grievances must be cast aside, and the more important question of safeguarding our interests as an organization that has every right to command respect, should be borne in mind. Conditions generally among the Canadian culinary workers can be improved, and we hope the next few months will be used to good advantage, by strengthening our ranks throughout the Dominion.

My expenses for the past month follow:

Victoria and return, 3 trips at $8.50.....$25 50
Stationery, postage, carbon paper..... 2 81

Total.....$28 31

Tendering our officers and membership a Prosperous New Year.

Fraternally submitted,

WM. MACKENZIE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL., December 28, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

November 28, 29 and 30, canvassed waiters and cooks in the Hyde Park Hotel, Arlington Cafe and Santa Fe yards. Attended meeting of Local 268.

November 30, held conference with Joint Alliance of the Colored Preachers and the Executive Board of the Chicago and State Federations of Labor to see if they couldn't line up the colored preachers to encourage the colored people to come into the labor unions.

December 1, canvassed cooks and waiters at the Palmer House and Santa Fe station. Held conference with several down town cafe managers and Business Agent Peabody of Local 865 and John Fitzpatrick, President Chicago Federation of Labor.

December 2, canvassed cooks and waiters in the Burlington and Rock Island stations.

December 3, canvassed porters and waiters in the Santa Fe station and cooks in Pullman restaurant; also attended ball given by Local 865, which was a success.

December 4, attended meeting of Chicago Federation of Labor and was given the floor to explain conditions of the colored workers and the activities of the bosses among the colored workers on the South Side. Was promised the support of the entire Central Body to help organize the colored workers.

December 5, in company with Brother Parker went to South Chicago, received one application and several promises. Visited the City Hall and made arrangements to meet the colored aldermen of the second and third wards.

December 6, canvassed South Side restaurants and cafes and attended meeting of Local 7.

December 7, canvassed cooks in the Palmer House, Hyde Park and Park View Hotels with Brothers Parker and Peabody of Locals 7 and 865.

December 8, attended meeting of Local 583 and initiated one new candidate. Canvassed several South Side restaurants and porters in the N. W. station.

December 9, in company with Organizer Parlee and Brother Parker held conference with the aldermen of the second ward. Also canvassed the Hull House and the manager of this cafe promised that he would sign the house up in the near future.

December 10, attended meeting of stock yard workers who are out on strike in this city. Went back to Hull House and received eight applications for Locals 583, 484, 865 and 7.

December 12, canvassed several restaurants and cafes with our organizing committee; attended meeting of the Colored Baptist Preachers' Alliance which gave me an opportunity to explain our mission. They promised to assist us in our movement.

December 13, in company with colored organizers of the Butcher Workmen's Union canvassed several South Side restaurants. Also canvassed South Side cabarets with Organizer Parlee and Brother Parker.

December 14, canvassed South Side restaurants and attended meeting of Local 583 and initiated five new members.

December 15 and 16, canvassed the various stations among the railroad men.

December 17, attended conference with our committee and canvassed several hotels and restaurants.

December 18, attended meeting of Chicago Federation of Labor.

December 19, again called in conference with the colored preachers of all denominations together with Bros. John Fitzpatrick, President Chicago Federation of Labor, and Victor Orlando, Secretary Illinois State Federation of Labor. Attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board.

December 20, canvassed porters in the I. C. station and waiters in the Dreamland Cafe.

December 21, canvassed the cooks in the Fair restaurant and Lion's Cabaret with Organizer Parlee and initiated two bartenders and two colored waiters. Attended meeting of Local 583.

December 22, canvassed porters in the N. W. and Pennsylvania stations. Attended meeting of Executive Board of Local 268.

December 23 and 24, canvassed restaurants on the West Side with Brother Peabody of Local 865 and received several applications.

December 26, assisted secretaries of Locals 268 and 583 on their books and got their reports off.

December 27, canvassed cooks on a boat and attended meeting of stock yards workers. Held conference with the city editor of the Chicago Enterprise, a colored weekly newspaper which promised to support our organization, having already given us some valuable writeups in this paper pertaining to the working conditions of the colored boys on the South Side and advised them to come into our organization in order to obtain better working conditions and wages.

December 28, canvassed porters and waiters in the I. C. and Rock Island and met quite a few of the suspended members, all of whom promised to reinstate.

My expense for the past month follows:

Inter-city transportation	$ 6 16
Stamps	72
Total	$ 6 88

Fraternally submitted,

P. D. CAMPBELL,

International Organizer.

P. S.—Wishing all the officers and members of our International Union a prosperous New Year.

—P. D. C.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BOSTON, MASS., December 27, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

During the past month I have continued my efforts to get the cooks of this city back in our organization with fairly good results.

On December 5 we had a cooks' meeting which was very well attended, showing that they are beginning to take an interest in what is being done in their behalf.

On December 2 I attended the first annual ball of the Jewish Waiters' Auxiliary of Local 34 which was a success in every way. I have been out on different occasions with Bro. H. Grossman, visiting the Jewish restaurants. In my next report I expect to have something more definite to say about those places.

I had several private meetings with the cooks of the Arlington Hotel and they have all rejoined our local. I have used the same methods with the cooks at the Avery with the same results; both full crews back in the union.

I was also successful at last to break into the Copley-Plaza where, so far, I have reinstated eight cooks. On December 13 I held three meetings for the cooks of that big hostelry.

December 19, attended a meeting of the Jewish Auxiliary Executive Board.

December 21, attended a special meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board on account of the opening of a new restaurant with non-union help. No results so far. During this month we initiated eleven cooks and reinstated twenty-six; and initiated three and reinstated fourteen waiters; a total of fifty-four. This gives Local 34 now 313 cooks.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

Postage	$ 95
Inter-city carfare	7 60
Total	$ 8 55

Fraternally submitted,

A. MARTEL,

International Organizer.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., December 27, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of December:

December 1 to 3, in El Paso, Texas. With Secretary Johnnie Massie and Business Agent Joe Bender, made a trip to Juarez, Mexico, where we found several ex-members of international unions, some working on withdrawal cards and others under suspension for non-payment of dues. Several promised to pay up as soon as their standing was secured, but we found several there who are better on the outside. An order from the authorities compelling employers to employ at least one-half Mexicans on the jobs had cut out a lot of boys, but it is doubtful if the move will prove successful, because the trade of the town is composed almost entirely of Americans, and they want American service. Local 848 of El Paso is in good shape, thanks to the efforts of the above mentioned officials who work in harmony and give everyone a square deal.

December 3, to Demming and Lordsburg, New Mexico. Both towns too small and as dead as a door knob.

December 4, to Bowie and Benson, Arizona; the first mentioned supporting one restaurant and of the other two not over a total of ten culinary workers being employed in both towns.

Visited Tucson, where I failed to get in touch with either President Arthur Snellgrove or Secretary Zimmer. Tucson is suffering from the same malady that affects nearly all the Arizona towns—an after effect of too much I. W. Wism, etc., and no one evidently ambitious enough to keep the organization moving forward.

December 5, to Phoenix. Was surprised to find that Local 631 had given up the ghost and sent back its charter. The strange part is that there isn't any opposition from the employers to speak of, it simply being a case of quitting cold. Understanding that the cooks wanted a local if permitted to be by themselves, I arranged for a hall and notified the cooks, but only succeeded in getting five to attend. The next day I put it up to them by asking for application and reinstatement fees, etc. Then it became plain that the most of them weren't sincere—simply four-flushing; wanting something but not willing to bear their share of the burden. I understand from Thos. A. French, secretary-treasurer of the Arizona Federation of Labor, that a drive will be held sometime in February to clean up the State of Arizona, and undoubtedly the culinary workers of Phoenix will be induced to line up at that time, and when they do they should be made to pay the fiddler.

December 9, to El Centro, Calif., via Yuma, Ariz. In Yuma, I found only one white restaurant (Ham Elliott). Another which employed white help (girls) in the dining room employed Chinese in the kitchen, and that place has been run for over thirty years by Charlie Sam, a Chinese. In El Centro the boys had sent in their charter on account of failure of members to take enough interest to come to the meetings or pay dues to Business Agent Tom Ryan. The "valley" is very hard hit just now and being spread over a long distance makes it hard to get anything like concerted action. There isn't any doubt but what the culinary workers will want an organization in the spring when the packing season starts, and from present indications the cut in wages which they will be handed before that time will prove some little inspiration.

December 12, to Los Angeles to go over the situation with regards to affairs in the State, especially in regards to San Diego and several cities close to Los Angeles.

December 13, to San Diego. Chances are the San Diego case will receive some attention in the December MIXER AND SERVER from the pen of the General Secretary-Treasurer. However, I want to say that Local 402 has seen the pitfall ahead and proposes to short shrift those that propose new fangled dreams which cover personal grudges or selfish ambitions. When the sifting was finished it was found, as usual, that the "Rank and File" really consisted of about ten malcontents whose past records resembled a Chinese lottery ticket. As already stated, Local 402 has cleaned house and will see that it stays clean, and their example can well be copied by some of the other locals of the State.

December 24, to Los Angeles to spend Christmas with the family.

The following is my expense account for the month:

December—

3—To Demming	$ 4 60
3—To Lordsburg	3 11
4—To Bowie and Benson	6 04
4—To Tucson	2 50
5—To Phoenix	7 25
9—To Yuma and El Centro, Pullman...	18 41
12—To Los Angeles	10 19
13—To San Diego	4 91
24—To Los Angeles	4 91
Interurban	1 45
Postage and stationery	2 68

Total.....$66 05

With best wishes,

Faternally yours,
AL. C. BECK.
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

NEW YORK, N. Y., December 24, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month is as follows:

November 28, 29 and 30, in addition to the usual work I attended a meeting of the new Local 258; initiated three new members and a review of the work of one Henry Thompson, who had been making trouble for this union of pullman porters, was gone into. Secretary Swire read a number of letters he had received from different cities where this man had operated and, meeting the man after the meeting, I told the man that if I found him making any more trouble for the local I should take the necessary legal steps to stop it. This union is doing as well as could be expected with the trouble this man Thompson has made because of being stopped from getting money from the members. Attended executive board meeting of Local 3.

December 1, at Ebeling's Casino on an appeal case.

December 2, meeting of Local 1. Settlement with Schwartz & Rosenberg, a place that had made considerable trouble, wishing a reduction in wages; no reduction given and present scale continues.

December 5, in company with Business Agents Redisch and Brav of Local 2, we waited upon Mr. Trommer, the keeper of one of the largest and best places in Brooklyn. He wants some reduction in scale because of prohibition ruining his business and after a long discussion we requested him to place his requests in writing for submission to the union.

December 6, general meeting of Local 1 at Manhattan Lyceum; some 1,000 members in attendance and a long discussion on important matters, lasting until after midnight.

December 8, in Brooklyn with Business Agents Pattberg of Local 70 and Brav of Local 2, at Schwaben and Sangerbund Halls on bartender's cases. Had conferences with both proprietors and fixed up matters. These are two of the leading old time union halls in Brooklyn; same story, prohibition killing business.

December 9, meeting of Local 3; three reinstatements and two new members. Our bartenders are coming to the front in good shape. Business Agent Kroupa is making good on the job. A spirit of harmony prevails and the union is looking to establish a club room and home. All officers working to up-build the union. At night, attended the event of the season, the Waitresses' Annual Ball. Large attendance from the different unions and a social and financial success obtained.

December 12, meeting of Local 258; two initiations.

December 13, attended a meeting of the State Federation of Labor Legislative Committee at Albany on labor measures to be presented to the coming legislative session. Sister Betty Hawley of Buffalo, Bro. Manny Koveleski of Rochester, with Bro. Ahern, Local 5 and myself from New York City, representing our unions in this state. Our proposed laws were accepted and will be presented for enactment.

December 16, meeting of Local 1. On account of disorderly conduct of two members the previous meeting had been abandoned by the president. I not being present at this meeting, and on the minutes so stating, being approved, of this previous meeting, I suspended two members for this conduct and preferred charges to our General President against them. One of the members being present I requested him to leave, on his refusal, and being backed up by some lawless members, I suspended the meeting and instructed the executive board to transact the necessary business of the union. On an attempt being made to hold a meeting by some lawless members I suspended the brother who presided. Order was restored and the business of the union was transacted. There is a small element in this union that are bent on causing trouble. I have listened to their supposed grievances and find them pure personalities and baseless. These members are regarding the progress of the union for reasons best known to themselves, and can be very well and profitably dispensed with. They will either obey the laws and quit playing the bosses' game for them or get out.

December 21. It being brought to my attention that a circular vilifying the officers of Local 1, and calling a so-called "Protest Meeting," was being distributed, I issued a circular cautioning members not to attend the meeting, stating that I would suspend any members attending. At the door of Arlington Hall I had some loyal members distributing these circulars to all who appeared, and also attended the meeting in company with the officers of this local. We found Bros. Abe Kastner, Issy Hirshhorn, Phil Haberman and Joe Elster apparently in charge of the meeting. I asked for the floor, being denied this I told all loyal members to leave, which all did but thirteen. These men I have suspended and preferred charges against to our General President. From information given me I am suspicious that these men are being financed by the bosses for ulterior purposes. In this I am strengthened by the fact that these men, or others, have given the bosses' newspapers, and those presumably being for labor, and always sticking a knife into legitimate labor matters and organizations, write-ups of this meeting. It is time to smoke out treason or worse—stupidity. If some of our members have not sufficient intelligence to know what is good for them it is our business to teach them. The good members should not be made to suffer for the foolish.

December 23, attended meeting of Local 1. Good orderly meeting, all business transacted before adjournment.

My expenses have been:

December 13, Albany and return.....	$11 08
Car fares, all local lines.....	5 20
Postage, etc.	1 46

Total.....$17 74

Fraternally submitted,

R. E. CROSKY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SALEM, MASS., December 23, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

November 25, meeting of Local 273; installed the newly elected officers, forwarded bonds for financial officers to headquarters, initiated two new members.

November 26 to 29, assisted by Secretary Peterson, canvassed the restaurants and received a number of promises from former members that they would be reinstated at the next meeting. Called on the railroad porters and arranged to hold a conference at a later date.

November 30, addressed a meeting at the Fitchburg C. L. U.

December 1, addressed meetings of the telephone operators and carpenters' unions and had a committee from the telephone operators appointed to assist us in trying to organize the women workers in our craft.

December 2, attended morning and evening meetings of the street car men's union. The same date we had scheduled an open meeting for the culinary workers, but was obliged to postpone until December 9 on account of a severe storm.

December 6, held a conference with the railroad porters in the interests of organizing a local in Springfield. As there were not sufficient number to go to make up a live local, those interested promised me they would get into the New York local.

December 8, at the request of the Leominster Building Trades Council, addressed a mass meeting of that organization. While in Fitchburg attended meetings of various labor organizations in the interests of our craft.

December 9, open meeting of culinary workers; poor attendance; received five applications. The proprietors saw to it that their employees did not get into a labor organization. However, the organizing committee of the C. L. U. has not given up hopes of establishing a local in the near future, and assured me they would do their utmost to accomplish that end. Left the matter in the hands of Albert Lafrennie, secretary of the C. L. U.

December 12, to Salem, where I found things in bad shape with Local 290; no interest taken in the organization. With the assistance of Secretary Robert Deargen, canvassed Salem, Beverley and Peabody. Was fairly successful in getting a number of former members back into line. Called on the officers of Local 329 on matters of interest to the local.

December 20, accompanied by Vice-President Conley, attended an important meeting of Local 161, regarding existing trouble, etc.

December 23, with Vice-President Conley and the officers of Local 329, was in attendance at the Superior Court on an injunction case that Charles Hamilton of Lynn was asking the court to enjoin Local 329, teamsters' union and shoe heelers' union; case was postponed for one week.

The following is my expense account:

November—
30—Springfield to Fitchburg.....	$4 00
December—
5—To Springfield	4 00
7—To Fitchburg	3 39
12—To Salem	2 57
20—Brockton and return.....	2 20
Interurban car fare in Lynn, Salem, Beverly, Peabody and Boston.....	3 50
Typewriting notices	65
Postage	50
Total.....	$20 81

I wish to extend my best wishes for a happy and prosperous New Year to our general membership.

Yours fraternally,

THOS. J. DURNIN,
International Organizer.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-18-8-18

BOSTON, MASS., December 29, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month is as follows:

December 2, Joint Organizing Committee.

Week of December 5, called on girls at several of the restaurants, collected dues and a few reinstatements.

December 12, called on girls at Conn's Sea Grill, collected dues and one reinstatement.

December 13, municipal election day; very little could be done. Attended meetings of some organizations in the evening.

December 14, election in Local 112 with contest for only one office, that of secretary-treasurer. Sister Bessie Irving was again the successful candidate.

December 15, we moved into our new headquarters, 276 Tremont Street. We hope this change will result very favorably to the best interests of our organization.

December 16, called on girls and collected some dues. Attended Joint Organization Committee meeting in the evening.

December 19 to 22, worked among the girls, collected dues, received some applications and reinstatements.

The result of this month's work has not been what it might have been had it not been Christmas month.

We have, however, received 25 reinstatements and applications so far, with favorable expectation of that number being exceeded in the coming months, in that the girls are showing a decided spirit of co-operation.

My expenses for the month follow:

Interurban car fare.....$7.80

Wishing you and all of our members a very Happy and Prosperous New Year, I remain,

Fraternally yours,

D. A. HURLEY,
International Organizer.

SEATTLE, WASH., December 27, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month of December follows:

November 27 to December 9, in Seattle, in conjunction with lockout committee, and officials of local unions. Work in connection with locked out members. Interviewing proprietors of various restaurants, attending meetings of joint board, local unions and labor council.

December 9, to Everett. Called special meeting of Local 451. Discussed matters pertaining to the welfare of local. Also considered ways and means of tiding over losses sustained from defalcation of former Secretary Frank Hughes. Hughes promised to make good all shortage.

December 10, returned to Seattle, meeting lockout committee and other routine work.

December 12, work in connection with lockout. Prepared special edition of Union Record. Interviewed restaurant men when possible.

December 13, routine work during day. In evening attended joint dance given by culinary workers' unions. Splendid good time socially, as well as a financial success. It is characteristic of members of the culinary crafts, and takes more than a 'scrap' with the caterers' association to take the joy out of life. In fact, the dance was more of a celebration of victory over Paul J. Jemson, "Walking Delegate" of the Caterers' Association, and his few remaining followers.

December 15, at 9:30 a. m., attended special meeting of Local 538. The boys of Local 538 are striving hard to maintain their union in spite of adverse circumstances.

December 16, meeting of lockout committee. In company with business agents of locals, visited restaurants. Attended meeting of Locals 239 and 33.

December 17, 18 and 19, held conferences with representatives of Department of Labor. Arranged to meet proprietors of several unfair restaurants. To Everett. Regular meeting of Local 451. Local members are doing everything possible to square up all outstanding accounts left unpaid because of defalcations of former secretary. Hughes has failed to make good. Local ordered officers to prosecute. Complaint filed with Prosecuting Attorney.

December 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24, in Seattle. Work in connection with lockout. Have representatives of Labor Department conferring with restaurant men. Friday and Saturday, December 23 and 24, in conference with Meves Brothers. The representatives of the Department of Labor reached a satisfactory settlement. Now unfair "open shop" restaurants coming across one by one. The settlement with the Meves Cafeteria Co., the key to situation, was of vital importance. Am certainly well pleased to be able to report so much success to date. The Culinary Workers of this "Lil-Ol-Town" are sure some scrappers. And let me say some splendid expressions of loyalty have been manifested. When real "honest to goodness" craftsmen, drawing down from $60.00 to $100.00 a week respond to the call to uphold the principles for which our Grand Old Organization stands. Many such expressions of loyalty from both boys and girls have manifested themselves in this lockout. The "weak kneed Willies," the "Neverwassers," are the ones that went bad during this fight. Good riddance to bad rubbish. I hope and trust that long before this report is in the hands of the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER, our controversy here will have been settled entirely to the satisfaction of all concerned.

My expenses for the month as follows:

Dec.—Three round trips to Everett (Inter-urban)$4.92
Postage and stationery75
Total$5.67

Fraternally yours,

HARLEY JOHNSON,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ST. PAUL, MINN., December 24, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 3, I canvassed the waitresses in the Alverdes and Hines restaurants and Ryan Hotel, St. Paul.

December 5, in company with Brother Sinton, business agent of Local 458 of Minneapolis, I called on the manager of the Cook's restaurant with reference to unionizing his place and he promised to sign up with our organization.

December 6, canvassed a number of restaurants in the central part of Minneapolis; also attended a meeting of Waitresses' Local 593.

December 7, together with Business Agent Sinton we called on Mr. Kline in relation to opening his new restaurant and were assured that members of our organization would be employed.

December 8, attended a meeting of Cooks' Local 556 of St. Paul.

December 9, attended a meeting of Local 458 of Minneapolis, and in the evening I attended a meeting of the Trades and Labor Assembly of St. Paul.

December 10, canvassed a number of restaurants where waitresses were employed receiving some reinstatements and applications.

December 13, attended a joint mass meeting of Locals 556 and 630, which was very well attended and a fine spirit shown. Brother Ketchar made a very encouraging address.

December 15, attended a meeting of Local 593 of Minneapolis. The meeting was addressed by Organizer Stevens.

December 16, I canvassed the waitresses at Rockaway, Lenox and Grady's restaurants receiving application and dues.

December 17, accompanying Brother Sinton of Minneapolis, we called on the manager of Mason's and Philis' restaurants with reference to unionizing the waitresses and he agreed that he would do that; also visited the Fifth Street Lunch.

December 19, canvassed the O'Donnel's and O. K. restaurants at South St. Paul and received two applications.

December 20, canvassed the waitresses at the Gopher, Nipper's and Harry's restaurants.

December 22, attended a meeting of Local 556 of St. Paul which was well attended.

December 24, accompanied Brother Ketchar of Local 556 of St. Paul and called on the manager of the O. K. restaurant at South St. Paul in regards to unionizing his restaurant and were asked to come back after the holidays.

Wishing all our members a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, I remain

Fraternally yours,

MARY DEMPSEY,
International Organizer.

GOLDEN RULES.

The following rules are taken from the instruction book furnished to labor spies by one of the large detective agencies:

You are entering into a business which requires the utmost secrecy, so let none of your methods or actions indicate that you are in any way watching or investigating in any way whatsoever.

Do not carry any cards or letters bearing the name of this office on your person, nor permit yourself to mention detective agencies or detectives while working with your fellow employes, or while in any other position with them on any occasion.

Do not endeavor to do a whole lot of secret service work during the first few days of your employment, but observe closely your surroundings and the employes, and familiarize yourself most especially with your own particular line of work on the premises, thus enabling you to do your work capably and well. In this way, you will be in a position to give us a concise report of the information desired.

In reporting to us, put in all questions which may be discussed among the employes as to whether or not they are dissatisfied with the working conditions, the number of hours employed, the amount of their earnings (and if piece workers, the price paid), etc. Also report in detail all matters of agitation regarding strikes or other labor troubles of that kind.

Be as friendly with everyone as possible, and make as many friends among the employes as you can, and upon leaving the premises after work, try to gain their confidence and accompany them to their various places of entertainment and amusement. Be most cautious and observing should they meet any official of Organized Labor and discuss with him the conditions at their place of employment.

Be in a position to communicate with us promptly should any matter come to your attention leading you to believe that any organizer of labor unions is secretly working in the plant assigned you, who may be attempting to form a union among the employes under your supervision.

Have your reports cover clearly your entire daily routine and operations, and the current happenings regardless of whether or not they appear of any importance to you; as very often this is exactly the sort of information of most importance to us and our Client.

Should you encounter any agitator who may be attempting to cause a "walk out," listen to his line of talk, appear to agree with him, and should you be requested to join the movement, do so, and follow any lead they may suggest: Then notify us immediately.

Should any employe be lax in the performance of his duty or be turning out inferior work, include this in your report, as we are paid to raise the entire standard of efficiency.

You will receive all communications from this office direct to you, using a code name (which we will give you later), and you are to sign all reports and communications with this code name, and do not at any time use your full name.

If the foreman appears unfriendly towards you, treat him as well as possible, and as an employe, and do not permit him or any other employe to suspect your especial business there. Remember that no one there knows that you are connected with us and furnishing service to us.—Auto Worker.

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

Well, girls and boys, we hope that you have fully recovered from the feast of "Good Will on Earth" week and that the good old bread basket be doing its customary stunts, functioning, as they say, along that part of Boston known as Commonwealth Avenue.

Most of us just can't help gorging ourselves when there are so many good things to eat placed before us; it's an echo of days when we boasted of the amount we ate and the kind of eats we had.

Yes, we admit that there were many thousands who probably did not have the opportunity of sitting down to "a groaning board, filled with things fit to place before a king." But did it ever occur to you that some of the multitude who were in want have no one but themselves to blame for their present unfavorable position? For instance—and we have knowledge of the case—we know a family of four adults, three of whom were gathering an average of fifteen simoleons per jour, in other words the trio were earning $45 a day and working six days the week. After the first few weeks they began to look around to find a place for their excess coin. They were asked to invest in Liberty Bonds and finally did agree to take three of the $50 bonds, but demanded the right to pay on installments. That family had seen the toughest kind of times, they were accustomed to the plainest of plain food and still plainer raiment. Their wash line caused no neighbor to look the second time, but after they got the silk shirt and silk socks idea going strong the wash line on a Monday was a sight to behold.

Where formerly they used no garbage can, they now employed one and the good food that went to waste via that can was a downright shame. Despite every imaginable warning, they burned up the coin as it was earned. What did they care for the future, they knew that the easy money would be pouring in, for the Good Lord knows how long. But something went wrong with the works and the shop they were employed in closed down. Fact of the matter was that there was no further demand for death dealing missiles and war material, for the Armistice had been signed. And then followed months when none of the three would accept employment because they offered less than they had earned during the war. But why offer further particulars? They went broke, busted within a few months and none of the trio being skilled craftsmen, were simply forced to seek ordinary common labor, the kind that does not permit much saving from the wages received.

That family bemoans its fate, it seeks for sympathy from others less fortunate, but whose members laid something away when the getting was good. Speaking of garbage cans, and it is not a pleasant subject, but via those receptacles is thrown away daily by people who imagine they are living within their means, enough to feed several starving Russians.

"I just cannot eat warmed over food," you will hear some of them say, as if it were an impossible task to calculate rations for a family of two, six or more. But no, housewives who can tell you the name of every fashionable garment placed on display in the better class of stores, who can figure just how much of this, that and the other thing to doll up a hat and the probable cost after it has been completed, will use the phone and order from the grocer and butcher enough for one meal to feed a family of from four to six and dump what remains uneaten into the garbage can.

Posolutely we have seen housewives fill a coffee pot to the brim with water and make enough coffee for a family of eight, and after the two adult members finished the meal the oversupply went into the sewer.

Some of these women lift their eyebrows when speaking about restaurants and hotel cooks and nothing which is served is quite the same as they claim to get it at home. But Holy Moses, what a mess they concoct when they pull off the range stunt. No wonder the doctors' waiting rooms are filled with men suffering from bum stomachs.

Admission is made that we did not see any of the foregoing in the papers, and it's a pity we do not find more of that kind of reading than we do, for if this country needs anything it is education in the kitchen of the average run of homes; not the kind that is "up to snuff" on making fudge and costly cakes, but the kind that develops real kitchen managers and first class single handed preparers of digestible meals.

We are indebted to Brother T. B. McCown, of Local 62, for the following excellent editorial which appeared in the Co-Operative Californian, of Fresno, December 3, 1921.

THE TRADES UNIONS.

One hears almost every day of late, an amount of more or less loose talk about "breaking up the unions." Of course, the thing cannot be done. But a vast amount of trouble, accompanied with needless and unprofitable strife, may be brought upon an unoffending community in the attempt.

The trades unions are in American industrial life to stay. They have been of enormous benefit to American labor. Being human, the leaders and managers of the unions have often erred; they have sometimes betrayed, and not infrequently misrepresented, their followers. But the net result of the trades union movement has been to give the man who labors more tolerable conditions, greater compensation, and a higher standing in community life that the laborers of pre-union days enjoyed. And these greater advantages the laborers have secured for themselves by using the power of their vocational combinations to bring about the desired results.

In recent years this power inherent in combination, has sometimes been abused by labor, as it has quite often been abused by capital. We hear much talk of recent instances of labor's tyranny.

We are told that these instances constitute the excuse and the reason for the determined effort that will be made to destroy unionism. That there has been some weakening in the union ranks, cannot be denied. But there has also been notable exhibitions of fidelity on the part of the great body of the workers. There have been splendid examples of that true loyalty which is born of adversity.

It is safe to say that a general attack upon unionism, today, would be met by a more compact, a more stubborn and a more lasting resistance than has ever before characterized industrial warfare.

And why should the war be declared? Why bring upon the people the burden of sustaining the losses of time and money that must inevitably go with such struggles? For more than a year the deflationists have had their way in the curtailment of credit. The great agricultural producing body of the country has been all but made bankrupt. Industry has been partially paralyzed. Labor has in some instances been humiliated. But if conditions such as the country has been staggering under for the past year, affect the unions only to the extent of causing a wavering in the ranks of the more recent recruits, to what degree of prostration will it be necessary to reduce us, in order to "break the unions up?" The question answers itself; and it is to be hoped that the expressed purpose of making the attempt will end in talk.

It is to be hoped that a serious effort will be made to discuss with labor, the benefits and blessings that may be conferred upon union members and upon all mankind by a right use of the power that goes with labor, as well as with capitalistic combinations.

The claim of the right to combine, and the question of the contrary right of the whole people, to prohibit all combinations, must be settled finally, on the bases of human rights and human needs. This American government is a government of the people.

Abraham Lincoln said truly that, "Labor is prior to and independent of capital. Capital is only the fruit of labor, and could not have existed if labor had not first existed. Labor is the superior of capital and deserves much higher consideration. Capital has its rights which are worthy of protection, as any other rights. Nor is it denied that there is, and probably always will be, a relation between labor and capital, producing mutual benefits. The error is in assuming that the whole labor of the community exists within that relation." Labor being the superior of capital, and deserving much higher consideration it follows that privileges denied to labor should, of course, be withheld from capital. If it were possible to induce the people of the United States to refuse to permit labor combinations, by what process of reasoning could we attempt to justify any capitalistic combinations? But capitalistic vocational combinations have, in very many instances, shown themselves to be the means of attaining the greatest good and of conferring the highest benefits on the people. We need these vocational combinations both in the field of labor and in that of capitalistic industry. But we need also, education and enlightenment. We should have less talk of the employment of destructive measures.

Labor and capital are both interested in constructive work. There is a wider field than there would otherwise have been for the employment of capital in the United States, because of the manifold and diverse needs of the average American workingman. The prosperity of labor increases the uses to which capital may be put. And the security and activity of capital enlarges the field for the employment of labor and increases the wealth of the community. The interests of capital and of labor are mutual. Both should learn to work in harmony. Labor has been wronged in the past by capital, and more recently some retaliatory injustices have been wrought by labor. But it will not be to the interest of either capital or labor to continue the battle on the lines of mutual hatred or distrust.

In this American democracy, to attempt to deny to the workingman those rights which are enjoyed by his fellows in less favored lands, would be to give him an argument and justification for resistance.

The true welfare of capitalistic industry lies in peace, and not in turmoil or disputes. If necessary let us get together for the discussion of grievances, in the spirit of mutual respect and confidence. Let us seek a way of abolishing any inequalities or injustices that may still obtain in business or in industry. But by all means, in the words of that great and gallant leader, General Grant: "Let us have peace."

That is a Californian's viewpoint; it is not, however, an exclusive nor sectional conclusion. Thanks to Brother Tom Geary, of Local 106, we are able to offer two additional articles which appeared in the Cleveland Press, of December 7, 1921. Just sit back and read them carefully:

OPEN SHOP WAR ATTACKED.

"The open shop movement has failed."

This statement was made Wednesday by A. L. Faulkner, government labor conciliator for the Cleveland district.

Faulkner makes periodical surveys of the industrial situation here and is in constant communication with both sides in any labor controversy. It is to him disputes are referred after all other means of getting together have been exhausted.

"The only effect shown in the open shop movement in Ohio has been an increase in unemployment," said Faulkner. "The effort to abolish unionism, or the closed shop, is not gaining any great headway in Ohio."

"Labor Conditions Good."

"Labor conditions actually are in good shape. Conditions have now reached the point where issues directly affecting industries can be settled by conference. The only issue now that keeps controversies going is the open shop plan.

"The open shop movement is having a bad effect elsewhere. In Newport, Ky., 2,000 steel plant employes are jobless because of the open shop issue.

"There is today less trouble in the Cleveland district than there has been in my entire 14 years of affiliation with the Labor Department. Since the war the number of federal labor conciliators has dwindled from 62 to 20. The Cleveland office is the only branch outside of Washington.

"Although the government recognizes the right to organize, the Labor Department has taken no steps to offset the open shop movement in Ohio," said Faulkner.

"The open shop plan as espoused by the American Plan Association, which has offices here, is opposed to the attitude of the government and the Supreme Court of the country.

"Open Shop Un-American."

"I think that the American Plan Association's move is un-American and unfair.

"Capital has no more right to attempt to destroy organization in labor than labor has to try to destroy the capitalistic organization.

"The first appearance of the open shop movement here was in the patternmakers' strike. While it has not gained headway, it should not be taken to mean that the open shop advocates have ceased their efforts to destroy organized labor.

"It is still in full swing, and will, if organized labor doesn't stand firmly, do damage yet. The Telling-Belle Vernon Co. strike of its drivers is nothing more nor less than a poorly disguised attempt, backed by the American Plan Association and with approval of some city officials, to wreck that union as an opening wedge toward its objective in Cleveland."

OPEN SHOP IS HIT.

Presbyterian Moderator Says "It's Bound to Fail."

The present attempt of some employers to bring a return of the open shop in industry was deplored by Rev. H. C. Swearington, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, in Cleveland Wednesday.

He is in Cleveland to speak at tonight's meeting of the Presbyterian Union at Hotel Winton.

"The right of employees to organize cannot be denied," said Rev. Swearington. "It is the only way they can protect themselves.

"The church will have the determining word in the present struggle between labor and capital.

"The open shop is bound to fail, for justice always triumphs in the end."

Dr. Swearington says that the present business depression is adding to the power of the church.

"Whenever business is poor, the church becomes more powerful," he said.

Swearington believes that the Interchurch World Movement is practically defunct because of unsound financial methods. He doesn't look for its revival.

Quite a bunch to wade through, you say, yes, but how are you going to keep in touch with what is going on unless you are willing to devote some of your spare moments to reading the news of the day?

It rather begins to look as if the folks in Cleveland are going to have a real union station after all. Agitation for a Union Station on the Square has been making headway, but the papers have been devoting lots of space to the milkmen and the drivers of milk wagons, the latter having been on strike for quite a period. And that offers a chance to slip one over which has a subtle meaning. In fact, it is a clever bit of satire and is credited to Josh Wise of the Cleveland Press:

A postcard from P. J. D.:

"A mounted policeman left his horse standing on a corner in the East End while he went into a store to use a telephone. When he came out a few minutes later the horse was gone. He found it after an hour's search. The horse had been following a milk wagon."

Another Scripps-McRea publication, the Post, of Cincinnati on December 2, 1921, carried a full page scare head reading:

Ohio Main Battle Ground in the Open Shop War.

The article covered half the front page. From said article we clip the following which will, we feel, prove interesting reading:

Open shop strikes or lockouts now in progress in Ohio affect the following crafts: Job printing trades in every large city in the state, the milk drivers and pattern makers in Cleveland, the electrical workers in Toledo, building trades in Toledo, building trades in Youngstown and Elyria, molders in Alliance and Massillon, street railway workers in Dayton, Erie Railroad shop workers in Marion, enginemen in Nelsonville brick plants. Attempts earlier in the year were made to force the open shop, with partial success, in various crafts in Cincinnati, Portsmouth and Springfield.

A man or woman, not a member of a labor union, is likely to say, "Well, what about it? What do I care about unions? It won't make any difference to me if the unions are smashed."

But it will make a difference to you. It will make a difference to all of us. If the open shop triumphs generally, followed as eventually it must be by reductions in wages and increases in working hours, the prosperity of the entire community will be affected.

The merchant will suffer because low wages can't buy as often or as much as high wages.

The money shortage will operate all along the line until it hits the professional man, none harder than the doctor, the dentist, the lawyer.

The unorganized worker, whether in shop or office, suffers because it is impossible to injure one part of the economic body without affecting the body as a whole.

We are of two groups, we Americans—those who can live without working and those who can't. All of the latter group will be affected by the success or failure of the open shop movement and a good many of the former group, whether they realize it or not.

Hence the open shop movement becomes something more than a dispute between corporations and unions. It is a matter of vast public concern, meriting the sober, analytical attention of every believer in fair play and the maintenance of American standards.

The open shop almost always means the closed shop—closed to all men who believe that in union there is strength and that only by organizing, as their employers are organized, can they obtain and maintain recognition of their rights.

There are employers who say they want the open shop merely because they dislike to deal with the unions. They say they are for high wages and good working conditions. Doubtless many of these men are sincere, and indeed there are today in Ohio factories in which union and nonunion men work side by side at a wage rate and under conditions compatible with the union standards. But the employer hasn't always the full say. He is subject to circumstances and conditions of competition. Standing together, workers can resist unfairness. Fighting single-handedly, which is the only kind of fighting they can do under the open shop, they can accomplish nothing. For instance, under the open shop there is nothing to prevent an employer from taking advantage of the present wide-spread unemployment, driving bargains with hungry men—individually, not collectively, playing off one man against another, whipping them one at a time. Let only one employer in an industry adopt this policy and all other employers in that industry would be compelled to follow suit. They would have to or competition would put them out of business.

It is an undeniable fact that under the open shop an employer CAN reduce wages and upset working conditions and however fair-minded and humane, he WILL do this rather than be put out of business by competition.

Little of the effect of the open shop can be seen at this stage of the war in Ohio. It will be years before the full crop of the open shop sowing will be ripe, but the harvest is certain and the fruit will be bitter.

Collective bargaining goes by the board under the open shop. Without collective bargaining down go wages and up go hours; back to the dark ages of industrialism for the worker. The bosses being organized and the workers being unorganized, disorganized really, the bosses fix the workers' pay as they will and tell them how many hours they must put in for it. It is a "take it or leave it" attitude, with all the advantage on the side of the boss.

In the old days, before men organized, the condition of the workers was little better than that of serfs. The 12-hour and 14-hour workday were common and the wage paid was only enough to keep body and soul together. Only by organization has labor brought about its present standards.

In this fight against the open shop, a big responsibility is laid upon the unions and particularly upon union leaders. Violence, intimidation, high-handed methods—these, deplored and condemned by the great mass of union men, never have helped the cause of labor and never can. Sober, intelligent leadership, honesty and openness in public dealings, willingness to give a full day's work for a fair day's pay—these make for a favorable popular opinion, and it is popular opinion that gains the victory for one side or the other in every labor dispute.

And for those outside the unions, bear in mind that there is no genuine prosperity save that born of production, toil. When the producers, the workers, have no money there is no money for most of the rest of us. Business is bad. The foundation stone of all material wellbeing is the toiler. Weaken him by underpay and overwork and you weaken the whole social structure. And the open shop in its final application means exactly that—underpay and overwork, labor prone and helpless under the heel of the boss.

The open shop works its greatest benefit to those corporations which fatten on the misery of the mass.

That last sentence is worth remembering—read it to the fellow whose spine is weakening.

As expected and commented upon in last month's survey, Tumulty's book "Woodrow Wilson As I Know Him," can be had of your book seller. The cost is higher than we had expected, therefore, the ordinary wage earner can hardly afford purchasing, more is the pity, for whatever else may be said about Tumulty's writings, the fact cannot be denied that he uncovers a lot of inside stuff which was withheld from the public at a time it might have produced some good. Of one thing we are assured, Woodrow Wilson was not wearing an Anti-Saloon League collar, and his veto of the Volstead Act proved that he did not have faith in that character of legislation. Should you be able to get hold of a copy of the book, peruse

Chapter 39 and absorb some of the array of facts offered in that chapter.

Speaking about celebrities who were reputed to be prohibitionists, the Seattle Star, of November 18, 1921, carried an extensive article by Sir Gilbert Parker which gives a different view of that world-known writer. Instead of being a chronic dry as alleged, Sir Gilbert comes close to being a howling wet. We quote several paragraphs from the article:

"American prohibition does not always prohibit."

"I saw an account of how a rich man's house had been robbed of $75,000 worth of fine liquor. If I were a workingman that would almost make a bolshevist of me. That is the curse of American prohibition laws; the rich man can fill his cellar and have a supply on hand the rest of his days. The poor man gets either bootleg whisky or nothing at all."

"I drink very, very little, but I am frankly against prohibition."

We imagine that the last statement disqualifies Sir Gilbert from being referred to hereafter as a world-known writer and dry.

The old wheeze about imitating the other fellow now and again comes forcibly to mind when one takes cognizance of the action of the Ladies' Garment Workers' International Union. The employers in the needle trades in New York City were great patrons of injunction judges, never remotely supposing such a thing as having the wage earners pulling off a similar stunt, but it is as old Doc Davin would say, it's the unexpected that can be looked for.

In the present instance it was the unexpected that happened and as a result the bosses are up a tree. The New York Globe editorializes on the situation, under date of December 1, 1921, as follows:

LABOR WINS AN INJUNCTION.

The use of the injunction to restrain union officials from urging workers to break their individual or collective agreements with employers has been increasingly common in recent years. The workers have made comparatively little use of the same weapon. For this reason the successful application of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union for a preliminary injunction against the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association is significant.

The theory of the injunction in labor disputes is that the legal rights of one party or the other, usually the employer, are being irreparably violated, and that the ordinary process of recovery of damages in the civil courts is therefore inadequate. In the present case the garment workers contended that the manufacturers' association was conspiring to induce or compel individual employers to break their agreement with the union, and so cause irreparable damage to the union and its members. The preliminary injunction granted by Judge Guy of the Supreme Court does not hinder individual employers from breaking their agreements, but it does hinder the employers' organization from using any means to induce individual employers to break their agreements. As Mr. Hillquit, who is one of the workers' attorneys, put it: "While an employer may individually violate the agreement, subject to a damage suit, he cannot advise another employer to violate his agreement. That constitutes conspiracy."

The practical effect of Justice Guy's injunction, if it stands and is not evaded, will be to loosen the hold of the employers' organization over its members and probably to hasten individual settlements with the union. This is an outcome with which the public, which has reason to think the employers wholly wrong in their present contentions, is likely to be in sympathy.

The ultimate good or evil to be derived from the increasing use of the injunction in labor disputes is more debatable. Unless the courts will recognize the benefits of union organization as a defensible property right the worker is likely to lose more than he gains by this weapon. The root defect in the recourse to injunction proceedings is that it makes arbiters of men who are usually honest and frequently learned in the law, but who have next to no intimate knowledge of industrial conditions. But if court proceedings in industrial cases generally took the form of the enforcement of collective contracts this objection would not hold.

.

We have not had many chances of reproducing editorial matter from the New York Evening World, probably because our friends did not care to cut out and mail us the real newsy items. We are, however, able to offer one little item that something tells us, will be read with more than usual care. It is dated December 12, 1921.

NO ROOM FOR THIS KIND.

Harry L. Jacobs, member and former Chairman of the Rhode Island Penal and Charitable Commission, finds Prohibition a colossal mistake for the following reasons:

"Persons are drinking now who would not drink before Prohibition. People who are ordinarily law abiding take an actual pride in their success in violating the Prohibition law.

"The increase in major crime due to Prohibition may be divided into two classes. One embraces that class who have a certain amount of devilry to work off. They formerly got intoxicated and their police record usually carried nothing more serious than fighting or disorderly conduct. This class is growing bolder in criminal operation and from it has developed the great number of hold-up man and gunmen now terrorizing society. The other group of criminals due to Prohibition is composed of those who drink to excess the vile stuff now sold as whisky. Crazed by these poisonous drinks, these men commit atrocious assault and murder."

Mr. Jacobs is the type of public official that the Anti-Saloon League realizes must not survive much longer in the land of the regulated and the home of the submissive.

He sees too clearly and too much.

Mr. Jacobs is not the only prominent man with a clear vision, there are many others, but somehow they do not manage to find receptive editors who will print their views so as to reach the citizen voter.

.

As most of you know, there has been more than enough Durham slipped over on the reading public, but none of that salve has ever managed to match the brand employed by the public utilities corporations when they are getting the screws put to them or some of their employees have discovered the right combination to make 'em dig and give. The following editorial comes in real handy. In fact, is very appropriate in view of the seeming determination of the transportation situation, especially the attitude of the owners and controllers of railway stocks and bonds. We clip the editorial from the New York Globe, of December 17, 1921:

THE RIGHT TO STRIKE.

Ben W. Hooper in his address before the New York Railroad Club reached the conclusion that railroad workers have no moral right to strike. Mr. Hooper is a former governor of Tennessee and at present a member of the United States Railroad Labor Board. Two months ago he was conspicuously successful in his efforts to prevent the threatened strike. His opinions in these matters are accordingly entitled to respect.

Much is involved. From the standpoint of the public an interruption in transportation is intolerable. A threadbare figure of speech calls railroads the arteries of the nation. The simile, for all its familiarity, is real. A long-continued railroad strike would mean national disaster. That may be frankly admitted as one of the primary elements in the problem.

The right to stop work, however, is an essential part of what men call liberty. Members of the so-called upper classes have long had the right to strike. A public official of superior grade resigns when he pleases. The higher ranks of military and naval officers have always had the right to resign or to strike. Labor, on the other hand, has until very recent generations had the unfree status. The workman was tied to the land or to his master. The growth of the modern industrial system was coincident with a social revolution which broke the old bonds. But unfortunately society is again discovering that it would be very useful to be able to tie workers to their functions as was done when labor was servile.

That is not possible. Liberty to many men is more important than life. Consequently it is necessary to reconcile the freedom which workers possess, and of which they cannot be deprived without an anti-democratic revolution, with national security. The escape from the dilemma of these conflicting principles is to be found in the creation of legal channels through which railroad workers and others may satisfy their proper aspirations without the resort to strike. Hitherto society has not been willing to yield living wages to any classes which were not able through strikes to compel such a concession. Until the nation in good faith is willing to give guarantees that railroad workers may enjoy the right to live, certainly no moral right exists to forbid striking. Mr. Hooper happily understands that.

What do you care about the railroad situation? Wait a minute, Rollo, supposing that one of these days all the eat and sleep shops in America are in a combination similar to the transportation game, and supposing that the newspapers take the position that you have no moral right to strike—because people would go hungry. Now put your finger on your pulse and count.

.

A few weeks before the clans began to gather at Washington to see how far they would go in naval shrinkage, the Washington Star printed the following illuminating bit of information:

PRESIDENT HARDING'S SALARY AND WORKING CONDITIONS.

A salary of $75,000 a year.

Another $25,000 for traveling expenses.

A home on which the attention of the world is focused.

Furnishings and maintenance, complete, for this house.

A private room in the capitol buildings.

A flock of the finest automobiles American factories can produce, and an electric car for the first lady of the land.

A private detective force.

A force of 50 policemen to guard the house and grounds.

A private art gallery.

A score of greenhouses, to keep the white house decorated and provide plants and blooms for dinners and receptions.

A private yacht.

A private train—whenever the president wants it.

The best brass band in the world.

A flag that no one else may use.

A personal physician.

Naval and military personal aides.

A social secretary for the mistress of the white house, who is social leader of the country.

A daily newspaper, prepared for him alone.

A complete retinue—the best private secretary he can find, a man to keep track of his appointments, another to open his mail, one whose special duty is to keep "cranks" from getting to the president, a barber, a disbursing officer to keep the white house accounts straight.

In addition to these things, paid for by the people, the new president falls heir to many courtesies, such as:

A private room at the railway station in the national capital.

A private box at the theatre, specially decorated in his honor.

Membership in most exclusive clubs.

Idealizing reproduction of his features by portrait painters and sculptors.

Service of dentists, tailors, etc., as much as he may be willing to accept.

. Gifts of all sorts—books, jewelry, prize turkeys and hogs and pumpkins, bed-quilts and what not.

Being the commander-in-chief of the army and navy he can get his larder filled at the army and navy commissary, taking advantage of the reduced prices. Then, too, he is generally the target for expert cooks, who send in pies and cakes, and proud growers, who send in fresh-killed live stock and poultry and fancy cured hams.

The West Virginia Federationist printed the foregoing and Editor Snyder added the following pertinent comment:

And yet a nation who confers all these blessings upon its president is dotted with soup houses and bread-lines for the wealth producers and disease and misery stalks throughout the land as a result of the starvation wave that is rapidly growing day by day. Pomp and power, luxury and waste for one class, and poverty, want, suicide and suffering for the other.

We clip the following from the Houston, Texas Labor Journal. A reading of the article will remind a number of old timers that it was not so very long ago that the bakers, because of a few loud talkers in their ranks, were considered exceedingly radical.

OPPOSES SECESSION BY RADICAL UNIONS.

Chicago.—"Advanced unionists who take one step forward and two backward," is the way Editor Hohmann, of the Bakers' Journal, describes a group of secessionists in this city, who call themselves the international workers of the amalgamated food industries.

"Every baker that joins their outfit will weaken the present bakers' organization," says Editor Hohmann. "If this outfit has any 'success' it will split the bakers into two unions, for the majority of the bakers will stand by their own union. The result will be two unions in the baking industry facing the united organization of the master bakers. Yet these men are called advanced unionists. They are of the kind that takes one step forward and two steps backward. We trust every organized baker will vigorously resist the efforts of this organization to recruit members from the Bakers' union. They failed when they broke away from the A. F. of L. They know it, but they lack the necessary courage to admit their mistake.

They come to us in the guise of friends, but they pursue a course that weakens our forces and doubly insures the victory of employers."

There is a very effective cure for these disruptionists. See to it that when you purchase the products of the bakers art, that the goods bear the genuine label of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union.

From the Denver, Colo. Labor Bulletin, Christmas, 1921 number, we clip the following, conveying a message of sadness to all who knew W. J. D. and to many others the knowledge that he was the author of a bit of verse that has been reproduced in every section of the civilized world:

W. JUAN DAVIS, WRITER, DEAD.

It is hard for the newspaper fraternity of Denver to believe that Walter Juan Davis is dead. He crossed the Great Divide in New York last Sunday. For years he was a familiar figure in Denver. He was an editor, a verse writer, a humorist, one of the kindest of men, a regular fellow.

It was Walter Juan Davis, who, during his residence in Denver, wrote the following jingle:

When your heels hit hard
And your head feels queer,
And your thoughts foam up
Like the froth on beer;
When your knees are weak
And your voice is strong,
And you laugh like hell—
At some damn-fool song—
You're drunk, by gosh, you're drunk.

As our readers know, our unions in the City of Seattle have been engaged in a sure enough serious battle for several months. Our locals have taken a leaf from the book of experience and employed printers ink on all and every occasion that promised results. Here we have a sample of the kind of publicity that conveys information and at the same time wallops the selfish interests that thrive on dissent. We clip this item from the Seattle Union Record, of December 15, 1921:

DESPOILERS OF COMMUNITY PEACE RENEW THEIR ACTIVITIES.

By W. M. SHORT,

President Washington State Federation of Labor.

The "despoilers" of community peace and harmonious relations between capital and labor, the lack of which has brought so much ruin to the peace and prosperity of Seattle, were again active a few days ago.

A conference between the "Meves Brothers," owners of Meves Cafeteria, and the representatives of the culinary workers unions was in progress; an agreement had been reached; the question still to be settled was the time for the agreement to take effect; a few more minutes of friendly discussion and that point would also have been disposed of to the mutual satisfaction of all directly concerned, when the "despoilers" sneaked into the conference chamber in the shape of Mr. Kays, chief saboteur for the Associated Industries, and demanded of the "Meves Brothers" that they discontinue all further effort to reach a mutually satisfactory agreement between the representatives of the culinary workers and themselves. Just what club is held over the business heads of the "Meves Brothers" by this group of trouble-making vampires is not fully known; but it is a powerful one, as was evidenced by the immediate discontinuance of all further effort at agreement.

How long will Seattle permit this small band of "despoilers" to ruin the peace and prosperity of the community by sabotaging all effort at harmonious relations between capital and labor? Co-operation between all groups within the community is recognized as most essential in the task of restoring normal conditions for the general community. The most important relationship is that which may exist between capital and labor; on the degree of harmony and co-operation that is established between them depends the success and prosperity of all others. Labor has offered its co-operation; most employers have declared themselves for it; but the Associated Industries continue to sabotage the natural desire of most employers for peace.

The Associated Industries is the most dangerous enemy Seattle has to contend with, it is the worst enemy the employers have to contend with; it has injured them more than it has labor. Its elimination from the field will restore industrial peace and prosperity to Seattle, and the biggest step that can immediately be taken toward that end is for the entire community to enthusiastically support the culinary workers in their present fight.

"California double-jointed peanuts, five a bag, fresh-baked and fit for a king to crunch. Step right up, ladies and gentlemen, and satisfy your craving for the luscious morsels. Five-a-bag, just one-twentieth part of a dollar, sugared and salted to your taste." Can you recall that urge from the ballyhoo artists and vendors of the Greatest Show on Earth. What would a circus amount to without red lemonade and goobers, better known as peanuts?

And now the wise guys have discovered that peanuts—come up close you bald-headed sons-of-guns and listen—will grow hair. Don't believe it, eh? Can't very well blame you, but here is an article from the pen of Gus J. Karger to his paper, the Times-Star, of Cincie, O-Dry-O, which recites how it happens and why:

EATING PEANUTS TO GROW HAIR

Girl Clerks of Government Trying Little Experiments of Their Own, After Hearing About Effect On Rats.

Washington.—Government chemists in the Department of Agriculture have been experimenting on rats with various forms of diet. The bean and corn diet didn't seem to satisfy the rodents or make them prosper, so they tried a peanut diet on some. The peanut-fed rats not only became corpulent, but developed fine coats of fur. The different diets varied substantially only as to one ingredient, an acid called cystine, of which the peanuts contain a sufficiency. The natural conclusion was that cystine stimulates the growth of rat hair and that if it will do that it may quite as readily stimulate the growth of human hair. Experiments looking to a demonstration are in progress. A German scientist, it is reported, is even now isolating cystine with a view to putting it on the market as a hair restorer.

The girl clerks and typists in the Department of Agriculture who have obtained wind of the experimental proceedings, are trying an experiment of their own. They are munching peanuts with their work, to let the cystine operate on their hair. The beauty parlors of Washington are greatly excited over the situation.

Now if the Governmental experts will only devote a little time to make it possible to distinguish a two-legged rat, the kind that infest labor organizations—something that will enable us to "see the two-legged rodents coming"—they will accomplish as much for us as they have for the hairless occupants of the front rows at the burlesque shows.

Evidence keeps piling up that the ministerial aggregation is due to a general hauling over the coals and a telling to them of a number of real live truths. If they had paid as much attention to the young folks of the land as they did to the makers and sellers of worth-while beer, it is hardly likely that any such article as follows would be printed:

WHEN IS A GIRL OLD ENOUGH TO SMOKE CIGARETTES?

New York.—(Associated Press Dispatch.)—When is a girl old enough to smoke cigarettes?

This question has cropped up at Columbia university. Last week two girls were caught smoking in their room in Whitier hall, detected by a watchful monitor despite their every precaution—stuffing keyhole and transom cracks and laying down a barrage of incense. They were suspended. Some one suggested that there were no such rules in Fournald hall, which houses only faculty and graduate students. And then some one asked, and none yet has answered: "Just when IS a girl old enough to smoke?"

Chicago manages to hit the first page in the news several times a week; if it is not one thing it is another. But the following news item sent out by the Associated Press just after Christmas, will not be reproduced by the American Issue, the Cincinnati Post, or any of the subsidized Anti-Saloon League publications. The item is what we call a "pippin":

DRUNKENNESS ON INCREASE IN CHICAGO

Council Demands Legalizing of Beer and Wines.

Chicago.—The annual report of the Municipal courts of Chicago, submitted today by Clerk James A. Kearns, showed drunkenness increased here the last year 51300 persons being arraigned for intoxication in 1921, as against 32,305 in 1920. The report followed the action by the city council yesterday in voting 52 to 6 for a resolution demanding that Congress and the State Legislature authorize the making, sale and distribution of "wholesome beers and light wines." "Bath-House John" Coughlin, dean of the council, had the resolution amended to approve the use of the revenue derived from wines and beer to pay a soldier bonus. Alderman A. J. Cermak, old-time leader of the "Wets," introduced the resolution, which declared that the prohibition act had failed to prohibit and failed to meet with the approval of the general public. He continued: "Mr. Mayor, you may expect a lot of trouble from me and my friends from now on if you continue to use the money of Chicago taxpayers to send policemen smelling for beer among reputable citizens."

The recent elections in the Dominion of Canada were the warmest held in several years. Our boys, as usual, were on the hustings for their choice, and we are advised that the results satisfy the most of them. The following interesting item appeared in the Times-Star, of this city, recently, in fact just subsequent to the elections and when the results were known:

TO HEAD COUNTRY WHICH EXILED HIS GRANDFATHER

Canadian Premier-Elect's Ancestor Was Sentenced to Jail in United States for Violating Neutrality Laws.

Rochester, N. Y.—William Lyon Mackenzie King, premier-elect of Canada, has the distinction of heading the government of a country from which his grandfather was forced to flee as a "Rebel." In the early thirties William Lyon Mackenzie, the grandfather, headed a faction in what was then Upper Canada, now the province of Ontario, which was striving for wider autonomy for the colony, and was bitterly opposing the Tory, or English official party. In December, 1837, he gathered a mob of his followers on the outskirts of Toronto, with the intention of seizing the Lieutenant Governor and setting up a provisional government. Misunderstandings among the leaders led to a complete failure of the revolt, and Mackenzie fled to this country with a price upon his head. In Buffalo he collected a disorderly "army" and seized and fortified Navy island, in the river between the two countries, and for some weeks troubled the Canadian frontier. This attempt also failed, and in 1839 he was tried here for a breach of the neutrality laws and sentenced to 18 months in jail, of which he served 11. Ten years later he was pardoned and returned to Canada.

During the winter months especially, the plumber and hot water fitter wears no halo constructed by the harassed household or owner of a little home "with modern improvements." But what we wanted to say, is that we almost hit the ceiling when we perused the following item, for we had an idea that leaden shot had originated among the warriors of the olden times:

THE PLUMBER'S DREAM.

The origin of leaden shot is attributed to a Bristol plumber who, in 1783, dreamed that he was out in a shower of molten lead, which fell in the form of spherical drops. His curiosity being aroused, he went next day to the top of a church and poured some molten lead into a vessel of water lying below. To his great delight he found that the lead had gathered into globular balls, and at once he took out a patent.

Next time you meet friend plumber, take your hat off to him.

A few weeks ago we perused an article about a woman who had married fifteen or eighteen soldiers or sailors and managed to collect the payment given the wives of men in the service. Later on we read another article about a woman in Europe who married seven or eight men for the purpose of getting passports, so that she could travel in the countries which her husbands were citizens of. She paid them well and divorced them after accomplishing the ends she sought. But the following is a different story, one that brings to mind a moss-covered story about how old a person must be before they quit looking at what Mary Garden says, is the greatest picture in the world: "A silk stocking well filled with female pulchritude" or something of that sort—memory bad this morning—too much sarsaparilla last evening, may be.

WOMAN, 71, WEDS FOR SEVENTH TIME.

Ironton, O., December 20—(International News Service).—Her seventh venture on the sea of matrimony was taken this morning by Rebecca Matheny Satterfield, aged 71, when she obtained a marriage license at the Probate court to marry William E. Prater, 80. "Aunt Becky," as the blushing bride is generally known, was confident that her seventh voyage would be the happiest of all.

"Somebody's always taking the joy out of life;" here's a fellow up in Kitty Donnelley's town who is just saturated with grief and proposes to tell the world about it. Just why he has picked out the year 1926 beats me.

But before you peruse the article, just let this little thought have a cent's worth of play. The Antis are peeved beyond expression, they know that Old John Barleycorn has had several resurrections and recently began to show a chestiness beyond usual. They are writing that warning stuff, telling the thirsty folks that there is danger in the stuff they are drinking. Of course we are not accusing Kovachy, but if he isn't getting a bit of change for that kind of news, he must be a tenderfoot in the game.

"1926 WILL BE GOOD YEAR FOR UNDERTAKERS."

"Hundreds Poisoning Selves on Prohibition Drinks."

Cleveland, O., December 20.—Undertakers will have a prosperous year about 1926 in the opinion of analytic and consulting chemists here, because, they claim, the Grim Reaper is whetting his scythe for a harvest of prohibition liquor drinkers.

Hundreds of persons are slowly but surely asphyxiating themselves, according to J. M. Kovachy, assistant city chemist, by unsuspectingly assimilating the poisons found in almost every sample of what was believed to be "pure bonded" liquor. Hundreds of samples are brought to Kovachy each month for analysis, he said, and all thus far analyzed have contained a high percentage of fusel oil in the raw. In large quantities, consumed by steady drinking, fusel oil changes the blood from oxyhemi-globin to methemoglobin, he insists.

In other words, Kovachy says, fusel oil removes the oxygen from the blood, causes the lips and body to turn blue and has the same effect as asphyxiation.

.

One of the "show places" of Cincy before the organized fanatics had their say, was Foucar's, on the west side of Walnut between Fourth and Fifth Streets, the passing of which caused more than one sincere regret. Now that the building is to give way, to, in fact, follow the cafe, the editorial scribe of the Times-Star writes a modern epic. Read it and appreciate the thoughts which surged the editorial cranium during the process of reminiscence.

The article appeared December 9, 1921:

THE SOB OF AN ERSTWHILE "SINNER."

Would it be a violation of the Volstead act if we should drop an editorial tear at the passing of a landmark where many a happy hour was passed in sipping philosophy from a beaker—in other words, beer from a half-liter? For in one of the buildings now being razed that the Hotel Gibson may extend up to Fifth street there was, once upon a merrier time, a dispensary called Foucar's. It had a bar, mirrors, tables and all the conventional things that served the devil as well as customers in those wicked days. But the place also had an atmosphere that was its own. There was camaraderie in the air. Men met to listen patiently instead of irritably to each other. Their discourse glowed with the philosophy of friendship. And their conversation was interspersed with humorous anecdotes, which, by the way, seem to have gone quite out of fashion with interdicted convivial intercourse.

The brimming beaker with its winking bubbles seemed but an incident to the "community spirit" that prevailed. But it must have been essential. For with its passing and the substitution of moral isolation for fraternal conviviality, the old place closed up. And now all that was brick and mortar of Foucar's is disappearing before desecrating pick in the hand of "progress." Only memory, handmaid of immortality, remains.

.

You who keep step with us on these jaunts, will recall several articles from the pen—or machine—of James W. Allison, also of the Times-Star, but located on Manhattan island, generally called Little Old Noo Yawk. James, or Jim as his friends call him, has both facile pencil and a keen eye for the passing show; but in the item which follows he says a mouthful at the wind-up of his article which justifies much which we have said in the years we devoted to taking pot shots at the Anti-Saloon League:

One night recently, at the end of the coming-out party of a society debutante, given at a smart hotel, seven youths who had been among the guests were found helpless and practically unconscious on the floor of the men's room. All of the other guests had departed. The assistant manager, who was unable to arouse these remaining celebrants, called the house physician, who ordered the young men put to bed at once so that he might give them the usual treatment for alcoholism. Later, the hotel management sent a bill for the rooms and the medical treatment to the lady who had been hostess at the party. She sent a curt note in reply, declining to pay the bill and declaring that she recognized only one name in the seven under which the prostrated youths had been registered as having been on her guest list.

This incident illustrates the tendencies of society kids, which have become notorious in the past two years. In the first place, several of these boys had undoubtedly attended the party at which they disgraced themselves without having received invitations. There is nothing novel about that, astonishing as it may seem. It has become a custom among kids of this class to go to parties to which they have not been asked. It has a name. It is called "crashing in." It's perfectly easy of accomplishment where a big party is being given in a hotel. Of course, it's a contemptible and caddish thing to do—but not according to the ethics of modern youth of a certain class. In the second place, drunkenness of the most bestial sort has become absolutely common at parties for young people. It is due to the flask on the hip. In the days when good wines and liquors were served in proper fashion, the young man who got drunk at a party was looked upon merely as a nuisance and something of a hog. So his own pals would consider him. Now, that is all changed. The real society jeunesse includes the bottle of bootleg whisky in the requisites of evening dress, and the kid who doesn't get drunk before the middle of the evening is the exception. It is quite unnecessary to dilate upon these assertions. There is not a man or woman in New York society who will not unhesitatingly confirm them. The drunkenness of society kids, since so-called prohibition came in, is a scandal, of which the knowledge is common and the cause obvious.

In the face of such evidences as this of prohibition's effects, it is hardly to be considered surprising that Prohibition Commissioner Haynes complains of the "apathy of many of our citizens" with regard to attempts to execute the provisions of the prohibition laws and the disposition of many to "regard the laws as a joke." If, in fact, if ever a law can be a joke, the prohibition law seems to be it—more plainly now than in the beginning. The joke is not only in the law itself, but in nearly every detail of its administration. For instance, in the effort to find a man who can make a showing of enforcing prohibition in New York, we have had five Federal prohibition directors with headquarters in this city. The fifth one, Ralph A. Day, who just came in, discharged a number of agents, for reasons of his own. These agents continue to report at prohibition headquarters despite Director Day's orders that they shall not be admitted. They say that they will not consider themselves discharged because they have an understanding with Wayne B. Wheeler, attorney for the Anti-Saloon league, at Washington, that they were not to be discharged by Director Day or anyone else.

This article was of the same date as the preceding editorial.

From the following, which we clipped from one of our labor papers, it would seem that Editor Mullen of the San Francisco (Cal.) Labor Clarion is optimistic. We hope that his conclusions are correct, for there is little doubt but what many of the Reds on the Pacific coast expected great things from that meeting in New York, which was called for December 25, 1921. We are willing to bet a white chip that the "Borers from Within" are not a whit farther toward reaching their goal than they were when they had the benefit of Big Bill's bag of tricks.

But here is Editor Mullen's article, head and all, as we clipped it:

REDS LOSING ON COAST.

San Francisco Clarion.—The radicals are growing fewer in number every year and the one thing more than any other responsible for this condition of affairs is their inconsistency. They reveal the fact that they preach one set of policies and practice another. In other words they shout for solidarity and one big union and at the same time prove their lack of faith in their policies by splitting their own organizations into many separate pieces. As a consequence of this conduct some of the sincere members who have been duped by the noise of the radicals every year drop back into the ranks of the sane trade unionists and the radicals then must scramble for other gullibles to take their places. However, the possibilities for recruits are growing fewer all the time.

One of the best little articles which we have picked up in a month of Sundays is from the pen—or machine—of Brother P. J. Morrin, editor of the St. Louis Trades Council Union News. We have often read about a Square Deal, being on the square and getting a square, but Editor Morrin treats the subject from a view point that will interest and instruct:

"Square. A small word with a big meaning. If a great many people would always keep the word 'square' in their minds there would not perhaps be as many troubles as there are. If you are an employer do you use your employes square, or if you are an employe do you use your employers square? Be it as it may whether you are an employer or an employe, you must come to it. It is the only successful problem that confronts both at this very time. One needs the other. Both want to live and must live. Neither one can be for himself. Lay yours cards on the table, show each other where you are. Let's get somewhere. The ways things are going neither side is getting anywhere. One seems to be jealous of the other. At this time both have their troubles but by square and honest dealings between them they are bound to unravel their troubles as long as there is honesty between them.

"One must not hide anything from the other. Sit down and thresh things out honestly, fearlessly and without radicalism on either side. There is no time for strifes now as both employer and employee are in the rut and there is no other way out of it except by honest and square methods.

Without any taint, as the old saying goes. 'Honesty is the best policy,' which is the only safe remedy at this time. Stay away from strife and radicalism on either side or else neither will get anywhere."

No doubt you recall the articles printed under this caption regarding the attitude of the moving picture magnates toward organized labor in and adjacent to Los Angeles. Most of you are acquainted with the fact that during the past year combinations have been created between the theatrical producers and the movie officers and stockholders, so that it is hard to distinguish one from the other; in fact they are all blowing the same horn.

The recent story to the effect that Geo. Cohen had "taken his ball out and quit the game," followed by the alleged retirement of Florry Ziegfeld, and both for the alleged activity of the Actors' Equity Association, simply goes to prove that trades unionists better watch out, keep posted on the situation, for they may be patronizing show shops, that have, to all intents and purposes, declared for the so-called open shop. We clip from one of our exchanges the following item which goes to show that the Equity is not the weakling some of the blunderbund press endeavors to convey:

ACTORS EQUITY ASSOCIATION HAS 18,000 MEMBERS.

New York.—The Actors' Equity Association, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, now has about 18,000 members—an increase of 4,000 in the last twelve months, John Emerson, president, has announced. Mr. Emerson made the further revelation that only 16 members have left the association because of the "Equity Shop" policy which was put into effect last September 1, whereas, since the actors' strike two years ago, 251 members of the Actors' Fidelity League—an organization formed under the auspices of the theatrical managers—have left that body and joined the Equity.

A great deal has been written about the Russian situation; here is an item clipped from the Post of December 24, 1921, that may interest you for a moment or two as it offers a view point that thousands of wage earners carry or express, and indicates that, charity which begins at home is the kind of generosity that would be appreciated by a bunch of good folks right here in America. Some day the voters of the U. S. will rise up and vote the aggregation who can't see anything near home when interested parties urge them to look overseas, out of office and never allow their tribe to get a look in as long as there is a republic on the American continent.

CHARITY.

Captain Jack Pattison, son of former Governor Pattison, returning to Cincinnati from Europe, says:

"The Russians do not deserve aid from this country. They have reduced their crops of food-stuffs simply because they were compelled to give a certain proportion to the government when they produced more than they actually needed for their own maintenance."

So much for the first-hand opinion of one who has been a relief worker abroad and has served as captain in the Polish army fighting the Bolsheviks.

Congress has passed a bill appropriating $20,000,000 to relieve hungry Russians.

The other day the same Congress administered a flat turn-down to President Harding's special unemployment conference's recommendation for a paltry $400,000 to relieve America's own hungry folk, her own jobless citizens.

Even the Senate committee's timid proposal of $100,000 was coldbloodedly scuppered.

Millions for the hungry of OTHER lands, but not one cent for OUR OWN.

There is no earthly objection to Congress voting $20,000,000 to send grain to the hungry Russians, or more, if the country is rich enough to stand it.

Indeed it is a noble thing to do.

But, in the name of common decency, let us not neglect our OWN hungry—who ask for jobs, not charity—while we do so.

The needy are nearer to us than Volga Basin.

.

Well, we are on our way, half of the first month of 1922 will have passed and gone, by the time this number of the MIXER AND SERVER comes to the hands of our members. If you have been waiting to see what was going to transpire, just be reminded of the old saw relative to ascensions and descensions, in homely language: "What goes up must come down."

Many trade unions have been slipping, supposedly because of the unemployment situation. Our organization has had its own place on the elevator—going down—but we believe we have reached the basement and cannot go any further in that direction, so we are just perverse enough to begin to look for the lever so as to begin the ascension. We have not made the kind of progress described in the saying: "He took three steps ahead and slipped back four." We have slipped some, we do not deny, but we are not in a deep, dark, dismal hole, trying to pull the hole in after us. Some of the gumshoeists would love to be able to report that we had begun striking out for the antipodes, but we shall have to disappoint them this once.

Expressing the hope that you and yours enjoyed a Yuletide worth remembering with pleasure, that the year 1922 offers encouragement of the kind which will bring you to the front with health and a tidy sum accumulated for the days called rainy, and that above all else, you will give to your local union as much of your time and effort as you can spare, for that is the instrument you must maintain and protect if you want results.

Thanks for your kindly attention during the trip, advising you that we shall be ready to make another trip as soon as we stock up with fuel. We want you along, so that you can see the passing show. I thank you.

JAY-ELL-ESS.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-3-15

ABOLISH UNEMPLOYMENT.

It Can and Must Be Done—Labor's Remedy.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.

The President's Unemployment Conference, a semi-official body, appointed by the President and presided over by the Secretary of Commerce, acted from the first under well-defined limitations. As a result, specific unemployment remedies were recommended only for the "emergency program." The recommendations of measures for the "permanent recovery of unemployment" were of a very general character dealing with (1) railways, (2) taxation, (3) the tariff, (4) disarmament, (5) foreign exchange, (6) prices and deflation. One recommendation dealt with seasonal unemployment.

The situation calls for the supplementing of the achievements and efforts of the semi-official conference by unofficial initiative. (1) Such initiative can bring new support for the recommendations of the Presidential Conference. (2) It can apply the principles laid down by the semi-official conference more broadly than could that body, because unofficial opinion is not limited, as the President's Conference was, by the necessity of reaching unanimous decisions involving the assent of extremely conservative elements. (3) Unofficial public initiative can see to it that the value of the scientific method followed by the President's Conference is not lost by the refusal of these conservative interests to apply its principles logically and practically—and on a sufficient scale to bring results in proportion to the magnitude of the problem and in proportion to the numbers of those unemployed because of the present cycle of business depression.

If the Presidential Conference is to count for the largest results it is indispensable to get the public out of the complacent state of mind it created. Unintentionally the conference created the impression that the problem of unemployment was now on the way to rapid solution! Its organizers understand that nothing could more endanger ever those limited recommendations reached by agreement. Even to secure public support for these recommendations a continued and renewed public interest is essential.

The Achievements of the President's Conference.

In many ways the President's Unemployment Conference was a remarkable achievement.

In organization and use of experts it set a new and higher standard for national industrial conferences.

It laid a scientific foundation for discussion by a sound classification of the various forms of unemployment and by outlining the general principles upon which effective remedies must rest.

It discussed adequately certain groups of remedies, i. e., remedies lying within the self-imposed limits of the conference and within the limits set in advance by President Harding and Chairman Hoover.

Whatever remedies were proposed (within these limits) were of a progressive character.

Remedies Proposed by the Presidential Conference.

The remedies proposed by the Conference may be put into several groups:

1. General Remedies.

Recommendations of a very broad character and expressed (necessarily) in general terms, such as those favoring the limitation of armament, and calling for an immediate settlement of the tariff, taxation, and railroad questions.

2. Private and Voluntary Remedies.

Recommendations directed to employers—without requiring any governmental or legislative action. Labor (see American Federationist, November, 1921) has summarized the most important of these as follows:

The recommendations for dividing of employment and for part-time employment where it is possible, to increase the number of employees by that device, will be helpful, but it should be remembered in that connection that the conference was also of the opinion that such devices as this should not result in the imposition of higher costs for finished commodities.

In calling attention to the need for merchandizing practices that will result in lowering prices wherever possible, the conference performed a distinct service to the public. Retail prices have not declined in proportion with the decline in wholesale prices, or in proportion with the decline in production costs.

More employment in the aggregate will be furnished by a systematic development of the practice of doing repairs and renovation work immediately as recommended by the conference.

The development of a program for more regular employment in seasonal industries is a vital necessity. The trade union movement has always endeavored to secure a greater stabilization of seasonal industries and has always recognized the fluctuating employment furnished by such industries as one of the principal evils of industry. It is within the power of management to discourage this evil to a marked extent and it is to be hoped that the conference recommendation on this point will be followed vigorously throughout the country.

The recommendation of the President's Conference with regard to building is also important. We quote from the official report, just issued, page 21:

"We recommend that the Governors summon representative committees, with the co-operation of the Mayors or otherwise as they may determine, to (a) determine facts; and (b) to organize community action in securing adjustments in cost, including removal of freight discriminations, and clean-out campaigns against combinations, restrictions of effort, and unsound practices where they exist, to the end that building may be fully resumed."

3. Government and Legislative Remedies—State and Municipal.

We quote farther from the official report:

"Public construction is better than relief. The municipalities should expand their school, street, sewage, repair work, and public buildings to the fullest possible volume compatible with the existing circumstances. That existing circumstances are favorable is indicated by the fact that over $700,000,000 of municipal bonds, the largest amount in history, have been sold in 1921. Of these, $106,000,000 were sold by 333 municipalities in August. Municipalities should give short-time employment the same as other employers.

"The Governor should unite all state agencies for support of the Mayors and, as the superior officer, should insist upon the responsibility of city officials; should do everything compatible with circumstances in expedition of construction of roads, state buildings, etc."

4. Governmental and Legislative Remedies—National.

The Federal authorities, including the Federal Reserve Banks, should expedite the construction of public buildings and public works covered by existing appropriations.

A Congressional appropriation for roads, together with state appropriation amounting to many tens of millions of dollars already made in expectation of and dependence on Federal aid, would make available a large amount of employment.

The Conference under existing circumstances, notwithstanding various opinions as to the character of the legislation and the necessity for economy, recommends congressional action, at the present session in order that work may go forward.

An appropriation by Congress in the form of a loan to the reclamation fund of $16,200,000 for expenditures on projects now under way would be utilized in immediate construction this winter, providing direct employment for 16,000 workers, without committing the Reclamation Service to further expenditures.

The above total of 16,000 men employed directly would be increased by about 16,000 additional required in the manufacture and moving of materials, making a total of 32,000 men who would be employed this winter.

Fully realizing the need for true economy in Federal expenditures, your committee believes that such a policy is not inconsistent with the loan of Government funds during the present period of industrial depression for the purpose of increasing the agricultural area of the United States, and recommends that reclamation developments be continued more extensively during the winter of 1921-22.

Your committee therefore earnestly recommends to Congress the immediate consideration of a loan to the reclamation fund for the prosecution of projects already under way. (The italics are ours.)

The conference also recommended an extension of the Federal Unemployment Service and of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Undoubtedly all of these recommendations have the support of all progressive forces, including that element most immediately concerned, i. e. Labor (see American Federationist, November, 1921). As organized labor has declared:

The recommendations to which attention has been called are generally of a constructive and progressive character. They endeavor to meet the needs of the situation without charity and without paternalism. In addition to this, the conference and the manner in which it undertook its work, settles definitely for all time the question of social responsibility and of employer and management responsibility for the failure of industry to function in such a manner as to prevent periodical acute unemployment.

The representatives of the American labor movement are able to give to the pronouncements of the unemployment conference their hearty support, because, as agreed upon by the conference, they are in the main in accordance with the principles and with the long established program of the American Federation of Labor, and because they already have proven to be of benefit by the test of actual operation.

In the committees of the conference, and particularly in the committee on manufactures, as has been pointed out, many proposals were offered which were purposely hostile to the interests of the working people, but in not a single instance was a report of that character finally adopted by the conference. Every hostile activity was defeated. This is a credit to the judgment and wisdom of the conference and it is of tremendous benefit to the country.

5. Recommendations after the close of the Conference.

In the official report of the Conference, its Secretary, Mr. Edward Eyre Hunt, writes:

Senator Kenyon's bill, introduced on November

21, providing for long-range planning of public works, is a very important result of the conference. The preamble states that a sound economic policy requires that a larger percentage of public works projects of the United States be undertaken and carried to completion during the periods of depression, when labor and capital are not fully employed in private industry, and, on the other hand, that a smaller percentage of such projects should be undertaken when private industry is active.

The chief paragraphs of the bill, now unanimously reported for passage by the Senate committee on education and labor, are:

That the Secretary of Commerce shall prepare and publish monthly reports as a supplement to the current survey of business of the Bureau of the Census, or otherwise, concerning the trend of business conditions, the approach of periods of business strain and over-extension, or of periods of business depression, in order that the President, the heads of the executive departments, the Congress, Governors of States, and mayors of cities, and persons engaged in private industrial enterprises may properly prepare for and plan against such periods.

That the head of each executive department is authorized upon the advice of the President, to postpone the date of the commencement or retard the prosecution of such portion of the public works and projects within his jurisdiction as may be necessary, in order to prepare for and to prevent a further rise in the cyclical wave of industrial expansion and resulting business strain and overextension and within the appropriations therefor, to enter upon a maximum program of public works and projects as a reparation for and in order to counteract an impending period of industrial depression and unemployment. Where a time limit has been specifically provided within which any such work or project, or any part thereof, is to be commenced or completed, this section shall not be construed to extend or remove such limit.

The Standing Committee appointed by the Conference, with Mr. Hoover as Chairman, has further recommended a scientific investigation by the Engineering Societies of cyclical as well as seasonal unemployment.

There is no question that both these measures have the whole-hearted support of organized labor and of all progressive elements.

The Limitations of the President's Conference.

The time has come when we must get beyond the limitations of the semi-official conference. The chief of these were:

1. Against National Expenditure.

In their opening speeches both President Harding and Secretary Hoover took a stand clearly militating against remedies involving national expenditure.

Secretary Hoover said: "It is not consonant with the spirit or institutions of the American people that a demand should be made upon the public treasury for the solution of every difficulty."

However, Secretary Hoover proceeded in the following paragraph to indicate that he had especially in mind one particular form of expenditure:

In the other countries that have been primarily affected by the War, solution has been had by direct doles to individuals by their Governments.

With this latter point American labor entirely agrees.

In his speech at the close of the conference this was the only form of expenditure to which Secretary Hoover objected:

The plan has been willingly accepted by a large section of the country, and you have erected the machinery to pursue that work, and we will see if it can not get through this crisis without calling on the funds in the public purse for support and subsistence of our unemployed.

American Labor has neither made any demand for doles nor has it ever called for "funds in the public purse for support and subsistence of our unemployed." It is the belief of American labor that the unemployment question is remediable even under our existing system—and the remedies it has proposed indicate a further belief that unemployment can be prevented without any appeal for "doles."

If there were ever any doubt on this question it is now removed by the new position of British labor. Up to 1921, labor in Great Britain had placed great emphasis on unemployment insurance. It still endorses that principle and demands its extension, but since the presentation of "The Prevention of Unemployment Bill" in February, 1921, it places the emphasis entirely on the cure of the unemployment disease by means of employment. The British Trade Union Review for July declares, "Unemployment insurance is no remedy for the problem of unemployment." The Trade Union Congress in Cardiff in September declared: "Our whole emphasis is placed upon the provision of work, either of a kind engaged in production of commodities for exchange or directed to ends of social utility."

2. Against National Legislation.

Secretary Hoover urged in his opening and closing addresses that remedies should be very largely outside the realm of legislation and especially outside the realm of national legislation:

"The administration has felt that a large degree of solution could be expected through the mobilization of the fine co-operative action of our manufacturers and employers, of our public bodies and local authorities.

"That this is a problem for voluntary organization is consonant with the American spirit and American institutions."

Basing itself upon these principles the Conference did not recommend national legislation requiring any considerable new expenditure either in appropriations (to be covered by taxes) or in the new extension of public credit—although the principle of the special extension of public credit in hard times for economically justifiable public undertakings was recognized by the conference as a leading remedy for the chief form of unemployment.

On October 13th, the Conference recognized this principle as follows—combining it with proposed financial reserves by privately owned public facilities:

The ebb and flow in the demand for consumable goods may not be subject to direct control; but, on the other hand, it should be possible in some measure to control the expansion of the national plant and equipment. If all branches of our public works and the construction work of our public utilities—the railways, the telephones, etc.—could systematically put aside financial reserves to be provided in times of prosperity for the deliberate purpose of improvement and expansion in times of depressions, we would not only greatly decrease the depth of depressions but we would at the same time diminish the height of booms. We would in fact abolish acute unemployment and wasteful extravagance. For a rough calculation indicates that if we maintain a reserve of but 10 per cent of our average annual construction for this purpose we could almost iron out the fluctuations in employment.

Nor is this plan financially impracticable. Under it our plant and equipment would be built in times of lower costs than is now the case when the contractor competes with consumable goods in overbidding for both material and labor. (Our italics.)

The Conference also recognized the same principles in proposing that public works should be executed more largely in hard times than in good times—as follows:

In a growing country like the United States the aggregate volume of public works of cities, counties, states, and of the Federal Government is so great that if a larger proportion were executed in years of depression than in years of active industry a powerful stabilizing influence would be exerted. In the past, however, public works officials have felt poor when business was depressed around them and conversely have often executed their chief undertakings when the contagious enthusiasm of captains of industry and of the general public has hailed a period of prosperity at hand. This tendency, although a natural one for an individual, does not accord with true economy for the city or with a sound national policy.

The economic Advisory Committee of the Conference went farther. Considering an effective remedy for the winter of 1921-22 it declared not merely for such public works as are covered by existing appropriations but for public works generally:

The present industrial situation can immediately be improved by the use of such of the following measures as the conference may approve and promote. Your committee is convinced that the expansion of public works during the winter of 1921-22 constitutes one of the most important measures to revive private industry and to check unemployment. We therefore recommend to the conference that methods be formulated and measures pressed for the advancement and augmentation of public works for the following reasons:

1. The best remedy for unemployment is employment.

2. Direct employment is given by public works.

3. Indirect employment is given in the manufacture of the materials needed.

4. The wages paid by those directly and indirectly employed create a demand for other commodities which require the employment of new groups to produce. Thus public works assist in reviving industry in general.

It is obvious, and it needs no argument to prove, the proposition that the efficacy of this remedy depends not only upon the time when it is applied but upon the amount of public work undertaken. If the principle is sound why not expenditures on public works not covered by existing appropriations? Are there no worthy and economically sound public undertakings not yet provided? What about land reclamation, water-power, conservation, roads, waterways, canals, and harbors? What of the use of federal credit for housing and for new railroad outlays?

But before pursuing the public works remedy for unemployment further, let us mention the third limitation of the Presidential Conference.

3. The Personnel of the Conference Called for Unanimous Decisions.

The invitations to the President's Conference were issued not in proportion to numerical importance among the American people of the elements represented (for example, farmers, labor, etc.) but, to quote Secretary Hoov, the conference was composed of "men representative of all sections, predominantly those who can influence the action of employing forces and who can influence public opinion with a view to proper determination of the facts and needs of the unemployment situation," or to quote President Harding, of men who "would be helpful in making a success of such a Conference."

Let the President of the American Federation of Labor tell some of the consequences. (See American Federationist, November, 1921):

"The National Conference on Unemployment fully justified one general expectation—it did not solve the problem of unemployment.

"It is no violation of confidence to say that in the meetings of committees of the conference representatives of organized greed and reaction fought bitterly and stubbornly against any progressive recommendation and made almost superhuman effort to turn the tide of the conference in favor of measures that would have further enriched the beneficiaries of special privilege and that would have further intensified the sufferings of the working people.

"That these conflicts of opinion in committee did not destroy the entire work of the conference was due solely to the very wise provision that only those committee reports upon which there was unanimous opinion should come before the general sessions of the conference. The objections of those who tried to see the justice of the situation were sufficient, therefore, to prevent reactionary proposals from becoming the recommendation of the conference. Nothing that was out of harmony with a constructive view-point could become the recommendation of the conference to be translated into action. For that reason, it is well that the conference was held. For that reason, and for that reason alone, there is a record of actual achievement as a result of the conference. It was impossible to secure the consent of all of the members of any committee to any reactionary proposal."

The result was that the remedy most strongly opposed by the "reactionary" or conservative members had no chance whatever of enactment. Of the limited recommendation of public works that was approved the President of the American Federation of Labor says:

"The recommendation for the undertaking of public works and for energetic development of immediately possible reclamation work is one to which the working people will give particularly enthusiastic support. Not only will the vigorous prosecution of reclamation projects furnish immediate employment, but it is an effort of permanent value in the development of the great resources of our country."

There can be no doubt that the other numerically important element represented, the agriculturists, are even more strongly in favor of a prompt and large-scale extension of credit for approved roads, waterways, canals, land reclamation, and waterpower conservation.

Hard Times Unemployment Remediable.

President Harding's opening speech at the Unemployment Conference was read by many as indicating a belief that the chief form of unemployment, that due to hard times, is largely without a remedy. Secretary Hoover was definitely optimistic:

"There is no economic failure so terrible in its import as that of a country possessing a surplus of every necessity of life in which numbers, willing and anxious to work, are deprived of these necessities. It simply can not be if our moral and economic system is to survive. It is the duty of this Conference to find definite and organized remedy for this emergency and I hope also that you may be able to outline for public consideration such plans as will in the long view tend to mitigate its recurrence.

"What our people wish is the opportunity to earn their daily bread, and survive in a country with its warehouses bursting with surpluses of food, of clothing, with its mines capable of indefinite production of fuel, with sufficient housing for comfort and health, we possess the intelligence to find solution. Without it our whole system is open to serious charges of failure."

The conference itself also declared hard times unemployment remediable—as indicated in a passage above quoted. Moreover it gave grounds why additional public works were desirable and none why they should be limited to existing appropriations or projects already officially recommended.

If the plan for the remedy is sound it should be applied on a scale that can make it effective.

In the official report of the conference, the Secretary adds a postscript indicating the possible influence of the conference on public work as follows:

"The Federal highway act, passed by Congress on November 3, made available $75,000,000, which is to be matched by a similar amount from the states. By November 15, the governors of 30 states had reported to us that within 90 days they can start 6,261 miles of highways which will directly employ more than 150,000 men.

"Municipal bond sales for public works since the call for the Conference was issued have broken all records. Over $60,000,000 in state bonds have been sold recently in 13 states, and more than $34,000,000 have now been offered for sale.

"The Conference resolution on reclamation projects has resulted in the introduction of a bill carrying an appropriation of $20,000,000 to the reclamation fund for continuance of projects now under way. The prompt passage of this bill will give employment to more than 32,000 men."

It is probable that the enactment of the last mentioned expenditure is due to the position taken by the conference. It has undoubtedly also increased road and state and municipal expenditure. If—on a similar basis of calculation to that employed for reclamation and roads—we assume that 114,000 to 171,000 are employed in the above-mentioned state and municipal works, we find a total of some 350,000 engaged in all these public works—but only a fraction of that number is in excess of those so employed last year. Accepting Mr. Harding's estimate of a million and a half as being normally unemployed every year, we had at the time of the Presidential Conference—according to its own estimates—an excess or abnormal unemployment variously estimated as being from 2,000,000 to 4,000,000! If this number has fallen somewhat, Mr. Hoover has just pointed out that it may soon rise again.

Public Works and Public Credit.

The hard times or cyclical unemployment with which we are now confronted (as distinct from the seasonal unemployment with which we are confronted every year) can be remedied only as the wheels of industry are set in motion and commercial activity restored. Whether the remedy proposed aims primarily (1) at the restoration of privately owned industries that employ the great bulk of the wage-earners, or (2) primarily at new public undertakings, or (3) at the extension of public credit to promote industry and trade, the result must be the same—if the remedy is to be effective, industry generally must be set in motion.

But it would be difficult, even if subsidies were permissible, to set the wheels of private industry directly in motion during hard times. On the other hand in countries like Great Britain and the United States where the public credit is excellent, there is no practical obstacle whatever to the undertaking during hard times of public enterprises of a productive character on a sufficient scale to stimulate all industry and reduce cyclical unemployment to a mere fraction of what it is today. The principle, as we have shown, was repeatedly recognized by the Presidential Conference. But it was not applied on a scale at all commensurate with the evil.

This is so clearly the constructive and preventive policy for dealing with unemployment that it has been recommended by:

1. The International Unemployment Conference of 1913,
2. The Ministry of Labor of Great Britain,
3. The League of Nations' International Labor Office,
4. The governments of Germany, Italy, Sweden, Czecho Slovakia and other countries.

Great Britain has made a marked beginning in the application of this remedy and on a considerable scale for that country—though not as yet corresponding to the extent of the evil—and British labor accepts this as a step in the right direction and as exemplifying the sound policy in dealing with unemployment (see special article on the British situation elsewhere in this number of the Federationist).

The proposal of the extension of public credit for public works and other public purposes is not in any sense a dole or an appeal for support and subsistence of the unemployed (as we have already shown).

Nor is it Paternalism—In any Sense of the Word.—The works proposed and the credits to be extended are along lines long undertaken by the American government, and are calculated to stimulate and promote the entire industry of the nation—beginning with construction and extending to the manufacturers of all the tools of production and of all consumable goods. It is proposed only that in view of the low costs of production and waste of human labor power of hard times these works shall be undertaken on a considerably large scale.

Nor does this policy call for any drain whatever from the public treasury. The credit of the United States is excellent and could in no way be impaired by public loans for manifestly productive purposes, purposes approved by the overwhelming majority of the nation, including investors. The extensions of credit proposed are based either upon absolutely sound security or are intended for works which will pay for themselves many times over in the increased productive capacity of the nation that will result.

The advocates of this remedy for unemployment are not impelled even to take under consideration any projects of a doubtful utility. Either officially recommended by departments of the federal government or supported by overwhelming expert opinion there have been before the public for many years a number of projects in the fields below mentioned the public utility of which can not be questioned.

The only important opposition comes from two groups: (1) Those who wish the use of public credit for other and competing purposes—some of them of a doubtful character—and, (2) Those interests which desire to see all the money in the pockets of the small investors flow into private financial channels and little or none of it to go to the government in the shape of popular loans. The latter group will remain opposed to the end to every policy that aims to get the wheels of industry in motion and to prevent the colossal individual loss and suffering and social waste of unemployment by the extension of public credit for any purposes whatsoever. But this opposition, powerfully entrenched as it is, can not long impede the carrying out of a policy which is demanded by the interests not only of almost the entire business community but also of the overwhelming majority of the people.

The chief fields for the new extension of public credit for public purposes are:

1. Land Reclamation.
2. Water Power Conservation.
3. Inland Waterways (Canals, Rivers, Harbors).
4. Public Highways (Roads).
5. Forestry.
6. Housing.
7. Railroads.

1. Reclamation.

Immediate development and extension of the reclamation of arid, swamp, and overflow lands in accordance with the plans of the U. S. Reclamation Service, the Inland Waterways Commission, and bills which have been laid before Congress.

2. Waterpower Development.

Development of such part of the two hundred million undeveloped water horsepower in this country as would find an immediate market. This development to include the powers at Muscle Shoals on the Tennessee and Long Sault on the St. Lawrence, and others in the Appalachians, the Rocky Mountains, and the Pacific Coast Ranges.

3. Inland Waterways (Canals, Rivers, Harbors).

Development of the Mississippi River and its tributaries for domestic supply, navigation, irrigation, waterpower, and all other benefits to be derived from the use or control of the waters, in accordance with the plan laid down by the U. S. Inland Waterways Commission—by the construction of levees and dams, by dredging, by control of stream flow through the creation and protection of water-retaining forests.

The amount to be profitably expended under this plan mounts into the hundreds of millions, all of which will ultimately be repaid not only in benefits but in cash.

Development of inland and coast-wise canal systems along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, thus affording cheap transportation of bulky freight and giving protected passage to our coast-wise shipping, in substantial accordance with the plans of the U. S. Inland Waterways Commission.

Engineers appointed by the International Joint Commission of the American and Canadian Governments have reported that the cost of the proposed St. Lawrence Ship Canal, including the development of 1,464,000 horse-power will be $252,000,000. Constructed and paid for on an equal basis by the two governments this project would furnish a considerable amount of unemployment for American labor and industry.

Further development of rivers and harbors of this country in accordance with the foregoing and with the report of the Chief of Engineers.

Expenditure of approximately $43,000,000 for rivers and harbors in the fiscal year. 1923, and an additional $7,500,000 for the Muscle Shoals, Ala., project is recommended by Major Gen. Beach, Chief of Army Engineers, in his annual report.

Work was stopped on the project last April because Congress refused to appropriate further funds.

4. Public Highways (Roads).

The principle of the public road bill enacted by Congress several years ago, and now re-enacted by the recent Congress—appropriating $75,000,000 and calling for a like expenditure by the States—is sound. Bills before Congress calling for an additional expenditure of $100,000,000 during the coming year should be immediately enacted—an apparently large sum, but by no means excessive in view of the enormous area of this country.

5. Forestry.

Development in the National Forests of roads, trails, telephone lines, fire towers, and other permanent equipment for preventing and putting out devastating forest fires in accord with the principles laid down by the U. S. Forestry Service.

There are more than 150 million acres of National Forests. Pennsylvania, with $1\frac{1}{4}$ million acres of state forests, is spending five hundred thousand dollars a year for this purpose.

Reclamation by planting and otherwise of more than eighty million acres of man-made desert, once rich forested land. Forest devastation is adding to this desert yearly some three million acres—an area as large as the State of Connecticut.

6. Housing.

The President's Unemployment Conference declared: "The savings, deposits of the people are the natural economic source of loans for home building. The aggregate is ample for this purpose, even though a portion is protected by adequate investment in more liquid securities to meet withdrawals. There would be no difficulty in the financing of homes if the fundamental principle of the use of long-term deposits for home-loan and long-term purposes were generally followed."

The American Federation of Labor went on record in 1919 as demanding the use of the credit of the federal government for housing purposes. Leading housing organizations now urge a Federal Home Loan Bank similar to the Federal Farm Loan Bank.

The President's Unemployment Conference reported the total construction shortage of the country as being between $10,000,000,000 and $20,000,000,000 and declared that "more than 2,000,000 people could be employed if construction would be resumed." Assuming that a considerable part of this number are now at work, it is certain that several hundreds of thousands of additional men could be employed. Most of these could be set at work by a properly constituted Federal Home Loan Bank.

7. Railroads.

The economic advisory committee made the following recommendation to the Presidential Conference:

In providing for the payment of any sums due to railroads by the Federal Government or in any advances or loans to the railroads that may be made by the Federal Government a condition should be attached that would make such funds immediately available in greater part only for new construction, repairs, and outlay that would increase the demand of the railroads for labor and materials, and thus augment general employment and revive industry.

On this same point Labor made the following declaration to the Conference:

We sustain the declaration of the General Conference adopted on this subject at its meeting October 11, as follows: "Settlement of the financial relationships between the government and the railroads, having in mind the immediate necessity for increased maintenance and betterments, making effective increased railway employment, in order that the railways may be prepared for enlarged business as it comes," with the distinct understanding and conditional upon the adoption of the minority report of the Transportation Committee and signed by W. S. Carter as follows:

"Inasmuch as this conference has been called by the President for the sole purpose of relieving unemployment, we also recommend that in the disbursement of the funds advanced to the railroads as provided in Senate Bill 2337, the railroads should be required to devote practically the entire sum so appropriated to the purchase of labor and material for maintenance of way and structures and for maintenance of equipment and that the maintenance of equipment be performed in the shops of the railroads to their capacity, thus insuring the expenditure of the money so appropriated in the re-employment of railroad labor."

If Labor's recommendation is accepted there may be a new $500,000,000—the sum originally urged by President Harding—for new railroad expenditure. This sum might be expected (see above) to give direct employment to several hundred thousand men.

The Problem Can and Must Be Solved.

The problem of unemployment can be solved. Seasonal unemployment can be almost eliminated. Cyclical unemployment is a social crime of the highest order and no society which permits it to continue can expect to survive.

As long as men and women, eager to work, in a country filled with untold riches of materials and land, are denied the opportunity to work and to maintain themselves properly, our society is bankrupt in its most important essential.

The question is no longer open to debate. The problem of unemployment must be solved. There is no alternative.

Labor lays down its proposals. It supports every constructive move, no matter where or by whom initiated. It brings forward in addition to those moves a program of proposals which will clear away the social waste and wreckage caused by unemployment and put the nation on the road to full and final remedy.

These proposals are before America. Labor demands that the problem be attacked with full vigor and determination, with fearlessness and an eye single to solution with justice.

Working people must work to live. To deny the opportunity to work is to enforce death.

The problem can be solved. It must be solved. The time for action and solution is, not tomorrow, but NOW!

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

PREDICTORS CONFUSED.

Way out yonder on the banks of the Pacific Ocean lives a would-be wise individual. He works a part of the time at the industry. He devotes all his spare moments to pouring over the reports printed in the MIXER AND SERVER and every now and then jotting down on a piece of paper figures with which he hopes to convince the thoughtless that we are on the road to ruin and nothing is going to prevent us hitting the bottom of the slide with a resounding whack. One would imagine, to listen to him talk about our organization, that he was a sure enough expert in administration; that every move he makes is a studied one and every conclusion arrived at based upon the solidest of foundations. Almost six months have been crossed off the calendar since he predicted a smash "that would be heard from Coast to Coast," but dawgunit no one has heard the smash and the MIXER AND SERVER is in your hands on time. As a peddler of predictions, he evidently is a lame duck, or perhaps an amateur at prognosticating. In any event he is swathed in sackcloth and ashes because of the presistence of our organization sticking around and showing signs of life.

There has never been any mystery about the financial transaction of our International Union since the first day of August, 1899; there has been printed for the benefit of the men and women who supported this organization an understandable financial report, showing acknowledgment of every cent received and for every cent expended. The records speak for themselves and uphold the traditions of the organization, to spend every penny that can be spared for the advancement of the organization and the benefit of the men and women who support it with their monthly per capita tax. Read your financial reports and know what your organization is doing. Be ready for the calamity howler when he makes his appearance. Don't let any one pump you full of misinformation for the purpose of discouraging your efforts.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

BILLY BOYLE

Of "Chophouse in Alley," Dead—Famous Server of Steaks in Olden Chicago Days.

Billy Boyle, famous as a restaurateur in bygone days, and "the man who taught Chicago to eat beef-steak and roast beef," died yesterday at his residence, 1520 N. LaSalle Street.

The passing of the old chophouse owner will revive memories of hundreds of persons who, in the "good old days," ate his succulent steaks washed down with a tankard of ale.

Billy Boyle—no one ever called him William—came to Chicago from his native town, Utica, N. Y., in the late '70s. He had worked in the kitchen of the Baggs Hotel at Utica when a boy and had shown an aptitude for the culinary art. There were but two all-night eating places in Chicago when he came here. One was Batchelder's, in South State Street, and the other was "Lonny" Freeman's, on the west side.

"WIDE OPEN TOWN."

Gambling was wide open at that period, and there were a dozen big games in the vicinity of Clark and Madison Streets. After midnight, if a gambler wanted a bite to eat, he had to climb into a sea-going cab and drive to Batchelder's or Freeman's.

Billy Boyle saw the opportunity for an all-night eating restaurant in the heart of the town, and he opened a chophouse in Calhoun Place, just off Dearborn Street and back of the old Inter-Ocean Building. Few persons probably know where Calhoun Place is. It is an alley running west from State to Market, between Madison and Washington Streets.

With the opening of the chophouse there came to Calhoun Place a motley horde of devotees of the fickle goddess of chance, and the alley was nicknamed "gamblers' alley." Boyle's chophouse was opened about 1878. It was on the north side of the alley. The fame of its steaks and Southdown chops soon spread, and to the clientele of gamblers were added lawyers, doctors, actors, bankers, politicians, newspaper men and merchants.

BEST KNOWN EATING PLACE.

Within a year from the time it was opened the "chophouse in the alley" became the epicurean resort of the town. No steak was ever broiled in Billy Boyle's until it had hung at least six weeks in the refrigerator. When brought in on a platter with a baked potato the size of your two fists, 'twould give appetite to a dying man.

For several years Boyle's chophouse did an enormous business. Among the regular habitués were the elder Carter Harrison, Judge Moran, Philip and Thomas Hoyne, Gen. Walter Q. Gresham, Melville Stone, Judge Knickerbocker, General Winston, A. S. Trude, De Witt C. Cregier, Gen. Phil Sheridan, Emory Storrs, Dr. Frank W. Reilly, Gil Barnard, John A. Roche, Will Van Benthuyzen, Hempstead Washburne, William A. Pinkerton and Inspector Jack Shea. Lawrence Barrett, Edwin Booth and Billy Florence were among its actor patrons when in Chicago; Dave Henderson and Eddie Foy also. Among the gambling fraternity who were regular customers were the four Hankins brothers, Pat Sheedy, Mike McDonald, Harry Varnell, "Cy" Janes, Kirk Gunn, Tim Dunn and John Condon.

GAMBLING SHUT DOWN.

When faro and roulette were closed down a year or so after the world's fair, Billy Boyle felt the effects more perhaps than any other person. While all manner of people patronized him, yet a generous share of his trade had come from the gambling houses, and Billy Boyle wasn't the kind of man to see a fellow hungry for the want of the price of a meal. He staked many of his old and now out-of-luck customers and fed them. He was finally driven to the wall, and his I. O. U. tabs showed between $20,000 and $25,000.

Somewhat earlier he had moved his chophouse to the south side of the alley, opposite the rather shabby quarters where he originally started. But something was wrong. Times were changing. Some of the old crowd had drifted away from Chicago.

LATER ENTERPRISES NO SUCCESS.

Later on he was restaurant manager for Chapin & Gore in Monroe Street, and he also tried a place in Quincy Street, but the latter was not a success. From there he went to the basement at Wabash Avenue and Adams Street, where he managed a chophouse for Harry Bollard. In the heyday of Boyle's there was another famous chophouse—Abson's.

Five or six years ago he was given a position in the county clerk's office by "Bob" Sweitzer, and held it up to the time of his death. For several years he has made his home with a niece, Mrs. Maud Wanser.

Billy was 78 years old. A son, Arthur W. Boyle, of 5248 Glenwood Avenue, survives him. Funeral services will be from Carroll's chapel, Division and Clark Streets, next Monday morning. A requiem high mass will be celebrated in the Cathedral of the Holy Name. Interment at Calvary—Chicago Tribune, November 5, 1921.

A NEWSPAPER MAN'S ODE TO "BOYLE'S"

THE CHOPHOUSE IN THE ALLEY.

By Henry M. Hyde

Formerly of the Tribune staff.

Talk about old Roman banquets,
Blow about old Grecian feeds,
Where the ancient, paunchy warriors
Toasted their heroic deeds!
They were gustatory classics—
Still a longing I confess
For the chophouse in the alley
When the paper's gone to press.

Peacock's tongues are very dainty,
Served upon a golden plate.
Crowns of roses for the victors,
While the whipped barbarians wait!
Let old Horace sing their praises—
Still a longing I confess
For the chophouse in the alley
When the paper's gone to press.

There we sit for hours together,
Wit and laughter never fail.
Up from cellars dim and dusty
Yellow Henry brings the ale.
There we sit and chaff and banter—
Envy no old heathen's mess,
At the chophouse in the alley,
When the paper's gone to press.

Delve in problems philosophic—
How did Adam lose his rib?
What's the chance of war in Europe?
Has the Herald scooped the Trib?
Let the millionaire grow sadder,
While my credit grows no less
At the chophouse in the alley,
When the paper's gone to press.

Till, untimed by eyes that sparkle,
From the lake the sun leaps up,
And, 'mid many a roaring banter,
Big Steve drinks his stirrup cup!
Those were days we all remember,
Those were nights we all must bless,
At the chophouse in the alley,
When the paper's gone to press.

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

A DECISION AGAINST PICKETING.

When the Federal Supreme Court hands down a five-to-four decision on a labor question, with Justices Holmes, Brandeis, Pitney, and Clark on the dissenting side, it often transpires that what is commonly called a property right has been upheld and that what has been loosely and sentimentally called a human right has been denied. In other words, the Supreme Court contains two distinct schools of jurisprudence, equally learned, no doubt, and equally inspired by devotion to the public interest, yet tending in opposite directions. If Justice Taft's opinions in industrial matters ultimately prevail we shall have a far different industrial code than if those of Justice Brandeis prevail.

Yesterday's decision in the Arizona picketing case emphasized the distinction. The courts have generally held that peaceful picketing is legal and that the other kind is not. The difficulty has been to draw a line between the two. The Arizona state law, like some other state laws, was intended to legalize peaceful picketing. Apparently the instance before the court was one of peaceful picketing, although the pickets paraded in front of the offending restaurant and compelled "every customer or would-be customer to run the gauntlet of a most uncomfortable publicity, aggressive and annoying importunity, libellous attacks, and fear of injurious consequences, illegally inflicted, to his reputation and standing in the community." This conduct seemed to the majority of the justices to sustain the demand for an injunction.

The pith of Justice Brandeis's dissenting opinion appears to be in the sentence in which he says: "The denial of the more adequate suitable remedy for private wrongs is in essence an exercise of the police power, by which, in the interest of the public and in order to preserve the liberty and the property of the great majority of the citizens of a state, right of property and the liberty of the individual must be remoulded, from time to time, to meet the changing needs of society." Justice Pitney also held, in effect, that a state had the right to alter laws and regulations "for maintaining the peace, good order, and tranquility of its people," even though in so doing it rendered a property right less valuable. The issue, as the dissenting justices saw it, seems to have been, not the merits of the pickets' conduct, but the right of the state to countenance or to refuse to countenance such conduct, irrespective of the effect of the state's action upon property values.

The decision narrows the limits within which picketing will be allowed. It will prevent some abuses and will handicap many well-disposed and peaceable labor organizations. Its effect, in the hands of reactionary courts, may be unfortunate. —New York Globe, December 20, 1921.

WHATEVER YOU ARE.

If you can't be a pine on the top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub at the side of the rill;
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass,
Some highway to happier make;
If you can't be a muskie then just be a bass;
But be the liveliest bass in the lake.

We can't all be captains, we've got to be crew.
There's something for all of us here;
There's big work to do and there's lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail;
If you can't be the sun, be a star,
It isn't by size that you win or you fail—
Be the best of whatever you are.

—Selected.

80-8-18--7--83-8-13-8-15

A SOFT ANSWER.

(From a Stenographer.)

The president of a large automobile concern in Omaha, Nebraska, having had difficulty in getting a satisfactory stenographer, as a last resort put the following ad in one of the local newspapers:

"Wanted—First-class, high-grade stenographer; salary no object. This stenographer must get it as fast as I dictate, and get it right; must be absolutely accurate; must have human intelligence. If you are not a cracker-jack, don't bother me."

This is one of the replies received in the mail the following morning:

"I note your requirements, as aired in the newspaper, and hasten to make inquiry as to this strenuous business that takes such an extraordinary stenographer.

"Your advertisement appeals to me strongly—stronger than prepared mustard—as I have searched Europe, Airopo, Irope and Hoboken in quest of some one who could use my talents to advantage.

"When it comes to this chin music proposition, I have never found man, woman or dictaphone who get first base on me, either fancy or catch as catch can. I write shorthand so fast that I have to use a specially prepared pencil with a platinum point, and a water-cooling equipment that I have constructed at exorbitant expense, a note pad made of asbestos composition, covered with human hide, ruled with sulphuric acid, and stitched with catgut.

"I use the A. W. ignition, double unit, high tension system exclusively, and will guarantee to deliver my rated horsepower under either A. L., A. M., or S. A. E. standard. I have been passed by the National Board of Censorship and guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drug Act of June 30, 1906.

"I run with my cut-out open at all speeds, and am, in fact, a guaranteed double hydraulically welded crop-forged and oil-tempered specimen of human lightning on a perfect thirty-six frame ground to one-thousandth of an inch. At hot air juggling you have nothing on me.

"If you wish to avail yourself of the opportunity of a lifetime, wire me; but unless you are fully prepared to pay the tariff for such services, don't bother me, as I am so nervous that I can't stand still long enough to have my dressmaker measure my clothes. Spare your time and money unless you want to pay at least $5.00 per week in cash or its equivalent. I. M. Widewake."—Docket.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BELIEVES IN THE USE OF PRINTER'S INK.

One of the most persistent users of publicity which comes our way is Bro. L. H. Moore, secretary-treasurer of the Arkansas State Federation of Labor. Brother Moore is one of those tireless hustlers that keep their weather eye open for opportunity, and bring to their aid the printed word. One of Brother Moore's best "arguments," and it is printed on the face of the envelopes used by him, reads:

The More Union Label Goods You Buy,
The More Union Workmen You Furnish With Employment!

The More Non-Union Goods You Use,
The More Union Men You Throw Out of Work!

Get that idea, permit it to indentate on your memory cylinder, and embrace its meaning, by doing that and then seeing to it that your union-earned wages are used to your advantage you become an active unit in the organized army of toilers.

The Arkansas State Federation of Labor prides itself on being one of the most consistent advocates of making union wages help union men and women. How about your State organization; can it wear any medals for boosting union made goods?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE CHEESE BROTHERS.

Brick—They tell me I am very outspoken.

Swiss—I'd like to see the guy that can outspcak you.

Brick—I am now studying French.

Swiss—Ah, still going to school, eh?

Brick—Yes, twon't be long now until I can parlay vous.

Swiss—Then you can read the bills of fare.

Brick—My teacher says that I must think in French.

Swiss—Does he know you?

Brick—Not very well; why do you ask?

Swiss—He is asking the impossible of you.

Brick—Whadya mean—"asking the impossible."

Swiss—How can you think in French.

Brick—Why not?

Swiss—Because you can't even think in English.

Brick—Zatso; I can show a roomful of fellers in the same boat.

Swiss—You can; I'd like to see 'em.

Brick—Follow me; I'm on my way to the place.

Swiss—What sort of a place is it?

Brick—Pool room, where non-union cooks and waiters hang out.

A DEFINITION OF LIBERTY.

The world has never had a good definition of the word liberty and the American people are just now much in need of one. We all declare for liberty, but in using the same word we do not all mean the same thing. With some the word liberty may mean for each man to do as he pleases with himself and the product of his labor while with others the same word may mean for some men to do as they please with other men and the products of other men's labor. The shepherd drives the wolf from the sheep's throat, for which the sheep thanks the shepherd as his liberator, while the wolf denounces him for the same act as the destroyer of liberty. Plainly the sheep and the wolf are not agreed upon a definition of the word liberty and precisely the same difference prevails today among us human creatures.—Abraham Lincoln.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WONDERFUL COMBINATION.

"But are you a British born subject?" angrily demanded the official at the passport office.

"My mother was British—" began the applicant.

"Yes, yes—"

"But she married a Frenchman—"

"Yes, yes—"

"In Italy—"

"Yes, but where were you born?"

"I was born on a ship flying Spanish colors while she was lying at anchor in Honolulu harbor, but my parents died in Brazil when I was only four years old and I was adopted by a Chinaman, who brought me up in Russia."

"Well, he's—" began an official.

"He's a bloomin' League of Nations," exploded the first official who had spoken.—Exchange.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WE TENDER GRACIOUS AND GENEROUS THANKS.

Either our girls and boys are becoming more generous, or else we have won their esteem by earnestly trying to perform the duties assigned to us under our laws. The number of Christmas and New Year greetings which came to us this year were more than double the number we have had the pleasure of receiving heretofore. Would like to have responded with a card to all these good friends and well wishers, but oh, boys and girls it would have taken me weeks to even write the addresses, saying nothing of the dent in would put in the bank roll to purchase suitable cards and attach postage. Many, many thanks, girls and boys, the receipt of your Season's Greetings has encouraged us to keep going along doing our level best to continue to merit your good will and good wishes.

The best we can offer now, is to say The Same to You and Many of Them.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

A CHANCE HE MISSED.

A chaplain was noted for his ready wit.

While traveling on a steamboat a notorious sharper who wished to get into his good graces, said: "Father, I should like very much to hear one of your sermons."

"Well," said the clergyman, "you could have heard me last Sunday if you had been where you should have been."

"Where was that, pray?"

"In the county jail."—Times-Star.

THE RAINDROPS ON YOUR OLD TIN HAT.

(This poem was written by Lieutenant J. Hunter Wickersham, 353rd Infantry, on the eve of the St. Mihiel attack, and was enclosed in his last letter to his mother. Lieutenant Wickersham was killed on the following day, September 12, 1918, near Liméy, in an exploit which won for him the posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor.)

The mist hangs low and quiet on a ragged line of hills,

There's a whispering of wind across the flat,
You'd be feeling kind of lonesome if it wasn't for one thing—

The patter of the raindrops on your old tin hat.

Ah, you just can't help a-figuring—sitting there alone—

About this war and hero stuff and that,
And you wonder if they haven't sort of got things twisted up,

While the rain keeps up its patter on your old tin hat.

When you step off with the outfit to do your little bit

You're simply doing what you're s'posed to do—
And you don't take time to figure what you gain or lose—

It's the spirit of the game that brings you through.

But back at home she's waiting, writing cheerful little notes,

And every night she offers up a prayer
And just keeps on a-hoping that her soldier boy is safe—

The mother of the boy who's over there.

And, fellows, she's the hero of this great big ugly war,

And her prayer is on the wind across the flat,
And don't you reckon maybe it's her tears, and not the rain,

That's keeping up the patter on your old tin hat?

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

WHY PULL A BONER.

"What we need is a new charter, chuck the old union and its records into the discard and make a new start, with new charter, new number and let's forget the failures produced under the old order of things."

That is a literal quotation from a communication from a newly elected officer of a local union that had not made a very enviable record. We recognized the symptoms and in order to save time and further trouble, we wrote asking our correspondent to submit the names of the workers who he felt confident would take over the job of making the new union a success.

We further suggested that if he could do so, he would arrange the list alphabetically and follow the name of each person with a record of when and where they had become members of the old local and the International Union. About a fortnight later the list compiled as had been suggested arrived, we acknowledged receipt and advised our correspondent that we would give the matter a look-in and that he could look forward to an answer later on.

Taking the list submitted, we dug up the records of the alleged failure, located after some effort the names of all who had been members, and began comparing that list with the submitted one. Just as we expected, out of the 48 names offered as proposed members of the new union, we found 46 on the roster of the local union, and, with something like eight or ten exceptions, every one of them had been "suspended for non-payment of dues." The exceptions were men who had obtained their trade union training in older locals, but it seems were not possessors of that "get up and get there" ability that usually comes to members of long standing. It took many pages of argument to convince these wage earners that the fault was not with the old charter or number, but was to be found in their own mental attitude. "Here you have identically the same men and women as now make up your local union, there is none of that 'new blood' apparent, which you made mention of, and for the life of me I am unable to understand why you and your co-workers appear to be obsessed with the ideas that are depriving you of making reasonable progress. Why reach the conclusion that there is something connected with the old charter and number that handicaps your efforts; all that we see that you and your co-workers need, is a little self-appraisal and recognition of that fact that you have the guts and gumption to move forward and make the alleged Jonah charter and number represent a live, thriving and progressive local union."

Several more such letters had to be written, but in the course of a few months that so-called Jonah union began to show recovery and today that union is going along, gaining momentum and has forgotten that they ever had anything but pleasant thoughts about their organization and its ability to move forward. The brother that wrote the original appeal to us is still a member of that local union; not many months ago he paid us a visit, and was fulsome in his praise for pulling his union out of a rut. He may peruse this item, and if he does he will become aware of the fact that we took no credit for the advancement of that union, it was the men and women of the local that accomplished results. All that we are entitled to is credit for stopping them from pulling a boner, which they seemed determined to pull until told plainly that they had more than enough brains and ability to make their union a success; all they needed was to wise up to the fact and put a move on themselves. When it seems dark for your union, then is the time for you to say: Let's Go Forward.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

* HERE'S A RECIPE FOR JUGGED HARE.

Young cottontail or other rabbits may be cooked in any of the ways chicken is prepared, and their meat may be satisfactorily substituted for beef or mutton in goulash and other stewed mixtures of meat and vegetables. The United States Department of Agriculture has thoroughly tested the following recipe for jugged hare: Belgian hare, jack-rabbit, or wild rabbit may be used.

Clean the hare, remove the tough skin and membranes covering meat. Cut into pieces of about 2-inch lengths; cut ½ pound of bacon into dice of about half an inch square. In a plate mix 3 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon black pepper, 4 teaspoons flour, ½ teaspoon thyme, 1 bay leaf broken or crushed, 3 teaspoons finely chopped onions, 1 teaspoon grated nutmeg and a pinch of ground cloves. Roll the diced bacon and one-fourth of the meat of the hare in this mixture. In a saucepan melt 2 tablespoons of butter, or lard and butter mixed; when hot add the bacon and all the meat, brown nicely, add a little hot water or soup stock and simmer for ½ hour.—Times-Star.

GET THE UNION LABEL HABIT.

Get the Union Label habit,
It's the proper thing to do;
It will put the "open shopper"
In a devil of a stew.
It's a double-barreled boycott
Without trouble or expense;
There is nothing you can think of
With such power, it's immense.

Just suppose five million workers—
Those inside the Union fold—
Would refuse to buy of merchants
Where non-union goods were sold.
What would happen at such action
It is plain to understand,
Goods which bore the Union Label
Would be everywhere on hand.

Get the Union Label habit,
You'll be mighty well repaid,
Of the lockout, strike or blacklist,
You need never be afraid.
No injunction judge can reach you,
"Open shoppers" you can tame,
Get the Union Label habit—
When you do you've won the game.
—THOMAS H. WEST.

80-3-18-7-83-8-83-13-8-15

LET US TIGHTEN UP ON THAT CITIZENSHIP RECORD.

Recently we had occasion to look up a record for an attorney who had as a client the widow of one of our deceased members. There was an excellent opportunity for the widow to "come into a nice little bundle of money," if there could be located a citizenship record. We dug up the records of the local union which the deceased brother had been a member of, unfortunately it had dropped out when the eighteenth amendment went into operation, but the records and books were fairly complete when they were returned to headquarters. We used up several hours trying to help the attorney obtain the bequest for the widow, but not a record, not a pen scratch to indicate whether the deceased had ever become a citizen of the United States. We looked up the Death Benefit Claim records and the certificate of death gave the birth place of the deceased as Austria, but nothing to show citizenship.

The bequest was worth making an effort to secure, a search had been made in a number of cities where the deceased brother had worked, but up to date nothing has been discovered that would be helpful to the widow.

When a secretary obtains a traveling card issued by another local and there is no record on that card covering citizenship, an effort should be made to find out from the owner of the card whether he or she is a citizen and if not, whether they have made the required effort provided for under our laws. That law may seem unimportant to the unthinking, but it is in our book of laws for a very definite purpose and its provisions should be complied with.

Some day the Government will pass a registration law, the sooner the better, for it's high time that the alien trouble makers are placed where they cannot continue their injurious stunts.

If our secretaries will do their part, it won't be long before we will have an accurate record of how we stand from a citizenship standpoint.

Just keep this one thought in mind, a citizen's vote is going to become a valuable asset to this organization before many moons pass by.

THE MORE THE MERRIER.

Secretary Sinton of Local 458, Minneapolis, Minn., writing under date of December 19, 1921, said, in view of the fact that the General Secretary has submitted a four-page letter to the general membership, it seems appropriate that a local union should at least send a one page letter to their membership, and then Brother Sinton enclosed a copy of the Christmas letter to the membership of Local 458.

We advised Brother Sinton that we like the idea, that it was a splendid custom and one which the membership would appreciate. Officers can do a great deal of real good by keeping in touch with the members of their respective local unions. Members are occasionally prevented from attending the meeting and a general annual message to them, offering a brief survey of the local situation, as well as tendering friendly greetings is worth all the labor which such correspondence entails.

We hope that other unions will follow the example, send letters to the members and keep them posted on what is taking place in the industry, as well as cheering them up and encouraging them to keep in step with the other members. Local 458 is doing very nicely, membership co-operating with one another and with their union officials. The members of Local 458 have but one disappointment and that is unsatisfactory results achieved in helping the waitresses to make better headway, but the determination to help is still alive and the future may see better returns. Minneapolis is a leader and will not be content with seeing a portion of the allied crafts making meager progress. Just watch that city come to the front in the next few months.

80-3-18-7-83-8-83-13-8-15

TO THE HALF MILLION.

(By E. F. Barrows. Apologies to John McCrae.)

In city parks the papers blow
Between the benches, row on row,
That mark our place; and in the street
The sparrows dodge the hurrying feet,
That seem to mock us as they go.

No work! And yet, short days ago
We fought your battle with the foe,
And won it, too, and now we loaf
In city parks.

You promised it would not be so
When we returned; by that word, know
Here is the threat that you must meet;
If you break faith with us, defeat
Will grip us all, though poppies grow
In Flanders' fields.

—West Virginia Federationist.

80-3-18-7-83-8-83-13-8-15

GETTING IT OVER.

The tabulation which follows is bound to be interesting to a large number of members, for the reason that few of them have the printed records of twenty years ago. Many of the locals that "blossomed and wilted" managed to stage a comeback; some of them are with us now, while others have been packed away for all time. To the vets of our organization will come many reminders of the days when we were making a hard struggle to go forward.

From time to time we hope to offer similar bits of history; it may prove inspiring if not interesting to our members.

The following charters were issued during the month of July, 1901:

Local	Organizer
57, Ashtabula, Ohio.....	Joseph Belfe
62, Fresno, Calif.	F. S. Clark
105, Clarksburg, W. Va.....	Wm. Warner
131, Newark, N. J.....	H. L. Hilfers
185, Williamsport, Pa.	Morris E. Kelly
205, Berlin, Ont.	J. H. Kressler
209, Knoxville, Tenn.	A. Todtenhausen
215, Carbondale, Pa.....	Jas. Flewellyn

The following charters were issued during the month of August, 1901:

18, Denver, Colo.	Fred Bauman
73, Elkhart, Ind.	Geo. Sargent
78, Uniontown, Pa.	T. J. Collins
115, Philadelphia, Pa.....	J. M. Barnes, H. W. Potter
174, Pottsville, Pa.....	Howard H. Caldwell
176, McKeesport, Pa.....	Thos. H. Flynn
188, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Cal. Wyatt
190, Tarentum, Pa.	J. W. Jones
195, Gloversville, N. Y.....	John J. Kenefic
201, Haverhill, Mass.....	Frank H. McCarthy
247, Des Moines, Iowa	Chas. A. Gay
130, Kokomo, Ind.	Clide Stewart
75, Washington, D. C.....	E. J. Ratigan

The following charters were issued during the month of September, 1901:

59, Milwaukee, Wis.	Joseph Weis
63, Spokane, Wash.	H. D. Merritt
65, Victoria, B. C.....	T. H. Twigg
74, Corry, Pa.....	General Office
119, Susquehanna, Pa.	T. F. O'Leary
317, New Haven, Conn.	Frank L. Knapp
251, Centralia, Ill.....	General Office
252, Mansfield, Ohio.....	David Miller
253, Alliance, Ohio	Nelson P. Maier
254, Waterbury, Conn.	Frank L. Knapp
255, Danbury Conn.	Frank L. Knapp
256, Bridgeport, Conn.....	Frank L. Knapp

The following charters were issued during the month of October, 1901:

3, New York City, N. Y.....	Thos. E. Sweeney
58, New Orleans, La.....	J. E. Porter
104, Guelph, Ont.	O. R. Wallace
122, Cheyenne, Wyo.	Geo. N. Kyle
257, Sayre, Pa.	T. F. O'Leary
258, Los Angeles, Calif.....	Lemuel D. Biddle
259, Edwardsville, Ill.....	A. H. Nischneitz
260, New Orleans, La.....	J. E. Porter
261, Louisville, Ky.....

G. G. De-Souchet and F. Schwenker
262, New Castle, Pa.....	J. W. Slayton
263, St. John N. B., Can.....	John A. Flett
264, Omaha, Neb.	Fred Bauman
265, Scranton, Pa.	Hugh Frayne
266, Kansas City, Mo.....	John T. Smith
267, Lansing, Mich.....	Frank J. Marx
268, Omaha, Neb.	Fred Bauman
269, South Norwalk, Conn.	Local 200

The following charters were issued during the month of November, 1901:

17, Los Angeles, Calif.....	Lemuel D. Biddle
25, Hot Spring, Ark.....	General Office
189, Portland, Ore.....	Horace A. Duke
250, Marion, Ill.....	General Office
270, Astoria, Ore.....	Wm. Althouse
271, St. Paul, Minn.....	John F. Kreiger
272, Clinton, Mass.....	General Office
273, Omaha, Neb.	Fred Bauman

"FORGET BUT DON'T FORGET."

"Forget the slander you have heard,
Forget the hasty, unkind word,
Forget the quarrel and the cause,
Forget the whole affair, because Forgetting is the only way.
Forget the storm of yesterday;
Forget the chap whose sour face
Forgets to smile in any place.
Forget the trials you have had,
Forget the weather, if it's bad"

"Forget the knocker—he's a freak,
Forget him seven days a week;
Forget that you're not a millionaire,
Forget the gray streaks in your hair.
Forget the coffee when it's cold,
Forget to kick, forget to scold,
Forget the plumber's awful charge,
Forget the iceman's bill is large,
Forget the coal man and his ways,
Forget, wherever you may roam.
Forget the man who wrote this poem,
Forget that he in social bliss
Forgot himself when he wrote this.
Forget that you ever had the blues—
BUT DON'T FORGET TO PAY YOUR DUES."

Note—It is a pity that we are unable to give credit to the author of the above, it was clipped from a circular sent to members of the B. P. O. E. in or immediately adjacent to Cincinnati, Ohio.—Editor Mixer and Server.

80-8-18--7--83-8-88-13-8-18

NEW U. S. PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE HOSPITALS.

Before the year ends the U. S. Public Health Service expects to add three more hospitals to the fourteen it has opened since January 1 last. It is also preparing nine other hospitals, four of which will probably be opened by May 1 and the others a little later. All of these hospitals have either been leased from private owners or taken over from the Army or the Navy, the new construction authorized by Congress at the extra session not yet being well under way.

Hospitals put into commission during the last three months include the former Navy hospital at Gulfport, Miss., with 150 beds; the hospitals at Jackson Park, Chicago, Colfax, Iowa and Portland, Oreg., with a total of 350 beds; and the Edward Hines Junior Hospital at Maywood, just outside of Chicago, with 1,000 beds. Those to be opened in December are the Fort McKenzic at Sheridan, Wyo., and one of the two buildings at Fort Logan H. Roots, at Little Rock, Ark., with a total of 480 beds. The Navy hospital at Las Animas, Colo., 750 beds, now operated by Navy surgeons, will be taken over as soon as a suitable Public Health Service staff can be organized. These hospitals will increase the capacity of all Service hospitals to about 22,600.

Hospitals planned to be opened for 1922 include the tuberculosis hospitals at beautiful Dawson Springs, Ky., Excelsior Springs, Mo., and Rutland, Mass., with a total of 920 beds; the general hospitals at Fort Walla Walla, Wash., near the junction of the Coast Wheat and fruit belts, and at Norfolk, Va., with a total of 1,240 beds; and the neuro-psychiatric hospital in the Bronx, New York City, with 1,000 beds.

DO YOU FIT IN?

You have no doubt often heard the expression, that so and so somehow did not seem to get his bearings, that he was a square peg and was trying to fit into a round hole with the usual results.

Have you ever thought to give yourself the "once over," a sort of personal examination? Have you ever taken on the habit of asking yourself the very personal and pointed question—what do other folks think of me?

Men have lived for years, some of them garnering a lot of money and were looked upon as successful members of a community; yet in all their days of scheming and pegging away to make and save coin, they never for a moment stopped long enough to find out how they stood with their fellows.

Rushing and pushing rough-shod over any and everybody that permits that sort of thing, reaching out and grabbing everything in sight, playing the miser on any and all occasions, may mean that your pile grows big and formidable, but what about the record you make with those who live alongside, and your townsmen generally. Will the community be sorry to hear of your illness; will it moisten any kerchief upon your demise, or will it say as it habitually does of the grasping dollar-hounds—good riddance, may the devil take care of its own.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THOSE WERE THE DAYS.

The frequency with which boilers blew up on the early Hudson River boats led to the use of what were known as "safety barges," and these, in their day, were considered the utmost luxury in travel, comparable to the private cars of the magnates of today. The barges were boats with main and upper decks and were almost as large as the steamers which towed them. The rabble rode on the steamers, inhaled the smells of the kitchen and the freight holds, endured the noise of the engines and took the chances of explosions, while on the barges behind the elite traveled in luxurious state. Food was brought from the boat kitchen to the barge saloon over a swaying bridge between the vessels and was served with great aplomb under the direction of a barge captain, who was a noble figure in the setting. The upper decks of the barges were canopied and decked with flowers, with promenades and easy chairs from which to view the scenery. At night the interiors were transformed into sleeping accommodations, much the same as in a modern Pullman, except that they were more commodious. Not the least attractive feature of these barges, according to a chronicler of their excellence, was "an elegant bar, most sumptuously supplied with all that can be desired by the most fastidious and thirsty."—Buffalo Courier.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HAVE THE OLD WAR CLUB READY FOR ADVERTISING FAKERS.

We had supposed that every trade union official, as well as members, were wise to the con game known as souvenir book advertising, but it seems that some of our folks either overlooked former warnings or else swallowed the salve peddler's estimation of himself. One of the foxy grafters made his appearance in New Orleans, La., recently and after cleaning up all the lose kale in sight, hopped the choo choo and left for other fields to put over another grafting game.

If there saunters around your local union headquarters one of those well groomed and pleasant smiling fellows who begins to tell you "how much gold your union could pile up if it gave him the privilege of soliciting advertising in the name of your union," untie the dog, get out the wooden persuader and go to it for all you are worth, for next to stealing pennies from school children there is nothing more contemptible in our estimation, than using the name of a wage earners' organization in order to trim the business men of a community. If you are approached, give the bird more than a casual look, for if you permit him to peddle his salve, you may fall for it and have a long, long time to regret your action.

If you must have money and can't get it any other way than by begging for it, then do the job yourselves and do it with a proposition that will command respect.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHEER UP FELLERS, THERE IS STILL A CHANCE.

Every time we see an unbranded, unmarried and uncared for broncho, we sort of turn on our spigot of sympathy and exude sorrow. But when we read the news of the world and discover that it's not so bad as we had thought, we simply say, "Cheer up, fellers, it might be worse." Here follows the cause of the foregoing preface. It is an article which appeared in many papers shortly after Santa Claus made his annual visit. Peruse it, brother, and sit pretty henceforth, for if the girls are crowded over seas, you know that it won't take more than two wiggles of a lambstail to have them meander to the "Booking Office" and come in where the balance is more even.

WHITE WOMEN OUTNUMBER MEN BY 11,000,000.

London.—There are approximately 11,000,000 more females of the white race than males today, as compared with an excess of 4,000,000 before the war, according to statistics just made public here. The four million excess was swollen by the war to nearly three times its former dimensions, and the greatest proportional increase was in women between the ages of 20 and 60 years. In another 20 years or so this excess should virtually disappear by the action of natural sex increase if no disturbing factor should occur. The problem then will not be the want of balance of the sexes, but the pressure of population in the Old World, where, unless emigration takes on a more even sex flow, there will still be an excess of women, while in the New World the opposite condition will still prevail.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SONNET.

When I was far too young to comprehend,
My great-grandfather one day talked to me
As if I were his wise and aged friend
And did not hold a new doll on my knee.
I can remember how his voice was kind,
But what he said I could not understand;
Only these words clung oddly in my mind:
"To burn out like a candle in God's hand"
What other words he uttered I forget:
These are like rubies from a ring unrolled
That in my fingers wait to be reset
When I learn better how to work with gold.
Yet when he spoke them, all I did was stare
And wonder at the whiteness of his hair.

—Ann Hamilton, in The Nation.

CORRESPONDENCE

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Attached find contribution for the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER.

Brother Herman Blumenthal resigned from the office of press secretary to engage in other business and the undersigned was appointed to fill out the term.

Local 106 has started an educational campaign amongst its members for the purpose of a better understanding of the trades union movement and a desire to bring about a closer relationship, to better their service and increase their efficiency, with a view to improve business conditions, which are in a sadly depressed state.

Following out this idea, we held the first of a series of entertainments or "get-together" meetings, last Friday night, which consisted of four stirring bouts, music by a first-class orchestra, songs by the inimitable Jack Lawler, an act from the Miles Theater, monologs by Brothers James Ambrose and Bill Emerson, and last but by no means least, a company of six colored entertainers, who vied with all the rest for first place honors.

We were honored upon this occasion by a guard from the police department, consisting of four plain clothes men, two uniformed men, and a visit by the deputy inspector and a sergeant.

The strike breakers in the recent dispute between the Tellings-Belle-Vernon Milk Company and the local union of milk wagon drivers were no more zealously guarded than were the members of our local unions on this occasion. Be it said to the credit of the large assemblage, in no single instance did anything occur that would have tended to bring down the wrath of the law, unless it was the story told by Brother Ambrose in reference to the milk strike, which I take the liberty of repeating as best I can so your readers may judge and laugh or weep as the fancy strikes them:

"A good-sized policeman was guarding some of the property of the milk company when along came two of the boys who have been fighting for 'Irish freedom,' one of whom was quite a big fellow and the other an undersized lad; both were filled with the fine spirits of the beautiful day—and other things—and the little fellow was quite offended at the sight of the policeman and told him so. The officer replied with the remark that a repetition of his abuse would result in dire consequences for his tormentor, whereupon the little fellow gamely took up the challenge and was promptly knocked down by the policeman. The larger Irishman then took a hand in the matter, rushed at the policeman, knocked him down, climbed on and was pummeling him for all he was worth when the little fellow came too, took in the situation in a dazed fashion, walked over to the struggling pair and delivered a stinging wallop on his friends' jaw. The big fellow raised up, much peeved and inquired of his friend what he meant by jumping on him when he had just come to his assistance so ably. The little fellow replied, "That's all right, but you go and get your own policeman."

Well, the affair was a huge success and every one expressed himself as being well pleased, and we are going to have more of them and, incidentally, Local 106 is going to put forth every effort for a 100 per cent culinary local, realizing that it is absolutely necessary to have a united front if we are to be successful in the fight with the "open shoppers" or the American plan, of which I hope to say something in my future letters.

Work is a pretty scarce article with our members at this writing, but we get a few extras, and as the world hates a quitter, take it from me we are not going to quit, in fact, we have just commenced to fight.

Sincerely hoping the members of our International will enjoy the best Christmas and New Year's possible under the circumstances, will quit this, my first one, now, lest you may think I am one of those 400-day clocks.

Fraternally,

EDW. A. WHISSEMORE,
Press Secretary, Local 106.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

BURKBURNETT, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 299 is still on the map and have about cleaned up on the open shoppers, who assumed that we would prove to be easy victims, but no doubt have changed their minds. We can and do lay claim to having a 100 per cent favorable situation, and we are exercising every available bit of energy and talent in our ranks to keep this city at that percentage. We have tried to warn all catering industry workers who may have intentions of coming this way, to do one of two things: change their mind, or if they do come, be sure your membership book shows you are paid up and in good standing in your local or you will have need for a ticket to get away from this section of the Lone Star State. We may as well advise you that we can get along without suspended members of other locals; we do not tolerate any suspensions in Local 299 and can't somehow feel kindly toward the workers from other sections who permit themselves to get in arrears.

We neither grant nor allow the use of so-called permits; either you are right when you land here or you keep a moving, for we neither need nor want you hereabouts.

We have an air-tight agreement with the fifteen first-class cafes in this little city and an outsider has as little chance to get into one of our places as the director of Sulphurville has of getting into heaven. We did not obtain our present agreeable conditions by wishing; we had to fight every inch of the way and do not propose to allow union men for revenue only to cut in here and probably do as they have done elsewhere—gum the cards and disgust the employers.

Hoping that the year 1922 will prove to be the banner year for our organization, wishing all our girls and boys the good things of life and that they will do as we have in this section of the country—work hard and unceasingly for the advancement of their local union and the cause of trades unionism generally.

With New Year's greetings to officers and members of the International Union I beg to remain,

Fraternally yours,

L. B. BOONE,

Secretary, Local 299.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Rochester at the bat again. Since our last letter our by-laws have been revised by a committee of fifteen, appointed by our president; we are going to see that every member receives this little book of laws; they sure will prove interesting reading for those of the members who are always saying: "I didn't know that was the law." The new officers are showing a lot of "pep" and when 1922 comes in will find Local 763 all primed up and in the best condition of any time in her history.

A great deal of good work has been accomplished since our business agent, Brother Haffey, took office, and also appreciate the co-operation received from the members; we can now head the "parade" with the best of them. "Those were the happy days!" What days? Oh, I get ya—when we had one 12x12 room to meet in and had a real lillipution bank account. Working conditions were 83 cents per day and we got 75 cents per lunch trick. When we look back about fifteen years we can't help but say that the present days are the happy days.

Our out-of-work list is growing. A number of places had to close their doors here lately and the prospects are not very bright just now. We have had our clubrooms redecorated and our old scout, Brother Monck, the "Sarakus" Kid, is on the receiving end for all the work that is necessary to keep the rooms in shape. Brother Monk has received the grand prize for his checker playing.

A label league has just been reorganized in this city, and, as usual, our delegate is on the job at every meeting. A great deal of good can be realized if those trades with labels will only line up and help the trades that are already on the job. We should not forget that while boosting our button we can think of the other fellow and boost him; he in turn will help us.

Our meetings are fairly well attended but we would like to reach more of the steady men, some of those who say they are too tired, also those who say there is too much quibbling and hot air to interest them. Let me say this to these members: Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization; your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting. You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed.

It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union. Go to the meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of this slogan, "United we stand, divided we fall."

At our last state election the following amendment was offered to the voters. "After January 1, 1922, no one is to be entitled to vote who can not read and write English; this does not apply to persons now entitled to vote, it applies to native-born and foreign-born alike." The voters sure did use their "noodles" this time; it passed by about 265,000! Some action.

Yours fraternally,

MICHAEL J. MURTHA,

Press Secretary, Local 763.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

SAN ANTONIO, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At the regular meeting of the catering industry, Local 12 went on record against the resolution of Local 30.

The following officers were elected: Frank D. Guard, president; C. K. MacDougal, vice-president; Frank Zizik, secretary-treasurer; Felix Bonnemaishon, inspector; Adolph Dennecamp, guard; J. H. Lamm, chaplain; J. H. Lamm, C. F. Cadena, Stewart Greenhorn, trustees; Frank Guard and Frank Zizik, delegates to trades council. Brother Paul Steffler was present at this meeting; he came a little late, but what a welcome when he did arrive! He was given a seat of honor by the president. Fraternally yours,

FRANK ZIZIK,

Secretary-Treasurer, Local 12.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—You will find enclosed a photo cut of a gentleman who was our advertising solicitor for souvenir book that you received. As we understand it this gentleman makes a practice of working up advertising specialties for labor organizations on a percentage of the gross. When the settlement is due the party is not, and the printing is here to be paid for. Our purpose in outlining the activities of this bird is that we think he has picked our craft as something soft and we would ask that you publish this letter in the MIXER AND SERVER so that the young man can not get away with it more than once. We hope you will oblige.

Brother Jerc, we have hopes of proving to the rest of the world that no open shop tactics will ever affect the standing of Local 58 in its own individual community for the reason that 9 out of 10 of our members go to the polls on election day and vote for their choice; also an organization that can secure the endorsement of a congressman, who was runner-up in the last congressional race and was beat by the efforts of another labor candidate, can boast of something accomplished in the past year.

At our last semi-annual election of officers, the following were elected to office: Carl Lavagna, president; Mike Polizzi, vice-president; Frank Reed, recording and press secretary; Jere Richardson, financial secretary-treasurer and business agent; Julien Exnicious, inspector; Jas. Murrett, inner guard; Oscar Fechner, chaplain; Otto Burkhardt, Herbert Rosher, Morris Shiffer, trustees.

Brother Morris Shiffer is still with us and is still the same live one as of old, and wishes to be remembered to friends in Detroit. Brother Jerry Richardson, our new secretary and former president, seems to fit like a well oiled part. Brother Carl Lavagna, the president-elect, has all the earmarks of a worthy successor of the daddy of Local 58 and he takes hold like an old timer. Of the rest of the officers, let it suffice that they could not be improved upon.

Faternally yours,

JERRY RICHARDSON,
Secretary, Local 58.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-18-8-15

DALLAS, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At the regular meeting of Local 659, on December 7, 1921, the following members were chosen as nominees for officers for the ensuing year, the election to take place December 21 by Australian ballot: For president, R. V. Howard and Jack Farrow; vice-president, Marma Nelson; second vice-president, W. E. Grissett; financial secretary-treasurer, Charles A. Simpson; business agent, Mike O'Brien and L. A. Glauburg; recording secretary, Ethel Stone; chaplain, H. B. Ward; inspector, Jack McCaustian; guard, Charles Wiley; trustees, May Farrow. Ava Debenham, Curtis Potts, Jim Newsome; executive board, Ed. Dale and Charles E. Buer. Polls will be open from 8:00 a. m. to 8:00 p. m.

Business is very quiet at present. Quite a number of our girls and boys are at Mexia, Tex., the new oil field.

We are having some cold weather here at present, but are looking for warmer and more pleasant weather for Christmas.

Frank Hall has just got in and is looking fine; says New York is no good.

CHARLES A. SIMPSON,
Secretary, Local 659.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-18-8-15

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Not having noticed any news from Local 152 for some time, thought it about time to let the brothers throughout the country learn that twenty-one year old Local 152 is still very much in existence; our membership has not fallen off a great deal the last year, the brothers realizing that the $7 a week benefit in case of sickness, comes in very handy these panicky times.

At our annual election of officers, Sunday, December 4, the following were elected: President, Noble Schagel; vice-president, R. M. Farris; financial secretary and business agent, Frank Hoffman; recording secretary, Ole Munson; treasurer, W. M. Grethien; chaplain, Sam De Lopp; inspector, Jimmie O'Brien; inside guard, John Connolly; outside guard, F. J. Albert; trustee, Arthur Fletcher.

Quite a few of the boys who expect to attend our next convention in Chicago in 1923, as visitors, are already talking about it and some are setting aside 25 cents a day for expense money during their stay in the convention city that week. Of course Brother Fred Alberti is one of the bunch who will be there.

Most all of our members are working and quite a few are proprietors of soft drink parlors. Brother Ike Weare has opened up a cigar store across the street from our headquarters and is doing a wonderful business. On entering his place you will always find from one to a dozen of the members of Local 152, which shows that the boys are ready and willing to boost a brother to help him succeed in a business undertaking. Brother Hoffman spent last week in Beaudette, Minn., putting on an indoor carnival for the benefit of the Moose Lodge of that city.

At our meeting a few weeks ago we initiated one new member, Brother Buck Kernin, who works at the Eagles' Club. It was our first new member for some time.

Brother Frank Bissonnette, better known as "Jasbo," who has been a patient at the Glen Lake Sanitarium for Tuberculosis, for the last four months, was granted a two days' leave of absence on November 24 so he could spend Thanksgiving in the city; he paid the club a visit and we are pleased to say that "Jasbo" has won out in his race with the "old con."

Brother Ernie O'Brien is back on the job again at his place of business, 247 Marquette Avenue, after spending the summer at Billie Fawcett's summer and winter resort in the northern part of Minnesota. Ernie was much improved by the trip and can tell some wonderful stories about the big fish he caught while up there.

Brothers Sig Larson and Ole Anderson have purchased the former saloon at 319 Wash Avenue, north, where they are conducting a soft drink bar and restaurant, and are doing fine.

Brother Butch Engle, business agent of Local 152, in the early days, is now proprietor of two soft drink bars and, from all reports, is doing a flourishing business. Brother Engle is also financially interested in a large cigar factory in Minneapolis.

With best wishes from all members of Local 152, allow me to remain.

Faternally yours,

BOB FARRIS,
Vice-President, Local 152.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-18-8-15

VICTORIA, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am enclosing resolution passed at a special meeting of Local 459, held on December 13 regarding strikebreakers who took the places of members of this local, who are out to enforce wage demands.

RESOLUTION.

"That a fine of $50 and expulsion from membership in the International Union be imposed on William Brown, former member of this local, for taking the places of members out on strike.

"That a fine of $50 and expulsion be imposed on Charles Brock, waiter, for refusing to come out when called on to enforce wage demands in Kelways Cafe.

"That a fine of $25 and expulsion be imposed on Mary Torrens, waitress, for refusing to come out when called on to enforce wage demands in Kelways Cafe."

The renewal of our contract came up on December 1, and with the assistance of Organizer MacKenzie we were successful in signing up all the former houses with the exception of three who have definitely declared for the open shop. We maintain our previous wage scale and, although business in our line is very quiet, we are holding our own, and with the valuable assistance from the International representative, we will maintain our fighting spirit.

Yours fraternally,

ALEXANDER GORDON,
Secretary, Local 459.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Two months ago when Local 468 decided to give their annual culinary art exhibit and dance, the worthy members of the knockerbund brought out their trusty hammers and began to pound the faithful old anvil as a matter of routine. The sensible members of the local, however took no notice of the obstructionists, but went serenely on with the business of empowering the necessary committees to pull off the usual rough stuff associated with the annual festivities. Immediately after the meeting had adjourned a self-appointed committee consisting of Brothers Jack Joykiller, Emil Knockermann, Kantbe Dunne, Bill Anvilpounder, Al Deepgrief, Oscar Ivorytop, Fred Chairwarmer, and a few hall rats went into executive session and proceeded to convulse the balmy air of the sunny southland with their heart-rending howls of protest.

"It's impossible! You can't do it!" protested Brother Kantbe Dunne, who always claims that everything is impossible.

"We admit it's impossible, but we're going to do it anyway," the smiling committee assured him.

"It will bust up the union," protested Brother Deepgrief.

"The union is unbustable," the committee asserted, with more truth than elegance.

"Instead of giving a dance, why don't the union start something?" inquired Brother Joykiller.

"We have started something," the committee replied, "and we mean to finish it. What do you know about that?"

Dire prophecies of calamity, financial ruin and hard luck were blithely scattered broadcast by the Amalgamated Association of Pessimistic Pests, but the culinary art exhibit and dance, given by Local 468, thanks to the heroic efforts of our officers and a little group of enthusiastic members, assisted by some of our good friends on the outside, went over much bigger than we had any right to expect. We had the finest culinary exhibit ever given west of New York. For art judges we had the mayor of Los Angeles, a city councilman, a movie queen, an honest-to-goodness countess, two internationally famous newspaper women and three of the best known and most respected hotel and restaurant proprietors on the Pacific Coast. The exhibits were exquisitely artistic, the food displays superb, the refreshments free, plentiful and very gratifying; the orchestra was the best in the state and everybody had a wonderful time. The publicity alone, if paid for at space rates, amounted to more than three thousand dollars. For the first time since the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times, more than ten years ago, have the newspapers of this city consented to publish notices of affairs given by units of organized labor. Our local got in touch with several good houses and clubs we have been hitherto unable to reach; we have placed several men locally as a result of the dance and have sent men as far as Texas. We made such a hit with the hotel and restaurant keepers that they have agreed to co-operate with us to put on a seven-day food fair next year—under the auspices of the local. In addition to that we have cleared up several hundred dollars in cold cash.

Now the knockers are saying that it was all wrong, Garabaldi, all wrong. We should have had a bigger hall, as the place was crowded. We shouldn't have spent so much money for rent, printing, advertising and orchestra. We should have given bootleg whiskey and kewpie dolls for prizes instead of silver cups. Charges should be preferred against the gang who put it over, etc.

What the hell, may I ask, if you will pardon my candor, would be the condition of the culinary workers if we had no union to cushion the shock of the present financial depression? We would have no place to hang out while out of work; no day a week off; no regular hours—though we would have plenty of hours, I'll tell the cock-eyed world—and our wages would be determined solely by the degree of hunger of the unemployed. Anyone who knocks his union or unjustly criticizes it should be turned over to the lunacy commission. Any member who has something to propose which he thinks would benefit organized labor is more than welcome to bring it before the body, but the poor, misguided miscreant who simply hollers and holds back like a dog under a wagon, deserves nothing better than to have the gang cremate him and hide the ashes.

Our international secretary's letter, in which he talks turkey and gives cold, statistical facts as to the per capita paid by other unions, was posted on the blackboard for the benefit of the members.

Viewed from a purely literary point, the letter does not conform in all respects to the aesthetic standards of propriety of those high-browed persons who talk a great deal without saying anything, yet said letter contains more propaganda to the square inch than any document we have received for a long time. The letter vindicates the theory I have held for years, viz.: "That the H. & R. E. I. A. does more for its membership and for less money than any other international affiliated with the A. F. of L."

When one of the members begins to squawk, I lead him over to the blackboard and show him a few things for the good of his soul. After calling his wandering attention to the per capita rate other unions are paying I gently inquire what he, the knocker, is doing for organized labor. "Are you serving on any of the committees? Are you calling on any unions and speaking for our house cards and buttons? Are you helming the boys pass out circulars in localities where we have a drive on against unfair eating houses? Are you insisting on the label on goods you purchase? Are you trying to get in any new members? Are you boosting organized labor? What excuse have you for living?"

The unemployed panic has hit the Pacific Coast hard. The jails, the industrial farms, alias chain gangs, the missions and charitable institutions are cruelly overcrowded with the poor, jobless unfortunates, the streets are full of penniless panhandlers, rents are exorbitant and many are carrying the banner, being unable to bum flop money. We have more unemployed than we can take care of and many of the boys are shipping out of town while others are riding out in the guts of a rattler.

Many hotels and restaurants are still paying the scale, though running at a loss, and some of the tourist hotels have more employees on the payroll than the house count amounts to. These employers are doing this solely because they have been treated fairly by the members of our local and they are as much interested as we are in keeping the crew together in the hope of better times. This cordial co-operation has been made possible largely through the educational campaign of publicity in-augured two years ago by our officers and local boosting committee.

Because of the peculiar nature of the catering industry, its decentralized condition, its intimate relation to all the public, and because the success of a catering establishment is due in a large measure to that intangible thing known as "service," the proprietors must necessarily have the cordial co-operation of their employes if the business is to be successful. It has been said quite truthfully, "Money will buy a dog, but only love will make him wag his tail."

This present depression will not last forever. And with the return of prosperity, every local affiliated with our international should rigidly repress internecine squabbles and make a concerted, intelligently directed attempt to organize the entire culinary workers of the United States, Canada and Mexico, and by continued efforts put our industry in the van of the organized labor movement.

Steel plants may shut down for a year or two, mines close up, and all other industries may be seasonal, but people must eat and the catering industry has no excuse, except our own cussedness, for not being much better off than we are. We can organize this continent from the arctic circle to the Panama Canal practically 100 per cent and by doing so better our own condition more than 100 per cent. It can be done, and if enough of us are sufficiently determined and game enough to stand the gaff it will be done. If we are quitters we shall lose out, but if we are game we can put it over and will put it over. The success or failure of our international and our pay envelope is squarely up to us.

ANDREW SAUNDERS,
Press Secretary, Local 468.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been a long time since you have heard from Local 329, so I am taking this opportunity to drop you a few lines to let you know that we are still in this world of unrest, but alive and progressing in a way that surprises the local labor movement.

We are holding our own in spite of the fact that about seven thousand independent shoe workers are loafing and a good many of them looking for our jobs, but thanks to our live-wire business agent, Bro. Andrew Noble, we are keeping them out. We are taking no more applications while we have members unemployed.

I also wish to say that we are about to lose our "perpetual" secretary-treasurer, Bro. Albert Edward Perry, who has been on the job since we were organized. Although we are not paid many visits by our International officers they are always as welcome as ever.

We have just had our election of officers and the following were elected for the coming year: President, E. A. Burns (re-elected; is a good man for the job); vice-president, Cora Koehler; treasurer, Edward Pleau; financial secretary and business agent, Andrew Noble; recording secretary, Helen Craig; chaplain, Helen Glidden; inspector, Earle M. Terrill and inside guard, Charles Welch.

Wishing all a Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

Fraternally yours,
EARLE M. TERRILL,
Press Agent, Local 329.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On December 2 at our headquarters, 20 East Eagle Street, nomination of officers was held, and on December 16 the election was held. The officers elected for 1922 are: Wm. H. Brandt, president; Frank Brown, first vice-president; J. Geo. Hoeffle, second vice-president; Chas. Klein, financial, recording and corresponding secretary; Geo. Christman, treasurer; Albert Roy, chairman, Walter Spence and Chas. Brott, trustees; J. Geo. Hoeffle, acting inspector; Vincent Jankowski, guard; Frank Brown, press secretary. The installation of officers will be held on Friday evening, January 6, 1922, with a banquet and get-together party. Wm. H. Brandt, president, is acting business agent with Albert Roy as his assistant and they are doing some good work. We are holding some good meetings and all the boys are taking great interest in the welfare of their local. The Club is going along fine.

Where some of our loyal brothers can be found: Gayety Inn, Bros. Geo. Walper and Chas. Winter, Props.; The Hofbrau, Bros. Frank Popp and Chas. Cowen; K. & P. Club, Bros. Sturges Rowell and Geo. Kirch; B. P. O. Elks' Club, Bro. Leous Ward, steward; F. O. E. Club, Bro. Chas. Webber; Loyal Order of Moose Club, Bros. Chas. Penny and Sauley Bolargusti; Orioles Club, Bros. Peter Hoffman and Jos. Fuechner; Countermen's Club, 20 E. Eagle Street, Bros. Wm. H. Brandt and Walter Spence, stewards; George Veale, James J. McCauley and Oscar Geyer; Victoria Hotel, Bro. Harry Evans; Schnable Hall, Broadway, Bros. Chas. Knoblock and Albert Schwable; Majestic Hotel, Bro. E. Heller, Prop.; Bros. George Rocky and Michael Surdow; The Central, 15 West Huron Street, Bros. George Smith, Gus Anderson, Roy Edwards and Chas. B. Klein; Kerner's Cafe, 286 Sycamore Street, Bro. Ray Kerner, Prop. and also Supervisor of Ward 12; Bodega Cafe, Bro. Vincent Stockman; Schmidh's Cafe and Hotel, 389 Washington Street, Bros. George Christman and George H. Voght, 20 years in one place; Jack Fenton's Cafe, 18 Chippewa Street, Bro. Andrew Holmes; Harry Fenton's Cafe, 42 West Chippewa Street, Bros. Howard O. Miller, G. Woolnaugh and James Clairmont; Harry Fenton's Cafe, 85 West Chippewa Street, Bros. Pat Mitchell and M. J. Clark; Frolon Cafe, Bro. Wm. (Dude) Lally; Reinhard's Cafe, Oak and Genessee Streets, Bros. Edw. Galvin and E. Kline; Bro. Leo Baumgardner's Cafe, 1435 Main Street, give him a call, brothers; Fontanac Hotel and Cafe, Bro. Tom J. Joyce; Meyer's Hotel, Huron and Elliott Streets, Bro. Joe Clark; Blackley Hotel, Oak and Broadway, Bro. Jack Dalton; Wm. Bauer's Cafe, Broadway and Michigan Avenue, Bro. Elmer Frey; Snellbach's Hall, Ach and Broadway, Bro. Fred Meyer; Hotel Waltona, 75 Main Street, Bro. Hugh S. Owens; Napoleon Hotel, Main Street, Bro. Frank McGreevey; Barney McCabe's Cafe, Elliott and Mossback Streets, Bro. Wm. O. Barlow; Joe Walter's Cafe, Goodnell and Washington Streets, Bro. Adam Nickels; Gallwizer's Cafe, Bro. A. H. Dun; Rose Cafe, Grant and Ferry Streets, Bro. Albert Mains.

Thanking you for all past favors and wishing the MIXER AND SERVER success in the new year. With Christmas greetings and a bright and prosperous New Year, I remain

FRANK BROWN,
Vice-president and Press Sec., Local 175.

DALLAS, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following are the recent returns of our election, held December 21, 1921: President, R. V. Howard; first vice-president, Marmaduke Nelson; second vice-president, W. E. Grissett; business agent, Mike O'Brien; financial secretary-treasurer, Chas. A. Simpson; recording secretary treasurer, Ethel Stone; chaplain, H. B. Ward; inspector, Jack McCuistain; guard, Tom Pistole; trustees, May Farrow, R. V. Howard, James Newsome; executive board, Howard Nelson Simpson, Ed Dale, Chas. Buer; director Labor Temple Association, Chas. A. Simpson. The address of all officers is Box 1365, Dallas, Texas.

Fraternally yours,
CHAS. A. SIMPSON,
Secretary, Local 659.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Our local was honored with the presence of a traveler from Providence, R. I., during the past month, quite a nice appearing kind of chap, and paradoxically speaking quite a disappearing kind of chap also, tall in stature, athletic build and ruddy countenance, a fellow that might easily attract the attention of the ladies. We may be wrong in the latter but we do know that his suave manner, or, in this case let us call it approach, was sufficient to induce Harry Weinstock to part with eighteen dollars worth of good coin of the realm for which he received in return a strip of neat blue paper, size about 8x3 inches, bearing the name of the Phoenix National Bank of Providence R. I., drawn to his order for eighteen dollars and signed H. L. Cunard. Said person did not stay with us after this little exchange, but Harry has the check amongst his souvenirs, it having been returned marked "Insufficient funds," with a reminder that a protest fee of $2.10 was due together with a re-deposit of eighteen dollars. Perhaps this may have been an oversight, perhaps not, but if it was we shall be pleased to acquaint our readers with the fact in the next issue. In the meantime secretaries who do not happen to be of a charitable disposition will please note that Bro. H. L. Cunard may still have some blank checks that can travel the same route. Visitors will kindly have the easily recognized "long green" when they drop in.

I had the pleasure of listening to an address given by Miss Kate Manicum, one of the organizers in the unskilled ranks in Great Britain. She was a delegate present at the Disarmament Conference at Washington, D. C. My stenographic abilities are of a kindergarten nature or the MIXER AND SERVER would surely receive a verbatim report. I have heard with pleasure many gifted orators, but never an "oratoress" who possessed what I might term such a magnetic influence as she. Her remarks from Alpha to Omega were most impressive and her pleasant delivery won the heart of every one of a large and enthusiastic audience interested in the labor movement. She was so good that I believe she would be capable even of arousing the girls in our craft who still sleep in Philadelphia, and there are so many the census taker would have a long job.

It may be interesting to tell you that the Central Labor Union of this city is sponsor for a co-operative bank which is to function on Monday, January 16, 1922. It is to be known as the Consumers' and Producers' Bank and be located at 927-929 Chestnut Street, right in the very heart of the city. It has been a long time coming but it is an assurance now. This is a handy thing to have around and a very useful weapon when some people we know are looking for a fight.

Election of officers took place here on Wednesday, December 21, the following brothers and sisters being elected: President, Bernard McNichol; vice-president, Josephine Smith; treasurer, James F. Thompson; financial secretary-business agent, Geo. F. Anderson; trustees, Herbert Franks, Harry Krause and Carroll McCullough; recording and press secretary, Theodore Banas; delegates to Central Labor Union, Bernard McNichol, Harry Krause, Nathan Sloane and Geo. F. Anderson; delegates to the United Hebrew Trades, Isador Sachs, John Felix and Herman Weinstein; delegates to German Trades, Frank Benner and Adolph Nettler; delegate to Label Trades, Frances Allen.

Trusting this will receive publication and with best wishes, I beg to remain

Fraternally yours,
GEO. F. ANDERSON,
Press Secretary, Local 279.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The members of Local 815 of the Culinary Alliance are going along at a good rate of speed, as they are learning the great need of co-operation, and becoming more enthusiastic as shown by the increase in attendance at the regular meetings. At the last entertainment, which took place Wednesday evening, December 14, for the purpose of becoming better acquainted and educated to the best interest of organized labor, the social proved to be a great success in every way and was attended by many leaders of labor of other crafts and trades, who expressed themselves as being well paid by attending these meetings. The nine hours for a day's work has met with a great snag as they are looking for men of that type. Few are found and they are of the shining twenty-five cent class who have a level head filled with water. They are great favorites of the bosses and would be satisfied to become a commodity sold on the market as slaves to the highest bidder. Their highest aim is to have a job and job conditions have no bearing on this class.

The election of officers of Local 815 will take place Wednesday, December 28. There will be but little changes, the same officers being nominated without any change except in a few minor offices.

The musicians and picture operators have won their fight over the Swansen circuit as far as Salt Lake goes and the American and Gem theaters are on the fair list, all differences having been settled, which we consider a great victory for organized labor, thus showing what can be done by co-operation (Every-body-help).

Salt Lake has discovered what a closed shop is, the so-called American plan runs the closed shop, as they put no men to work who will not promise to denounce unions or organized labor, have no voice in making his conditions and wages but be obedient to his master as a slave.

We often hear those curb stone orators speak of equal rights but seldom hear of equal action as they stay from meetings. They claim the right to have the wages and conditions but when it comes to being active in bringing about these conditions they depend on their officers doing the work, thus giving them no assistance except their monthly dues, which seems to be quite a fortune to some of them who go 59 ways to get the best of it. They consider it money thrown away and about the softest name I can call them would be card men.

Work is a little scarce in Salt Lake at present but we are doing all we can to keep the wolf from the door by giving an extra shift to those who are in need thus making both ends meet.

The unions of Salt Lake are coming back as can be noticed by the pickups in the way of those who have been unable to keep themselves in the ranks of organized labor. They are getting into line and making a good showing and will shortly be a full-fledged union town. The City Federation is doing its best licks to bring all crafts and trades who have fallen out, back into the fold and are meeting with good success.

When you visit Salt Lake remember that the Wilson (Shafers) and the two Sperey & Mahse places are very much on the unfair list of the Culinary Alliance Local 815 and the Salt Lake Federation of Labor, so if you want to eat or go to work, don't go there if you are a union man or woman or a friend of organized labor.

Join the ranks of organization early and avoid the rush.

With best wishes to the MIXER AND SERVER and yourself, I remain

Fraternally yours,

JOHN MULLINS,

President and Press Secretary, Local 815.

80-8-18--7--82-8-83-18-8-15

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A word from Local 196. We admit laziness, negligence, etc., for our long silence, but since we have been re-elected financial secretary, business agent and press secretary we deem it wise to show some activity for fear the "Circle of 28" will be convinced they were right in their contentions.

The present officers and "quite" a few members are trying sincerely to uphold 196 in face of the adverse conditions prevailing, not only in Buffalo, but in every city of the Union. We are sure that the new officers elected, will co-operate next year and see to it that 196 keeps on as in the past, despite the handicaps confronting us locally at the present time.

Following is a complete list of the officers elected and re-elected for 1922: President, Frederick Fulcher; first vice-president, Sam Hancock; second vice-president, John L. Keys; recording secretary, George Deng; treasurer, William A. Laurie; business agent and financial secretary, Edmond A. Lalanne; inspector, Frank Dahman; inside guard, George Eshelby; trustees, James Murphy, Jack Crouse and Herman Rudisile; press secretary, Edmond Lalanne; delegates to local joint executive board, Jack Crouse, James Murphy and George Long; delegates to Central Labor Council, Jack Crouse, James Murphy and George Long.

In a previous communication we have mentioned the fact that we were fortunate in having our General President, Brother Flore, here with us, his home town. Fortunately we can call on him and confer with him on a moment's notice, that we have the pleasure of seeing him frequently, and fortunate to know that he will accept our invitation to install our officers in January.

The last time we saw Brother Flore he looked the picture of health, and as usual, his optimistic vein was most apparent.

It is most remarkable to see members coming in to Buffalo from other cities where they found it impossible to secure work and expect to get work here right away, regardless of the fact that we have a long list of out-of-work resident members.

It is hard to conceive how men supposed to have brains expect a business agent to find work, when they cannot find it themselves, and Mr. Editor, we are sorry to say, we have some here who will tell you "why pay dues if you can't find work for me." And this from men who are barred from every place in town. We told some of them that they were correct, that they joined the union for two reasons: first, they joined for what they could get out of it; and second, because they had to.

Before prohibition these would-be loyal men were tolerated, because the hotel and restaurant employers had to hire men, and now that these employers can hire girls and choose the first class men they need, these would-be waiters cannot see why Mr. Business Agent cannot force these employers to take them on. Moral: These birds who don't know that the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution is in force should go to some lumber camp or with Landru.

To add to our sorrow we find on our sick list some good old timers, Bro. Thomas Tarrant, past president and treasurer of Local 196 and for years treasurer of the Local Joint Executive Board, laid up with serious trouble of the stomach; Bro. Fred Cook (Davis), one of our trustees, hardly able to eat, owing to a tumor on his tongue; Bro. Quill still laid up with neuritis; Bro. Sam Hopkins, with a broken hand; Bro. Gustave Monad with an abscess on his back, and Bro. Kipper with an affection of the eyes, he being almost blind.

The foregoing is a rather lugubrious item, but nevertheless a good reminder to the brothers who never think of sickness, to keep their dues paid up, live up to their by-laws and be eligible to sick benefits when they need it most.

Our old jovial friend, Bro. Jas. Fenton, is back with us, as optimistic and broad minded as ever. Brothers Edward Richard, Louis du Casse, Theo. F. Witt have deposited their withdrawal cards after being absent in some other ventures for some time past. Bro. Ed Lynch is also back, after roaming around the globe. He will stay now for a while, as he prefers terra-firma to the rolling ship.

We told you some time ago about Bro. Fred. Seames being established at the old Weyands with Bro. Joe Zeiler. We also told you that they were the undisputed leading caterers of Buffalo, well, we told you right. Weyands' place got too small for their vast business, so they have moved to the corner of Washington and Burton Streets, where they built a place of their own, fitted with a restaurant and two spacious banquet halls, to accommodate their vast trade. Besides they require frequently the use of the Broadway Auditorium and the Elmwood Music Hall. Needless to add that they have our best wishes.

Bro. W. Crocoll is still headwaiter for the above mentioned firm, with Bros. Herman and Shoeninger manipulating the napkin in the restaurant and Bro. Chas. Byers still has charge of the banquets, assisted by Bro. H. Rudisile. Again it does our heart good to say, Seames and Zeitler, the leading caterers of Buffalo.

We would dearly love to tell you more about some of the doings, but what we have in mind would not pass censorship, so in hopes that you will find space in the MIXER AND SERVER for this miserable effort, we close wishing you and the membership of the International Union, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Faternally yours,

ED. A. LALANNE,

Business Agent and Financial Sec., Local 196.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I was a visitor at the Los Angeles Labor Council where I heard and learned much. The most forceful speaker was an international organizer, Brother A. W. Muir; he made a strong plea to the assembly for the culinary workers. I feel that more of our younger members should attend these meetings. The lack of union house cards in this city causes one to think that the labor movement is not active here, but in the two weeks I have been around Locals 468 and 639, convinced me that such is not the case. I have met boys and girls here from almost every city in which I have traveled. When one considers the territory of Los Angeles—350 square miles—you may well imagine what a secretary and business agent have on their hands.

Local 468 has some "disrupters" or "fish-brained" individuals. This can be seen plainly by their handwritings on the wall.

I think it would be a good idea to keep an eye on some of our brothers who take out withdrawal cards. In my strolls around the city have met some familiar faces, and am under the impression that some of them are running "hog wild."

Local 468 has about seventy members out of work at present. While I'm loafing myself I am not blaming the officers of the local, and as long as members don't co-operate with their locals the officers can do nothing for them. Activity and hard work will bring results in any line of business. Just as long as members of organized labor patronize non-union products, just so long will union labor have to be content with what it receives. Brother Muir stated that we have four knockers to every booster.

Merchants and manufacturers in this locality are just as brazen as anywhere else and everything that union labor wins must be fought for; and from what I have seen in some of the meetings of Local 468, this local has some fighters. I don't mean the kind who have a bottle of hooch and a gun, but real men who are not afraid to express themselves and work for the cause of organized labor.

While I have been loafing here and in Long Beach and Seattle since returning from my trip, I have not lost any time. At Seattle I was busy every day and never missed an opportunity to attend a labor meeting; also at Long Beach. I also find time and a little spare change to pay visits to those brothers who are laid up in hospitals; my sympathy goes out to them as some years ago I was laid up for seven months from an accident received in a railroad wreck near Indianapolis, Ind. While not personally acquainted with those whom I called on, am sure my visit was appreciated. These little deeds do not set us back much in time or money but they make for life-long friends.

Local 468 has many bright and hustling members. Brothers Devereaux and Richter being especially active. I am not press agenting them.

I have recently received a letter from "Our Bob" in Seattle, to whom I turned over my "no" account in the defunct Federal Reserve Bank in Seattle. It looks as though I'll have a very slim Christmas. Well anyway, here I am where I can see the snow in the mountains on one side and take a little car ride and fish. So why let a little thing like that worry me. The sun shines on both sides of the street and the roses are still in bloom.

The landlords here don't seem to know the war is over and any "tourist" coming this way should bear in mind that the nights are too cold to sleep in the jungles, and, that while roses are plentiful they are poor eating.

Faternally yours,

JOHN HAUSS, the Tourist.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, here I am, back in the land of sunshine after a trip over the country, and I want to say that the Big Little City of Fresno has them all beat off the map when you land in this man's town a little dust or rather oil smoke can't knock the welcome sign off the door. We have just held an election and after the smoke and fun had been cleared away, our old friend Jack Racovich was elected Business Agent. Of course, our Secretary, Bro. Keary, ran without opposition, as it would be impossible to beat him. May he always be with us.

Now, Jere, perhaps you don't remember me. I met you in Stockton several years ago. Listen kindly. I have heard and seen the big hurrahs of the great things some locals do, but get this: We had an Xmas dinner here for the boys' wives and sweethearts, and then threw the doors wide open and a few of the Brothers took their autos—apologies to Mr. Ford—and went to the jungles and in all we fed 240 of the less fortunate members of humanity, and, Jere, the boys and girls, God bless them, paid for it all out of their pockets. That is real brotherhood. If a little more of this kind of brother love was passed around this world be a much better world, eh, what.

Wishing you and yours a very pleasant and Happy New Year, from the members and one of the Great family of Sullivans.

Faternally yours,

M. F. SULLIVAN.

P. S.—Forgot to mention Al. G. Hartley was elected trustee of the Labor Council. Yes, indeed.—M. F. S.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WATCHES WITH TWO HOUR-HANDS.

The latest fad is the timepiece with two hour-hands. The commuters started it, that they might have railroad time and daylight saving time before them at a glance; but the girls with lovers in foreign parts are calling for watches that enable them to visualize what "he" is doing in London or elsewhere. One such call was for a watch showing the time here and in Shanghai.—Scientific American.

Shinney On Your Own Side

DO you remember when you and your gang slipped away from the old town, meandered out into the woods and began to walk among the trees and bushes, eyes glued to the overhanging branches, as well as to the shrubbery which seemed to promise you a real-on-the-level chance of getting a curling root or branch that could be whittled and polished into a Shinney?

Takes you back, doesn't it? Takes you back to "The Days of Real Sport?"

And returning on the way home after a successful hunt, with from from one to several roots and branches that held out promise of being just the thing; and, remember how you argued with Red, Bill, Buck, Tom and Jack, over the presumed merits of your Shinney? Yours had a better curl and a smoother handle, or the crook at the end just fitted the ground and would make many of your pals envious of your possession the very first time you had a game of Shinney?

Oh, Boy! "Wasn't them the glorious times, eh?" Do you recall the old cry:

"Hey, you, Shinney on your own side. What's the matter with you, huh?"

And when sides were chosen and one of your pals got rattled and began walloping the old tin can, or whatever it was that served for the purpose of the game, in the wrong direction, and you just yelled the top of your head off—"Hey, Buck, wake up. Shinney on your own side. Whazza matter with you, don't you know who you're playing with? We never will win if you go on helping them knock to the goal."

Sit back, old timer, and recall and reconstruct the picture, stub toes, freckles and all.

"The Days of Real Sport," that's what. And such exercise, too. After playing Shinney for an hour you could eat a raw dog; in fact, you managed to slip around to the house and pestered Ma for a piece of bread and butter; or, if you knew there was jam in the house you launched an offensive for some of that on your bread; but you had to have something to eat, eh?

Did it ever occur to you that you have been shinneying on the other side since you've grown to manhood? Never gave it a thought, eh?

Don't you know that the real workers at your trade are playing together in these days of hard scrabbling for a living? Fact, an undeniable fact, susceptible of verification, if you have time to investigate.

Yes indeed, the men, and women too, employed in the catering industry took a leaf from the Book of Childhood Experience; they elaborated upon the knowledge they found on that page; they formed a protective and benevolent organization and are in truth Shinneying on Their Own Side. You won't find any of the Regular Fellows and Worth While Girls working at the trade, wasting their time or energy trying to help the other side defeat them in the struggle for living wages and reasonable working hours and conditions.

Never thought of it that way, eh? Well, it's better late than never.

Supposing that you seriously consider lining up with the real folks and Shinney on Your Own Side. Thank you.

NAMED SHOES ARE FREQUENTLY MADE IN NON-UNION FACTORIES

Do Not Buy Any Shoe

no matter what its name, unless it bears a plain and readable impression of this UNION STAMP.

All shoes without the UNION STAMP are always Non-Union. Do not accept any excuse for absence of the UNION STAMP.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' UNION

246 Summer Street, BOSTON, MASS.

GOLLIS LOVELY, General President

CHARLES L. BAINE, General Secretary-Treasurer

Your Library

Is incomplete without the bound volumes of
The Mixer and Server.
A limited number may be secured at Two Dollars each.

Remit to—

Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan

at Cincinnati, Ohio

Show Your Colors

—WEAR THE—BUTTON
OF YOUR CRAFT

Order one through your Secretary.

Solid Gold Button
$1.00

All our Buttons are Union Made

JERE L. SULLIVAN

Secretary-Treasurer

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE BLDG.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

This Label

Is always used by us in filling your orders for Local By-Laws, Tickets, Invitations, Programs and everything in the line of Printing. We do neat, clean, accurate work. If you like to see the label on your printing, and your local printer does not supply it, send us your orders.

Roessler Bros.

PRINTERS

528 WALNUT ST., CINCINNATI, O.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

this is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance
and
Bartenders International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 2.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, FEBRUARY 15, 1922

Press of
Roessler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio

Assurance or Impudence

DID you ever hear of the official target? Have you ever taken a moment's time to consider how much or how little criticism is hurled in the direction of the man at the General Office? Never gave it a thought, eh? Well, you would be surprised if you had the privilege of perusing some of the compositions passed over to us via the United States mail.

We have occasional correspondents who assume that they possess loads of ASSURANCE, who talk fast and plenty, but very often it does not mean anything. One of that kind "took pen in hand" recently and imparted the information that he and a number of his friends had been looking over the records and had discovered that our total possessions were less by something like $10,000 during the past twelve months; and then, with the ASSURANCE of an expert, advised us that the indications pointed very much toward failure.

We can not help wondering what that fellow would have concluded had he been connected with our International Union in the years 1899, 1900, and several years subsequent thereto, when we hardly had enough mazuma to "flag a bread wagon." He probably would have spelt the word "FAILURE" in gigantic letters, much larger than we can afford to employ in this page.

Where do these embryo leaders get their ideas from, any way? Surely, not out of any labor publication, and positively not out of The Mixer and Server, for the official publication does not measure success by the number of dollars there may be in our funds.

The idea of assessing the value of an organization by the amount of coin it may be able to pile up in banks for a year or several years! Some twist to that view point—one that we fail to travel with or have any desire to accompany. At that, if it came to a show down, we have any similar organization on the map matched if not beat. Take a look over the field, dig in any old place where you can obtain real information, and its clinkers to crullers that our worldly possessions are the equal, if not in excess, of the possessions of the others. The qualifying word in that last sentence meaning other labor organizations!

Think you that is just conversation and employed to fill space? Make it your business to "know," and then let us hear from you.

When we began to employ the old "WATCH US GROW" slogan, we had little and did not care who knew it. We were concerned in one thing, and that was—reaching the men and women of the catering industry and inviting them to "join our local unions."

We did not invite them to become affiliated by promising that, "one of these days we will have a bank roll big enough to choke a dog." We said nary a word about money except the initiation fee to become members—and we made that so small that no real worker could employ the amount as an excuse for failing to subscribe to an application form.

We would have had a FAT chance to build up a great organization had we been forced to wait until we collected a hundred thousand dollars, or, for that matter, one-tenth part of that amount. Literally, "money cut no figure" with the pioneers of Our International Union; they had ASSURANCE a-plenty, and they went at the job of building their organization without making unnecessary noise or too much fussing. They knew what they wanted; they labored to acquire membership, knowing that in due time there would be a financial foundation in proportion to the desires of the men and women supporting the organization. It may be the mission of SOME organizations to pile up dollar upon dollar, but that picture does not fit Our International.

We have spent several hundred thousand dollars and probably will duplicate that effort in the years to come. The laws made by our membership provide for the use of money, indicate what the income may be spent for, but nowhere can there be found intimations in our laws that measure advancement by the total funds in hand. There is a time when ASSURANCE means IMPUDENCE; the transformation occurs when members assess the value of our movement by the total funds at its disposal, instead of being appraised by the worth-while things the organization has accomplished.

VOL. XXXI

CINCINNATI, FEBRUARY 15, 1922

No. 2

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 18, 1918.

Printed by
Roessler Brothers,
Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
Building,
Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor
Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE.....President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH.....First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN.....Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY.....Third Vice-President
509 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY.....Fourth Vice-President
183 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL.....Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO.....Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY.....Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG.....Eighth Vice-President
500 S. State Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN.....General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Last year people were looking forward, expecting, in fact, to see at least four or five good-sized strikes. That they did not materialize was, to some, a disappointment. This year evidence was not lacking to show that fairly tranquil conditions prevailed as we began to write the year 1922. Quite recently there has been increased comment among the writers and molders of public opinion, little items showing that there is a steady drift to prepare the public to expect something—just what, the opinion-builders have not come into the open and stated. Students of passing events must be aware that there is more than a grain of truth in the referred-to intimations. As matters stand at this moment—just as we close the forms for the month—there is more than enough evidence in sight to indicate one, if not two struggles between employers and employees. The coal operators appear to carry the impression that the United Mine Workers' Union has about drained its treasury in the fight conducted in the West Virginia field. They also are encouraged with the situation in the State of Kansas, the latter situation having been magnified several fold to make impressive reading.

The soft coal operators, encouraged by the decision of Judge Anderson, have about made up their minds to go to the mat with the United Mine Workers, that seems to be a foregone conclusion. From a member of the Cabinet—the man who, above all others, is best qualified to say the final word on the situation, because he has been in touch and knows what is what—said: "A strike in the soft coal mining industry is inevitable at the expiration of union contracts March 31, 1922."

Time was, and not so very long ago, when the higher-ups at Washington would have moved every obstacle to prevent a coal strike of general proportions, but aside from a shrug of the shoulders, there is no move being made, or at least apparent, to prevent a closing down of the soft coal industry. If the soft coal miners go out, the hard coal miners will probably find conditions irksome, made so because of strike conditions, and then what? There is ample indication that the coal operators would like to play the string out. They have been getting big prices for their product, and no doubt have accumulated a fighting fund. They appreciate that the perpetual demand for a decrease in the price of their product is getting stronger, more insistent. Being unable to make the Mine Workers' Union bear the brunt for the high prices, they will try to punish that organization by engaging it in a fight in the hope that its resources will fail and force it to its knees. When the miners were ready for a show-down some months ago, the show-down was denied them; the courts and Government stepped in and a species of normalcy prevailed. Now that the mine owners are ready to go the full route, there is no obstacle placed in their path. In fact, obstacles are being removed in order to make the fight a swift and sweet one. If a strike comes, and it looks like it from this distance, the effect will be two-fold. Price of soft coal will increase, thus aiding the owners of the coal to make additional profits and probably add to their fighting fund more ammunition to annoy and harass the Miners' Union. The other and quite important situation that will be affected is the unemployment situation. With a miners' strike in operation, coal becomes scarce and costly; manufacturing which depends largely on cheap or moderate-priced fuel will be unable to continue, and cessation of manufacturing means closed work shops, idleness.

In the offing is another battle between the House of Dollars and organized labor. The transportation situation, instead of clarifying, is, if anything, becoming more and more acute. The wage question is in the spotlight, and endeavor is being made by the combined railroads of the land to bring about a change in the Transportation Act of 1920. Add to that a determination to amend or get rid of the Adamson Law, and you have the stage set for a railroad strike quite as big and of wider effect than a miners' strike. All of this is part of the original campaign to "Get Rid of the Unions." The unorganized workers in the transportation industry have been forced to accept reductions of wages and increase of working time. The "farming out" of railroad repair work is intended to weaken the grasp of the unions engaged in that character of labor: it is lessening the number of wage-earners on the pay rolls of the various railways, an advantage to the railway managers should a strike be called.

The outlook is far from encouraging, for it stands to reason that if these two strikes are called they will, as the House of Dollars asserts, be fought to a finish. Should the representatives of Wall Street succeed in measurably crippling either of the organizations mentioned, the next step will make history so far as the organized labor movement of America is concerned. Catering industry employees will feel the effect of one or both of these expected strikes quicker than any other known class of workers. Admitting that the conclusion referred to in the foregoing is justified, it behooves our officers and members to imitate the residents along the banks of the Father of Waters: prepare in advance for the high water. In our case prepare for the avalanche of opposition; strengthen our unions numerically and financially to meet the attack of the anti-unionists, no matter how they come or under what banner they may be fighting. Organized labor is not asleep. That fact will be made evident before the Wall Street Strategy Board has gone far. The men and women of labor have learned much in the last six or seven years. Among the things they have absorbed is that divided leadership and affiliation leads to defeat. That is the chief reason why the forces of labor have refused to heed the false prophets sent among them by the interests who seek to weaken our unions before they make their attack. A stiff upper lip and faith in our movement has won previous battles. With similar attitude and increased defense funds we need not worry about the final results. Money is a powerful instrument; so is public opinion. The latter is ours with proper adherence to the policies that have made our movement the effective vehicle for the benefit of the toilers. Do not make the mistake of waiting until the expected happens; close ranks, prepare to give a good account of yourself in the critical times ahead. Keep this thought in mind: that there is safety in numbers. The greater our organization, the less chance the opponents of organized labor have of registering a victory.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Many years ago the writer of these monthly heart-to-heart conversations printed an article in which he said that "there is as much difference between a frowsie and sure-enough tourist as there is between chalk and cheese." In instance after instance have we tried to pay tribute to the tourist catering industry employee, and we hope a kind Providence will permit us to make further acknowledgments to the manliness and hustling ability of the sure-enough tourists. What we said so many years ago we willingly reiterate now: that there is a lot, in fact, a great deal of difference between those who imagine that they are tourists and the real on-the-level wanderlust victims. You men and women who have been elected to office in your local unions and are required to spend some of your time at the headquarters, will vouch for the fact that the real on-the-level tourist is seldom broke, and at no time a panhandler. If they do "borrow," it's a sure thing that they will return the bit of change and leave no doubt in your mind as to how they appreciated your kindness. With the other travelers, the kind that try to pose as tourists, but who are in fact nothing more or less than frowsies, there is neither rule nor reason in their methods, and as far as manliness is concerned, they were absent when that priceless thing was being dealt out. The genuine tourist, is, as a rule, a high-class workman: prides himself on his ability, and is never better pleased than when he turns out a job which merits and secures commendation. The on-the-level wanderlust boys—and that wanderlust is what makes tourists—regard suspension for non-payment of dues as being close to being charged with disloyalty to flag and country. But the frowsie is an obligation side-stepper, and few are so poor as to care to be found associating with him. The frowsie makes his presence known by the habit of cadging on his fellows. No one ever sees him with the "makings" nor the price of "coffee and." If, perchance, he does land a job and grabs off a week's wages, he stocks up with his favorite "makin's" and secretly uses his supply when he is confident no one is close enough to ask him for any of his possessions. Stinginess is a dominant trait, yet when he panhandles the workers at the industry they take long chances if they refuse, for the frowsie has both nasty tongue and disposition, and takes seeming delight in gossiping about the alleged tightness of the members of this, that or some other local union upon whom he impressed his unwelcome presence.

One thing a frowsie abhors and manages to side-step with the vigilance which some men employ in avoiding communicable disease, is that of soap and water. In all my many years' experience, meeting all kinds and manner of men and women, note has been taken of the fact that the frowsie leaves behind but one rather unpleasant conviction, a conviction that prompts one to recall whether the frowsie's clothes came in contact with yours, and if perchance any of his favorite cooties changed residences. That there is no sane reason for such fellows to be connected with the catering industry is a conclusion carried for many years, not alone by the writer, but by hundreds of men in the industry who do not throw a connotation fit at the sight of a cake of soap, hot water and an honest-to-goodness bathtub.

Showing either favors or consideration to these frowsies is simply encouraging them to clutter up the scenery and hold themselves in readiness to disgust employers who are unfortunate enough to be forced to employ them when pressed for help.

Years ago, when the writer took his obligation as a member of a trade union, the thing that impressed him most was a passage in the obligation which read: "The only regalia worn by members of this Order is neat and tidy dress; the only acceptable conduct being that of manliness as exemplified in American citizenship."

We have boasted of the skill, character and citizenship of our members. We have held our shoulders back and our heads high, looking every man in the face with a knowledge that we were the equals of the best in this broad land of ours, and that, too, irrespective of whatever occupation they might follow for a livelihood. We must make up our minds to make short work of the incompetents; their admission to our unions means nothing so much as a willingness on our part to invite unmerited criticism. We have foolishly allowed our generous impulse to run away with us. We show tolerance of a kind that bodes ill for our future. We are due to get rid of these millstones around our economic necks before they drag us down to their level.

One of these traveling cootie garages started mussing things up in the headquarters of a local union a few weeks ago. He carried a card from a local that had been organized exactly two months and then blew up. He demanded that the business agent secure him a job. It so happened that the business agent had more than the usual number of calls, and frowsie was given a chance to brush up and wash up. Frowsie was furnished a house jacket and apron and all seemed well until the house filled up and frowsie showed his speed by getting so badly stalled that the combined efforts of the man in charge and a couple of waiters were needed before normalcy was back in the saddle. He was paid off after lunch, returned to the headquarters, tried hard to butt into a friendly four-handed game of cards, and was repulsed by one of the boys, who told him he'd better take that case note he got for the lunch job and go get a shave, shine and hair-cut; that if he had anything left after paying the barber and bootblack, he could purchase a bar of soap, go down to the river and take a bath.

Frowsie began to talk rough stuff, and shortly after found himself at the foot of the stairs leading to the union's headquarters, where he sniffled and protested that "that was a helluf a way to treat a brother member," and declared that he would file complaint with the general office, where he had sent many and many a dollar to support the officer in charge. Frowsie's letter of complaint did arrive, and it contained the following rather broad declaration: "Having contributed many and many a dollar to help pay your salary, I demand that I get some protection or know the reason why," etc., etc. We managed to dig up the records and found that this fellow had been initiated in a little local at Aberdeen, S. D., in April, 1917, which local, by the way, never made a report. In fact, it ceased to exist after receipt of charter. But this frowsie was foxy enough to secure a traveling card, which he deposited with a mixed local at Ft. Scott, Kan., paid one month's dues, and was reported suspended in July, 1917.

No further record of that frowsie's membership could be located, with the exception of the one already referred to, having been admitted to a new local in Elko, Nev., which local paid one month's tax and has not been heard from since May, 1921.

We were asked to address our reply to the general delivery. We did so, and we sent as a part of that reply Two Lincoln Pennies and a receipt which read: "Received from JERE L. SULLIVAN as a refund the sum of two cents, same being full return of the amount of money that the signer of this receipt has remitted to the general headquarters of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America to help pay the salary of its General Secretary-Treasurer.

"Sign in ink and sign here on the dotted line and please return to the remitter."

We were inclined to believe that frowsie would not reply; but he did, by soiled postal card, upon which he had written that if we had been on the level we would have sent him not less than five dollars, for that was the amount he knew he had paid into the organization to help pay the Secretary-Treasurer's salary. Just to prove to that frowsie and any other of his ilk that he did not know what he was talking about, the statement is made that we overpaid that fellow, and we base our conclusions on the following grounds. Using the tax payments to the A. F. of L. for our organization, beginning with the fiscal year 1913, and concluding with the fiscal year of 1921, we have averaged in excess of 60,000 members, and the cost per member for the salary paid to the General Secretary-Treasurer will approximate four and one-third cents per annum. If that calculation is correct, and the writer believes it is, we sent that frowsie double the amount he had contributed toward paying the salary of the General Secretary-Treasurer.

That's that; but to get back to our knitting. Too many of our locals are careless in the matter of admitting the apparently incompetent catering industry employee. There may have been a time when we could afford to show generosity toward the unskilled workers seeking admission. But having made provisions for apprentices, we owe it to ourselves and our reputation as an organization of capable working men and working women to display a little more caution, a little more interest in those who seek admission to our ranks. We know that there are thousands of capable catering industry employees unattached to our locals. These men and women are entitled to invitation to become affiliated, and every legitimate effort should be made to secure their enlistment in our cause. That does not mean that the men and women who are working at the trade, who as yet have not developed into skilled workers, shall be denied admission. But it does mean that when they shall seek admission into our unions they will be accepted for what they are and not what they hope to be.

Service is the thing our unions endeavor to sell. It is the thing they must be able to deliver when called upon, and they must not imagine that clothing a man or woman in the habiliments of the trade transforms such person into a journeyman at the trade.

Our unions, to continue in existence, must be composed of capable workers. To attempt continuation under any other form is to invite results which satisfy the kind of people properly designated as frowsies, and none others. Encourage apprentices to acquire knowledge and skill, but don't turn them lose as half-baked journeymen, for to do so is no recommendation to either teacher or the union which permits that sort of thing.

Let's make this year a winner for the things we love to boast of: Skill, Character and Citizenship.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

APPEAL FOR RELIEF.

For Destitute Women and Children in West Virginia.

"WASHINGTON, D. C., January 11, 1922.

"To All Organized Labor and Friends:

"The appeal printed below is issued by the West Virginia State Federation of Labor and is for financial assistance in the aid of the men who are making a most heroic struggle against degrading and enslaving conditions and the wives and children of these struggling workers must not be permitted to hunger and suffer more than they now endure. The Executive Board of the American Federation of Labor has endorsed the appeal, and I join earnestly in the hope that all organized labor, the membership and its friends will promptly and liberally send contributions to the officer named in the appeal.

"Signed, SAMUEL GOMPERS,

"President American Federation of Labor."

CHARLESTON, W. VA., January 12, 1922.

To the International and National Unions, State Federations, City Central Bodies, District Councils and Local Unions of the American Labor Movement; Greeting:

DEAR SISTERS AND BROTHERS—With the budding of a New Year, comes this message and appeal from the starving and struggling workers of war-torn West Virginia, where a relentless crusade has been waged upon the coal miners and steel workers for the past twenty months, which has caused misery, suffering and now destitution among the women and children throughout the organized fields of the entire State.

To enforce the open shop and wage slavery, the industrial tyrants have used the Federal Troops, the Injunction, Private Gunmen, the State Constabulary, the Courts and all of the machinery of the State Government; and the jails are overflowing with the loyal officers and members who have been deliberately framed by the industrial and political powers, denied the right of trial and refused bail, and in the face of all this, the organization has remained intact, but during the past two months a more insidious and heartless weapon has been inaugurated by the giant octopus—freezing and starving of the women and children to force the men to abandon their unions and return to the mines and mills as abject slaves of the masters.

To accomplish this fiendish design, they have shut down the mines and mills, closed the company stores, stopped the fuel supply and in some instances thrown the families from the company houses, with the result that starvation and sickness stalks among thousands of women and children throughout the organized sections of this State, and this army of destitute is growing daily.

Subtle overtures through agents and tools of the operators have been made to the men that when they surrendered their charters and signed the "yellow-dog" individual contract, which was in vogue before the United Mine Workers secured Joint Contracts, the mines would be re-opened with wage and working conditions, dictated solely by the operators.

If the mine owners succeed in starving the miners and steel workers into submission, it means the wrecking of their organization in this State, and their return to a life of slavery, from which it will require a decade for them to emerge, and organizations which have cost the sacrifice of many lives and millions of dollars to establish, and which will in the future cause a greater sacrifice of human lives and many more millions of dollars to re-establish, and that is not all, other craft unions will also be wiped out and West Virginia will be a garden spot of the Steel Trusts so-called "open shop" in active operation.

A few thousand dollars contributed now will prevent this dire disaster and save many millions in the end. With sufficient funds to furnish corn meal, bacon and beans to the starving women and children for the next two months, will insure our winning the battle, and we can and will win if you will render us financial assistance NOW.

Many have been idle since last February, and thousands more from two to seven months. We have exhausted all our resources. Every local union in the State has been stripped, and those members working and their friends have given until it hurt. We have appealed to the charity institutions for relief with but little material result, and we now place the matter in your hands and upon your action depends whether or not upon the eve of victory, we will be cast in the dark and yawning chasm of desolation and despair.

We realize the conditions are bad throughout the country, but in no state in the union is the situation half as acute as in West Virginia, which is the storm center of the attack from the steel and coal kings of America, who are aided and abetted in their viciousness by our State government.

The starving women and children look to you to rescue them from a generation of slavery and misery, and we have an abiding faith that you will heed their call coming from the wilderness of desolation and destitution.

Make all remittances to H. L. Franklin, Secretary, P. O. Box 138, Charleston, West Virginia.

With the hope that you will heed our call and respond as liberally as possible, we are, in the cause of humanity.

Fraternally yours,

WM. T. HARRIS, President.

H. L. FRANKLIN, Secy.-Treas.

West Virginia State Federation of Labor.

Approved and endorsed by District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America.

M. L. HOPSTONSTALL, Acting Pres.

ISAAC SCOTT, Acting Secy.-Treas.

P. S.—The above appeal does not include Mingo County, which is being cared for by the Miners' International Union.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

OFFICIAL.

Section 104 of our laws requires the General Secretary-Treasurer to "publish semi-annually in the MIXER AND SERVER the address of all locals in good standing with the International Union."

In the January (1922) number of the MIXER AND SERVER, we printed the usual announcement, asking officers to advise us of any changes. Seventeen local unions responded as we close forms for this number. If the roster as printed is incomplete, or the addresses inaccurate, blame the officers who have failed to supply us with the needed information.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HOW THEY STAND.

California	35
Texas	28
New York	28
Illinois	26
Pennsylvania	25
Washington	20
Massachusetts	15
Ohio	15
New Jersey	14
Missouri	13
Canada	13
Oregon	11
Minnesota	9
Wyoming	9
Connecticut	9
Wisconsin	9
Montana	8
Oklahoma	7
Colorado	7
Kentucky	6
Idaho	5
Indiana	5
Louisiana	5
Arizona	4
West Virginia	4
Michigan	4
Utah	4
Iowa	3
Maryland	3
Nebraska	3
Kansas	3
Tennessee	3
Arkansas	2

Rhode Island	2
North Dakota	2
District of Columbia	2
Virginia	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
South Carolina	1
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

DEATHS DURING JANUARY, 1922.

Local 3:—James Tate.
Local 14:—Harold H. Edman.
Local 115:—Seth Grace, Hugh Piper.
Local 117:—John Rock.
Local 219:—Morris Engel.
Local 449:—M. L. Shotzberger.
Local 561:—Geo. Krause, Joe Wekich.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARTERS ISSUED JANUARY, 1922.

Local	Location	Organizer
604 M,	Orange, Tex.	Geo. L. Gibson
670 M,	West Frankfort, Ill.	Norman King
703 M,	Anaheim, Cal.	James M. Clarke

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

NO LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR MONTH OF JANUARY, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INFORMATION WANTED.

Wanted to locate Walter Miles, restaurant and camp cook, who left Dallas, Texas, September 14, 1919, and who has not been heard of since that date. There is something worth while waiting for Miles if he will get in touch with his family. Miles is part Indian, and because of that fact is entitled to a "headright" of considerable value. Miles can obtain information by writing his wife, Mrs. Nellie Miles, 609 Kentucky Street, Dallas, Texas.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my monthly letter for January: "Keep Smiling." That is a task that requires considerable energy these days; the man or woman who can smile in face of insurmountable obstacles is the one that will reap the harvest that usually follows depression. We are told by Roger Babson, the economist and statistician, that we have reached the end of our depression period and that we are now passing through the first cycle of returning prosperity, and he further advises that the business institutions that take advantage of the present conditions and build for the future, will be the institutions that will reap the benefit of an early harvest, while those who remain dormant and wait for the return of prosperity before making any advance step are going to be lost in the trail. If that is so with business institutions, then it is equally so with trade unions; the local union that is satisfied to sit tight and pride themselves in holding what they have without making any effort to increase their membership or secure the reinstatement of suspended members, is not doing the thing that is necessary, in order to prepare themselves for the future—they must be up and doing things if they expect to get anywhere.

Hard as it may seem to convert unorganized workers to organize these days, it is nevertheless possible; much depends upon the manner in which they are approached and the determination in which the members of the local enter into the spirit of their work; true, it is harder to convert them than it was twelve months ago, but the member that you induce to join your organization today, does so because he believes in the principles that you represent and is convinced that a trade union is the proper place for him and he is going to hold fast to that membership when once secured, while the fellow who joined because the union controlled the job he was on, has faded away.

Where most of our organizations make their mistake, is in asking a high initiation or reinstatement fee; that only gets the worker who finds it necessary to become a member in order to secure employment or hold the position that he has and discourages the workers who are numbered by the thousand and who are employed in establishments over which the local union may have no influences; those workers are to be reckoned with; they are free to choose their future and if they can be induced to become a part of our movement, it will help to strengthen our institution and make it possible to do the things that we are striving for; why hold them on the outside for a mere monetary consideration; it is true that dollars and cents are necessary to make any institution a success, but it is not the first payment that makes that possible, it is the steady income that flows into the coffers of the organization from the payment of monthly dues, that makes the wheel go round—make your initiation and reinstatement fee as low as it is possible; ask permission to open your charter for sixty or ninety days and place your fee at $2 for both initiation and reinstatement, appoint a campaign committee of fifteen active members who possess plenty of enthusiasm, divide them into three divisions—Red, White and Blue—and start them out on a membership drive; keep the interest going by posting the names of the newcomers as fast as they are turned in; add an additional impetus to the drive by giving to each member bringing in a new applicant one of the new International dress buttons or a month's dues, anything that will stimulate interest and give added encouragement, in that way you will not only organize the workers in your jurisdiction, but strengthen your organization and make it possible to come out of the present depression period stronger and better fortified than ever, to meet the problems that will confront you—now is the time to build up your hopes for the future, turn on the current and let's go.

It might be appropriate here to say a word in reference to the bonding of financial officers. Section 64 of the constitution makes it mandatory on the part of local unions to bond their treasurer and other officers who handle funds, bonds to be secured through some reputable bonding company. SUCH BOND MUST BE FILED WITH THE GENERAL OFFICE before member can be installed into office. Failure to file bond or renewal shall act as a forfeiture of office. A penalty of $5 shall be imposed on local unions failing to deposit bonds with general office before installation or expiration of existing bond.

This provision of the constitution has been neglected and it is the intention of the International Union, in the near future, to make a survey of our local unions in order to learn, which if any of them are violating that law and those found lacking in its enforcement will find the penalty provided for in the constitution charged against their account and a demand made upon them for its payment. This unpleasantness can be avoided if you will take an inventory and see whether the bonds of your treasurer and other financial officers have been properly filed with the general office at Cincinnati. Act now and avoid payment of penalty. If they have been filed, your local union will have an acknowledgment of the receipt of same—ask for the receipt.

During the month I made the following visits: On the 15th I addressed a meeting of Local 76, at Syracuse and attended a conference of the officers of Local 150; 16th, meeting of Local Joint Executive Board of New York and guest of Local

2, of Brooklyn in the evening; 17th, installed the officers of Local 219, met with the officers of Local 3 and held conference with the officers of Local 109, at Newark, N. J.; 18th, attended the election of officers in Local 1; 1,695 votes being cast in the said election; 19th, attended meeting of Local 307, of Providence R. I.; 20th, attended meeting of Local Joint Executive Board of Boston, Mass. I also installed the officers of Locals 66, 175 and 196, of Buffalo, N. Y.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

January—
15—To Syracuse	$6 50
16—To New York and sleeper.....	13 55
19—To Providence and sleeper.....	10 43
20—To Boston	2 94
22—To Buffalo and sleeper.....	22 42
Postage	6 00
Carfare, checking and telegrams.....	1 15
Typewriter ribbon	1 00
Traveling expenses	49 00

Total.....$112 99

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

P. S.—In the December issue a typographical error appears in our letter, the printer having substituted the word "who" in place of "which"; the sentence should have read: Notwithstanding that they had two delegates at the convention of the International Union which voted that salary.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,125.

December 29, 1921.

MR. A. GRAHAM, Secretary, Local 28, 441 Seymour Street, Vancouver, B. C.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 22nd, wherein you submit the following for a decision:

"At the last regular election of officers two members voted who were proprietors, they appeared without their membership book and were given the O. K. of the secretary; their vote would not have changed the result of the election. Has Section 83 of the constitution been violated, and if so, would that nullify the election?"

Active members that become proprietors automatically become passive members and are not entitled to a voice or vote in the affairs of a local union, it was therefore a violation of Section 83 to permit passive members to vote at an election of officers. In view of the fact however, that the two votes cast would not change the result of the election, sufficient cause for setting the same aside does not exist and we therefore conclude that the election was legal and that the officers elected were eligible to be installed into their respective offices. With season's greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,126.

January 11, 1922.

MR. ALEXANDER GORDON, Secretary, Local 459, Box 14, Victoria, B. C.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the request of Local 459 for a decision as to the legality of their action in suspending a number of their members for working in an establishment that had no agreement with the local union, at a wage below that provided for in the scale of the local and which is being paid by all union houses in the City of Victoria; you say that upon the complaint of the proprietors with whom the union holds agreements, these members were suspended from membership, otherwise the proprietors would not renew their contracts with the local union.

If the members in question were working below the scale of wages provided for by the union, then they were subject to discipline, the union should have insisted upon them getting the scale or coming off the job and failing in that, charges should have been prepared against them and they accorded a trial in accordance with Sections 169 and 170 of the constitution. If this provision of the law was not carried out and these members were summarily suspended without trial, then that action was illegal and the said members should be reinstated to membership and charges filed against them and the local should proceed in accordance with sections 169 and 170. With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,127.

January 12, 1922.

MR. CLYDE M. WYKOFF, Secretary, Local 327, Labor Temple, Peoria, Ill.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 10th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Local 327 at its election had a candidate for office who did not have any opposition act as election inspector. This brother did not count the vote. The local union taking the position that he having no opposition was not a candidate, but an officer of the local. On the night of installation of officers, a petition signed by twenty-five members was presented setting forth that they were not satisfied with the manner in which the vote was taken and counted, and set out a request that another election be held and prescribed the manner and form in which the same should be carried out. Was the said election legal?"

The local union erred in permitting a candidate for office to act as an inspector of election, whether that candidate had opposition or not, he was a candidate just the same and as a matter of policy, if the by-laws of the local union does not prohibit his acting, he should not have sat as an inspector of election.

The protest filed does not allege any misconduct on the part of the election inspectors, nor do they charge fraud, they simply base their protest on the fact that they were not satisfied with the manner in which the election was held. That protest should have been filed when the inspectors were selected and not after the result of the election was announced, therefore, in the absence of any allegations of misconduct or fraud, we hold that the election was legal. With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,128.

January 14, 1922.

MRS. LILLIAN POWELL, Secretary, Local 484, 35 S. Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.:

DEAR MADAM AND SISTER—I have your communication of the 7th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"If charges are preferred against the president of the local, can she appoint the trial committee to hear said charges? Can the organization create a salaried office without amending their by-laws?"

A part of the duties of the president as per Section 1, Article V of the by-laws of Local 484 are, to appoint all special committees unless otherwise provided for and we can not find any provision in the by-laws which would deprive an officer of her right to hold her office pending action of the local union on charges that may be filed against such an officer, and in the absence of such a provision, we are forced to conclude that an officer has a legal right to exercise all of the functions of her office as set forth in the by-laws of the local union, pending final action of the local union on said charges.

"Unless otherwise provided for." That qualification in the duties of the president gives to the local union the right, if they choose to exercise it, to name the manner in which special committees are to be appointed.

If the local union failed to set forth the manner in which the trial committee on the charges in question should be appointed, the president of the local was acting within her rights in naming said committee.

Salaried officers can be created without amending the by-laws of the local union, but they can also be set aside at any meeting by a majority vote. When new positions or offices are created in a local union, they should be by amendment to by-laws, that would make such office permanent, to the extent at least of requiring any action to dissolve such office, to be read and acted upon at a meeting following that at which the proposal was presented—it gives more opportunity for mature deliberation of the subject matter. With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,129.

January 23, 1922.

MR. W. S. MUNKERS, Secretary, Local 391, Box 639, La Grande, Oregon:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 12th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"We have a house where two proprietors and their wives are working and we desire to know how many proprietors we should recognize and how we can issue a label while more than the allotted number are active proprietors."

The International Union recognizes the right of two working proprietors. Any more than that number must become members of the local union as passive members (not entitled to a voice or vote) before the establishment in which they operate can be termed fair to the local union and granted a house label. With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,130

January 24, 1922.

MR. F. L. GRATTEAU, Secretary, Local 31, 434 Eleventh Street, Oakland, Calif.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 16th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"The by-laws of Local 31 provide that a member having held a salaried office for two consecutive terms of one year each shall not be eligible for nomination and election to a salaried office until one term has expired; the old laws under which the present secretary served one and one-half term provided, that no salaried officer could serve more than two consecutive terms of six months, until six months had elapsed. The law was amended during the second term of the present secretary and the question now is, is the present secretary eligible to two terms under the new law or does the time served under the old law count. He is finishing out one term under the new law, would he be entitled to serve another term?"

The by-laws referred to were approved by this office under date of November 22, 1920, and in effect from that date.

The words "one year each" in the new law nullify the provisions of the old law which provided for two terms of six months each and, in view of the fact that the present secretary has only held office for one term under the "one year" provision, he is eligible to another term of one year before being required to retire under the two term clause of the by-laws. With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHAULMOOGRA OIL AND LEPROSY

The U. S. Public Health Service has felt it necessary to prevent the too optimistic and extravagant claims recently appearing in the newspapers in regard to the curative effects of chaulmoogra oil derivatives on leprosy. While the use of the oil and its derivatives has resulted in a considerable number of apparent cures, it is as yet too soon to tell whether these will be permanent.

The ethyl esters of chaulmoogra oil, the use of which has largely supplanted the oil itself, constitute a most valuable agent in the treatment of leprosy. In treating young persons and those in the early stages of the disease, the improvement has been rapid and striking; in older persons and older cases it is less so. Of the cases paroled from the leprosy stations in the Hawaiian Islands so far about eight per cent have relapsed and returned for treatment. This was to be expected; and on the whole the results have been so favorable as to make treatment of the disease hopeful. But only time can tell.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

IN CALIFORNIA.

"Wonderful tale—that of Jack and the Beanstalk."

"Nothing to it," was the Native Son's prompt reply. "In California, if a fellow wants to travel cheap he plants a pumpkin seed, climbs on to the end of the vine, and steers."—The Country Gentleman.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR JANUARY, 1922

Local No.		Local No.		Local No.
1 W, New York, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	188 B, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Jan., 1922	381 C, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Dec., 1921
2 W, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Dec., "	189 W, Portland, Ore.	Dec., 1921	382 RRM, Louisville, Ky.	Sept., "
3 B, New York, N. Y.	Dec., "	190 B, Bethlehem, Pa.	Nov., "	384 SCP, Oakland, Cal.	Nov., "
4 B, Hoboken, N. J.	Dec., "	196 W, Buffalo, N. Y.	Dec., "	387 M, Ft. Dodge, Ia.	Dec., "
5 W, New York, N. Y.	Dec., "	197 B, Hamilton, Ont., Can. Dec., "		389 B, Carnegie, Pa.	Jan., 1922
7 W, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "	199 B, Jamestown, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	391 M, LeGrande, Ore.	Dec., 1921
8 B, Denver, Colo.	Dec., "	200 B, Hartford, Conn.	Dec., 1921	392 MC, Mobile, Ala.	Jan., 1922
10 W, Hoboken, N. J.	Dec., "	201 M, Hartford, Mass.	Sept., "	394 M, South Chicago, Ill.	Aug., 1921
11 WC, New York City	Jan., 1922	203 C, St. Louis, Mo.	Dec., "	395 M, White Plains, N. Y.	Dec., "
12 M, San Antonio, Tex.	Dec., 1921	207 C, Portland, Ore.	Dec., "	397 M, Parsons, Kan.	Dec., "
14 W, Denver, Colo.	Dec., "	208 RRM, St. Louis, Mo.	Nov., "	398 M, Manchester, N. H.	Dec., "
17 W, Los Angeles, Cal.	Nov., "	210 M, Abilene, Tex.	Dec., "	399 M, Ranger, Tex.	Dec., "
18 C, Denver, Colo.	Dec., "	213 M, Herrin, Ill.	Jan., 1922	400 M, Spokane, Wash.	Dec., "
19 W, Kansas City, Mo.	Dec., "	216 M, Toledo, O.	Jan., "	401 M, Randsburg, N. M.	Oct., "
20 W, St. Louis, Mo.	Dec., "	217 B, New Haven, Conn.	Jan., "	402 M, San Diego, Cal.	Dec., "
22 M, Butte, Mont.	Dec., "	219 W, New York, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	403 M, Breckenridge, Tex.	Dec., "
23 C, Omaha, Neb.	Dec., "	220 M, Eureka, Cal.	Dec., "	404 M, Santa Rosa, Cal.	Aug., "
25 M, Hot Springs, Ark.	Dec., "	222 B, Dayton, O.	Jan., 1922	405 M, Bonham, Tex.	Jan., 1922
28 M, Vancouver, B. C.	Dec., "	223 M, Des Moines, Ia.	Nov., 1921	406 M, Wortham, Tex.	Dec., 1921
29 B, New York, N. Y.	Dec., "	224 B, Erie, Pa.	Jan., 1922	407 M, Manchester, N. H.	Dec., "
30 W, San Francisco, Cal.	Dec., "	226 M, Lincoln, Neb.	Nov., 1921	413 M, Tucson, Ariz.	Dec., "
31 M, Oakland, Cal.	Dec., "	228 B, Albany, N. Y.	Dec., "	419 M, Ottawa, Ont., Can.	Oct., "
32 M, St. Joseph, Mo.	Dec., "	230 M, South Bend, Tex.	Jan., 1922	420 B, Kansas City, Mo.	Dec., "
33 C, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., "	234 C, Detroit, Mich.	Jan., "	424 M, Klamath Falls, Ore.	Dec., "
34 M, Boston, Mass.	Dec., "	236 M, Goose Creek, Tex.	Oct., 1921	425 M, Sherman, Tex.	Jan., 1922
39 M, Pittsburg, Kan.	Dec., "	237 M, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Dec., "	426 M, Wallace, Idaho	Nov., 1921
41 B, San Francisco, Cal.	Nov., "	239 W, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., "	427 C, Missoula, Mont.	Dec., "
43 M, Pueblo, Colo.	Dec., "	240 WS, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., "	429 B, Portsmouth, O.	Jan., 1922
44 C, San Francisco, Cal.	Dec., "	242 M, Charleston, W. Va.	Sept., "	434 WS, Toronto, Ont., Canada	Oct., 1921
45 M, Reno, Nev.	Dec., "	246 M, Oklahoma City, Okla.	Dec., "	436 M, Chico, Cal.	Nov., "
48 WS, San Francisco, Cal.	Dec., "	249 WS, St. Louis, Mo.	Dec., "	437 M, Indianapolis, Ind.	Dec., "
50 M, Fairmont, W. Va.	Jan., 1922	253 B, Alliance, O.	Jan., 1922	438 B, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.	Jan., 1922
51 B, St. Louis, Mo.	Dec., 1921	254 W, Waterbury, Conn.	Dec., 1921	439 M, Vancouver, Wash.	Oct., 1921
58 W, New Orleans, La.	Dec., "	256 B, Bridgeport, Conn.	Sept., "	440 M, Montreal, Que., Can.	Dec., "
59 M, Milwaukee, Wis.	Dec., "	257 M, Livingston, Mont.	Oct., "	442 M, Raton, N. M.	Dec., "
61 M, Tacoma, Wash.	Nov., "	258 RRM, New York, N. Y.	Dec., "	449 B, Altoona, Pa.	Dec., "
62 M, Fresno, Cal.	Dec., "	259 B, Edwardsville, Ill.	Nov., "	451 M, Everett, Wash.	Nov., "
64 B, Milwaukee, Wis.	Jan., 1922	261 WC, Louisville, Ky.	Dec., "	457 MF, Butte, Mont.	Dec., "
66 C, Buffalo, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	262 B, Newcastle, Pa.	Dec., "	458 C, Minneapolis, Minn.	Dec., "
68 B, Cincinnati, O.	Dec., "	264 M, Lake Charles, La.	Dec., "	459 M, Victoria, B. C., Can.	Dec., "
69 M, Galveston, Tex.	Dec., "	266 C, Kansas City, Mo.	Dec., "	466 B, Wilmington, Del.	Dec., "
70 B, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Dec., "	268 SCP, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "	468 C, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., "
72 W, Cincinnati, O.	Dec., "	269 B, South Norwalk, Conn.	Dec., "	470 W, Schenectady, N. Y.	Nov., "
74 M, Aurora, Ill.	Nov., "	271 M, Petaluma, Cal.	Nov., "	471 M, Albany, N. Y.	Dec., "
76 B, Syracuse, N. Y.	Dec., "	273 M, Springfield, Mass.	Dec., "	472 M, El Reno, Okla.	Jan., 1922
77 B, Boston, Mass.	Dec., "	279 W, Philadelphia, Pa.	Dec., "	474 Edmonton, Alta., Canada	Dec., 1921
78 B, Uniontown, Pa.	Jan., 1922	284 B, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., "	476 M, Marshfield, Ore.	Jan., 1922
79 B, Louisville, Ky.	Dec., 1921	285 B, Providence, R. I.	Dec., "	479 B, LaCrosse, Wis.	Dec., 1921
81 B, Holyoke, Mass.	Dec., "	286 B, Peoria, Ill.	Dec., "	480 DSM, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Nov., "
85 B, Lowell, Mass.	Jan., 1922	290 M, Salem, Mass.	Nov., "	482 B, Butler, Pa.	Dec., "
89 B, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921	294 M, Yakima, Wash.	Dec., "	484 WS, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "
92 B, Marlboro, Mass.	Dec., "	295 M, Wheeling, W. Va.	Nov., "	485 RRP, Memphis, Tenn.	Jan., 1922
93 B, Haverhill, Mass.	Dec., "	298 M, Wenatchee, Wash.	Dec., "	487 SDD, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., 1921
100 B, New Bedford, Mass.	Jan., 1922	299 M, Burkburnett, Tex.	Dec., "	488 B, Jersey City, N. J.	Jan., 1922
102 B, Granite City, Ill.	Jan., "	300 W, Toronto, Ont., Can.	Nov., "	489 M, Galesburg, Ill.	Dec., 1921
106 M, Cleveland, O.	Dec., 1921	303 M, Electra, Tex.	Nov., "	490 M, Tucumcari, N. M.	Nov., "
107 WS, Cleveland, O.	Dec., "	304 M, Hartford, Conn.	Oct., "	491 B, Atlantic City, N. J.	Dec., "
109 M, Newark, N. J.	Dec., "	305 WS, Portland, Ore.	Dec., "	492 M, Quebec, Que., Can.	Dec., "
110 M, San Francisco, Cal.	Dec., "	306 M, Williston, N. D.	Dec., "	496 SDD, Portland, Ore.	Dec., "
111 M, Oatman, Ariz.	Dec., "	307 M, Providence, R. I.	Dec., "	500 M, Beardstown, Ill.	Oct., "
112 WS, Boston, Mass.	Dec., "	308 M, Portland, Me.	Nov., "	503 WS, Kansas City, Mo.	Dec., "
115 R, Philadelphia, Pa.	Dec., "	310 M, Portland, Ore.	Dec., "	508 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Dec., "
117 B, Belleville, Ill.	Dec., "	311 M, Astoria, Ore.	Dec., "	509 M, Chickasha, Okla.	Dec., "
118 M, Akron, O.	Jan., 1922	312 B, Chattanooga, Tenn.	Dec., "	510 M, Pocatello, Idaho	Nov., "
119 M, Silverton, Colo.	Dec., 1921	315 W, Montreal, Que., Can.	Dec., "	511 M, Orange, Tex.	Dec., "
120 B, Utica, N. Y.	Dec., "	316 M, Centraha, Wash.	Dec., "	512 CM, Bonham, Tex.	Dec., "
124 B, Trenton, N. J.	Sept., "	318 B, Putnam, Conn.	Jan., 1922	513 M, Baird, Tex.	Dec., "
126 B, Oncontia, N. Y.	Feb., 1922	319 M, Sioux City, Ia.	Dec., 1921	516 B, Chillicothe, O.	Jan., 1922
128 M, Superior, Wis.	Dec., 1921	322 B, Racine, Wis.	Dec., "	521 M, Mandan, N. D.	Nov., 1921
131 B, Newark, N. J.	Dec., "	323 M, Palestine, Tex.	Dec., "	523 B, Kenosha, Wis.	Dec., "
134 B, Scranton, Pa.	Dec., "	325 M, Duncan, Okla.	Dec., "	524 M, Miles City, Mont.	Dec., "
135 M, Tulsa, Okla.	Dec., "	326 C, Pittsburg, Pa.	Dec., "	528 MF, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., "
141 M, Visalia, Cal.	Dec., "	327 W, Peoria, Ill.	Nov., "	529 M, Bellingham, Wash.	Dec., "
142 M, Eldorado, Ark.	Dec., "	328 DCE, Oakland, Cal.	Sept., "	531 M, Jefferson City, Mo.	Jan., 1922
143 M, Omaha, Neb.	Dec., "	329 M, Lynn, Mass.	Dec., "	532 B, Baltimore, Md.	Dec., 1921
149 B, Newport, Ky.	Dec., "	330 M, Twin Falls, Idaho	Dec., "	536 M, Minneapolis, Minn.	Nov., "
150 W, Syracuse, N. Y.	Dec., "	331 M, Greenville, Tex.	Dec., "	538 RRM, Seattle, Wash.	Nov., "
152 B, Minneapolis, Minn.	Dec., "	332 M, East St. Louis, Ill.	Dec., "	539 CC, Charleston, S. C.	Dec., "
154 M, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Dec., "	335 WE, Toledo, O.	Nov., "	542 M, Modesta, Cal.	Dec., "
156 B, Paducah, Ky.	Nov., "	336 M, Huntington, W. Va.	Oct., "	543 M, Hibbing, Minn.	Nov., "
158 W, Wichita Falls, Tex.	Jan., 1922	337 M, Cheyenne, Wyo.	Jan., 1922	544 M, Douglas, Wyo.	Oct., "
159 B, Meridan, Conn.	Dec., 1921	338 M, Knoxville, Tenn.	Dec., 1921	548 M, St. Paul, Minn.	Jan., 1922
161 M, Brockton, Mass.	Dec., "	347 WS, Buffalo, N. Y.	Dec., "	550 M, Bakersfield, Cal.	Nov., 1921
163 B, McKeesport, Pa.	Oct., "	349 M, Auburn, Wash.	Dec., "	552 CC, Richmond, Va.	Dec., "
167 C, Cleveland, O.	Dec., "	353 WC, St. Louis, Mo.	Nov., "	556 C, St. Paul, Minn.	Nov., "
168 M, Amarillo, Tex.	Dec., "	356 B, New London, Conn.	Feb., 1922	557 M, Greybull, Wyo.	Jan., 1922
171 B, Rochester, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	357 WS, Rochester, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	560 M, Vallejo, Cal.	Nov., 1921
172 M, Henryetta, Okla.	Nov., 1921	361 B, Allentown, Pa.	Dec., "	561 M, Sacramento, Cal.	Dec., "
175 B, Buffalo, N. Y.	Dec., "	364 M, Pendleton, Ore.	Dec., "	567 M, Olympia, Wash.	Dec., "
177 C, Cincinnati, O.	Dec., "	365 M, Sapulpa, Okla.	Dec., "	568 RRM, Portland, Ore.	Nov., "
180 M, San Jose, Cal.	Dec., "	376 B, South Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "	569 B, Harrisburg, Pa.	Dec., "
181 B, Easton, Pa.	Dec., "	378 B, Bakersfield, Cal.	Dec., "	571 M, Idaho Falls, Idaho	Dec., "
185 W, Bicknell, Ind.	Dec., "	380 M, Bisbee, Ariz.	Nov., "	572 M, Stockton, Cal.	Dec., "

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Local No.

575 W, Jersey City, N. J.	Dec., 1921
577 M, Mexia, Tex.	Oct., "
579 M, Dayton, O.	Jan., 1922
581 M, Ogden, Utah	Dec., 1921
582 SCP, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., "
583 RRM, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "
584 M, Topeka, Kan.	Dec., "
586 M, Coalinga, Cal.	Dec., "
588 M, Shreveport, La.	Dec., "
589 M, Bloomington, Ill.	Jan., 1922
590 B, Fond du Lac, Wis.	Nov., 1921
592 M, Winnipeg, Man., Canada	Dec., "
595 M, La Junta, Colo.	Dec., "
597 M, Calgary, Alta., Can.	Dec., "
600 C, Duluth, Minn.	Dec., "
604 MC, Orange, Tex.	Jan., 1922
605 MC, Indianapolis, Ind.	Dec., 1921
611 MC, Williamsport, Pa.	Jan., 1922
612 M, Helena, Mont.	Dec., 1921
616 HM, Sacramento, Cal.	Dec., "
618 M, Anacortes, Wash.	Dec., "
626 M, Walla Walla, Wash.	Dec., "
627 B, Cairo, Ill.	Dec., "
630 WS, St. Paul, Minn.	Dec., "
634 ML, Minneapolis, Minn.	Nov., "
637 B, Manitowac, Wis.	Dec., "
638 M, Haynesville, La.	Dec., "
639 WS, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., "
659 M, Dallas, Tex.	Dec., "
669 MC, Shreveport, La.	Oct., "
670 M, West Frankfort, Ill.	Jan., 1922
673 M, San Bernardino, Cal.	Dec., 1921
676 SDD, Vancouver, B. C.	Dec., "
680 M, Miami, Ariz.	Dec., "
681 M, Long Beach, Cal.	Dec., "
682 B, Elizabeth, N. J.	Nov., "
683 RRM, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Nov., "
685 B, Eau Claire, Wis.	Nov., "
690 B, Owensboro, Ky.	Nov., "
692 M, Virden, Ill.	Jan., 1922
703 M, Anaheim, Cal.	Jan., "
705 W, Detroit, Mich.	Dec., 1921
709 M, Mt. Clemens, Mich.	Jan., 1922
712 MC, Kansas City, Mo.	Sept., 1921
714 B, Joliet, Ill.	Feb., 1922
717 W, Baltimore, Md.	Dec., 1921
719 C, New York City	Dec., "
720 M, Hammond, Ind.	Dec., "
721 B, Salt Lake City, Utah	Dec., "
726 WC, Washington, D. C.	Nov., "
728 WS, Detroit, Mich.	Dec., "
730 M, Bremerton, Wash.	Dec., "
737 B, York, Pa.	Dec., "
739 B, Brownsville, Pa.	Dec., "
742 B, Southbridge, Mass.	Dec., "
748 W, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Dec., "
753 M, Desdemona, Tex.	Dec., "
754 M, San Pedro, Cal.	Nov., "
762 B, Harrison and Kearney, N. J.	Jan., 1922
763 W, Rochester, N. Y.	Dec., 1921
771 M, Taft, Cal.	Dec., "
777 M, Beaumont, Tex.	Dec., "
781 W, Washington, D. C.	Dec., "
782 M, Boise, Idaho	Oct., "
788 M, Springfield, Ill.	Sept., "
791 M, Aberdeen, Wash.	Dec., "
792 M, Denver, Colo.	Dec., "
794 M, Linton, Ind.	Dec., "
797 B, Cristobal, Canal Zone	Nov., "
801 M, Joliet, Ill.	Nov., "
802 MC, Richmond, Va.	Oct., "
808 M, Houston, Tex.	Nov., "
809 M, Lewiston, Mont.	Jan., 1922
810 WS, Atlantic City, N. J.	Oct., 1921
811 M, Altoona, Pa.	Dec., "
815 M, Salt Lake City, Utah	Dec., "
826 MC, Atlantic City, N. J.	Dec., "
828 SCP, Salt Lake City, Utah	Oct., "
831 MC, Asbury Park, N. J.	Dec., "
836 WC, Baltimore, Md.	Dec., "
842 M, Casper, Wyo.	Dec., "
844 B, Staunton, Ill.	Dec., "
845 B, New Kensington, Pa.	Dec., "
846 M, Sheridan, Wyo.	Dec., "
848 M, El Paso, Tex.	Dec., "
849 M, Lusk, Wyo.	Dec., "

Local No.

852 B, Tiffin, O.	Dec., 1921
853 WWC, Boston, Mass.	Dec., "
854 B, Jeanette, Pa.	Dec., "
857 B, Laramie, Wyo.	Dec., "
861 M, Billings, Mont.	Dec., "
862 M, Rawlins, Wyo.	Dec., "
865 C, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., "
876 M, Laramie, Wyo.	Dec., "

RECEIPTS FOR JANUARY, 1922.

Date Local

3 102 Dec., supplies	$ 9 55
3 188 Dec.	99 80
3 286 Nov., stamps	11 20
3 627 Nov., Dec., supplies	8 20
4 76 Dec.	8 40
4 308 Sept., Oct., Nov., supplies	178 45
5 14 Nov.	116 80
5 17 Nov., supplies	64 30
5 135 Supplies	3 50
5 181 Dec.	8 20
5 262 Dec.	4 40
5 529 Dec., supplies, buttons, bound M. & S.	45 20
5 748 Rein. C. D. Sitton, Local 365	7 25
5 315 Dec., bal. due Nov. report	27 85
5 117 Dec.	5 00
5 353 Nov.	24 80
5 440 Nov.	8 60
5 503 Supplies, buttons	11 50
5 513 Dec., supplies	5 60
5 213 Supplies	11 00
5 310 Dec., buttons, bound M. & S.	28 30
5 521 Supplies	1 00
5 72 Supplies	2 50
5 81 Dec.	8 40
6 253 Jan.	3 00
6 258 Nov., stamps	33 00
6 261 Nov.	5 80
6 269 Nov., Dec., supplies	1 80
6 387 Oct., Nov., Dec.	17 80
6 442 Dec.	8 40
6 531 Jan., supplies	2 65
6 771 Dec.	32 00
6 848 Dec.	20 40
6 Rein. Sam McCee, Local 576	7 25
6 279 Dec.	99 50
6 539 Supplies	2 50
6 638 Buttons, supplies	14 00
6 600 Supplies	2 00
6 612 Dec.	15 00
6 25 Dec.	11 00
6 59 Supplies	2 50
6 58 Dec.	52 00
6 156 Supplies	1 00
6 177 Dec., supplies	53 10
6 808 Nov.	33 75
7 167 Dec.	78 20
7 185 Stamps	7 20
7 337 Dec.	35 20
7 357 Dec.	13 60
7 395 Dec.	4 40
7 399 Dec.	10 60
7 400 Buttons	1 00
7 424 Dec.	15 80
7 437 Buttons	2 00
7 550 Nov.	75 00
7 552 Nov.	7 80
7 588 Protested check	16 10
7 616 Dec.	16 60
7 659 Dec.	75 00
7 763 Oct., Nov., Dec.	189 70
7 792 Oct., supplies	16 00
7 854 Nov., Dec.	21 45
7 310 Error Dec. report	20
9 23 Nov.	31 40
9 30 Supplies	40 00
9 34 Supplies	25 00
9 41 Nov.	26 00
9 135 Supplies, buttons	5 00
9 158 Dec.	34 20
9 175 Dec., supplies	25 00
9 189 Dec., supplies	84 50
9 190 Nov., supplies	6 70
9 210 Dec., supplies	8 50
9 217 Jan.	14 00
9 228 Supplies	1 25
9 259 Nov.	3 40
9 273 Nov.	22 20

Date Local

9 299 Dec.	9 20
9 300 Nov.	66 60
9 306 Dec.	5 00
9 329 Dec.	39 80
9 361 Dec., buttons	30 40
9 405 Jan., supplies, buttons	12 80
9 425 Dec., supplies, buttons, stamps	11 50
9 524 Supplies	5 00
9 560 Nov.	43 40
9 579 Oct., Nov., rein. of local, buttons, supplies	32 85
9 605 Dec.	3 40
9 61 Nov., supplies	66 00
9 316 Dec.	22 00
9 488 Dec.	2 00
9 510 Nov.	11 40
9 637 Dec., stamps	9 80
9 815 Dues D. H. Cole	3 00
9 865 Error Nov. report	20
9 836 Stamps	4 25
10 45 Dec.	37 60
10 30 Supplies	22 50
10 106 Dec., supplies	155 40
10 111 Stamps, supplies, buttons	3 00
10 581 Nov., supplies, buttons	30 75
10 714 Jan.	5 00
10 721 Dec.	9 40
10 842 Dec., supplies, buttons	68 20
10 288 Dec., supplies, buttons	34 70
10 305 Dec., bound M. & S.	82 80
10 347 Nov., Dec., supplies	14 60
11 1 Dec., cash	417 40
11 77 Dec.	40 00
11 152 Dec.	32 80
11 223 Protested check	19 70
11 223 Supplies	1 00
11 226 Nov., supplies	15 25
11 240 Dec.	118 80
11 407 Supplies	5 50
11 424 Buttons, supplies	5 50
11 794 Dec., supplies	11 10
11 845 Dec., supplies	4 35
11 305 Error Dec. report	40 40
11 50 Jan.	11 40
11 331 Dec., supplies, buttons, stamps	17 65
11 451 Sept., supplies	35 85
11 59 Supplies	2 00
11 511 Buttons, stamps, supplies	12 00
11 730 Nov.	27 80
11 777 Dec., supplies	8 35
12 70 Buttons	1 25
12 79 Dec.	19 05
12 106 Error Nov. and Dec. reports	40
12 85 Dec., Jan.	6 40
12 119 Dec.	2 40
12 142 Buttons	1 00
12 466 Dec., supplies	10 40
12 509 Dec.	7 20
12 552 Dec.	7 80
12 849 Nov., Dec., supplies	10 30
12 403 Supplies	4 00
12 392 Supplies	5 19
12 811 Supplies	15
12 185 July, Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec., bound M. & S., rein. of local	17 40
12 853 Oct., Nov., Dec.	7 20
13 12 Buttons	5 00
13 74 Nov.	10 80
13 237 Dec., supplies	111 50
13 34 Dec.	289 20
13 323 Dec., supplies	7 10
13 413 Dec.	13 40
13 Rein. Walter R. Roe, Local 88	3 35
13 476 Stamps, supplies	9 05
13 626 Nov., Dec., bound M. & S., bal. due May report, rein. of local	32 40
13 18 Supplies	1 00
13 567 Dec.	12 20
13 748 Dec.	59 60
13 865 Supplies	5 00
13 J. H. Hole, M. A. L.	25
13 720 Nov.	11 60
13 604 Charter and outfit	19 40
14 51 Dec.	91 20
14 111 Supplies, stamps	2 80
14 199 Jan.	5 80
14 230 Jan.	5 45

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date Local		Date Local		Date Local
14 254 Supplies	1 75	20 264 Oct., Nov., Dec., sup-		27 110 Dec., supplies	210 80
14 325 Dec., stamps	39 15	20 397 Supplies, buttons	8 10	27 228 Dec.	2 00
14 472 Supplies, stamps	8 40	20 400 Dec.	93 40	27 234 Dec., buttons	52 20
14 586 Dec., cash	12 55	20 523 Dec.	10 80	27 Rein. W. A. Travis, Lo-
14 484 Buttons	1 00	20 683 Nov.	18 20	27 cal 617	3 25
14 618 Dec.	5 00	20 402 Buttons	1 00	27 437 Dec., supplies	23 00
14 638 Dec., supplies	15 40	20 20 Dec.	50 40	27 717 Dec.	20 80
14 673 Dec.	23 00	20 66 Dec.	26 40	27 234 Jan.	56 00
14 846 Oct., Nov., Dec.	4 20	20 611 Jan., supplies	8 00	27 451 Oct.	31 15
14 810 Oct.	7 60	20 459 Dec.	17 20	27 489 Oct., Nov., Dec., stamps,
14 848 Supplies	7 10	21 216 Dec., Jan., supplies,		27 rein, of local.	42 20
14 862 Dec., supplies	15 25	21 buttons	29 30	27 489 Supplies	9 00
14 Fred Dennick, acct. in-		21 413 Bound M. & S.	2 00	28 14 Dec.	111 40
14 debtedness, Local 411.	20 00	21 579 Dec.	16 00	28 29 Dec.	6 00
14 Jesse Carey, M. A. L.	4 75	21 581 Dec.	21 80	28 31 Dec.	189 00
14 119 Traveling Card, Jesse		21 597 Dec.	23 40	28 64 Jan.	5 20
14 Carey	25	21 89 Dec.	28 80	28 118 Jan., bound M. & S.,
14 476 Oct., Nov., Dec.	5 60	21 249 Supplies	5 00	28 supplies, rein of local.	25 00
14 79 Stamps	2 00	21 480 Protested check	23 93	28 268 Dec.	64 00
14 429 Dec., Jan., supplies.	13 50	21 480 Supplies	8 20	28 420 Dec.	6 20
14 561 Dec.	107 40	21 516 Jan.	5 80	28 538 Dec.	12 60
14 801 Nov.	22 40	21 709 Dec., Jan.	8 80	28 676 Dec.	4 60
14 861 Dec., supplies	47 00	21 John J. Richards.	2 00	28 681 Dec.	42 80
16 129 Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec.,		21 521 Oct., Nov., rein. of local	11 70	28 571 Dec.	8 00
16 supplies	8 00	21 48 Dec., supplies	193 40	28 7 Dec., supplies	230 60
16 449 Dec.	13 20	23 70 Supplies	2 50	28 66 Supplies	1 00
16 22 Dec.	24 00	23 107 Dec., supplies, buttons	92 70	28 582 Dec., supplies, stamps	40 20
16 30 Dec.	399 00	23 111 On account	3 80	28 474 Supplies	16 35
16 39 Dec., bal. due Nov. re-		23 197 Dec., supplies	4 25	28 Rein. Jasper Meride,
16 port	31 95	23 294 Supplies	1 00	28 Local 697	7 25
16 43 Nov., Dec., supplies	43 80	23 468 Dec., supplies	152 80	28 Rein. Agnes Fitsim-
16 135 Dec.	29 70	23 728 Dec.	54 00	28 mons, Local 272.	7 25
16 142 Dec., buttons	17 20	23 730 Dec.	35 20	28 Rein. P. C. Burcham,
16 168 Dec.	8 80	23 753 Dec.	2 60	28 Local 422	1 90
16 206 Supplies	8 75	23 809 Jan.	11 20	30 2 Dec.	102 60
16 220 Dec., supplies	21 10	23 Jesse Carey, M. A. L.	25	30 4 Dec.	6 00
16 224 Jan.	16 20	23 19 Dues, Frank Gritti	1 00	30 18 Dec.	46 60
16 34 Nov.	46 20	23 380 Nov., supplies	2 70	30 25 Supplies	1 00
16 335 Oct., Nov., supplies	13 70	23 425 Jan.	6 60	30 39 Buttons, supplies	3 00
16 356 Jan., Feb.	7 60	23 539 Supplies	8 50	30 69 Dec.	32 20
16 440 Dec.	10 60	23 595 Dec.	9 90	30 112 Dec.	47 40
16 457 Dec.	72 20	23 402 Dec.	83 00	30 143 Dec.	27 00
16 474 Dec., cash	41 95	23 142 Buttons	15 00	30 172 Nov., supplies	13 60
16 532 Dec.	4 40	24 222 Jan.	33 80	30 180 Dec.	40 60
16 567 Jan., stamps	11 80	24 239 Dec.	58 60	30 332 Dec.	27 80
16 705 Dec.	54 80	24 311 Dec.	34 00	30 Victor Tenny, M. A. L.	3 05
16 792 Nov., rein. of local.	14 80	24 496 Dec., buttons	40 20	30 Rein. John C. Harney,
16 876 Dec.	12 70	24 Rein. Chas. E. Carlson,		30 Local 850	7 25
16 Rein. Oliver Dearasier,		24 Local 339	3 75	30 458 Dec., supplies	68 40
16 Local 619	6 50	24 Rein. John Schneller,		30 471 Dec.	20 45
16 337 Supplies	13 25	24 Local 339	3 75	30 485 Jan., supplies	10 45
17 31 Supplies	15 00	24 561 Cash	3 10	30 508 Dec.	12 40
17 44 Dec.	300 00	24 Rein. A. Showalter, Lo-		30 528 Dec.	4 00
17 326 Dec.	94 60	24 cal 700	7 25	30 558 Nov.	40 80
17 680 Dec.	16 00	24 710 Dec.	30 80	30 630 Dec.	25 20
17 62 Dec.	125 40	24 468 Dues, I. E. McCorkle.	1 25	30 639 Dec.	53 40
17 394 Stamps, supplies	50 80	24 79 Bound M. & S., bal. due		30 692 Dec., Jan.	4 00
17 714 Feb.	5 00	24 Dec. report	2 75	30 791 Dec., supplies, buttons.	43 30
17 471 Nov.	16 20	24 487 Dec., supplies	33 90	30 S. L. Mathews, M. A. L.	9 10
17 569 Nov., Dec., supplies	4 50	24 28 Dec.	68 60	30 141 Dec.	5 80
17 575 Dec., supplies	10 80	24 256 Supplies	5 85	30 196 Dec.	56 40
17 427 Dec.	31 40	25 503 Rachael Guild, dues.	1 00	30 398 Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec.,
18 10 Supplies	5 00	25 568 Nov., stamps, supplies.	16 45	30 Jan., supplies, rein. of
18 11 Nov., Dec., Jan., supplies	9 60	25 865 Dec.	90 60	30 local	19 00
18 17 Oct., Nov. reports, sup-		25 216 Buttons	1 20	30 451 Nov.	28 60
18 plies	64 70	25 325 Supplies, stamps	3 00	30 815 Dec., buttons	59 60
18 118 Nov., Dec., supplies	24 50	25 364 Dec., supplies	17 10	30 68 Dec.	38 80
18 381 Dec.	9 40	25 213 Dec.	16 60	30 Rein. Harry Waldorf,
18 484 Supplies	5 00	25 135 Supplies	300	30 Local 19	7 35
18 568 Dec., supplies	21 50	26 175 Supplies	3 75	30 670 Charter and outfit.	37 00
18 228 Buttons, supplies	3 75	26 207 Dec.	102 60	31 10 Dec.	17 00
18 562 Dec.	17 00	26 223 Nov., buttons, supplies.	15 60	31 131 Dec.	23 40
18 705 Error Dec. report	20	26 249 Dec.	60 80	31 203 Dec.	11 35
19 3 Dec.	42 40	26 273 Supplies	1 00	31 398 Supplies	1 50
19 Rein. Tony Alfano, Lo-		26 294 Dec., supplies	28 50	31 484 Dec., supplies	117 70
19 cal 52	3 75	26 322 Dec.	4 00	31 524 Nov., Dec., supplies	27 30
19 134 Dec.	27 40	26 392 Jan., supplies	14 70	31 584 Dec., supplies, buttons.	16 10
19 135 Error Sept. to Dec., incl.	4 00	26 403 Stamps, supplies, cash.	16 25	31 589 Jan.	32 00
19 154 Dec., supplies	14 25	26 491 Dec., buttons, error Jan.		31 D. H. Cole, M. A. L.	1 50
19 273 Dec.	22 60	26 to Dec. reports.	25 30	31 266 Dec.	52 80
19 318 Jan.	3 00	26 Rein. Robert F. McGre-		31 376 Dec.	9 00
19 398 Dec.	5 20	26 gor, Local 609.	3 10	31 703 Charter and outfit.	15 00
19 482 Nov., Dec.	9 20	26 492 Dec., bal. due Nov. re-		31 258 Dec., stamps	11 60
19 673 Buttons	5 00	26 port, cash	20 45	31 59 Dec.	35 60
19 Fred Dennick, indebted-		26 548 Jan.	20 00	31 200 Dec.	6 00
19 ness, Local 411.	10 00	26 579 Jan.	14 71	31 742 Dec.	1 80
19 246 Dec., buttons, supplies.	52 75	26 592 Supplies	2 00	31 7 Traveling card, Joe
19 279 Bal. due Dec. report	10	26 762 Jan., supplies	2 50	31 Patterson	25
19 458 Buttons, supplies	6 00	26 792 Dec.	17 80	31 93 Dec.	3 00
19 Rein. Agnes Turlock,		26 33 Dec.	120 80	31 100 Jan.	9 60
19 Local 593	7 35	26 338 Dec.	2 40	31 161 Dec.	54 20
20 106 Supplies	5 00	26 530 Dec.	9 00	31 207 Supplies	18 75
20 135 Buttons	1 00	26 781 Dec.	94 80	31 254 Dec.	6 00
20 158 Jan.	21 00	26 72 Dec., stamps, supplies.	43 90	31 261 Dec., supplies	6 80
20 219 Supplies	5 50			31 297 Supplies	10 00

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date	Local
31	307 Dec.	33 00
31	391 Dec.	6 60
31	438 Jan.	6 20
31	468 Buttons	1 00
31	476 Jan., supplies, buttons	17 35
31	542 Dec.	8 00
31	552 Jan.	7 80
31	Rein. James Lynch, Local 603	8 15
31	572 Dec., supplies	57 20
51	579 Supplies	2 19
31	720 Dec.	9 60
31	826 Dec.	2 40
31	600 Cash	5 40
31	Interest	101 15

Total$11,921 77

EXPENDITURES FOR JANUARY, 1922.

Date
4	Rent	$151 35
4	Printing	804 10
6	Tax	460 47
6	Union Label Tax	100 00
7	Clerks	72 00
9	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00
9	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
9	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
9	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00
9	John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
14	Clerks	72 00
14	A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Mary Dempsey, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Mrs. D. A. Hurley, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Harley Johnson, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
14	W. F. Kavanagh, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
14	Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
14	E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Wm. McKenzie, Intl. Org.	150 00
14	Theodore Leske, Death Claim No. 11334, Local 64	50 00
14	Fred L. Stegman, Death Claim No. 11335, Local 64	50 00
14	Robt. Young, Death Claim No. 11340, Local 279	50 00
14	Charles H. Braden, Death Claim No. 11344, Local 102	50 00
14	Albert Ortnier, Death Claim No. 11346, Local 865	50 00
14	Robert Fox, Death Claim No. 11347, Local 7	50 00
14	Henry Clay Hill, Death Claim No. 11350, Local 34	50 00
16	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00
16	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
16	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
16	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00

Date
16	John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
18	Safe deposit box	5 00
18	Homer James, Org.'s fee, Local 336	10 00
21	Clerks	72 00
23	Protested check, Local 316	22 00
23	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00
23	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
23	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
23	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00
23	John J. Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
23	B. Gray, L. S. O., Local 315	20 00
26	Printing and mailing M. & S.	2,287 65
28	Clerks	72 00
30	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00
30	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
30	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
30	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00
30	John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
30	Norman King, Org.'s fee, Local 670	10 00
31	Edward Flore, Gen. Pres.	359 03
31	A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	216 05
31	P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	156 88
31	R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	167 74
31	Mary Dempsey, Intl. Org.	150 00
31	Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	170 81
31	W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00
31	Mrs. D. A. Hurley, Intl. Org., defense	157 80
31	Harley Johnson, Intl. Org., defense	155 67
31	W. F. Kavanagh, Intl. Org., defense	163 18
31	Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	176 21
31	A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	158 55
31	E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	161 71
31	Wm. McKenzie, Intl. Org.	178 31
31	Jesse Elza, Death Claim No. 11179, Local 669	50 00
31	James E. McCourt, Death Claim No. 11345, Local 14	50 00
31	Agnes Egerer, Death Claim No. 11351, Local 207	50 00
31	Charles A. Simpson, Death Claim No. 11352, Local 659	50 00
31	Alex Irwin, Death Claim No. 11353, Local 7	50 00
31	Nelson Simonson, Death Claim No. 11355, Local 100	50 00
31	Joshua H. McDaniel, Death Claim No. 11356, Local 353	50 00
31	Chas. S. Grant, Death Claim No. 11357, Local 7	50 00
31	Rudolph Deville, Death Claim No. 11358, Local 58	50 00
31	Harvey P. Evans, Death Claim No. 11361, Local 402	50 00
31	Frank Custard, Death Claim No. 11362, Local 115	50 00
31	James Davis, Death Claim No. 11364, Local 177	50 00

Date
31	Patrick Sinnott, Death Claim No. 11368, Local 207	50 00
31	Thos. Welding, Death Claim No. 11363, Local 491	50 00
31	Harry Peabody, Death Claim No. 11343, Local 300	50 00
31	Sub. magazine	16 25
31	Jere L. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas.	400 00
31	Janitor	15 00
	American Ry. Express Co.	46 03
	Towel supplies	1 15
	Stamps	52 15
	Office supplies	4 93
	Telegrams	1 83
Total		$10,827 85

Cash on hand Jan. 1, 1922.	$37,835 37
Liberty Loan Bonds	95,460 07
Canadian Bonds	4,975 00
Receipts for January, 1922.	11,921 77

Total	$150,192 21
Expenditures for January, 1922	10,827 85

Balance on hand Feb. 1, 1922	$139,364 36
------------------------------	--------------

In Death Fund Jan. 1, 1922.	$135,539 48
Appropriated to Death Fund, January, 1922	2,414 85

Total	$137,954 33
-------	--------------

Drawn from Death Fund, January, 1922	1,100 00
--------------------------------------	----------

Balance in Death Fund, Feb. 1, 1922	$136,854 33
-------------------------------------	--------------

In Defense Fund Jan. 1, 1922	$1,162 79
Appropriated to Defense Fund, January, 1922	1,550 90

Total	$2,722 69
-------	------------

Drawn from Defense Fund, January, 1922	1,815 20
--	----------

Balance in Defense Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$907 49
--------------------------------------	----------

In Con. Assmt. Fund Jan. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
Appropriated to Con. Assmt. Fund, January, 1922

Total	$1,204 10
-------	------------

Drawn from Con. Assmt. Fund, January, 1922
--	--

Balance in Con. Assmt. Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
--	------------

In General Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$398 44
In Death Fund Feb. 1, 1922	136,854 33
In Defense Fund Feb. 1, 1922	907 49
In Con. Assmt. Fund Feb. 1, 1921	1,204 10
Total	$139,364 36

FRACTIONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

An election is held, the vote stands 80 to 20. The officer getting the higher number wins and takes office. He did not wish himself into office, did he? Your wishing him to be a success is all right. But if you wed the wish to personal interest and action, you thus help your choice to go forward. Refusing to co-operate with officers of your choice, makes you fractionally responsible for failure. Figure it out.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

ST. PAUL, MINN., January 28, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 27—Canvassed the waitresses in the Rockaway, Lennox and Pioneer Restaurants.

December 28—Went to South St. Paul. Canvassed a number of restaurants, receiving seven applications.

December 29—In company with Brother Kitchener, business agent of Local 556, St. Paul, called on manager of K. & K. Restaurants, who agreed to hire members of the waitresses' organization.

December 30—Canvassed the waitresses in the Alverdes, Ryan Hotel and Himes' Restaurant.

January 2—At the request of George Lawson, secretary of the Minnesota State Federation of Labor, went to Rochester, Minn., and addressed a meeting of the Women's Union Label League. Installation of officers took place.

January 3—Canvassed the waitresses at the Gopher, Bruni and Harry's Restaurants.

January 4 and 5—Canvassed the waitresses in a number of restaurants in Minneapolis.

January 6—Attended a meeting of waitresses, Local 593, Minneapolis, and also cooks, Local 458. Installation of officers was held. They also entertained the families and friends of the members. Refreshments were served, and also music and dancing.

January 9—Visited Williams' Box Lunch Restaurant and also Pioneer Restaurant, receiving dues.

January 10—Held a conference with the proprietor of the Boardman Restaurant in reference to unionizing his establishment. No decision was arrived at and was told to call again.

January 12—Attended meeting of Local 556, and also had the pleasure of installing officers for the ensuing year.

January 13—Attended meeting of Waitresses' Local 630, and also the Trades and Labor Assembly of St. Paul.

January 14—Local 630 moved their office to Trade Union Halls. This change, no doubt, will be for the best interests of the organization.

January 16—In company with Brother Kitchener called on the management of the new Atlantic Restaurant, in regard to employing members of our organization, which he agreed to do.

January 18—Attended the Trades and Labor Assembly in Minneapolis.

January 19—Attended a meeting of Local 556, cooks, of St. Paul.

January 20—Attended a meeting of Waitresses' Local 630, St. Paul and also St. Paul Trades and Labor Assembly.

January 21—In company with Brother Kitchener called on the new proprietor of the Pioneer Restaurant, who wanted to reduce the wage scale. He agreed to pay and keep the same wage scale in effect.

January 23—Canvassed the Rockaway, Lennox and Grady's Restaurants.

January 24—Went to see the proprietor of the Cozy Restaurant in reference to employing members of the waitresses organization, which he agreed to do.

January 25—Canvassed the waitresses in the Ryan Hotel, St. Paul Hotel and Alverdes Restaurants.

January 26—Canvassed the waitresses at the Ambassador Cafe. Attended meeting of Cooks' Local 556. Brother Kitchener resigned as business agent, going into business for himself near Duluth. Brother Guy Fielding was elected to fill the vacancy.

January 27—Attended meeting of Local 630, Waitresses, and also the Trades and Labor Assembly, St. Paul.

Fraternally yours.

MARY DEMPSEY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

DETROIT, MICH., January 29, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month:

December 28—Special meeting of Local Joint Executive Board at 2:00 p. m.; decided to put pickets at Pitt's Agency to warn our friends and members that this is the agency of the Hotel Men's Association. At 3:30 p. m., Executive Board session of waiters' union. Evening, meeting of Detroit Federation of Labor.

December 29—Pickets at Pitt's Agency doing effective work. Cooks' meeting in the evening; well attended considering all the troubles we have had of late.

December 30—Assisting new business agent, A. Friedrich, of cooks' local, on books and November report; also attended club meeting of Local 705; long interesting session.

January 3—Presided at Local Joint Executive Board. Wage schedules and work for new year discussed.

January 4—With three business agents adjusted differences, we believe, for good at Main Restaurant. With Sister C. Edmunds to Henry Clay Hotel, just opened with members of waitresses' and cooks' unions. Evening, meeting of Detroit Federation of Labor.

January 5—Canvassing ex-members and delinquents with Business Agent P. Erickson. Met with success. Also called out to Westwood Inn, Inkster, Mich., to adjust a case with Mr. W. B. McMahon, manager, who informed us that one of our members disappeared with the receipts of his work, the night previous. Of course the local has a habit of making good for its members and the manager knowing this took no pains to apprehend the gent, which was giving the local poor protection and we told him so, which he admitted. Well the waiter has been located in the Capitol City and will pay the penalty they all do in the long run. Evening at cooks' meeting.

January 6—Very warm session of waiters' union and nothing accomplished that would mean solidarity, just the opposite, but in time the minority if sincere, will agree that the majority are honest as well in their opinions and took the most reasonable course in the case causing the excitement, a sort of lesser of two evils as it were.

January 9—Canvassing Gannon's and Greenfield's Restaurants.

January 10—Executive Board session of cooks' union. Walter Bower, new member on board, an asset, who will be heard from here in the movement.

January 11—Executive Board of waiters' union. Kosher Restaurants caused serious discussion. Evening at Detroit Federation of Labor. Three locals always well represented.

January 12—Meeting of Local Joint Executive Board and cooks' local. Both sessions very lively.

January 13—Meeting of waiters' union. Large attendance. Brother F. X. Martell, of Detroit Federation of Labor, addressed members.

January 16 and 17—Assisting Business Agent P. Erickson, of waiters' union, on ex-members. Received back dues at Strykers and Frontenac.

January 18—With Press Secretary L. Koenig, Business Agent P. Erickson, waiters union, held conference with Mr. Moy (Chinese) (Americans interested who will open up a very large dining room), to secure employment for our membership. Prospects seem good for white waiters and cooks. Also attended Executive Board of waiters' union.

January 19—Special meeting (afternoon) of cooks, for night workers. Fairly well attended. Again called to Westwood Inn, Inkster, Mich., nearer to adjusting a case that means $140 to waiters' union.

January 20—Mt. Clemens, Mich., where some in charge were thinking of disbanding but new plans for future carried out will offset that idea. Local is financially in good shape and Business Agent Sister L. Neverman, a faithful official, but receives no co-operation. Girls fear taking an office as times are bad here and work scarce, but pay their dues promptly in some places.

January 23—Made up December and January reports with Business Agent A. Friedrich, of cooks' union. Also attended meeting of Local Joint Executive Board.

January 24—Meeting of waitresses' union. Fair attendance. Sister H. Kopacz, president, and Sister C. Edmunds, business agent, tireless workers and active in the Federation of Labor.

January 25—With Business Agent P. Erickson, of waiters' union, seeking reinstatements and back dues; partly successful. Attended Executive Board meeting of Local 705, waiters' union. Decision to move club and cut down rent from $200 to $100, cut out evils existing and lessen friction among members and go after ex-members who assured us of their return when taking this step. We may lose some few who live by their wits, not as waiters, but as hangers-on but the new board means business. "A home for waiters," says Brother C. Jacobson, who is caretaker of the club's business and finance (newly elected).

January 26—With Secretary P. Erickson, of Local 705, called on Mr. Cummings, manager of

D. A. C., where colored waiters are employed. It seems we had this house but two strikes and Local 705 was out for good. We received instructions to call again, when a date will be set when he has spare time to do justice to the subject. We have about 32 union cooks here and I have met with success with same gentlemen for cooks, getting them reinstated after strike last May, so hope for similar success for waiters. Evening, meeting of cooks' union; two applications and two initiations. Bank here has made good to this local for amounts involved in the checks forged by ex-Business Agent James Palmer.

January 27—Regular meeting of waiters' union. Brother E. B. Gregory was selected steward of new club; a very efficient man for this position.

Expenses for the month:

January 20—Detroit to Mt. Clemens and return	$0 52
City and Inter-City carfare.....	3 90
Postage	28
Total	$4 70

Fraternally yours,

WILLIAM F. KAVANAGH,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-16

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., January 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

From the 1st to date, have worked in Los Angeles, with the exception of three days spent with Local 402, of San Diego, where it was found necessary to put two disturbers in the "can" for refusing to conduct themselves like men. The officials and members of Local 402 have decided that hereafter that local's headquarters is going to be conducted in such a manner that the membership can with pride and satisfaction spend their leisure moments without being disturbed by a bunch of drunks and coke-heads. If this statement is doubted, actions will tell stronger than words.

During the month visited cafes and hotels with the business agents of the Los Angeles locals and started the ball rolling to get back in the stride we were in a year ago. Glad to report that applications and reinstatements are being received in fairly good quantity and many more yet in sight.

Attended all the meetings of the locals, the Local Joint Executive Board, and on January 16, with Sisters Harding, Lane and Beck of Local 639 attended the meeting of Local 681 of Long Beach, where we found President Watts and Business Agent Kauffman keeping up the fight and getting ready for the summer season.

There is considerable unemployment on the Coast this winter, in fact many more than usual are on the streets and up against it, so do not come this way unless you are prepared to feed yourself when out of work.

In canvassing the cafes and hotels we find a great many suspended men and women from outside locals, and in many cases the reinstatement fees of those locals are so high that the suspended one absolutely refuses to pay up, and with very little power behind us we have a tough job getting the bird either lined up or canned; however we are making it interesting for most of those shirkers and hope to soon be in a position to put additional pressure on them.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Interurban to Beaches.....	$4 70
January 19, to San Diego.....	4 91
January 21, to Los Angeles.....	4 91
Postage	2 10

Total$16 62

With best wishes,

Fraternally yours,

AL. C. BECK,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

HARTFORD, CONN., January 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 28 and 29—Accompanied by Secretary Petersen of Local 273 called on a number of houses where non-union and suspended members are employed.

December 30—Meeting of Local 273.

January 1—Meeting of Local 81. Poor attendance; no meeting held.

January 3-5—Assisted by Secretary J. J. McCort canvassed the city, collected dues and reinstatements. Got promises of two new applications.

January 6—Meeting of Local 273. Installed newly elected officers as well as attending to other important matters in the interest of the local.

January 8—Special meeting of Local 81. Meeting fairly well attended. Election and installation of officers for 1922. Reported on visits to the various establishments where suspended and non-union members were employed. Some of the old guards are willing to stand by the old ship and continue to pay their dues, a number of them in advance, while the slackers—some of those same individuals received a great deal more financially and otherwise from the local than they have paid in, even if they were in continuous good standing for a number of years—are holding good jobs on the pretext that they were union men. We informed the proprietors that they were suspended members and that they would have to come clean.

January 9-13—Assisted Secretary Peterson, Local 273, in trying to clean up some of the houses but about all we received were promises. Local 273 expects to turn in a list of all non-union houses into the Springfield Central Labor Union at their next meeting, February 5. We hope to get results with their assistance.

January 12—Special meeting of Committee on Charges to investigate charges against the former business agent of Local 273.

January 13—Meeting of Local 273, at which time the former business agent, J. R. Hyde, was expelled from the local, and the former financial secretary was given a reasonable time to straighten out matters with the local.

January 17-18—At the request of the officers of Local 161, accompanied by Vice-President Conley, attended a meeting of that local at which time important matters in the interest of the local were acted upon.

January 19—Special meeting of Local 329 regarding the amalgamation of Locals 290 and 329.

January 20—Special meeting of Local 290 regarding similar action, which was voted upon by both locals, and the subject matter referred to the General Office.

The following is my expense account:

December—
24—Salem to Holyoke.....	$4 72
January—

16—To Brockton 4 58

19—To Lynn 1 14

20—To Salem 50

21—To Hartford 5 44

Postage 70

Total$17 08

Yours fraternally,

THOS. J. DURNIN,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

SEATTLE, WASH., January 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month of January follows:

Since my last report was filed for publication, all my time, with two exceptions, one trip to Tacoma and one to Portland, has been devoted to the work in Seattle in connection with the culinary strike.

No big changes have been made since the settlement with the Meves Brother's Cafeteria Co. The Chauncy Wright Third Avenue house closed its doors January 14, and at this writing, negotiations are in progress, whereby it is quite possible that in a short time, the place will open under new management, and will be operated under strictly union conditions and agreements.

Concerted effort is being made on the Panama Cafeteria and Rippe's Pike Street Cafe and Third Avenue Bungalow Cabaret, in order to bring these places into line again. Frequent conferences are being had with Mr. Rippe. Outlook promising.

January 7—To Tacoma. Matters pertaining to the standing of members of Local 61 taken up with secretary and straightened out.

January 18—To Portland at request of president of Local 305. Adjusted differences between Locals 189 and 305. All Portland locals making progress. The controversy between the unions and the C. & C. Cafeteria settled satisfactorily. The settlement, so quick and sure, places our Portland unions in a very advantageous position to combat other misguided restaurant men. All in hopes no further trouble arises in Portland, but ready to meet the emergency should one arise.

January 21—To Seattle, arriving Sunday, January 22. Took up correspondence and other matters needing attention. Have arranged conference with several restaurant men. Also conference with Meves Brothers. Settlement there not all to the good. Meves Brothers have not kept their word as promised. Outcome of conference yet in balance.

Expenses for the month follow:

January—
7—Round trip to Tacoma by boat.....	$ 80
18—To Portland, Ore., fare	6 68
21—To Seattle and sleeper.....	10 43
Postage stamps	50

Total$18 41

Fraternally yours.

HARLEY JOHNSON,
International Organizer.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 29, 30 and 31—Canvassed the various hotels and restaurants on the South Side, and attended several conferences of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

January 1—Attended meeting of Chicago Federation of Labor.

January 2—Canvassed Porters and M. C. in Big Four stations, and Regua Cafe and Park View Hotel. Received two applications.

January 3—Canvassed a number of the South Side hotels and cabarets. Attended meeting of Local 7.

January 4—Assisted the committee of Chicago Federation of Labor in arranging for meeting to be held in the colored section of the city. Attended meeting of Local 583.

January 5—Canvassed a number of restaurants and cafes with Brother Peabody of Local 865.

January 6—Canvassed the Illinois Central, Michigan Central and Burlington stations. Attended mass meeting which was given by the Chicago Federation of Labor in the interest of the colored locals. The meeting was well attended.

January 7—Canvassed Lion's Edge cabaret with Brother Peabody of Local 7 and Organizer Parlee. Also assisted in initiating members from the Hull House in Local 865.

January 9—Canvassed porters in Illinois Central and Polk Street stations and the cooks from the boat. Received one application and a number of promises. Attended meeting of local joint board.

January 10—Canvassed cooks and waiters in several West Side cafes. Attended meeting of Local 268. Canvassed all the South Side cabarets with business agent of the Musicians' Union and organizer of the Butcher Workmen's Union.

January 11—Canvassed South Side restaurants and signed up one house, placing our card therein. Attended meeting of Local 583. Initiated two new members and received one traveling card.

January 12—Canvassed the Cadillac and Mitchell's restaurants with Brother Parker of Local 7. Number of them promised as soon as possible that they would come into our organization. Passed our circulars to cabaret waiters for the meeting to be held on the 13th.

January 13—Canvassed a number of restaurants and hotels, the men all talked favorably, but seemed to be afraid to take hold of the organization, owing to so many men being out of work, and the bosses hold the upper hand over them.

January 14—Canvassed waiters at the Windermere, Chicago Beach and the Cooper-Carlton Hotels with N. S. Wims of Local 268.

January 15 and 16—Canvassed porters in the various stations around the city. Number of them paid up their back dues in Local 268.

January 17 and 18—Canvassed the waiters in the Cooper-Carlton, Windermere, South Park and Park View hotels. Men all talked favorable and made arrangements for a mass meeting on the 20th in Hyde Park.

January 19 and 20—Canvassed the Hayes, Del Prado and the various hotels, and passed out circulars for the mass meeting in all hotels and restaurants. Attended mass meeting in the evening. Only a few showed up owing to the great snow storm that gripped the city on that night. Called our meeting again on a later date.

January 21—Canvassed waiters and porters in Sante Fe and Burlington stations, and assisted the secretary of Local 268 in getting out some circular letters to the suspended members of the local, to see if they could be reinstated.

January 23—Had a conference with the manager of the Hayes Hotel; made arrangements to meet with the waiters and cooks. Canvassed the waiters in Lion's Edge cabaret. Attended meeting of local joint board.

January 24—Canvassed cooks and waiters in the California cafe and cooks on the boat with Brother Peabody. Attended meeting of Local 268 and witnessed a splendid meeting.

January 25—Held conference with head waiter and chief cook at Hayes Hotel and made arrangements with them to call a meeting of all waiters and cooks employed in this hotel for the 27th. Attended meeting of Local 583. Two new members initiated.

January 26—Held conference with three of the proprietors of South Side restaurants; two of them promised to sign up with our organization. Received two applications.

January 27—Assisted secretaries of Locals 583 and 268 in getting off their reports and with the newly elected president of Local 583, Brother Beck, we held a meeting with all cooks and waiters in the Hayes Hotel. One cook signed up and the remainder and the waiters promised to come in after the first of February. I believe before spring is passed we will have the best local of its kind in the U. S. A.

My expenses for the past month were as follows:

Inter-city transportation	$6 15
Postage and stationery	1 37
Total	$7 52
I remain

Yours fraternally,
P. D. CAMPBELL,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BOSTON, MASS., January 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of January:

January 5—Attended the installation of officers of Local 112, Brother Conley officiating.

January 6—Meetings of Organization Committee and Local Joint Board.

January 9—Meeting of executive board of Organization Committee. In the evening, meeting of cooks with a good attendance, all shop chairmen being present.

January 11—Meeting of Local 34 and installation of their officers by Vice-President Brother J. Conley.

January 13—Meeting of Organization Committee.

January 20—We had the pleasure to have a visit from President Edward Flore. In the evening we attended a special meeting of the Local Joint Board which gave the General President the opportunity to meet all the officers and get acquainted with the situation in Boston.

January 21—Meeting of Executive Board of Local 34.

January 24—Meeting of Local 34, the following being elected delegates to a conference, called for February 23 in this city, to form a state council for our crafts: J. Kearney, Chris. Lane and A. F. Martel. Invitations to attend were sent to every local in this state. A conference was also called by the Central Labor Union here for January 29. Brothers J. Kearney and Martel were elected to represent Local 34.

In January we initiated 6 and reinstated 25. Business was very quiet this month, nevertheless my efforts were fairly successful. On the 21st two more houses closed their doors, victims of the Volstead Act. They were The Lucerne and The Frascati. We added one more full kitchen crew to our local, the United States Hotel. The cooks of Local 34 are again firmly established here and I hope they will stay so.

My expenses are:

Postage	$ 90
Inter-city car fare.....	7 50
Total	$8 40

Fraternally yours,

A. MARTEL.
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BOSTON, MASS., January 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month is as follows:

January 1—Attended Central Labor Council.

January 5—Attended the installation of officers of Local 112, which was held in Chipman Hall, Tremont Temple. International Vice-President, Brother Conley, accompanied by Brother John Henchey of Local 77, installed the officers of Local 112 for the ensuing year. The ceremony, though simple, was very impressive. A program of entertainment for the evening was very interesting. Brother Conley in his address, briefly but pointedly, outlined the responsibility which rests with the officers, and said many other encouraging words as to the future.

Mr. Hodgdon, who is, and has been for a number of years, legislative agent for our State Federation of Labor, gave a most interesting, as well as instructive, outline of labor's problems, and the necessity of combating with enemy forces.

Mr. Thomas Shine, president of the Amalgamated Street Railway Men's Union, was the speaker of the evening. Mr. Shine is widely known as an eloquent and forceful orator. Suffice to say, that to drop a pin would have been heard during his recital of many interesting events, and which we hope will lend to the serious manner in which our girls are expected to handle their problems.

The membership, as well as our invited guest, were much elated to have with us for the evening's pleasure, Brother John J. Kearney, whose oratorical ability is not to be questioned, but he scored the greatest success on this occasion by his more than usual witticism and splendid manner of telling funny stories, which made his presence much sought for on other occasions since.

The speakers, having finished, we were favored with several violin solos ably rendered by Mr. James Hausen, accompanied by Miss Stairr on the piano, who, by the way, is a daughter of one of our members.

Most delightful, indeed, was little Dolly Monahan, in her fancy dancing in various costumes. The little miss is also the daughter of one of our members.

The evening's entertainment ended with refreshments, followed by dancing. We all retired very much satisfied with our work, in the wee hours of the morning.

We have had the good fortune of having our General President make us a visit this month. All of us were glad to welcome him on arrival, to a much greater extent than what had been afforded most of us to show during his brief stay.

Short as it was, however, he did much in stimulating a more buoyant feeling, and left with us a greater confidence that our efforts if persisted in, will eventually avail us what we are at present being deprived of—the visible result of the work which, in the main, appears to be for naught, under the present conditions.

The girls here are holding grittily to the struggle to surmount the difficulties which they are being confronted with. There is a serious situation here, but would prefer to defer comment for the present, in that it is in the hands of our Central Council. I hope to be able to report more definite improvement in the next report.

My expense for the month is $6.20.

Wishing all of our members every success, I remain

Yours fraternally,
DELIA A. HURLEY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

NEW YORK, N. Y., January 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows:

January 3—Among other work I installed the officers of Local 5 at a good meeting when five candidates were initiated.

January 4—Accompanied Brothers Pattberg, Lederer, Lazarus and Redisch of our three Brooklyn unions, and Secretaries Kehoe and Finestone of the Central Labor Union and Hebrew Trades respectively, to a conference with the proprietor of Somner Hall, a place that has a permanent injunction against our unions, but the lack of patronage causing the boss to wish to settle. The settlement is still pending.

January 6—Installed the officers of Local 3 and then attended meeting of Local 1; both good meetings.

January 7—At the headquarters of Locals 1, 3, 219 and 719 on matters referred to me for adjustment.

January 9—On instructions, I visited Albany to assist our two locals. Called on Secretary Hoffman of Bartenders' Local 228, and in company with him and Brothers Cummings and Grogan of the Central Labor Union, we visited the saloons and secured some reinstatements and many promises from former members. I also visited waiters' headquarters, and found the newly elected officers of Local 471 on the job and bringing this local to the front again. Albany has a live Central Labor Union, and a lot of real union men who are always willing to assist in building up the unions of that city. Having to leave for important business with Local 1, on January 11, I left with promise to return and finish up the work there.

January 11—Attended general meeting of Local 1, when final nominations for officers were made. International Vice-President Joe Cozzolino and officers from Local 109, Newark, were also present at this lively meeting, in which over 1,000 members of Local 1 participated.

January 12—Attended meeting of Local 3. Interesting session.

January 16, 17 and 18—We were favored with the presence of General President Flore and we kept him busy visiting the union headquarters and adjusting trouble. Among other accomplishments was the reaching of an agreement between Local 2 and Trommers, one of the best places in Brooklyn, that had been asking for some reduction in wages but settled on the old basis. He also was at Newark and also watched over the election of Local 1. This was a hotly contested election in which 1,695 votes were cast for the 80 candidates for the various offices. Thanks to the admirable arrangements made, all passed off in a satisfactory manner, the members agreeing that a fair election and honest count had been had. The judges worked in relays and it took forty-five hours continuous counting to complete the tally. Bros. Sam Turkel for president and Billy Lehman, secretary, with most of the old officials winning re-election. On instructions I watched the tallying until completed, which met with the approval and commendation of the members.

I regret to announce that former president and attendant as a delegate to several of our International Union conventions, Bro. Barthold Korn, is dead, having been a member of Local 1 for over thirty years. I am attending his funeral today, January 26, 1922. I will also install the newly elected officers at a general meeting held tonight.

My expenses are:

Albany and return	$11 08
Car fare, all lines.....	6 45
Postage, etc.	1 46

Total$18 99

Fraternally submitted,

R. E. CROSKEY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18-7-83-8-83-13-8-15

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., January 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 27 to January 6—The following brothers of Local 437, Barry, Hellmer, Harris, Blohm and Specht, made special efforts to organize restaurants and soft drink places, where a great many union men were patronizing, and we must have got some of the proprietors guessing, for on the night of January 5 I was assisting Brother Barry on his books when two policemen appeared and asked if two men whose names were Lyons and Hathaway were around. I told him we knew no man named Hathaway, but my name was Lyons, and he said I was under arrest, and I asked him if he had a warrant. He said he didn't need one, the inspector just wanted to go over some matters with me, so I went with them down stairs, and instead of walking over to the police station, they walked me three blocks out of the way and called the wagon. It was then I found out that I was slated as a vag. I was searched and placed in the bull-ring and stayed there two hours and thirty-five minutes; Secretary Adolph Fritz, of the State Federation of Labor, got a bondsman.

January 6—Every business agent in the city held a meeting and decided to call on the mayor, and the International officers who are located here also got together and invited Mr. Bookwalter, a former mayor, and myself, and after I explained how I was arrested they decided to have a sub-committee wait on the mayor and find out if the statement he made the day he was inaugurated was true. He told the public he would not allow strike-breakers or roughneck organizers to come to this city during his administration. The International officers who attended the meeting were as follows: President Lewis and Organizer Zimmerman, of the United Miners; Secretary Frank Duffy and Treasurer Neal, of the Carpenters; President Tobin and Secretary Hughes, of the Teamsters; Dobbins and Priest, of the Bricklayers and Plasterers; James Shanessy, general organizer of the Barbers; Barrett and Spires, of the Typographical Union. The sub-committee was composed of Brothers Tobin, Duffy, Dobbins, Zimmerman, Mr. Bookwalter, myself and Brother Barry, of our Local 437. Brother Tobin, of the Teamsters, was chosen as spokesman and he went over the situation in regards to my arrest, and then stated if the statement was true that all organizers coming into Indianapolis were going to be run out of town, and if such was the case then it was time for all the International unions located here to take everything that they had and move to some other city. The mayor, Lew Shank, stated that some fellow came into his office and told him that two men named Lyons and Hathaway were going to call a strike, and that Lyons was wanted in several cities, so I never gave it a thought that this informer was a special detective for the street car company and was trying to get on the city police force, he had an application filed and this morning I had my secretary throw it away, and then told the committee that his statement was not for any organizer who represented a bona fide labor union, and said he was very sorry that this happened. He said labor unions elected him and he was going to stay with them and apologized to all of us.

January 7—Appeared in police court and the State refused to prosecute. The judge then discharged me. I desire to thank, through the MIXER AND SERVER, every International officer located here, also the delegates of the Central Trades Council, for their quick action in my behalf and making Indianapolis a safe landing place for all union organizers. January 9—Attended meeting of the Central Trades Council. It was the largest meeting that has been held for years. President Coffin, of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, and General President Daniel J. Tobin were the speakers, but we got a surprise, the mayor, Lew Shank, appeared and stated he wanted to say a few words. As he had two other meetings to attend his request was granted. He talked about my arrest and apologized to me and the entire labor movement and stated that he was for organized labor, and that all work for the city union labor must have the preference. He then invited me and Mrs. Lyons to have dinner with him. I accepted his invitation, but I told him that a committee from Local 437 would call on him the next day. He said it was all right.

Mr. Coffin was the next speaker and he said the labor unions and the Chamber of Commerce were getting along better in Indianapolis than any other part of the country, and stated that as long as he was the president he would avoid trouble.

General President Daniel J. Tobin was introduced and he told of his visit to Europe, and when he got through every delegate was glad they lived in the good old United States. He sure made a hit.

January 10—The following members of Local 437: Brothers Harris, Hellmer, Barry, and Sisters Lookehill, Langston, Schwab and Mrs. Lyons, accompanied me to the mayor's office, and I informed him of conditions that existed in many eating places and I also stated that our people should be appointed as inspectors, as they knew more about those places than anybody else. He agreed that I was right and he immediately appointed Brother Hellmer.

January 11—Canvassed the hotels and it will take some time to get those colored employes to get out of their long trance. I also got in touch with a colored preacher, Rev. W. Burns. He promised to do all he can with his people.

January 12 to 25—Canvassed drug stores, where food was sold and many soft drink places. Local 437 held a mass meeting for all culinary workers and Mrs. Luella Cox, of the Indiana State Industrial Board, addressed them on the laws for women workers in this State. She promised to do all she can to obtain an eight-hour law at the next session of the Legislature.

January 26—Accompanied Brother Barry to the east end of town and we are going to address the railroad employes next week and no doubt we will be able to get a few of the places around the shops.

Sister Harris, of Local 605, just got in from St. Joseph, Mich., and I know that she will be a great worker for that local while she is here.

The following is my expense account for the past month:

Printing of bills at Terre Haute.....	$2 75
January 11, lawyer fees.....	10 00
Postage and stationery.....	1 40
Total.....	$14 15

Yours fraternally,

ROBERT LYONS,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7.-*-83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL., January 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

December 27—Canvassed waiters and waitresses at the Great Northern and De John's Hotels. Attended meeting of Local 7; five reinstated.

December 28—In company with Brother Peabody, of Local 865, canvassed cooks in seven of the West Side places; two reinstatements, one application.

December 29 and 30—Canvassed waiters and cooks in eight of the large loop places; six reinstatements for Local 7. Attended meeting of the Executive Board of Local 7.

December 31—In company with Brother Emerson, of Local 7, canvassed waiters in several of the South Side places; three reinstatements.

January 3—Canvassed waiters and cooks at the Brevort Hotel and in some of the North Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; eight reinstated, four initiated.

January 4—In company with Brother Peabody, canvassed cooks in several of the West Side places; one application.

January 5—In company with Sister Alexander, of Local 484, held a conference with Mr. O'Leary, proprietor of the Jackson Park Tavern. See him again. Canvassed waiters in some of the South Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 865; four reinstated, one initiated.

January 6—In company with Brothers Ragan and Emerson, of Local 7, canvassed waiters at the La Salle Depot and States Restaurant, where about sixty are employed. Great number promised us to reinstate shortly. Attended meeting of Local 484; two initiated, one reinstated. Attended meeting of Executive Board of Local 7.

January 7—In company with Brothers Ragan and Emerson, of Local 7, canvassed waiters at the Union League Club, Brevort Hotel, Green Mill Gardens and Rainbow Gardens; five reinstatements, one application.

January 8—In company with President Ragan, of Local 7, canvassed waiters at Colesimo's Restaurant; three reinstatements, one application.

January 9—In company with Brothers Ragan and Emerson, of Local 7, canvassed waiters in five of the loop places; three reinstatements. Attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board. In company with Brothers Mickel and Staggenburg, of Local 865, went to South Chicago, attended meeting of Local 394. Officers installed for the ensuing term.

January 10—Held conference with our attorney in the interest of Local 865. Canvassed waiters at the Atlantic Hotel and Weiss's Restaurant; three reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; three initiated, seventeen reinstated.

January 11—In company with the officials of our local, held a conference with the management of the Berghoff Restaurant where seventy of our members are employed. Result satisfactory. In company with Sister Bane, of Local 484, canvassed waitresses in some of the loop lunch rooms, one application. Attended meeting of Local 583; two initiated.

January 12—Canvassed waiters at the Congress Hotel and Stillson's Restaurant. In company with our committee, held a conference with the proprietor of the Moulin Rouge Cafe. He agreed to unionize. In company with Sister Bane, held a conference with Mr. Mitchell, proprietor of two loop lunch rooms.

January 13—Went to Milwaukee, Wis., attended meeting of Local 59. Officers installed for the ensuing term by vice-president of our International Union, Brother John Staggenburg. Held a conference with the officials of Local 64.

January 14—Chicago. Canvassed waiters in some of the North Side places, two reinstatements. In company with Brother Peabody, of Local 865, held a conference with the proprietor of the Jackson Park Tavern. See him again.

January 16—Canvassed waiters and cooks at the Atlantic Hotel and Kunse's Restaurant; two reinstatements. In company with our committee, held conferences with two of the loop restaurant proprietors. See them again.

January 17—In company with our committee again held a conference with Mr. Mitchell. Came to an agreement with him to unionize his places. Canvassed waiters in two of the North Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; fourteen reinstated, one initiated.

January 18—In company with Brother Peabody canvassed cooks in several of the west Side places; several promises to reinstate shortly.

January 19—Went to Hammond in the interest of Local 720; canvassed employees in several of the places and had a talk with the officials of the local.

January 20—In company with Brothers Parker and Emerson, of Local 7, canvassed waiters in several of the large loop places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 484; five initiated.

January 21—Canvassed waiters and cooks in nine of the South Side places; two reinstatements. Attended meeting of the Executive Board of Local 7.

January 23—In company with Brother Parker held conferences with the proprietors of two of the West Side places. Canvassed waiters at the Northwestern Depot; one reinstatement. Attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board. Attended meeting of Local 89.

January 24—In company with President Sullivan, of Local 89, canvassed bartenders in nine of the North Side places; two applications. We collected dues from several of the brothers who were delinquent. Attended meeting of Local 7; three initiated, fifteen reinstated.

January 25 and 26—In company with Brothers Peabody and Parker, canvassed cooks and waiters in a large number of the loop places. Held conferences with three of the employers. See them again; four reinstatements.

My expenses for the month were as follows:

January—

13—Trip to Milwaukee and return.....	$5 14
19—Trip to Hammond and return, by train	1 72
Inter-city carfare	4 35
Postage	54

Total.....$11 75

Fraternally submitted,

E. W. PARLEE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

ALDERMEN VOTE, 25 TO 1, FOR SALE OF BEER AND LIGHT WINES.

Clinton E. Udell, 23rd Ward, Only Member of Board Who Opposes Resolution Bitterly Condemning Results of Prohibition.

The Board of Aldermen, by a vote of 25 to 1, yesterday afternoon passed the frequently discussed resolution, calling upon the St. Louis and Missouri representatives in the United States Senate and in the House of Representatives, to lend their efforts in behalf of a modification of the Volstead interpretation of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution to the end that the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer may be permitted.

The resolution, the full text of which was printed in yesterday's issue of the Globe-Democrat, bitterly condemns the results, heretofore attained by prohibition, and it specifically sets forth that the prohibition of light alcoholic beverages has resulted in an abnormal consumption of so-called "white mule whisky," which beverage is described in the resolution as "obnoxious, detestable, vitality sapping, health destroying and illicitly manufactured." The measure was introduced by Alderman Samuel Wimer from the Twenty-seventh Ward.

Committee of Five Reports.

On the day of its introduction the resolution was referred to a special committee of five Aldermen, who yesterday made a complete report to the full board, recommending the adoption of the measure. Approximately fifty representatives of labor organizations and bodies, opposed to prohibition, were in the aldermanic chambers when the resolution was reported out. As far as could be seen, there were no "dry" advocates in attendance, although it had been predicted that representatives of the Anti-Saloon League would be at hand.

Alderman Clinton E. Udell, representing the Twenty-third Ward, was the only member of the board present who voted against the adoption of the resolution. Udell, at previous occasions when the Board of Aldermen took a vote on the prohibition question, has been recorded as voting in favor of prohibition. He is also on record in the board as being the only member who voted against the adoption of a resolution expressing the indignation of the citizenship of St. Louis over the Irish situation.

Colleagues Don't Favor Stand.

Udell's stand with regard to the anti-prohibition resolution, apparently did not meet with much favor on the part of the other members of the board.

Says Board Should Not Meddle.

Udell did not explain on the open floor why he chose to vote against the Wimer resolution, advocating the return of light wines and beer. When questioned by a Globe-Democrat reporter later, he said:

"I do not think that the Board of Aldermen should meddle with these matters. Prohibition has been decided upon by the people and we should not try to change the verdict of the people. This is a matter for hundreds of thousands to decide and not for the members of the Board of Aldermen."

"But you are representing your constituents in all other matters, why not in this?" Udell was asked.

"Well, that is another matter," he replied, and then turned to another Alderman, who addressed a question to him.

Udell admitted to the reporter that he participated in the famous banquet which marked the opening of the Mill Creek sewer on February 19, 1913. This banquet probably was the most elaborate and expensive of its kind ever given in St. Louis or in any other city, and thousands of dollars were expended for choice liquors and refreshments served to the guests. The affair was given by the Carter Construction Company, builders of the $3,500,000 sewer.

Among the antiprohibitionists who were present at yesterday's board meeting, were the following: Jos. Hauser, president of the Central Trades and Labor Union; David Kreyling, secretary of the same organization; S. Snyder, Miss Olive King, C. Schott, C. Baird, H. Cordes, J. Rossfeld, J. Tessner, Maurice Cassidy, Thomas McNamara and Charles Thorman, all labor leaders.—St. Louis Daily Globe-Democrat, Saturday Morning, January 14, 1922.

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

Top of the morning to you, glad to see you smiling and cheerful as that appears to indicate that you are in fairly good health and looking forward to an interesting journey to the minds of history makers of our time. Of course you have been reading about the Irish Free State and how the boys in the Ould Sod have been tearing into one another and all that, but just let them alone for a few weeks, they will iron out their differences and probably take over the task of forming a permanent government.

There may be an election at which the question of continuing the Irish Republic or the Irish Free State will be decided. Judging from newspaper items from many sources, the offer of the British Government will be the winner, because of the fact that many of the people are tired of the trouble and battle and truly wish to give the Irish Free State a trial.

Let us hope that Griffith, Collins and their colleagues of the Irish Free State will never have a record such as the following to blot the pages of their legislative assemblies:

WHAT THINK YOU?

Reprinted from the Congressional Record.

I wonder if we were trying an ordinary prisoner at the bar, and if that ordinary man were charged with having stolen $263,000, and if his connection with the theft were proved as closely as the connection of Senator Newberry is proved with the financial transactions here involved, how long it would take a jury of 12 men to find the prisoner a particeps criminis in the transaction?

I wonder if, instead of this being $263,000 it had been $263, and the prisoner at the bar was a man of humble means, how long it would take a court or jury to find that individual guilty?—Senator James A. Reed (D), Missouri.

The vote taken in the United States Senate on January 12, 1922, by which Truman H. Newberry of Michigan became the junior Senator from Michigan, is a blur, a blot on the pages of history that cannot be obliterated. The vote was 46 to 41. From the report printed in the Enquirer of this city Friday, January 13, 1922, we take the following:

"To Senator Frank B. Willis, of Ohio, Republican, is ascribed the credit for having rallied enough 'doubtful' Republicans to the Newberry cause to prevent the unseating of the Michigan Senator." Frank B. Willis, ex-Governor of Ohio, advocate and expounder of Anti-Saloon League doctrines, reaches the pinnacle of his career, and unless we are greatly in error the Buckeye voters when called upon to decide whether Willis shall be returned to the Senate, will make their NAY vote so powerful that no one will ever have reason to doubt where Ohio citizens stand in the matter of purchasing membership in the Senate of the United States. The price paid for the seat in the Senate, was the amount used in the election in Michigan in 1918, just a mere bagatelle of $263,000 and Truman H. declared that he didn't know that any money was being used until after the election. The Groaners Chorus will kindly arise and render that patriotic ballad, "We Shall Rally Around the Hard Boiled Egg Until the Shell Comes Off, Shouting the Rallying Cry of Bunkum." After all, who is really to blame for a condition of affairs among the voters of a State when such a stunt as the purchase of a seat in the U. S. Senate can be eased over? Why did Newberry want to be a Senator? What prompted "his friends" to spend a quarter of a million of dollars to put him in the Senate? Will he be able to pay them back in legislation? What will Henry Ford do next, will he let the matter rest as it is, or will he keep on the trail of Truman H.? Ford will no doubt use a lot of gas keeping up with the process, but our guess is that instead of gas he will use printer's ink and by the time he closes with Newberry that fellow won't be able to look a flea-bitten pup in the eye and say doggie.

Speaking about gas, brings to mind a clipping from one of the public utility circulars that reach our desk. This bit is rather interesting:

NATURAL GAS ONCE WAS WORSHIPPED AS FIRE GOD!!

Today, natural gas is a household necessity in tens of thousands of homes; a convenient and efficient fuel.

Yet, not so many years ago, natural gas was worshipped as a fire god!

The first discovery of natural gas is a much discussed question. It was known to exist in China, Persia and British India for many centuries, although not put to commercial use. It appeared as leakage from gas-bearing strata through crevices in the ground, and when lighted by the natives it was worshipped as a fire god.

In this country, as early as 1775, George Washington dedicated to his country as a National Park a tract of land, which he had pre-empted, located in West Virginia, containing a burning spring. This was natural gas, leakage from a crevice in the ground.

The first discovery of natural gas by drilling in the United States occurred through the drilling of shallow wells for salt in Ohio and West Virginia, early in the nineteenth century. The first actual use of natural gas for light, best available records say, occurred in the town of Fredonia, N. Y. This was in 1826, but it was not until 1872 that a town of any size was piped so that natural gas could be distributed for domestic purposes.

This was at Titusville, Pa.

From 1872, the natural gas industry has had a phenomenal growth, increasing from a domestic service of about one hundred people to the present total of about two million and a half consumers, serving about twelve and a half million people. No other country has produced more than a small fraction of the natural gas produced by the United States and Canada.

The report of the United States Geological Survey for 1918 gives a total production of natural gas in the United States as 721 billion cubic feet.

* * *

Here is an item that we should have printed in the January number, but in spite of its being a few weeks delayed it will prove interesting, its information coming from a reliable source, for it appeared in the Los Angeles Citizen, December 2, 1921:

DISRUPTIONISTS HAVE DISAPPEARED.

Sometimes one year brings forth a remarkable change. It has been so with the Los Angeles Central Labor Council. This time last year the central body was seething with would-be disruptionists, bent upon securing control. Today they are gone, having disappeared as completely as if a big wind had swooped down and blown them into the sea.

In a less degree the same thing has happened in the California State Federation of Labor within the past two years. In 1919, when the Federation met in Bakersfield, the impossibilists mustered 26,000 votes, while at the San Jose session this year they could scrape together only 7,000 ballots. Be it said to the everlasting credit of Los Angeles, it contributed only one nut to that outfit at San Jose.

These mischief-makers come and go. But, rest assured, they always go. It is fortunate for everybody, including themselves, that they can last just so long—until their methods and their motives become known—when they disappear, to come back, or rather try to come back, under another name. First they were the I. W. W., then they were the O. B. U., and now they are the "Rank and File." They never were trade unionists, and most of them do not pretend to be. They are dangerous to the Labor Movement only when they bore from within. When they come out into the open and sail under their true colors, they defeat themselves.

There can be no doubt that there is room for much improvement in the Labor Movement, but it never will be brought about by secessionists. There is nothing constructive in a quitter. His color is yellow, and his destination is the scrap-heap.

Why not write that last portion on your machine, Mr. Secretary, and post it on your bulletin board at your local union headquarters:

THERE IS NOTHING CONSTRUCTIVE IN A QUITTER. HIS COLOR IS YELLOW, AND HIS DESTINATION IS THE SCRAP HEAP.

I guess that's telling it to 'em.

* * *

How many "Buddies" are still overseas? That query was prompted by the newspaper articles about the boat which started from Antwerp the first week in January and after a few hundred miles of wrestling with the Atlantic began to leak. One naturally wonders why it happens that with all of the vessels owned by Uncle Sam one had to be selected that "leaked like a sieve," according to one report, thus taking chances on an appalling loss of life. But what can you expect from a Government whose fighting men are hungry, homeless and jobless to the numbers of many thousands.

But pardon us, we started to submit an item clipped from the Times-Star of January 4, 1922, and here it is:

118,000 ALLIED TROOPS ON DUTY IN RHINELAND.

(Associated Press Cable.)

Cologne.—The allied armies of occupation in the Rhineland, which the German government has been endeavoring to have reduced, are composed at the present time of approximately 118,000 officers and men. Some German newspapers have been contending that the armies of the four powers should be reduced more than one-half, the money thus saved to the Berlin government to be applied to the reparations fund. The armies of occupation are divided as follows: England, 4,000; United States, 5,600; Belgium, 18,000; France, 85,000. Great Britain's troops numbered about 8,000 until a few months ago, when several detachments were sent to Upper Silesia, where they have been on duty since.

* * *

From the issue of Labor, Washington, D. C., of January 7, 1922, we clip the following from the Pum Line column:

COIN SUGGESTIONS.

We're going to assist the government select a fitting design for new coins, since we like the olive branch suggestion no better than the broken sword. If you have a bright idea send it along to the Line, but it must be brighter than the offerings of old "Hi" Phillips:

(1) "Cuckoo perched on an empty platter, begging for alms and snapping at the latest bulletins on food prices. The cuckoo symbolizes any citizen, the empty platter symbolizes an empty platter, and the whole thing symbolizes a protest against the party's failure to reduce the high cost of eating.

(2) "Woodpecker perched on the shoulder of a Senator, noting with despair that its beak is bent and blunted, but that no impression has been made on the Senator's head. The woodpecker is clutching a bunch of last year's asparagus, and the Senator is trying to get it away from him. The woodpecker symbolizes the Spirit of World Democracy. The Senator's head symbolizes the Senator's head. The asparagus symbolizes Article X to the woodpecker, but the Senator thinks it is part of his beard. The whole thing symbolizes the triumph of bone over idealism.

(3) "Buzzard sitting in a Morris chair holding a worm in its beak and trying to laugh without dropping it. A flock of buzzards are hovering overhead. The buzzard symbolizes an American profiteer, the worm symbolizes any wage-earner. The buzzards overhead symbolize a tough new year."

* * *

The following from the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Council, was sent in the latter part of December, 1921, but despite tardy presentation contains food for thought:

Washington, D. C., Dec. 19.—The reversal of a great process of moral education is seen by the Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Council in the present economic reaction, which it declares has attained so much momentum that the great Christian principle of the living wage is not only neglected in theory, but widely violated in practice.

A formal statement by the Department points out that before the war, the principle of a living wage was gradually but steadily winning acceptance from all classes of people, and that during the war it was formally recognized and enforced by public authority through the United States Labor Board.

The statement issued by the Social Action Department is as follows:

"The present movement for wage reductions disregards almost entirely the question of justice. Sometimes the demand for lower wages is expressed in the brutal language of economic materialism; 'labor must be liquidated.' Sometimes it is stated in terms that have a false appearance of fairness; 'wages must go down with prices.' Scarcely ever is the question asked: 'will the reduced wages afford the workers and their families a decent livelihood?'"

"It is now more than thirty years since Pope Leo XIII restated the great Christian principle of the living wage. 'When through necessity or the fear of a worse evil,' said the great Pontiff, 'the worker accepts less than a living wage, he is the victim of force and injustice.' Before the great war, this doctrine had been gradually but steadily winning acceptance among all classes of our people. During the war it was formally recognized and enforced by public authority through the National War Labor Board.

"Since the war we have seen a reversal of this great process of moral education. In the last few months the reaction has attained such momentum that the living wage principle is not only neglected in theory, but widely violated in practice. The remuneration of immense numbers of employees has been reduced to three dollars a day, and even less. Three dollars a day is not now a living wage for the father of a family. In 1914 no competent authority placed the cost of maintaining a man and wife and three small children at less than two and one-half dollars per day. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics informs us that the cost of living was in September, 1921, seventy-six and one-half per cent higher than in 1914. The National Industrial Conference Board, a bureau conducted by employers' associations, estimates the increase in living costs during the same period as sixty-three and one-tenth per cent.

"The Social Action Department of the National Catholic Welfare Council recognizes that some reduction of war time wages is not only inevitable but practically necessary. The Department maintains, however, that the lowered rates of pay should safeguard the right of the worker to maintain himself and his family in reasonable comfort. We believe that this rule is not only morally right but economically expedient. In this time of industrial depression, these words of the Catholic Bishops' Program of Social Reconstruction are peculiarly pertinent. The large demand for goods which is created and maintained by the high rates of wages and high purchasing power is the surest guarantee of a continuous operation of industrial establishments'."

Here is an item picked up a few weeks ago, probably it may interest you to read it and wise up:

DO METALS GET TIRED?

New York.—The question "do metals get tired?" which has puzzled scientists for hundreds of years, is being studied here by a committee of the National Research Council with the aid of the Board of Engineering Foundation. The scientists have long known, without understanding precisely why, that every once in a while a piece of tempered steel or stout forging will break down without apparent reason.

Wonder if it would be any use to direct the attention of the Engineers and Scientists to the fellow known as a Pin Head—that's metal, ain't it? And the son of a Swash never gets tired.

A woman in Detroit recently lectured to women. Her subject was, "Why women have no mustaches." And the following day a bright paragrapher wrote: "You never saw grass on a race track." From last reports he was still headed toward Bafin's Bay—the he in this instance being the paragrapher.

Judging from the following clipped from the San Diego, Cal., Labor Leader, of January 6, 1922, the Secretary of the new Local 402 is determined to line up patronage for the establishments which employ American citizens and members of his union:

UNION BUTTONS IN A JAPANESE RESTAURANT.

Secretary Baker says if you will look in at a certain Fourth Street Japanese restaurant almost any noon you can see union buttons, but they will not be the well-known Cooks' and Waiters' buttons. Oh no! says Baker, they will be the buttons of the Federated Trades on the coat lapels of union members trying to get a cheap meal. To get to this restaurant the customer must pass good union restaurants. "How do they do it?"

From the same publication and same date we take another cutting, as Lord Riddell, the clever Englishman who covered the Arms Conference in Washington and made a remarkable hit with the newspaper men of all lands, would say. It has a little of the good old hoss sense sprinkled through it and is worth perusing.

SELF-SEEKERS.

Every organization of human beings, fraternal, social, political or labor, has within its ranks certain individuals who seek to use the power of their organizations for their own personal aggrandizement; who, without consideration of the dictates of conscience, nor their own ultimate personal welfare, would sell not only their own birth-right but of those whom they represent for a mess of pottage. Labor organizations have not been blessed by the lack of this class of people. Unions are very much like any other aggregation of human beings; the members thereof are subject to the same emotions, impulses and temptations as are the members of any other kind of an organization.

When Henry Watterson, of Louisville died, the liberals of this country lost one of their ablest champions. "Marse" Henry was at his best when he wrote his scorching editorials about the Holier Than Thou bunch, the so-called reformers of laws, morals, etc., etc., ad nauseam. Shortly after the death of the famous writer, his old work shop, the Courier-Journal Building, was destroyed by fire. More than one old time Blue Button boy stood at the corner of Fourth and Liberty when Marse Henry was alive, for the privilege of having Marse Henry bow to them and say howdy. Late Brother George De Souchet, idolized Marse Henry and was able to relate innumerable little incidents which proved the old editor as an exceptional human being with an excess of kind sympathy which meant food for the inner man. Marse Henry in the parlance of our day and time, was a Regular Fellow and didn't give a hoot who knew it.

.

Back yonder when offering readable items from the San Diego, Cal., Labor Leader, it was my intention to reproduce this brief but to the point editorial comment. So without further ado, here it is, read it, and pass it along to the fellow that it fits:

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization. Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting. Don't say you are tired, the weather is bad, or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest you.

.

Member-at-Large Joe Smith, now rusticated at Cairo, Ill., sent us the following, clipped from the Monroe County, Missouri Appeal:

THE HARDING FLAG.

A Paris Republican exhibited the official Harding flag on the street Saturday. Meeting a Democratic friend, he would inquire:

"Have you seen the official Harding flag, Bill?"

"No." Bill would reply. "What does it look like?"

Then, turning an empty pocket out, the Republican would say:

"It looks like this!"

By actual count, 49 Democrats, after throwing haw-haw fits, exclaimed:

"Hell, man, I'm flying that flag, too."

.

Arthur Brisbane, the highest paid writing man in the newspaper game in America, was in attendance at the Armament or Disarmament Conference, held in Washington. He is, as most readers who have perused his editorials know, a very close observer and enjoys the happy faculty of saying some rather pointed things. Commenting on the situation so far as it concerned the wage earners, Brisbane said:

"In the rear, back of the big table, you can just see his face between Senator Lodge's right shoulder and Senator Underwood's left ear, sits Samuel Gompers.

"He represents workingmen and sits far in the rear. War is being discussed. When war comes, those workingmen are moved to the front. Statesmen, great ones of the earth, retire to the rear.

"That's why we have so many wars. If the workmen stayed in the rear and pushed the statesmen to the front line of fighting, it wouldn't take so many centuries to abolish war."

.

From the Cedar Rapids Tribune we scissor the following little bit of interesting comment by a man who evidently knows what he is talking about, even if you are a youngster you can afford to read it. In fact, there is a good reason why you should, for most of the old boys have already wised up to what age means and are pushing back Old Father Time by being youthful in thought and action:

"WHY GROW OLD?"

Thinking You Are Youthful Helps a Whole Lot.

By MAJOR JACK ALLEN.

I once heard of an old chap living in New York who started on a trip across the continent to California—the land of oranges, raisins and movies. On reaching Chicago, he long distance telephoned to his wife: "I feel ten years younger." From Omaha, he wired: "I feel fifteen years younger." From Salt Lake City he night lettered: "I feel twenty years younger."

After several days the patient wife received a telegram from a friend of her husband's in Los Angeles which said: "Your husband died this morning of infantile paralysis."

Of course the anecdote slightly exaggerates the "growing young" idea, but there is a lot of common sense in thinking you are young. I expect to be young when I reach 100 years of age. Perhaps this will be a surprise to my theatre-going friends who know Major Jack Allen through the media of Adventure Films' animal hunt series and my vaudeville appearances. Comparatively few of my good "fan" friends know of my philosophy of life by which I hope to attain a ripe old age without the loss of youthful vigor. "Back to nature" is my gospel.

It is my intention, as soon as I have amassed a sufficient amount of money from wild animal films, to open a health resort for the treatment of the tired American business men and to bring back the glow of youth to overworked humanity.

I believe that an occasional vacation in the woods or mountains takes years off any man's shoulders. But to attain maximum results there must be a community system in this vacation. A group of men must go out in the open together, forget the cares of the city entirely, play games and pranks of boyhood, find excitement in simple things, gather and prepare their own food—and thus find relief from all physical ailments.

A few years ago I experimented with a few captains of industry, whom I led on a hunting trip to British Columbia and the result was gratifying. I taught them wood craft, how to snare rabbits and how to cook grub. They appeared to find as much interest and enjoyment in the simple games which I planned for them as they did in the big games of Wall Street. They are returned to civilization 100 per cent fit.

Now I ask you—"Why Grow Old?"

.

That we are not the sole possessor of the viewpoint that the dear old soft-mitted brethren of the Anti-Saloon League were looking a long way ahead when they framed up the dry laws, is very nicely set forth in the following editorial from the New York World of recent date:

LOOKING AHEAD.

The game played by the Anti-Saloon League can be seen more clearly in the proposition to make prohibition enforcement a local matter than in any previous move. The paid agitators have put prohibition over on Congress and on the people of the United States; that job is done, and the men who did it are out of work. Work must be found for them, and if there was ever a golden and unlimited opportunity for salaried reformers, it will present itself when every city, town and hamlet in the state of New York, or throughout the United States, can be called upon to pass special ordinances for the better suppression of the liquor traffic. To the mind of the layman it may appear superfluous to add local prohibition laws to the federal and state laws already in existence and already absorbing the time and energy of a growing army of sleuths and agents, to say nothing of the state and city police. If enforcement were ever to enforce, it would seem that we have enough of it to do the trick. At any rate, we have more than it is convenient to pay for. But to reason thus is to miss the intent of the Anti-Saloon League. The officials of that body have gone astutely to work to install a perpetual money-collecting machine. If the measures they ask for are passed, they will have succeeded. Once they erect enforcement into an issue in every prairie village and cross-roads community, there will be at least twenty-five years of comfortable living ahead for all who make their bread and butter by campaigning against rum.

In the January number of the MIXER AND SERVER we intended to offer the following news item, but slipped somewhere along the pike and failed to do as we intended. The real old timers will recall the firm of Cunningham & Lyons, which later became known as Mike Lyons' Place. Those who were privileged to know Mike Lyons as an employer, cherish his memory, for he was one man on Manhattan Island who knew how to treat an employee right.

The following item we clipped from the Times-Star of December 14, 1921:

FAMOUS BOWERY RESTAURANT MAN IS DEAD AT 78.

"Mike" Lyons' Place Noted for Generous Portions.

New York.—Michael F. Lyons, 78, died in his Brooklyn home. Those who knew lower Manhattan between 1872 and 1905 will become reminiscent over the announcement.

"Mike" Lyons made it a matter of principle never to serve a customer a potato smaller than Mike's fist, and Lyons was equipped with a hand that the ordinary platter couldn't hide. He used to provide his clients with breaded veal cutlets and one of those Goliathic potatoes for 20 cents, and he grew passing rich doing it.

His restaurant was at 259 Bowery. It was back in 1885 that it saw its greatest popularity and it was in that era that it boasted its most famous patronage. Henry Ward Beecher was there so often that he was missed if two or three days lapsed between his visits. Chester A. Arthur not only was one of Mike's steady customers, but was wont to take with him his political train to talk over coming campaigns, surrounded by Mike Lyons' wondrous corned beef and cabbage.

Richard Croker and Jacob Patterson were as familiar to the place as Mike Lyons himself.

Theodore Tilton helped make it famous with his verse, and Tom Nast, Homer Davenport and equally renowned cartoonists drew for Mike's restaurant better cartoons than any of their newspaper employers ever bought. Theodore Roosevelt, when police commissioner, became a regular.

Lyons' restaurant languished in its latter years, but in its heyday it was celebrated as the Delmonico's of the Bowery. It was a great establishment—a quarter of a pie for a nickel and for 25 cents you got as much corned beef and cabbage as any one could eat.

**

That the early day fanatics, the ones responsible for the creation and enforcement of the Blue Laws, have their prototypes in the country today, will be apparent after perusing the following press dispatch to the New York World. After perusing the news item, you may wonder if that Davey person is a fit person to speak for Christians, in fact you may have heard gunmen who were less coldblooded than the Lord's Day Alliance spokesman.

LET THEM DIE, HE SAYS OF "BOOTLEG" DRINKERS.

Better Off Dead, Is Declaration of Lobbyist for the Lord's Day Alliance.

(Special to The World.)

Albany, Jan. 16.—"The public should not get nervous over the Prohibition situation. Let drinkers of bootleg whiskey die," declared Robert G. Davey, former counsel to the Anti-Saloon League and now legislative representative of the Lord's Day Alliance.

"Any man," continued Davey, "who has so little moral fibre that he will drink the poison that is now being illicitly sold to the public is of no worth to society. He is better off dead."

Davey's statement was provoked by an inquiry as to whether deaths from poison liquor were not adding to the dissatisfaction with Prohibition. Davey is one of a dozen dry lobbyists pushing the local option enforcement bills, a "concerted discussion" of which is to be staged in churches throughout the State next Sunday under direction of the Anti-Saloon League.

**

The metropolis of the Centennial State, Denver, was recently held up by the organized fanatics, the Anti-Saloon League, as a model of what Prohibition had accomplished. Probably they anticipated the report of the police department for the year 1921 and endeavored to get their "shot across" before the avalanche of facts were made public. A report made public by the police department, Saturday, January 21, 1922, shows that "arrests for drunkenness have doubled in Denver during the last two years. Total number of persons arrested in 1921 was 19,649, increase over 1920 of 6,700.

"Arrests for drunkenness last year totaled 3,163, while the number in 1920 was 1,847, and in 1919, 1,423."

If that is a model of prohibition benefits, the organized fanatics must be bothered with chiggers in the brain box, assuming that they have such a possession. Prohibition is great stuff fellows, if you say it quick.

**

Florida has had its troubles, but from present indications that State is about ready to hand itself the largest citron in the box. According to an article printed in the Baltimore Sun, January 18, 1922, William "Chinnings" Bryan will be a candidate for the Senate from Florida opposing Park Trammell. Now the members of our International Union will understand why we have not been able to maintain a local union in that State.

Here is an article we clipped from the Times-Star, December 15, 1921. Probably you have read it before, at any rate we want to include it so that we may have something to refer to later on:

GERMAN WORKER PAID LESS THAN CENT AN HOUR.

Startling Figures Regarding Teuton Wages.

New York.—The day when the Chinese worker ranked as the world's poorest paid employe has passed. At the present moment Germany is operating under a salary schedule that seems, when measured in currency of the United States, almost Lilliputian. G. E. Pingree, vice-president and general manager of the International Western Electric Company, has just returned from a trip of industrial investigation in Europe, bringing with him some figures of unusual interest. In November, men in the commercial departments of many of Germany's leading corporations operated under a wage scale that called for a monthly stipend of 1,323 marks for inferior work, 1,512 marks for plain office routine, 1,876 marks for positions that entailed a certain degree of responsibility, and 2,119 marks for minor executives; all this when the mark was valued at less than half a cent in the American money market. In other words, members of the best-paid group received less than $10 a month at the present rate of exchange. The employes of the hourly rated and piece work classes are in even worse straits than those paid by the month. First-class experts in the former category are getting about 8.05 marks an hour at the present moment. Trained workmen who fail to make the expert standards receive 6.10 marks and untrained laborers 5.75; an additional sum of 125 marks a month is paid to every married worker, together with another 125 marks for each child. Women in the German shops are paid little more than a cent an hour.

Other European countries are almost as bad off; poor wages and deflated currency tell a tale that should not be lost upon the citizens of America. There should be a storm of letters to every law maker in Washington asking what they are doing to provide a working immigration law to take the place of the Dillingham Act. Do it now is good advice; tell your representative what you expect of them.

Don Marquis of the New York Sun has been having an enjoyable time with the shine Christians and supporters of the Anti-Saloon League. Just peruse the following from his column of January 12, 1922:

THE SUN DIAL.

The Administration, we see by the papers, "hopes that China and Japan will come to an agreement over Shantung." That is what one might call the pinnacle of optimism.

In a recent number of the Sun Dial we said: When is the expurgation of the Bible by the Anti-Saloon League to begin?

"A little wine for thy stomach's sake," said St. Paul. And he is not the only saint or the only Bible personage who would fail ethically if measured by the strict standards of the prohibitionists who have fastened their prejudices upon this country.

The Bible is permitted a wide general circulation by the authorities. Our moral leaders even go so far as to encourage its perusal by impressionable youth. It stamps itself into their minds and spirits ineradicably. And first and last, the Bible exhibits a number of persons who are cried up as spiritual heroes in active sympathy with wine.

Either this is right or it is wrong. If it is wrong, the task of rewriting the Bible so that it may be safely circulated in America cannot be begun any too soon. If it is a dangerous book, the Anti-Saloon League owes it to us to remove the danger from us.

We look humbly to the league for moral guidance. In fact, we demand this guidance. As it is, we are torn savagely between two loyalties. The league cannot evade its responsibility in this matter.

We are in receipt of two letters from Mrs. Sarah R. Jennings of Florham Park, N. J., in which she says, in part:

"I believe that all God fearing people will resent the criticism upon the Bible, as appearing in the Sun Dial, and I ask an apology for its appearance . . .

"The Bible, in my youth, was the foundation of my spiritual life, just as milk sustained my physical well-being. I believe that if the Bible was more cherished in these days, the youth of our nation would bring more honor to our age.

"If mine is the only protest you have had of Don Marquis's reference to the Bible, it must be that decent people no longer read the Sun Dial; surely that column no longer reflects The Sun. The writer seems to be suffering from a terrible taste or unholy thirst, but no matter what his suffering it cannot be traced to the Bible . . ."

Our correspondent fails to note that our original article was written from the point of view of a defender of the Bible. It was an argument against the Anti-Saloon League.

It is the Anti-Saloon League from whom she should demand an apology.

We point out once again that either certain well-known personages in the Bible narratives are wrong, in their attitude toward beverages containing alcohol, or else the Anti-Saloon League is wrong.

Personally, we do not have the impertinence to condemn Jesus of Nazareth, who turned water into wine at a certain wedding feast. We feel certain that Jesus was no advocate of gluttony or drunkenness; at the same time it is quite evident from His actions that He was entirely in sympathy with a quite innocent and moderate use of wine.

We point out once more that either Jesus of Nazareth was wrong about this matter, or else the Anti-Saloon League is wrong.

It is not the editor of the Sun Dial who is in opposition to Jesus of Nazareth in this respect; it is the Anti-Saloon League.

We do not know how we can make our attitude any clearer. Let us repeat it yet once more: It is our belief that the Anti-Saloon League is entirely wrong, and that Jesus was entirely in the right.

If any one can misunderstand that, it is because he wishes to misunderstand it.

There are two points of view in the world. Jesus held one, and pharisees and formalists held another. This country has not yet retrogressed in the matter of civilization to such an extent that the fundamental issue cannot be publicly stated. But it looks as if it were going that way. Personally, we shall do all we can in opposition to the gloomy tyranny of repression.

Says a headline: "Imports of Liquor Show Big Increase." It reminds us of the distinguished foreign visitor who spent some weeks in America last year, and remarked as he was leaving the country: "By the way, when does your Prohibition law go into effect?"

The able Don is not the only one that is engaged in showing the men and women of America what the prohibition law means. Here is an article we received from Brother John T. McLaughlin, Secretary of Local 398, Manchester, N. H. He clipped it from the Manchester Leader, of January 16, 1922:

FR. LYONS BLAMES DRY ERA FOR EVILS.

Says Enactment of Amendment Infringement Upon Personal Liberties.

Prohibition brought about by the 18th amendment to the constitution is an infringement upon personal liberties, according to remarks made at the 11:15 o'clock mass at St. Anne's church, Sunday, by Rev. John J. Lyons, P. R., pastor of the church, who was prompted to utter an arraignment of the dry law by the gospel of the day, which told of the Lord changing water into wine at the wedding feast, in the first of the many miracles He performed. Father Lyons said that he blamed the saloons for the dry laws, as they violated the then existing laws in such an open manner that drastic measures were brought about.

Cause Crime Waves.

Referring to the crime waves which are sweeping the large cities of the country, Father Lyons intimated that prohibition had brought about conditions which were worse than before the law was enacted as it made many peaceful citizens law violators, for they took chances in making home brew, and breaking one law simply led to breaking other laws.

Father Lyons in his remarks said that he had noticed in the city there has been a decrease in the number of arrests for violation of the prohibition laws, but in the country at large, in the two years of attempted enforcement of the dry laws, there has been no improvement in morals, or less crime, or any decided advantage to the people for whom the law was made. From statistics he had gathered Father Lyons said that he noticed that conditions had deteriorated rather than improved, and to his mind the law was made so drastic that the personal rights of individuals have been seriously invaded.

He said that it will be impossible ever to enforce the existing prohibition law, no matter what efforts are made and what amount of money is expended to interpret the 18th amendment.

Referring to local conditions, Father Lyons said that if there has been a decrease in crime in Manchester it has been due to the efficiency of the police department and not to prohibition.

Not long ago we printed an item about the number of women in one of the overseas countries. Here are additional facts that will give a more comprehensive view of the world situation. The article is taken from the Minneapolis Tribune of recent date:

OVER-FEMINIZED EUROPE.

Among its numerous perplexities, Europe is troubled by its feminine problem. Even before the war nature, in Europe, appeared to have a preference for feminine babies, and in 1914 England was complaining that it had a majority of 1,330,000 women, while Germany had 850,000, Russia 700,000, and France 500,000 more women than men.

The war did everything it could, naturally, to swell this feminine majority, with the result that Europe now has 15,000,000 more women than men. Were the women emigrating in large numbers observers might feel that in time the balance would be redressed. This, unhappily, is not the case. The men, rather than the women, are doing the emigrating, and the situation, instead of being improved, is being aggravated.

Germany alone has 2,300,000 more women than men. Numerous remedies have been suggested, but few of them have any very practical ring. Most of them make the fatal mistake of ignoring the immovable predilections of human nature. The Germans, indeed, during the war were credited with entertaining the idea of installing a system of provisional polygamy, but post-war travelers in Germany were never able to find any evidence that such plans had been seriously considered. The usual remedy put forth pins its faith in emigration. Yet it must be apparent that emigration can never solve a problem of such dimensions. The German girl of twenty, or the French girl of twenty, or the English girl of twenty, is no more enamored of the thought of buying a steamship ticket for Australia, Argentina, Brazil, Canada, or Alaska than the American girl would be. The European girls may not like their situations in their home countries, but almost anything is preferable to the thought of going alone and friendless into some extravagantly distant exile. The statistics in South America or Australia may look much more propitious, but for all that they do not feel disposed to face the terrors of the unknown solely that they may better their chances for marrying.

Once more permit us to recall what we said about the Dillingham Act, for that bunch known as the Plunderbund, are wise to what is what overseas, and we may look forward to a stream of women and girls willing to take the places of our women and girls and at wages which our women and girls would indignantly decline to work for.

One of our boys at Syracuse, N. Y., sends us the following editorial with the gentle hint that it would read well in this survey. The date of the article, January 16, 1922; the paper, Syracuse Journal:

TRIBUTE TO MR. WILSON.

The tribute which was paid Woodrow Wilson yesterday by Washington admirers must have warmed the heart of the former president of the United States, assuring him, as it did, that he was held in affectionate remembrance, that the American sentiment in favor of the League of Nations was not dead, and that the movement to which he had contributed so much would go forward with increased energy.

The selection of Samuel Gompers as spokesman was most fitting. It is doubtful if in the entire country could be found a man who had been in closer personal touch with the former president of the United States than the able head of the

A. F. of L., a man who had received greater consideration from the head of the Nation. The closeness of their official relations had attracted public notice to an unusual extent, and the organization which Mr. Gompers heads profited greatly therefrom.

Mr. Wilson is still confident of the league's vitality, and its ability to take care of itself; and he assured his hearers that "those who don't regard it will have to look out for themselves."

Americans will be gratified to know that the former president is physically able to become the recipient of such attention as the callers paid, but the brevity of Mr. Wilson's remarks on a subject which meant so much to him in many ways while head of the Nation, and the apparent absence of the old-time fire in its defense, leave the uncomfortable impression that the former president is still suffering from the effects of the affliction which laid him low during his notable political battle, and that he is obliged to conserve his every energy.

.

Metropolitan publications have been giving the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law a close scrutiny. The New York Herald had an interesting survey, but many of its figures were just plain guesses. The New York World of January 15, 1922, contains a survey which covers several columns, but like the one offered by the Herald, contains a lot of guesses. The following data may be worth while keeping for reference, especially when you hear the fanatics boast about the prohibition law being self sustaining:

LIQUOR STATISTICS FOR 1921 COMPARED WITH OTHER YEARS.

During the Government's fiscal year ending June 30, last, distilled spirits produced in the United States amounted to 86,365,658 gallons, more than one-third the production in 1916, which was 249,123,921 gallons.

The quantity removed from warehouses during the year was 34,993,154 gallons, 6,772,245 more than in 1920. The amount removed in 1916 was 162,178,519 gallons. Removals last year included 39,961,943 gallons of whiskey, 835,912 gallons of gin, 399,419 gallons of rum and 2,170 gallons of high wines.

Remaining in warehouses on June 30 were 49,890,853 gallons of distilled spirits, against 232,402,887 gallons in 1916.

Production of wine in the last fiscal year was 19,551,595 gallons and the quantity remaining on June 30 was 27,604,898 gallons, 9,927,528 gallons or 39,710,112 quarts more than were left on June 30, 1920.

Importations of liquor almost doubled in the last calendar year, amounting to more than 2,500,000 bottles.

Imports of distilled spirits in the first eleven months of the calendar year were 468,726 gallons, valued at $1,090,566. Those in the full year of 1920 were only 282,674 gallons. In 1916 the amount was 3,777,038 gallons. Of the imports during the eleven months there were 340,562 gallons of whiskey, 89,201 gallons of liqueurs and cordials, 22,156 gallons of gin and 15,965 gallons of brandy.

There were 102,579 gallons of champagne and sparkling wines of a value of $704,629 imported during eleven months last year, whereas the 1920 importations were only 96,861 gallons. Imports in 1916 were 718,332 gallons.

In the last fiscal year 5,945 permits to use and sell intoxicating liquor were renewed by the Internal Revenue Service and 10,286 new permits were issued.

Internal Revenue records show 34,175 persons were arrested during the last fiscal year for violations of the Prohibition Act and the Internal Revenue laws relating to distilled spirits and wines. There were 22,115 convictions and 1,288 acquittals.

Taxes and penalties imposed were a little more than $53,000,000. Collections amounted to $2,152,387.45.

When loss in excise taxes, enforcement expense and penalty collections were balanced, Prohibition cost the Government $169,026,727.24 in the fiscal year of 1921.

One hundred and sixty-nine millions of dollars, as Kerrigan would say, is a hellufalot of money. If the Government used but half of that to employ skilled kitchen men to teach women of the country how to cook and save, this would be a whole lot better country right now, and if the idea was carried out for several years, the accusation made against the American home kitchen—that more than enough goes out in the garbage than would feed thousands of starving Europeans—would have to be revised.

But why expect any such move on the part of the Government? There are no white collar jobs in that direction, for cooking means labor, and office seekers don't want labor—they seek a place on the pay roll only.

.

Every time we get to discussing the effect of the dry laws with one of our acquaintances, he invariably butts in and says: "Shush, why not talk about something good to eat. So here goes to talk about something good to eat. The article is clipped from the New York World of January 15, 1922:

"TERRAPIN KING" IS DEAD at 79.

Hiram Williams, long known as the "Terrapin King" of the Peninsula, is dead in the county almshouse, whither he was taken several days ago in an emaciated condition. Williams probably knew more about terrapin and had caught more than any other man of his day. He spent almost all of his 79 years as a terrapin hunter. He supplied a number of epicures of New York, Philadelphia and Washington with terrapin, and furnished them for White House dinners. He supplied the late Boies Penrose and the Pennsylvania Senator's colleagues, besides a number of the smartest restaurants in the United States.

He had a sense of direction that was almost uncanny when hunting. He seemed to combine the sharp eye of the fishhawk and the scent of a retriever, for he never failed to "bring home the bacon" when he started after it. He has earned a reward of $120 for the capture of a dozen "counts," frequently accomplished in two days. It seemed only necessary for Williams to cast his eye over a bog, or lowland, or river's surface to locate the quarry, which he drew forth from their muddy beds in winter, and within an hour or two would have them in a thief-proof carrier double-locked and on their way by express to a patron in one of the big cities. He distributed his catches so that almost all of his customers might have one order each winter.

Williams' terrapin first found their way to the White House during the Cleveland occupancy, and once a month the winter season shipments would go forth to the President, who found them the most appetizing of dishes. Other Presidents also were his patrons.

Williams captured many thousands of terrapin in his day. He once estimated had he all that he had captured up to five years ago they would net him an independent fortune at their present-day prices. Earlier he was glad to dispose of them at $4 and $5 a dozen. Prior to the Civil War they sold for 50 cents a cart-load, and John M. Clayton, the Delaware statesman, who lived in this section, used to have his cellar filled with the terrapin each autumn, and hundreds shipped to Washington where his terrapin suppers became famous.

The Delaware and Peninsula terrapin are the finest in the world, in fact, there are no other waters that produce anything approaching the turtles of this variety after they have reached the "count" size—about the dimension of a man's No. 7 hat.

Terrapin, Williams used to say, was the finest food ever given to man, though he rarely ate of it himself.

.

Have just finished reading a two-column article about—guess? Do you remember a beverage that was fairly common b'fo th' war, which paraded under the name of Mumm's Extra Dry? Well, the story I just read had to do with Mary de Mumm, eight-year-old daughter of Baron Walter de Mumm. It appears that the Baron married Miss Frances Scoville, daughter of C. C. K. Scoville, President of the State Bankers' Association of Kansas, who died the week of January 8, 1922. Of course you know that Mumm's Extra Dry was made in France, but did you know that the Mumm's products were owned by a German Baron?

.

Here is one of the wheezes we found in a desk we had used several years ago; we did not start to look for the clipping; fact of the matter is that we had stowed away a small bottle of Old Forrester—just a drink size—and wanted a nip, and—well, some one saw it first. But to the wheeze, even if it is old—it's good:

ODDITIES OF THE GREAT.

Napoleon never went on a lecture tour.

Julius Caesar did not keep a chauffeur.

Alexander the Great never sat for a photograph in his life.

George the Third was never known to eat grapefruit.

Shakespeare would not use a safety razor.

Goethe would not have a telephone in the house.

Cervantes would not ride on a railway train preferring to travel by coach.

Christopher Columbus did not take a daily newspaper.—Chicago Post.

.

Vice-President Conley sends us the following. That means he expects to see it reproduced, and we are willing. It is from the Boston Post of January 24, 1922:

COUNCIL FOR BEER AND WINE.

Members of the city council, yesterday, unanimously favored an amendment to the Volstead act, permitting the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines, on a resolution introduced by Councilman Daniel W. Lane, for the purpose of paying the veterans' bonus through the tax thereby received.

On a roll call eight members present voted in favor of it; the ninth member, Councilman Henry E. Hagen, was absent at the time.

Copies of the resolution will be sent to the President of the Senate, Speaker of the House, and all the Massachusetts members of Congress.

After you absorb what the foregoing conveys, you will understand why we say that, the day is coming fast when the votes of our members will cut a lot of congealed moisture. How about your citizenship and the man working alongside of you? same to you, girls, you know you've got a vote now. Are you registered? Now is the time to get ready; don't wait until later on and bemoan the fates for your forgetfulness.

.

Kansas used to be held up as a state where the hick law makers would try any old proposition, if it had the right kind of a preface and read good, but if the following item, clipped some weeks ago (December 15, 1921), is on the level, the Buckeye farmer is showing the effect of denatured cider—or what is they call the older stuff, cider, when its gets that woolly tang to it? I remember, tanglefoot. All the same, forty-rod lightning the 49ers played with or which played with them. The Cincinnati Post is responsible for the item:

"Delegates from Trumbull County to the Ohio State Grange meeting at Music Hall submitted a resolution Wednesday that had members scratching their heads as to whether it was made in earnest. The resolution asks for the introduction of a law in the legislature compelling pedestrians on country roads to wear lights at night, just as automobiles are compelled to have lights by law."

.

Do you know where Somerville, Mass., is? Well, it's close to where the Pilgrim Fathers made their landing. But just read what happened there last year. The item is from the Boston Globe of January 23, 1922:

"The annual report of Chief of Police Charles A. Kendall of Somerville shows for 1921 a large increase in the number of arrests for drunkenness, compared with 1920. Arrests in 1920 were 270, and last year they were 684, the largest number in six years. In 1916 the number was 618, in 1917 it was 598, in 1918 it was 356, and in 1919 the number was 331."

And some one remarked that the Prohibition Law was a good thing. Maybe it is, but for whom? Now, the class need not rise en masse and tell us; we have a husky hunch ourselves. Get that last sentence right; it is spelled husky not "whuskey."

.

Here is a stray item recently clipped that may interest you; we cut it from the Times-Star:

"Two-thirds of Canada's forests have been destroyed by fire in seventy-five years. At the present rate of consumption the amount of timber burned would have supplied the entire world for 450 years and represents a loss of a billion dollars."

.

Did you ever see butchers kill cattle in the old days. They used a good-sized hammer with a fairly blunt end, and one good swing and the steer was on its way to the cleaners. Later they used guns:

in fact, they still do, but it won't be for long when the mechanism described in the following item is in general use:

"Cattle slaughtering is now being done humanely by means of a pneumatic pistol. The weapon is placed against the head of the animal, and when the trigger is pulled a blunt bolt is driven out with great force, which kills the animal instantly."

Now, if some embryo Edison will only take the idea and revamp it some way so that a fellow can employ it in shooting something through the ivory domes of hard-boiled workers at the catering industry, and still permit 'em to live, what a blessing it would be for the overworked business agents.

.

One of our friends in the big city on Lake Michigan sent us a clipping from the Chicago Herald-Examiner of December 3, 1921, and suggested that, inasmuch as some of our members were employed by the Pullman Company, they would be interested in the article. The article is fairly long, and is quite as pertinent today as when printed last December, the exception being that Debs is not now in jail:

A LITTLE SERMON ON PULLMAN SALE.

By REV. W. H. CARWARDINE.

"Memories of the days of the great Pullman strike in 1894 came back vividly as I walked through the old home of George M. Pullman the other day and listened as the auctioneer sold the treasures of art and bric-a-brac to the highest bidder.

"When the strike broke out after the close of the World's Fair, and the model town, which was known all over the world, was thrown into the maelstrom of the greatest railroad conflict this country ever passed through, I was the pastor of the little Methodist Church in the Casino Building. As a result of preaching a sermon on the situation and calling upon Mr. Pullman to reduce his rents, water taxes and gas rates, while his management was reducing wages, I suddenly awoke to find myself famous, and for the period of one year during the long-drawn labor contest had an experience that comes to few men in a lifetime.

"Mr. Pullman long ago passed away; Eugene V. Debs is in prison; Cleveland, then President; Altgeld, the governor who befriended the strikers, and a host of others who played their part in that industrial drama have passed from the scene of action.

"George M. Pullman had some elements of greatness. He was a man of unusual financial and industrial ability, but he lacked one thing that is the vital element of success in all industrial disputes of our day.

"He brooked no interference with his business—'nothing to arbitrate' was his slogan. It was this that threw the nation into the spasm of a fierce labor struggle.

"Stung by the terrific attacks of the press, his prestige evaporated, his pride broken, there is no question but he was hurried prematurely to his grave. Thus ended the career of one of Chicago's most noted city-builders.

"And now his old home is to be dismantled. The marvelous treasures gathered from all parts of the world are to be scattered. Minnie, for thirty years maid to the mistress of the home, and Bosco, the famous Airedale, are the last relics of the days when Mr. Pullman entertained royalty and served punch from the bowl that was bid in for a song.

"So fade the glories of the past. It was diverting to tread the beautiful carpets, wander through the great conservatory, listen to the tones of the Pullman organ, gaze on the works of art that adorned the walls, enjoy the mysterious influences of the Egyptian room, and then recall the flitting ghosts of toilers, strugglers and underpaid workers in the Pullman shops of 1894 who made this home possible.

"If you have not charity, if you have not love for your fellow man, as said the great apostle, what does the pomp of the world avail you? What does it avail any man?"

.

The Line o' Type or Two man of the Chicago Tribune is a great adjuster of historical facts. For instance the following:

"I was much amused at 'Forty-Niner's' claim in The Line of Thursday that the lettuce-spinach story originated twenty years ago, and that the man who rubbed the spinach on his head was Gelett Burgess. As a matter of fact, the incident occurred at a dinner at the White House during President Lincoln's administration. Secretary Stanton had been seated at the table between the wife of the British ambassador and a prominent New York woman, both of whom rather looked down on Mr. Stanton. He tried repeatedly to engage the ladies in conversation, but they ignored him. Finally, as the salad was placed at his plate, Mr. Stanton seized the lettuce and rubbed it in his hair. 'Great Heavens!' exclaimed the wife of the British ambassador, 'what are you doing? Why, that's lettuce!' 'My mistake,' said Mr. Stanton, as Mr. Lincoln and the others roared in laughter, 'I thought it was spinach.'"

VETERAN.

From the same column we dig out the following, head and all, and say to you, read and wise up:

HE SHOULD HAVE PRINTED SOMETHING ABOUT E. H. AND THEN HE WOULD BEEN GIVEN THE PASSES. WE SHALL SEE.

"A pass hound in New York, during the engagement of the Sothern-Marlowe Company there recently, wrote to Mr. Sothern craving free tickets to the show. Mr. Sothern wrote in reply:

"To bed deadhead, and dream—for dreams are cheap.

Learn: We who sing must sup, who sow must reap.

We get no passes for our steak and ale; All things from bread to blessings are for sale. The guards will have to snore at heaven's keep E'er you get in for nothing. Hush, to sleep! And dream you're working for the coin you keep."

.

Just happened to run across an old letter—a friend writing about one of the Day-and-Night houses which had a new sign out in front which read "We Never Sleep." Just a few days later a shoemaker received a consignment of ice-creepers, those gingses that you strap to your shoes which stop you from doing a sliding stunt. The shoemaker was a wag, and in his store window, with the ice-creepers piled up as an exhibit, he displayed a sign which read "We Never Slip." Nothing specially humorous about the story, but one of our locals that had been sleeping and slipping had an election recently and the secretary wrote us in effect that "We have quit sleeping and also quit slipping. If we do not make this old town kick up a lot of dust before 'The Flowers Bloom in the Spring,' it will be trala, tralee for this man's town, and this union will be deader than some of the bunk the Wobblies are peddling in the good State of California."

"And that reminds me." Some of our unions have been slipping, probably they are aware of that fact, but the good old radiator and boiler stove is so attractive that few of the members even think of hustling for new members or getting close to suspended members and urging them to get back in line.

We recently discovered that there is very little room at the bottom of the slide where so many former members and unions have landed, therefore we must do one of two things, begin climbing or else go sideways, and who wants to do the cross-over stunt? Surely none of our girls and boys.

Lots of news in the papers these days—big happenings—but most of you get that information from your local publications. We try and dish up the unusual or interesting in the form of news stories—items that affect us as workers or that seem to do that little thing.

Man asked me the other day if I thought Beer would ever come back. Answered his question Yankee fashion by asking a question: When did it go and where has it gone? Still waiting for him to answer.

Hope you get a Valentine this month and that it wishes you what you can get—health, happiness and steady employment.

Thanks for your company during this trip. See you next month about the time that the Harps have finished preparations for celebrating St. Pat's Day. Thank you. JAY-ELL-Ess.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

SEARCH AND SEIZURE.

Senator Stanley Attacks Constitutionality of New Prohibition Act.

By A. OWSLEY STANLEY,
United States Senator from Kentucky.

Section 6 of the recently enacted amendatory prohibition enforcement law, popularly known as the anti-beer law, reads:

"That any officer, agent or employe of the United States engaged in the enforcement of this act, or the National Prohibition act, or any other law of the United States, who shall search any private dwelling as defined in the National Prohibition act, and occupied as such dwelling, without a warrant directing such search, or who while so engaged shall without a search warrant maliciously and without reasonable cause search any other building or property, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined for a first offense not more than $1,000, and for a subsequent offense not more than $1,000 or imprisonment not more than one year, or both such fine and imprisonment."

That is to say, this section provides, first, a fine and then a fine and imprisonment for any officer who shall without a warrant "search any private dwelling as defined in the National Prohibition act, and occupied as such dwelling." As defined in the law it must be a permanent residence occupied as a private dwelling, in which event a search warrant is necessary to enter it under this law (the recently enacted Willis-Campbell measure) if the owner is suspected of having contraband liquors in his possession. If, however, any other part of the curtilage is suspected, any other house or any other building, no safeguard is thrown around it. If a man is a guest in a hotel, his bedroom may be searched and his property may be seized without a warrant; his papers and effects may be searched and seized in his office, in his hotel, in any other place than a private dwelling.

It was claimed by the propaganda that was behind this section of the law that it extended the privilege conferred by the Constitution of the United States. This is a little surprising after houses which are occupied as dwellings have been repeatedly searched right in the nation's capital, after such practice has been so common as to demand and to occasion a nation-wide protest. To find that suddenly they have become so tender of the rights of those suspected of moonshining or of selling or of having alcoholic liquors in their possession that they throw about a dwelling a safeguard not demanded by the Constitution. As a matter of fact, in my opinion, this provision was placed in the law because those who stood for the amendment dared not at this time boldly proclaim their interpretation of the law of the land as applied to the citizen.

They did not dare tell the public that they so interpreted the Constitution of their country and the law of the land as to enable any prohibition officer, vague as that term may be, any inspector or any snooping spy, to invade the sanctity of the home without any kind or character of authorization from any kind or character of magistrate. All that is necessary is to fix a star on an Inspector, and even a Senator of the United States has claimed that the Inspector, or whatever kind of an officer he happens to be, has a right to break open any door, to spy into any baggage, to poke his nose into any conveyance, to enter any curtilage, to even run his hands over the body of any man or woman if he suspects there is liquor hidden anywhere.

No Difference in Rights.

If they have the right to enter one house, they have the right to enter another. I challenge any Senator to produce one single solitary decision of the Supreme Court of the United States that winks at the idea that in so far as the right to enter a place without a search warrant is concerned there is any difference in the protection afforded by the law to one house owned by the citizen and any other house owned by that citizen. It matters not whether it is a dwelling house or a storehouse or a warehouse, or an office; his protection against having his private papers searched, his private property invaded, is just as sacred in the one case as in the other.

The Fourth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States provides that "the right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses"—not dwellings, not homes, but houses—"shall not be violated." Did they use the word "houses" meaning "homes"? Was it a loose expression on the part of the makers of the Constitution of the United States? Let us see.

It was only a few years before this law was written that Mr. Justice Bradley tells us, in the case of Boyd vs. The United States, that the general warrants were issued against the citizens of New England, against which James Otis inveighed; and the case of Wilkes was then fresh in the minds of the makers of the Constitution. The facts are that these general warrants were not aimed at the homes of the citizens of Boston or anywhere else. They were used to enter the warehouses of the citizens, to enter their storehouses.

In the case of Gould vs. The United States, and again in the case of Amos vs. The United States—both just decided—the Supreme Court of the United States laid down the doctrine that a search without warrant is unreasonable for the reason that such a search is unconstitutional. And in the case of Amos they searched a warehouse. There never has been any difference between the sanctity, the security of a citizen's house against a search, if he made it the repository of his private papers; between the house in which he slept and the house in which he attended to his business; between his dwelling and his store.

It is an absurd distinction. It is, in my opinion, the artificial creation of those who dare not invade the home, not that they respect any provision of the Constitution of the United States, but that they respect a certain Saxon instinct that rises above law.

We do not ask to enjoy the rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution at the capricious grace of any propagandist. So, let us see what is secure from search and seizure. The person, houses, papers and effects. What are a man's effects? In the days when the Constitution was adopted men traveled by coach. The conveyance, the portmanteau, the carpetbag, etc., those were his effects. The Constitution says the citizen shall be secure "against unreasonable searches and seizures * * * and no warrant shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

Goes Beyond Dwelling.

This immunity from search and seizure does not attach merely to the dwelling, but throws its aegis about the property, the curtilage, the castle of the citizen. Yet in the law that has been passed it is agreed that nothing shall be immune from the insolent intrusion of the meanest petty officer except the parlor, bedroom and bath of the citizen. Outside of that, come when you please, spy as much as you like, take what you want; the Constitution protects only the place where you sleep and where you eat.

In the case of Entick vs. Carrington, declared by the United States Supreme Court to be an eternal landmark, a monument of abiding and immutable law, Lord Camden discusses the property of the citizen and declares that it is immune from the invasion of a civil officer without a search warrant.

This was a case where a man entered not without a warrant, but with a warrant improperly executed. In this case the officer came from the Secretary of State of England. He came with a warrant which described the person, but was general as to the things to be seized. He came with the kind of a warrant that had been issued for a hundred years, which had been sustained by the Crown. It was a thousand years from the time men threw the first barrier about the sanctity of the home before any man in Europe or America ever dreamed of entering the citizen's possessions without any character of warrant or authorization.

Did Lord Camden stop the man at the front door? Did he stop him at the bedroom? No, he stopped him at the place where the property of the citizen had its outermost boundary. He said that to enter with an improperly executed warrant and to set foot upon the soil of a citizen, bruise his grass, or cross the outermost boundary is unlawful.

In all the history of American and English jurisprudence no constable was ever given any discretion except to arrest for a misdemeanor committed in his presence or to apprehend a felon. Constables are not chosen because of their discretion, but because of their vigor and their fearlessness. I do not speak disrespectfully of the constable, but the duties of a constable do not require any great amount of discretion; they require daring and courage, and for that reason the right to search and seize without warrant was never vested in constables.

A constable cannot issue a search warrant. He cannot do it in England and he cannot do it in the United States. To procure a search warrant one must go before a Magistrate, a Judge, some man of judgment and discretion. Before a warrant can issue two men must have a suspicion, namely the person who asks for the warrant and the Magistrate or Judge who issues it.

If the Magistrate issues the search warrant without probable cause he is responsible. Now, we have the anomalous situation of leaving naked and defenseless the house of the citizen, the property of the citizen, to the suspicion not of the Magistrate, but of a spy, not of a Judge, but of the inspector, a hired sleuth.

The Right to Arrest.

The right to arrest with or without a warrant, the right to apprehend the person committing a felony or to apprehend him in the act of committing a misdemeanor, with or without a warrant, and to immediately deprive him of certain things then in his possession that will enable him to escape or to do violence to the arresting officer or other person, or that tend to establish his guilt, is entirely different from the right to search the property of that same person not then in his possession or under his control. It is entirely different, and the distinction has been drawn a thousand times. The right of an officer to apprehend a person charged with a felony or to apprehend a person, charged with a misdemeanor has never been questioned by those who have opposed the legislation recently enacted by Congress.

Let me cite one other case, namely, that of Weeks vs. the United States. Weeks was charged with having lottery tickets in his possession and of sending them through the mails, not with having a pint of whisky, but gambling instruments in his possession. He was arrested, and the evidence was found upon his person. They entered his home without a warrant and took possession of the lottery tickets. They found the evidence of his guilt, and the court held not only that the man should be returned to his liberty, but that the lottery tickets could not be used in evidence. In the face of a decision as unequivocal and as sweeping, to say that the premises of a citizen can be searched for liquor or anything else without a warrant is to insult the intelligence of any lawyer who can read and write.

It must be remembered that searches and seizures are authorized by the Fourth Amendment as well as prohibited by that amendment. The amendment is not only inhibitory, it is directory. It prescribes the way by which searches and seizures can be made, but in so doing, as Justice Clarke of the Supreme Court in the case of Amos vs. the United States has well said, prescribes the way.

"Searches and seizures are as constitutional under the amendment when made under valid search warrants as they are unconstitutional because unreasonable when made without them. The permission of the amendment has the same constitutional warrant as the prohibition has, and the definition of the former restrains the scope of the latter," said Justice Clarke.

Is there any doubt about that?—The New York Times, January 8, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE NEW FIGHT FOR LIBERTY.

The citizens who are organizing the Association Opposed to Prohibition are not wets, in the sense that word has been used. They are for the permitted use of wine and beer, but are opposed to the saloon and to that extent traffic in liquor. They are not distillers or brewers and their effort is to keep the association clear of such influences.

They are liberals and they recognize, what a majority of American citizens do not recognize, that a serious change is being made in American principles, and that it affects the freedom and the intelligence of the people.

It requires some courage for reputable men and women to set themselves against these tendencies. It is a serious fault of the American people not to care by what means they reach an end which they consider good. They are grossly inconsistent in that they make more laws and pay less attention to them than any other people in the world. They are gluttons for legislation. They try to correct laws of nature and laws of human nature by statute.

Statutes create officials. Bureaus and bureaucrats multiply and extend their power. Inspection, regulation, restraint, and prohibition weigh down the individual and collective activities of American citizens and now, with the tendency growing, the people of this country have less lawful freedom than any other white people of the world, with the possible exception of the Russians, and they are the most lawless.

In this spreading scheme of oppression, the prohibition of intoxicating liquors is the one outstanding phase which everybody sees, but it is only a part of the autocracy which is denying the principles of liberty to American life.

We believe that great as the curse of liquor may be and terrible as it is to have a sodden people, it is not less terrible to put a free people under the dominion of bureaucracy. This republic rests upon the decisions of its people and the new tyranny rests upon a denial of intelligence, of decision, of choice.

The extremes to which dictation is eager to proceed are revealed in this very State of Illinois, where it is proposed, demanded, that the representation of Chicago be restricted to the point of disfranchisement because of the habits and thoughts of the people of Chicago. That is the tyranny of the early church oligarchy of Massachusetts, where control was maintained by restriction of franchise to acceptable members of the church, and where people were cruelly punished for criticism of a sermon or killed for deviation from a dogma.

There are some very black pages in the early records of this nation and no reflective citizen can observe the manifest symptoms of this age without dismay and fear.

It requires courage for citizens to come out in the open and denounce the destruction of American liberty. They are greeted with the cry of "rum hounds" and pictured as debauched and degraded persons. The danger got such headway because in its earlier stages a reputable man or woman found that championship of free principles meant exposure to association with detestable liquor interests. There also was the corruption of American political life by the liquor interests and an abomination of abominations which promoted the people to sweep the traffic and traffickers out of the country.

Now we find that we have established another system repugnant to freedom and it maintains its dangerous power because it appeals to the humane and moral instincts of the people and has deadened their instinct for freedom and liberty.

In the war it was necessary to make surrenders of individual rights to the government. The American people accepted a military dictatorship which was the wonder of the British, who could not establish it, although their peril was greater. We knew there was danger in this, but thought that there would be a recovery of rights when the intensified national effort was over. There has not been. When government obtains a hold upon citizens it does not let go. It does not give up power. The pressure to take more is constantly applied by highly organized groups which see the day at hand when dictates can be multiplied and oppression can be tightened.

United States Senator Augustus O. Stanley told the Chicago meeting of liberals that Senator Foraker in 1907 had made a speech of protest because in ten years the federal inspectors had grown in number from 167 to 3,000.

"There are nearly 30,000 now," he said. "Sump-tuary and inquisitorial bureaus have increased since then 1,000 fold and federal agents and inspectors, filling up the highways and the byways, tread on each others' heels at every turn and corner, more numerous and pernicious than the fleas of Egypt. Nobody escapes. Everything in the moral, industrial, and commercial world is to be owned, operated, supervised, or censored from the birth of a baby to the burial of a corpse."

That is true, and it is digging the grave of American liberty. Andrew Jackson thought a financial aristocracy was destroying American government and he smashed it. A worse autocracy has gained the upper hand now. Americans are submitting. They have taken Verboten from the Germans and have pulled it down on themselves. —Chicago Tribune, January 14, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

OBEDIENCE TO LAW.

President Harding is said to be deeply disturbed at the inability of the government to secure respect for the Volstead law. If we cannot enforce our laws, he properly remarks, we have arrived at a condition endangering the stability of the republic.

The President has a right to be concerned, and so have all other thoughtful citizens. But we must find the reason for a condition before the remedy can be found. Our law of highest obligation is our basic law, our Constitution, and if any part of that is nullified by enactment, which are the people to obey, the organic or the statute law? A Congress which passes a law which public sentiment apparently will not uphold, which requires for its enforcement the open violation of a constitutional provision is more responsible than the people for the condition the President deplors.

If Congress does not obey the fundamental law, can the people be expected to obey a statute law in conflict therewith? Suppose, for example, that an act of Congress established a State religion or quartered soldiers on householders in times of peace, or ignored any other provision securing a citizens' rights, would he be blameable for resisting it, or would the blame rest in the Congress? Yet the amended Volstead law concededly violates the Fourth Amendment to the Constitution which has never been repealed.

All down the ages the political problem dwarfing every other has been to find a principle of authority, a theory on which the people would submit to be governed by rulers and their laws. All sorts of expedients were tried and broke down at times or failed in the end, until at last our experiment in government was based on the brand new theory that the right to rule a people rested on their consent to be ruled; and that the consent of a majority would suffice and was the most that could be expected in any particular case. But it was so evident that majority rule might work out to such grave injustice and flagrant disregard of minority rights that the organic law declared that there were some things which majorities must not do. If we as a people should cease to respect our Constitution or permit minorities to pass laws in their own interest, our experiment in government would fail, as many another in the past has failed, and some new theory on which to base authority would have to be discovered or devised. No one has yet suggested any principle to take its place, and the stability of our institutions depends on clinging tenaciously to the theory of authority the founders of our republic evolved. But it will be subjected to a breaking strain whenever a Congress passes any important measure which the majority sentiment of the nation resents or which any powerful minority regards with reason as in derogation of its constitutional rights. If a Congress passes a law so unreasonable or extreme that the bulk of the people deride it and it cannot be enforced, is it the Congress or the people who are at fault?

We can all lament with President Harding the lessened popular respect for law. It is the most serious situation to which a nation can come. It portends the break-down of our institutions, anarchy, intestine war. Prior to 1860 Congress legislated in the interest of a section of the country and in defiance of what had become the majority sentiment of the land, and it took four years of war to keep our republic alive. That lessons, and similar lessons of which history is full should not be lost on Congress. It should realize that no theory of authority as yet discovered can relieve it of the necessity of wisdom and discretion in legislation. Laws which are generally felt to be wise, needful, reasonable are respected and obeyed and public sentiment has never yet failed to co-operate powerfully with the government for their enforcement. But Congress must have wisdom and realize that the responsibility rests upon it of passing laws the mass of the people approve. Not everything that can be called a law will receive popular concurrence and support. Every form of government since time began has failed in attempts to put some laws on its people. Every theory of authority has broken down when overstrained; and we have no ground for believing that ours would prove an exception to the universal rule.—The Post Express, Rochester, N. Y., January 16, 1922.

MUST BE REASONABLY CLEAN.

Although, says the U. S. Public Health Service, when typhus and plague subside in Europe (as they must eventually) the menace of the vermin-bearing immigrant will practically disappear, still the Public Health Service will continue to insist that travelers to this country must be reasonably clean when they embark, regardless of any infection to which they are known to have been exposed.

The louse is, of course, quite as common in some quarters of the larger American cities as it is in the European slums; and it is dangerous only when it has become infected which it can be only by biting an infected person and absorbing his germ-laden blood. If all the typhus patients, for instance, in this country are promptly removed and kept away from lousy surroundings, they can not communicate the disease and it will speedily die out. This explains why even the 34 cases of typhus that occurred in New York City in 1911 did not cause an epidemic in spite of the verminous condition of many of the New York slum districts.

Nevertheless, insists the Public Health Service, greater personal cleanliness should, as a matter of ordinary decency and healthfulness, be required from immigrants; and no return should be allowed to the conditions that prevailed for many years before the war, when very many immigrants from central Europe arrived in an inexcusably dirty condition, many of them infected with vermin. Even though in those days they did not bring epidemic diseases, they did bring many minor afflictions, created disease centers, and flooded parts of many cities with vermin.

At present, what with the reduction in immigration brought about by the existing law restricting their numbers and with the disinfecting and delousing facilities that the steamship companies have installed, some of them practically under compulsion, at European ports, conditions are reasonably satisfactory. The respite is, however, not for long, for the restrictive law is for one year only, and unless it is renewed or in some way replaced the tidal wave of immigrants, now waiting in Europe for the letting down of the bars, will rush for this country and the resultant pressure will test every timber in the health barricade.

It is believed that the steamship companies have taken warning by their experience of last winter and spring and will keep in operation adequate facilities for bathing and disinfecting their prospective passengers. The Public Health Service cannot directly compel them to do this; nor can it do it itself, for some European countries object, on the ground that in setting up the necessary facilities the U. S. Government would be exercising extra-territorial powers and thereby encroaching on their sovereignty.

Under these circumstances all the Public Health Service can do is to repeat its action of last spring by requesting the State Department to instruct its consuls in Europe to refuse a bill of health to vessels sailing without adequate cleansing measures and by instructing its own quarantine officers to delouse immigrants on arrival here and to detain them, in case of suspicion, for 12 days thereafter. It was this action alone that caused some steamship companies to go to the expense of installing disinfecting plants abroad.

Failure to delouse properly on the other side, adds the Public Health Service, enormously increases the trouble and expense on this side. The necessity of holding a shipload of immigrants for 12 days after delousing is in every way objectionable, both to the Government, the steamship owners, and the immigrants. But it seems to be the only available means that will remain for protecting the country against vermin carriers and disease carriers if the bars are let down and the flood becomes great enough to swamp the cleansing facilities at foreign and home ports.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHERE DO YOU FIT?

Human nature is pretty much the same the world over. Sometimes we can learn something about ourselves by standing at a safe distance and taking a look at the other fellow and his problems. We don't know who the bird is who compiled the following, but it indicates that the writer knows human nature from first hand experience. Speaking of what are known as "card-men" in the labor movement, he says:

Don't come to the meeting.

But if you do come, come late.

If you attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and members.

Never accept an office, as it is easier to criticise than to do things.

Nevertheless, get sore if you are not appointed on a committee, but if you are, do not attend committee meetings.

If asked by the chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matter, tell him you have nothing to say. After the meeting, tell everyone how things ought to be done.

Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary; but when other members roll up their sleeves and willingly, unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, howl that the organization is run by a clique.

Hold back your dues as long as possible or don't pay at all.

Don't bother about getting new members. Let the secretary do it.

When a banquet is given, tell everyone money is being wasted on blow-outs which make a big noise and accomplish nothing.

Don't ask for a banquet ticket until all are sold.

Then swear you have been cheated out of yours.

If you do get a ticket, don't pay for it.

If asked to sit at the speakers' table, modestly refuse.

If you are not asked, resign from the organization.

If you are told you are behind with your dues, don't pay.

If you receive a notice after you've paid, resign from the organization.

Don't tell the organization how it can help you; but if it does not help you, resign.

If you receive service without joining, don't think of joining.

If the organization doesn't correct abuses in your neighbors' business, howl that nothing is done.

If it calls attention to abuses in your own, resign from the organization.

Keep your eyes open for something wrong and when you find it, resign.

At every opportunity, threaten to resign and then get your friends to resign.

Agree to everything said at the meetings and disagree with it outside.—Auto Worker, January, 1922.

DOMESTIC QUARANTINE AND VENEREAL DISEASE.

"The migration of persons suffering with venereal disease from their home State to another State without first procuring from their local health officer a permit stating that their travel is not dangerous to public health violates the Federal law, forbidding the spreading of contagious diseases and will be rigidly suppressed," says the U. S. Public Health Service.

"Last spring the Attorney General, at the request of the Service, instructed all United States attorneys to co-operate fully with it and to prosecute offenders vigorously. Since then several violators have been sentenced to reformatories, where their disease-spreading activities have been stopped and they themselves are receiving proper medical treatment.

"The law and the regulations based on it are not so widely known as they should be; and the objects sought in their enforcement are not everywhere clearly understood. The law seeks to control the spread of disease but not necessarily to prevent the travel of venereally diseased persons. Such travel, if undertaken under proper precautions in search of medical help will be encouraged by the Service. The law, however, seeks to close every channel through which venereal disease may be spread; and to do this it has been found necessary to put a stop to the movements of those who seek to migrate from one State to another in order more safely to carry on the business of spreading disease.

"When such persons and their associates learn that travel from one State to another while venereally diseased leads to arrest and severe punishment they will have an added incentive for submitting to voluntary treatment; and the day will be hastened when every infected person will at once place himself or herself under the care of a skilled physician of his or her own selection.

"At present it is probable that very many persons either never receive proper treatment or that they cease treatment too early in the belief that they are cured and thus become dangerous. Laws on this subject differ in the different States; and this fact leads to migration from those whose laws are rigid to those whose laws are less so.

"No attempt either by the U. S. Government or by State governments to police the State borders seems practicable. The laws of practically all States, however, require physicians to report all venereal cases that come to their attention; and a judicial or police investigation of the history of any apparent new-comer who chances to be arrested will early disclose most of the new arrivals in the State. These may then be proceeded against under United States law.

"Proceedings," adds the U. S. Public Health Service, "are based on the Interstate Quarantine Regulations, whose making by the Secretary of the Treasury was authorized by Congress February 15, 1893 (27 Stat. ch. 114, p. 449) amended March 3, 1901 (31 Stat., ch. 836, p. 1086). Objections on the ground that the regulations are insufficient or defective or that Congress may not delegate its legislative authority are without merit. The Secretary's act in making the regulations is administrative and is authorized by the act of February 15, 1893. The penalty for violation is fixed by Congress, is legal, and has been sustained in United States courts. Details of the above are given in Reprint 693 of the U. S. Public Health Service, just issued."

Permits for travel obtained from the local health officer must state that the travel in the opinion of the officer is not dangerous to the public health. The traveler must state where he intends to reside; and he must agree in writing to report to the proper health officer there within one week after arrival and to continue treatment under a reputable physician until the health officer certifies that he is no longer infectious. The health officer who issues the permit must promptly notify the new health officer, who must take appropriate action.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HOW THE "HUB OF THE UNIVERSE" VOTED.

It may strike the average reader as funny that citizen voters should vote on the License Question during the operation of the Eighteenth Amendment. That they do so, is evident from the following results on the election in Boston, Mass., December 13, 1921:

	Vote for License.		Vote Last Year
	Yes	No	Yes	No
Ward 1.....	3,125	1,313	998	638
Ward 2.....	2,384	654	928	302
Ward 3.....	2,607	1,048	1,144	621
Ward 4.....	2,629	937	1,400	633
Ward 5.....	3,407	840	1,792	450
Ward 6.....	3,098	1,079	1,316	595
Ward 7.....	3,527	2,247	1,006	1,498
Ward 8.....	3,921	2,402	1,104	1,978
Ward 9.....	3,202	1,012	1,468	504
Ward 10.....	3,816	1,660	1,563	807
Ward 11.....	3,513	1,640	1,361	665
Ward 12.....	3,305	1,261	1,147	573
Ward 13.....	2,813	1,147	1,097	603
Ward 14.....	4,114	1,518	1,696	764
Ward 15.....	3,847	1,531	1,433	792
Ward 16.....	3,552	2,106	979	1,196
Ward 17.....	4,008	2,054	1,356	1,209
Ward 18.....	3,963	1,690	1,239	795
Ward 19.....	3,496	2,447	937	1,377
Ward 20.....	3,549	2,500	971	1,157
Ward 21.....	3,290	2,412	832	1,141
Ward 22.....	4,160	2,588	1,648	1,783
Ward 23.....	3,693	3,555	987	1,947
Ward 24.....	2,553	2,250	603	822
Ward 25.....	2,816	2,326	737	1,157
Ward 26.....	2,377	1,720	751	793
Totals	86,765	45,937	30,493	24,800

The tabulation was clipped from the Boston Post of December 14, 1921.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

IT DIDN'T.

When H. G. Wells, the famous writer, was bidding friends good-bye on the deck of the Adriatic, one of the newspaper men asked him how prohibition struck him. Wells, with a twinkle of the eyes responded, "It didn't."

Chatting with a group of young foreigners—returning attaches of a delegation to the arms conference—Wells asked them how they enjoyed their visit to Washington and one replied:

"We never saw so much liquor in all our lives—and never drank so much."

IT IS THE UNION DOES THESE THINGS.

Who raises your wages? The union.

Who shortens your hours? The union.

Who protects you from grinding bases? The union.

Who fights for sanitary workshops? The union.

Who gets behind every piece of remedial legislation? The union.

Who takes the children out of the workshops? The union.

Who demands equal pay for the sexes, and who reduces hours for women? The union.

Who continually forces employers to protect workers' lives? The union.

Who has forced the establishment of factory regulations? The union.

Who has started the long list of social advances now being accepted everywhere? The union.

The unions do things. Every hour of the day they advance inch by inch and step by step. They have beaten down opposition. They have compelled judges, clergymen, economists and educators to revise their views of our cause and movement.

The union is the best investment a worker can make. They are here to stay, and their usefulness will expand only as fast as our non-union fellows join with us.

There is no limit to what we can do by united action.

Join with us in this great humanizing, educational movement between workers and degradation.

No other movement on earth can compare with organized labor in the practical, direct benefits to the toilers.

Let unionists proclaim the faith that is in them, and let them spread the gospel of trades unionism to their unorganized craftsmen.

Grit your teeth and organize, for you will enjoy those benefits that you take.—San Diego Labor Leader, January 6, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

RAISED ON RUM.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 25, 1922.—West Indian rum, some of it "very good and old," played a large part in the construction of Brown University, according to university historians. They have just discovered among the early records a bill for liquors which grew rapidly as the first building rose. The last three gallons were used to raise the roof.

Tradition relates that at the laying of the cornerstone in 1770 John Brown, merchant, treated the crowd liberally to punch, and the accounts show that what began at the cornerstone continued through the entire time of construction.

The items attest the rapidity with which the structure rose. They follow:

June 28, to one gallon W. I. rum, when laying the cornerstone, 3s. 6d.

August 8, to two gallons W. I. rum, 7s., 2 lbs. sugar, 1s., when laying the second floor.

August 25, to four gallons W. I. rum (very good and old), when laying third floor, 15s.

September 14, to four gallons W. I. rum, 1 lb. sugar, when raising fourth floor, 14s. 7d.

October 9, to 7¼ gallons old W. I. rum, when laying fifth floor, £1 7s. 1½d.

October (?) to 3 gallons W. I. rum, when raising roof, 10s. 6d.—New York Globe, January 25, 1922.

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

SPRING IS COMING.

Well, Spring is coming, fellows. Pretty soon the little birdies will be winging back northwards and you'll be reading the little three-line squibs in your favorite daily paper about Banker Joslyn observing a robin red-breast hustling for wigglers on his well kept lawn. Rhubarb pies and the usual spring vegetables will be in order and be ordered. And about that time the boss will be looking around at the crew and saying to himself its about time to hand these fellows the usual spring jolt to see if they will stand for an increase in hours or weaker bundle in the pay envelope. And in the meantime, the president, recording secretary and financial secretary of Local empty-seven will be wondering what's to become of the union if the bunch does not pay up and permit remittances to be sent to Cincie to keep in good standing. Yeh, it's a great game if you don't weaken. Our dearly beloved friends the bosses have reduced the price of dill pickles from 20 to 15 cents a portion, have made it easier for the patrons to indulge in the pastime of guessing how many fish might have been hatched from a stingy portion of caviar, formerly on the Carte du Jour at 45 cents, but now reduced to 40 cents.

"We have reduced our bill of fare," is the way one smooth collector of mazuma for eats, put it over on a follower of Dana, Bennett and Watter-son. And he was stating a fact. He had cut the size from $10\frac{1}{2} \times 8\frac{1}{2}$ to 8×10 , but he did not say a word about the prices on that bill of fare. But he did have something to say to his crew and they absorbed the information, which as memory recalls it, was "We have given the public the benefit of the drop in the high cost of living, and we naturally expect our employees to show equal generosity," which, interpreted, meant that he hoped to receive word that the union would agree to a scale somewhat lower than they had exacted during the previous year. Needless to make further quotations, it is near time to ask questions. What shape is that local union of yours in to combat the proposed reduction in wages?

What are you and your fellow members doing?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE AMERICAN "BLAM" ASSOCIATION.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States must have swiped a couple of leaves from the Book of Experience found in the archives of the Anti-Saloon League at Westerville, O-Dry-O. The titles used by its supposedly affiliated associations are as numerous as the ones use by Rev. "Pearly Gates" Baker's organization when it began its initial drive on the West coast.

One of the Chamber of Coercion spiclers was addressing a meeting in the city of Newport, Ky., recently, in connection with the steel workers' strike, and as he had a heavy cold, every time he mentioned the word plan, it sounded like "blam," and that is what it is being called in the old Blue Grass State now.

At that, it's an appropriate substitution, for if you will pardon the slang, the Chamber of Coercion is out to "blam" every mother's son and daughter and if they have their way, our wages will be "blammed" to the zero mark; in fact, they will place it in the position of the man in the story, who met a brother lodge member and asked him how he was getting along. He received the astonishing answer that he had consumed the constitution and was now masticating the by-laws. That is about all the American "Blam" Association will leave trades union men and women if they don't watch out.

Every time you allow a member to slip back and become suspended, you are giving the American "Blam" Association a better chance to "blam" you. Every time you allow a newcomer to take a job in your town and under the jurisdiction of your local union and you ignore or refrain from trying to induce that new arrival to become a member of your local union, you are engaged in that dangerous pastime of lifting your guard and making it easier for the American "Blam" Association to slip over to where it will do the most damage the sleep wallop.

One way to meet the rushing tactics of the American "Blam" Association, is to attend the meetings of your union, pay your dues, help your officers in every way within your power to line up and make of all the workers of the trade in your town, members of your local union and you will have stopped the "blammers" with the kind of "blam" that makes 'em sick about the region of the bread basket, if you know where that part of your anatomy is located, and we believe you do. See you later, good-bye.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INCREASE YOUR VOCABULARY.

One of the old-fashioned teachers in the Little Red Schoolhouse originated the idea of "Learning One Word a Day"—how to spell it, define it, understand its every use. We suggest the same idea, except that it's different. Instead of "One Word a Day" we suggest learning a whole sentence, preferably one that expresses an appropriate idea. To illustrate as well as to advocate this revised educational stunt: Supposing that you take a complete sentence, one which fills all the requirements as outlined—how to spell it, define it, understand its every use. To enable you to get a start, here is an excellent sentence which means something useful:

"To be a good union member I must attend meetings, pay my dues promptly, purchase union-made products and co-operate to the best of my ability with the officers and members of my local union."

That may not increase your vocabulary, but wise up to it and carry it out in letter and spirit.

THE AUTO VAMP SPEAKS.

It was mighty sweet of you,
 To stop and let me ride.
 You know, I hate the bus,
 It's always jammed,
 And moves so slow.
 If it hadn't been for you,
 I'd been late this morning.
 You know, at first I thought
 You were a friend of mine,
 A boy I know out north in Rogers Park,
 He drives a swell big car like this.
 I never ride with strangers,
 They're always getting fresh with you;
 They want to date you up right off.
 And the married ones are twice as bad
 As single men—ain't it the limit?
 You can let me out at the next block,
 I work at Field's in the millinery.
 Sure, call me up some time,
 I'm always home by six.
 My number's Oakendale eight-six O.
 Now, don't forget.
 Thanks awfully.
 So long.

— Salt Lake Tribune.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THAT MARVEL, YOUR WATCH.

There are at least 175 different parts in the make-up of the watch. No less than 2,400 distinct operations have to be gone through in the process of manufacture. Each day the roller-jewel of the watch makes 432,000 blows against the fork, or 157,680,000 in the course of a year. This goes on without a single rest if the watch is in good order. If a watch were to go for 20 years, it would give some 3,153,600,000 blows during that period.

It has been reckoned that the power that moves the watch is only four times the force used in a flea's jump. We might therefore say that one watch-power is equivalent to four flea-power. How small is the power will be gathered when it is realized that one horse-power would be sufficient to operate 270,000,000 watches.

The balance wheel of a watch is moved by the four flea-power 1 and 43-100ths of an inch with every vibration. This amounts to 3,558 $\frac{3}{4}$ miles in a year. It takes only a tenth of a drop of oil to lubricate the whole of the machinery throughout an entire year.—St. Leonard Bastian in the St. Nicholas.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

GET THEIR NUMBER NOW WHILE THE GETTING IS GOOD.

During the season when snowballs are in order in most sections under the jurisdiction of our International Union, you will find a certain number of hangers-on around the boiler stove at headquarters; they are seldom very pretty "birds," in fact their plumage shows wear and neglect; they love to regale the so-called "home guards" with stories of adventure, reciting what happened when they hopped the fast express out of Bunktown-on-the-Lake, how they fooled the brakies, and all that sort of chatter.

When they finish that reel they begin in a sneaky sort of way to unlimber the long-handled hammer. First off they take a wallop at the business agent of Local 999, who, according to them, is a no-account son-of-a-sea-cook. Next they criticize the methods in Local 1,144, and hang around the neck of the secretary of that local the usual intimation that he is all bone from the collar up. If they find interested listeners, they increase their territory and include in their alleged experience, dealings with members of the General Executive Board, or the general president. They have known the general president ever since he was knee-high to a grasshopper, and as for Jere L., why they knew that old stiff when he used to work at Bingham-on-the-River.

Having laid the foundation for supposed acquaintanceship and knowledge of the workings of our International Union, they put on a little more steam and begin polishing their hammer in a style that beats competition.

Nine hundred and ninety-nine of these fellows out of every thousand, are not naturally vicious, but their work is all of that and more; for to the new and unthinking member, the fellow who boasts of having hobnobbed with all of the supposed celebrities of our organization, is a fellow upon whom one may depend to say something worth remembering. That is just the point; members do remember a lot of things which such travelers recite, and unconsciously conclude that what they heard must be so. One of the best, as well as the surest way to discourage these hiking prevaricators, is to ask them to show their Membership Books. If they offer their book for scrutiny, it is easy to turn to the page where the written record shows date of initiation. It will be found in 99 out of 100 cases, that the would-be-know-it-all has a membership record seldom exceeding a couple of years. In the old days members used to employ the Missouri shibboleth—Show Me—and when that method is employed, the reciters of alleged dope fade out of the picture, for they know nothing about the organization—they are simply conversation peddlers and half the time don't know what they are talking about.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

DON'T GET CHESTY.

"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" The mortals, I mean, of a ball-playing crowd. Today, hailed by fandom as "Champs," if you please; tomorrow, as well liked as cooties and fleas.

You pull down a liner that saves the old game, and rooters rejoice just to mention your name. Then in a few days if you miss a pop-fly and let in a run, you're a terrible guy.

You smash the old apple for days in a row, and each time you swing you come through with a blow; then all of a sudden you slump and they hum, "The title of KING is attached to a bum!"

"Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" The miracle manager, Mickey O'Dowd, with just the same ball club he copped with last year, has finished a kilo or two in the rear.

The pitcher who towers above all the rest; the catcher, just why should he throw out his chest, and brag of achievements? He cannot forestall the trip to the bushes that follow his fall.

And then we consider the ump in the fray; a mortal no less than the others who play. He rules absolutely with a wave of his paw, and yet, everyone wants to land on his jaw. "Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?" The mortals, I mean, of a ball-playing crowd.—George Moriarity in Cincinnati Post.

GUMMING THE CARDS.

In every membership book issued by our organization provision has been made for a record that should show the date of initiation, the number and location of the local union, as well as the number and location of the local union a member is affiliated with at this date. We have noted several membership books which secretaries have made out to suit their own convenience, and without any regard whatsoever to accuracy of record.

If John Doe has been out of the organization for a few months, happens to be suspended for non-payment of dues, and finally adjusts his account, the secretary seems to think that it is right to run a pen with ink thereon, through the words, "Was initiated in Local No. —," and write above the attempted erasure, the words, "Reinstated in Local No. —," following same with date of reinstatement and the number and location of the local union which reinstates the member. That is all wrong, and the form on the page for membership record was never intended to show reinstatement of members; there is a page or pages to show standing of members, and those pages are the ones with squares for the attachment of stamps. When a member pays up his dues after being suspended, his book must show a reinstatement stamp, and upon that stamp, in figures plain enough to be read by the average member, the date upon which the suspended member paid his accounts and became reinstated. If John Doe became a member of Local 20, February 10, 1909, and was suspended by that local in August, 1911, remaining suspended until January 5, 1912, upon which date he pays arrearages and becomes reinstated, the record should read:

This is to certify that the bearer hereof, Mr. John Doe, was initiated in Local No. 20, of St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A., on February 10, 1909 and is a member of Local No. 20, of St. Louis, Mo.

Until the last day of the last month marked paid, by stamp on the succeeding pages. On the stamp pages which shows the month of January, 1912, a reinstatement stamp should have been attached and that stamp should have the date of reinstatement and name of the issuing secretary written thereon. In addition to that stamp, there should be attached to the reinstated member's book, dues stamps for every month that said member paid back dues. One of the reasons why local union secretaries manage to accumulate a drawer full of unused due stamps, is because they refrain from giving proper receipt in the form of dues stamps to members who adjust their accounts. Even when local members suspend their rules for a given period, seek former members at a reduced reinstatement fee, they are in duty bound to attach to every month for which they receive dues an International due stamp. Members who accept less are promoting conditions that are conducive to lax business methods, if nothing more serious.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PROPOSED OREGON FAIR STILL IN EMBRYO STATE.

The drawing power of printers' ink is shown by the number of catering industry employees who pulled up stakes and began hiking toward the city of Portland, Oregon, after having read a number of items with reference to a proposed Fair to be held in that city during the year 1925. So many traveling members have arrived in Portland that they are menacing the local situation, in fact have already proven injurious by their efforts to corral a job for the winter months. Portland can under ordinary trade conditions care for a limited number of extra workers, but it does not pretend to be able to absorb every worker in the middle west, who from present appearance must have "jumped for Portland" the day following that publicity relative to the suggestion made by interested business men of that city.

Secretary Sister Gertrude Sweet, of the Local Joint Executive Board, writes us urging that we inform our membership everywhere that there is no evidence in sight that there will be any such Fair, and that right now the unemployed list is heavy enough without adding a number of visitors who might be getting along very nicely in their own home town.

Portland right now at this season of the year is a real nice city to read about, but not to visit in the expectation of landing a nice easy job.

Better stick around the old town, Sis and Bub, for those roses that you read about—and we get the dope from boys and girls that know—are poor substitutes for corned beef hash with a nice poached egg perched on top.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

UNANSWERED LETTERS.

Despite an experience of better than a score of years trying to decipher the flourishing signatures of many embryo bank presidents—and if you who peruse could but see the wonderful "sigs" that are attached to letters received by us, you would know that the writers had an idea way back in their craniums that some day they might be called upon to sign negotiable bank notes. Anyway, what we are trying to do is attract the attention of girls and boys who take time to write us letters of one kind or another, and who kill off a chance for getting a reply because they scribble their names and initials in such a hurry that we seriously doubt they could read it themselves after it was cold.

If you must write general headquarters, then make it possible for us to know who is doing the writing. You may know your own signature, your friends may be equally fortunate, but we willingly admit that we don't and that is the reason for this call for plainer signatures on letters.

And whisper, girls and boys, when you write us, don't leave the impression that all the paper in the world is the sheet that you are writing on.

Leave a little space between words and lines refrain from making the words appear as though they were packed one on top of the other, for if you do then do not expect a response to something we are unable to read or understand. Take your time, write plainly, use pen and ink. Second-hand typewriters are great little things to have around when you want to write letters.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SCOOTING THROUGH THE AIR.

The Pulitzer Trophy Race held at Omaha, Neb., November 3, 1921, must have been an exciting exhibition. Bert Acosta, the winner, who piloted a Curtiss Navy biplane, covered a course of 153.59 miles at an average speed of 176.7 miles an hour—about 260 feet a second. Many of our readers who have boasted of traveling a "mile-a-minute" on a train, can lay that record in a box, cover it up with a few newspapers of ancient vintage and a couple of moth balls, for as speed is now reckoned that mile a minute stunt compares to the alacrity of a lounge-lizard answering a want ad.

RESOLUTIONS FOR 1922.

Resolve to be a union man
 With all that it implies,
 Don't smoke a filthy, scab cigar,
 While right before your eyes
 Each day you see a union man,
 A friend and comrade, too,
 Go idle, who would gladly make
 A union smoke for you.

Don't miss a meeting, just to play
 A quiet game of cards;
 Resolve to go without delay
 If you must offend your "pards,"
 Don't start the year by purchasing
 A new "open shop" hat,
 No conscientious union man
 Would do a thing like that.

In, short remember all the time,
 The label is your friend,
 And with the starting of the year,
 Resolve your ways to mend.
 Don't patronize a rat or scab,
 As you have done hereto
 And you'll be a thorough union man
 In nineteen twenty-two.

Resolve to buy from union clerks,
 And union bakers, too,
 Resolve to smoke only cigars
 That bear the label "Blue."
 If with your whiskers you'd dispense
 A union barber's sign
 Should lure you to within the walls
 Where union men you'll find.

Buy union shoes and union clothes
 Of union stoves make sure,
 Buy union biscuits, union tacks,
 And union furniture.
 When purchasing your socks or shirts
 Or underwear so fine,
 Be sure and buy from union clerks,
 They're with you all the time.

—THOMAS WEST.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

UNFORTUNATE OMISSIONS.

Just about Turkey Day we received a communication from a widow of a member who had passed to the great beyond several months ago. We were asked to certify to the fact that the late brother was a citizen of the United States—which citizenship seemed to be imperative or the widow would be deprived of a share of an estate. We began a search lasting several days, wrote innumerable letters to secretaries and after obtaining all the information possible to secure from our locals, pestered several municipal officers of several cities in the hope that we would find the name of the late brother registered as a voter. Just about the time that we had about given up the search, we obtained evidence of the kind which courts demand, which proved that the late brother had taken out his first papers in 1909, and obtained final papers in 1915. In our search we came across so many omissions in our monthly reports from local unions that forced the conclusion that there is a lot of room for improvement. For illustration: Many secretaries write on the back of their reports a record reading about as follows:

Out by Traveling Card:

John Doe.
 Annie Roe.
 Horace Moe.

The following month no further information is supplied headquarters and the consequence is that either one or all of the members Out by Traveling Card, may be lost so far as the records of headquarters are concerned.

The Traveling card coupon may be returned to the local issuing the card, but if perchance the receiving secretary is busy, he just files the coupon and pays no further attention to it. That means that the record is incomplete and means further that the system is not working as it was intended to work. Very few of our locals begin to compile their January report until the first or second week of the following month, ample time having elapsed to permit the secretary to obtain the coupon back from whatever local union it may have been deposited with. There would be little time lost or effort required, if the secretary would do as many of our secretaries habitually do, indicate where the Traveling Card was deposited, and when delay occurred on the back of a later report memorandum reading in substance:

"Card issued to John Doe, January 10, deposited in Local 999, February 22, 1922."

Quite frequently secretaries complain that they are unable to decide whether to suspend members out on traveling card, because they have no information as to where the Traveling Card was deposited; or if it has been deposited at all. A little more care and attention to the compilation of monthly reports will be decidedly helpful. There is no reason why we should not have at headquarters records that will enable us at a moment's notice to locate members even when they are in transit from one place to another.

Members can be helpful in the matter also, when they deposit cards, it is not questioning a secretary's ability or perseverance to inquire whether Traveling Card coupon has been returned to the issuing local. Every Traveling Card issued by a local union should include the citizenship record of the member. Native born as well as naturalized citizens should see to it that their Traveling Cards are complete before leaving the issuing secretary's office. Protect yourself and those who are dependent upon you.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

UNITED STATES NAVY NEARLY 100 PER CENT
PURE AMERICAN.

The United States Navy is 99.7 per cent pure American. Figures show that on July 1, native born sailors represent 91.82 per cent; naturalized men 2.99 per cent; Colonial natives 4.89 per cent and the remainder aliens. The last-named number only 352 men. At the end of the fiscal year, the navy comprised 119,205 men. It is a hand-picked navy, for out of 135,993 applicants, only 72,386 were accepted.

It is a healthy navy also, according to the statement of the surgeon general. It is a well-behaved navy, too, as only 6.8 per cent of the total number of discharges were dishonorable, and but 6.08 per cent of the total men in the service during the year deserted. Good conduct medals in the service total more than 6,000.

The distribution of men by States gives New York the lead in both nativity and residence. Out of the total, 119,205 sailors, there are 110,024 white; 5,546 Filipinos; 2,385 negroes; 196 Chinese; 88 Japanese; 139 Samoans, 249 Chamoors; 296 Hawaiians; 197 Porto Ricans and 86 American Indians.

The American navy also is a young navy, 45,555 being under 21; only 904 are above 45, although 53 are over 60. Eight per cent of the enlisted men are married. More than half the men have had previous sea service, and 449 of them have served more than twenty years.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

A TIP TO PRESS SECRETARIES.

No doubt you have perused the communications from Local 106, of Cleveland, Ohio, which have been appearing in the Correspondence pages of the MIXER AND SERVER. You will remember that the press secretary has an additional title; he was authorized by his local union to attach to his contributions the title of Press and Americanization Secretary. Possibly your local has not taken up the oft-made suggestion relative to Americanization. If not, it is time that the subject be given attention; for the time is rapidly approaching when workers at the catering industry in the United States and Canada are going to find it extremely difficult to obtain or continue employment in American-owned and managed catering establishments.

There are several big forces at work, all of them are determined to bring back the days when citizens were met with the glad hand when they applied for employment. The position of thousands upon thousands of ex-soldiers during the present winter has gradually awakened the public to a distressing situation, a condition that few people would have thought possible before the year 1917. It is asking Americans to swallow a bitter pill to expect them to remain dormant and unprotesting while veterans of the world's war, young men, able men, many of them skilled mechanics, walk the streets because they have no jobs, and yet in innumerable manufacturing plants non-citizens enjoy steady employment at compensation away beyond what they were able to secure in the countries from which they came and to which countries they still hold allegiance.

There are thousands of aliens employed in the catering industry in the United States and Canada; they make no secret of the fact that they do not propose to become citizens, they are preferred to the native or naturalized American, and are not at all backward in laughing in our faces because of the failure of our lawmakers to protect the people that vote them into office. The tip we offer to press secretaries is, that they pay their respects to their membership that are endeavoring to educate the foreigner in our midst, to encourage non-citizens to wake up to the necessity of taking out their final papers, for Section 15 was placed in our book of laws for a very definite purpose and means what it reads.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

SLOPPY SISSIES.

Dame Fashion has pulled any number of boners in the decade just coming to a close, to get a toe hold on the ladder, but for downright ugliness and untidiness the Galoshes fad, takes the Gal out and oshes to a sloppy finish. What a lovely feast is in store for the goats who just love old rubber boots.

FOR MRS. JOE LAFLAM.

When Joe LaFlam went to d' wood
Two year ago—yea t'ree—
He met a fine, nice gentleman
Who said, "Joe, speak wit' me."

But Joe, he didn't say wan word,
He close heem face, jes' so;
He say no word at all, at all,
Not yes, sometimes not no.

'Twas one beeg strain on Joe LaFlam
To shut up keep so much
An' listen to de talk, talk, talk
'Bout insure hees life an' such.

But Joe, he wait and wait, and wait,
He listen all de same
At las' he takes a paper— so
And sign dem "Joe LaFlam."

De mon go' way, I say to Joe,
"What for you sign and why?"
Den Joe LaFlam he say to me,
"For mon' should I go die."

"Ha! Ha! One fool," I laugh at heem;
Insurance man got Joe,
He talk heem out of hees col' cash.
Ha! Ha! Jes' so, jes' so.

But one day in de early spring
A tree fell on hees head;
We pick heem up—Sacre, Mon Dieu!
Poor Joe—he was quite dead.

I write to dat insurance man
An' by gar, Sacre, damn,
One t'ousand dollar came next week
To Mrs. Joe LaFlam!—Field Notes.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

DID THE DEVIL PUT IN BID?

"Yes," said the specialist, as he stood at the bedside of the sick purchasing agent, "I can cure you."

"What will it cost?" asked the sick man, faintly.
"Ninety-five dollars."

"You'll have to shade your price a little," replied the purchasing agent, "I have a better bid from the undertaker."—Science and Invention.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

AGITATING EVASION OF OUR LAWS.

"What do we care for the laws printed in the Book of Membership and Constitution. We are the ones to say whether we think our position is right or wrong. If you submit a proposal to the General Executive Board, what do you get? More than likely you will be told that you can't do what you have voted to do. Laws, yes, they are all right, but why bother our heads about such things; we know what we want and the only way to get it is by striking and winning."

The man who made that appeal to a minority of the members of a local union at one of their meetings, did not even believe it was necessary to lay the subject matter before the membership of the union, which at the time was close to the one hundred mark. A vote was had and the hand-full of members warmed up by the peppery talking of the agitator for trouble, said let's go on strike. The strike was called, some of the members did not even know that such a move was contemplated, with the result that quite a number questioned the authority of the agitator—who was placed in charge—to call them from their work. After several hours of haggling and threatening, the majority of the workers had left their places, their places were taken over by men and women who had not been approached to become members of their union—the strike was lost and the union went kafooey—at least that is the destination imparted to us by correspondence some months later. Very few hastily called and minority authorized strikes have ever won anything, and fewer still will be called successes in the future. A strike is the last resort, it is the only thing left for a union to call when all other means to obtain acceptable agreements have failed. Some excellent results have been obtained by striking, but greater and more lasting results have been secured via the conference between employers and employees. It is well to keep your eye peeled for the fellows that advance the strike cure for the ailment that bothers your union and its membership. Quite frequently they dig out of town after getting a union in a hole; they imagine that they have avoided responsibility, but their records are recalled when they make a similar effort later on. Our laws are not the most perfect ever written to cover the subject of strikes, but they offer this very important advantage, that no strike can be called by a minority of the membership without violating the general laws of our organization. Perhaps you think that is an exaggeration, but satisfy yourself by taking your Membership Book and Constitution from your pocket and read with more than usual care Sections 155 to 158 inclusive. If you did not know that such laws were in your book of laws, it is your fault, don't blame the officers of your local union for not informing you. Read the sections referred to, read all of the sections in that membership book; become acquainted with every provision and you will know what your organization aims to accomplish.

Get this one thought and get it right. No local union has a legal or moral right to call you out on strike until the provisions set forth in the mentioned sections have been complied with. That ought to stop the agitators for law evasion, and it will if you remain wide awake and protect your interest from trouble creators who leave you to hold the bag.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHAT IT REALLY MEANS.

For reasons which we make no effort to examine and find out the whys and whereofs, several local union secretaries have seen fit to damn the law governing the re-instatement of local unions, writing in a tone which might be construed as intimating that the law was constructed for their special benefit. Section 61 of our laws is a very brief section and contains no language to either confuse or mislead. The section reads:

"THE GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD SHALL HAVE POWER TO REINSTATE A LOCAL SUSPENDED FOR NON-PAYMENT OF ACCOUNTS UPON A SETTLEMENT IN FULL BY SUCH LOCAL, WITH ONE DOLLAR ADDITIONAL."

If perchance a local union fails to remit its per capita tax and is suspended in accordance with the provisions of Section 60 the general office is required under the law to exact SETTLEMENT IN FULL, and One Dollar for re-instatement of the local.

A case in point—one of our locals continued on the ragged edge for several months, that condition, so we are told, was mainly due to the wilful neglect of the financial secretary. We finally informed the said secretary that his local was in bad standing and had been for several months, that we would expect him to compile reports and make necessary remittance in order to place the union in good standing. He began to write us asking why we accepted any money from him, knowing as we did that his union was a suspended union. We made the required explanations and shortly afterwards he submitted reports up to and including the month of October, the reports and remittance came to us in the month of November, and we advised him that until he had made his November report and remitted for same as well as the one dollar for reinstatement of the local, the union would not be regarded as being in good standing. It took several weeks to convince that officer that our views were correct, and he finally paid up. Let us suppose that during the time that union was in arrears one or two members had died and death benefit claims had been filed with us. We would have been forced to deny payment of the claims, not because of any neglect on our part, but because of the neglect of a local union official. Had that occurred, what a fine thing that would have been for that local union—NOT.

It is all right for officers to be determined and all that sort of thing, but they have no right to employ that determination to the disadvantage of fellow members. The laws were not made by one or two men, they were not put into the Membership Book and Constitution without mature consideration, and local union officers who deliberately overlook payment of tax are hardly caring for the interests of the members who elected them to office. Keep your eye on the financial reports printed in the MIXER AND SERVER, if you find your local slipping, make it your business to ask the reason and thus take the first step to protect your interests.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INTERPRETING.

Teacher—"What is meant by the saying: He smote him hip and thigh?"

Little Bobby—"I reckon it means, he fanned him for a flask."—From Judge.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

MOVIE MAGNATES' WISDOM.

The moving picture magnates, with hundreds of thousands of dollars invested in the picture industry, are no doubt responsible for the "Fatty" Arbuckle sob stuff and alleged human interest stories which the Scripps-McRae publications carried as front page stuff on the eve of the second Arbuckle trial in San Francisco. They have many reels of Fatty's pictures which were taboo as soon as the press began to print the news in connection with the murder of Virginia Rappe. They are banking on getting an acquittal and a clean bill of health for the heavy weight comedian. They are, however, making the usual mistake of the residents of the House of Dollars. They imagine that they can save the price—the expenses—so far incurred by cutting the wages of the non-professional labor employed at their several studios. Several months ago we printed in these pages information to the effect that the real movie Trust located at Los Angeles, not only refused to compensate skilled artisans equal to what was paid by the average run of employers, but boasted that they were going to run an open shop. For fear that you have forgotten the establishments involved in this anti-union campaign, we herewith reproduce the list printed in our October, 1921 number.

The Central Labor Council of Los Angeles, Calif., submits the following list of companies and "stars" that are unfair to trades unionists of Los Angeles:

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation: Ethel Clayton, Wallace Reid, Gloria Swanson, David Kirkwood, Agnes Ayres, Julia Faye, Roscoe Arbuckle, Wanda Hawley, Bebe Daniels, Lila Lee, Constance Binney, Elliott Dexter, May McVey, Theodore Roberts, Monte Blue, Jack Holt, Walter Hires, Conrad Nagle, Lois Wilson, Mildred Harris.

William Fox Productions: Eileen Percy, Jack Gilbert, Buck Jones, Tom Mix, Dustin Farnum, Wm. Russell, Harry Debbs, Clyde Cook, Al St. John, William Farnum, Chester Conklin, Barbara Bedford, Shirley Mason.

Goldwyn Productions: James Kirkwood, Ralph Lewis, Howard Davy.

Christie Comedies: Bobbie Vernon, Neal Burns.

Need you be advised that you have a legal as well as a moral right to refrain from patronizing any of "the shows" produced by the foregoing concerns? The movie game may be all right for millionaire investors, but it's the dimes of the wage-earning men and women that support the pictures. The so-called "upper calasses" regard the screen drama as rawther plebeian, good enough for the workers, but not quite the thing for the Dollarbund.

There are quite a number of high-class movie producers in the country. You do not have to go without seeing an occasional picture. When you do go in the future patronize the movie shop in your town that offers pictures by producers who treat labor with consideration and pay a living wage.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE LABOR LEADER'S JOB.

A successful trades union leader to view him as he might see himself, must be a skillful politician and diplomat. He must hearken to the desires of the members, but translate them into practical policies. He must get what he can out of the employers while avoiding undue strikes. His job calls for keenness and foresight of much the same type as that needed by a government leader in a democratic State.

About two years ago many members of the switchmen's and allied railway unions thought their national officers too conservative. So they rebelled and struck, and new independent unions and more aggressive leaders sprang up in all the great railway centers in the country. The yardmen probably regret that strike today. Perhaps the leaders were partly responsible for it; at any rate they temporarily lost their leadership of thousands of their members, to the great disadvantage of commerce and of the yardmen.

In the case of the milk wagon drivers in the New York district, the leaders were anything but conservative as far as precipitating a strike was concerned. They were eager for battle and led 10,000 men into a disastrous strike. Now the union, seeing that it has lost the fight, has ousted all its officers by way of retaliation. Like the yardmen, the drivers regret their strike. Leaders who brought it on must give way to new ones.

A wise trades union official does not seek strikes, above all, not in periods of deflation. He seeks to avoid them. He knows that if he backs an unsuccessful strike his men will suffer and he must bear the responsibility. Experienced labor leaders know this well enough; the railway brotherhoods' recognition of it saved the country from a transportation strike last autumn.

The best union leaders rely on their wits to gain by negotiation, not by strikes. Like the diplomat they have weapons that, without being called into use or even mentioned, may affect the argument. But they don't want to use them, and usually they don't need to.—New York Sun, January 12, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

HAPPYLAND.

Said a busy cobbler as he filled his mouth with nails:

Better far to go out hunting and a-shooting quails;
Rancid smells the leather as I hold it fast,
And it sticks together as I measure on the last.
Give me freedom from this tedium ere my nerves give way;
Give me gun and mountain and I bless you all the day.

Said the florist as he held the tissue paper, oh so pink:

If I had an airship, what a caper; what a jink!
I'd go up to Venus and I'd hold her, hold her fast,
'Till she begged like sixty, then I'd let her go at last.
Never would I look at roses nor the fragrance would I smell;
I'd rather keep on going, even though I dropped to—well.

Said the rich man as he smoked a very mild cigar:
I'd far rather be a roofer with a hunk of sticky tar;

Then I'd never need to think of dollars nor of time,
And I'd be a reg'lar fellow, falling right in line.
I'd far rather be a poor man, strength and health to play;
But he weakened when I gave him chance to change with me today.

Said the newsie as he counted and his hands were cold and blue:
I've had lots of luck and riches—riches not so big to you.

Cold and hungry came he, and he seemed to blame me,
Just a dog so homely, who had been so lonely me
to see.

I'm in Happyland, my fellow, for a cur so yellow
Came to love me and to speak with eyes so mellow.

—By MRS. THOMAS H. HASSEY,
725 E. Fifteenth Street, Portland, Ore.

THE SPIRIT THAT COUNTS.

Just as the thermometer hit the lowest spot during the month of January and we at headquarters were wishing that the steam radiator would do double duty, who should make us a visit, bundled up in about one hundred dollars worth of classy appearing overcoat and all of the fixings that go with it, but Barney Quinn, former secretary and business agent of Local 763, Rochester, N. Y. It has been several years since we had the privilege of saluting Barney, but he made up for that by the warmth of his greeting and the good wishes tendered to every man and woman of the organization.

Barney is doing well, is now connected with one of the largest building supply concerns in the United States, acts and talks like ready money, and if you think the old scout can't do that little stunt, you've another think coming.

Barney travels considerably, manages to meet up with quite a number of the old-timers and keeps in touch with what is taking place in the labor movement. Being a business agent has its advantages as well as the opposite. When you are off the job, the employers may take it into their head to hand you the good old raspberry; but they will never reach you if you show the spirit which Barney did; for he fooled them, directed his efforts along another line and landed in a good job and is making good.

He says that he wishes all of his old-time friends the best of health and luck and means it.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

GOOD NEWS FROM THE ROSE CITY.

From an interesting communication from Bro. C. T. Fredericks, secretary of Local 207, Portland, Ore., received just as we were closing forms of this month's issue of THE MIXER AND SERVER, we are advised to the effect that our unions in the city of Portland have come to an agreement with The D. C. Cappa Company. Our unions put up a good stiff battle—one that impressed the proprietors—although there are some who still believe that they can put our locals down and out. But there is no law against believing.

In Brother Frederick's communication he says: "I am very sorry to report that we had two cooks, one baker or pastry cook and one helper scab on us in the C. & C. Cafeteria, and the following are their names and what they received for their dirty work: Robert Spitznagle, chef, expelled and fined $300; Frank Kaskich, expelled and fined $300 (these are both cooks); George Holmberg, pastry cook, expelled and fined $150; Ton Pantages, helper, expelled and fined $250 (this man is carrying a paid-up card in the Machinists' Union also); for a man by the name of Drew, a suspended member of Local 400, our board recommends a fine of $50 on this man, but we have not heard from Spokane as yet. We took all these men off the job, put all men that came out back, and will make it hard sledding for the birds that scabbed if we have to fight every house in the city."

It is the intention of our local in Portland to endeavor to secure the photographs of the foregoing list of scabs, so that a halfpence cut can be made up, thus supplying all of our locals with a picture that they can keep posted and refer to it if necessary.

CHEESE BROTHERS.

Brick—Man marries a widow with two daughters. What does he get?

Swiss—What d'you mean—whadde he get?

Brick—You'd better enlist with me and attend school? What does he get?

Swiss—I'm a regular bait nibbler this mornine, what's the answer?

Brick—A second hand Lizzie and two runabouts.

Swiss—How's the bank roll this lovely morning?

Brick—Why the inquiry, what do you want?

Swiss—Want to borrow a five spot.

Brick—Always borrowing. You're getting to be a regular bleeder.

Swiss—Where do you get that gore sign from, anyway?

Brick—Don't you know what a bleeder is?

Swiss—Sorry, old top, but my education has been sadly neglected. Please convey to the waiting student the info.

Brick—Been listening to Frank Tinney again, ain't you? Well, now, Mr. Wise, just open them flaps hitched to the side of your face and absorb the following: Bleeders, as those persons who tend to excessive bleeding are called, have a heredity that is quite strange. Their disease is known as Hemophilia. It is transmitted by the mother who herself does not have it. It goes from father to son or from grandfather to grandson, through a perfectly healthy mother.

Swiss—Yeh, that's as clear as the silent Z in fish. You'd better quit going to that school, they are slipping you bum steers.

Brick—Wrong again, my chuckle headed pal, wrong again.

Swiss—Betcha a butterbun that I can show you a roomful of bleeders; but I have a different name for them.

Brick—Well, I still live in the good old State, present address Jeff City.

Swiss—All right, ramble along with me over to the Culinary Club and if I don't show you a flock of bleeders you can pass me the 1921 straw helmet and I'll do the masticating stunt.

Brick—You'll never show me a flock of anything outside of your favorite birds—wild geese.

Swiss—Come along and you will admit that these two-footed stiffes are bleeders, for they are enjoying the benefits of organization and do not belong to the union, and that is what I call bleeders.

Brick—You say that they do not belong to the union. What's that got to do with them being as you called them—bleeders?

Swiss—You keep away from the piano stores. They tell me they are short of ivory. What can you call a mutt who works as a waiter, gets the wages which the union made possible, won't join the union and can't be made to see that he is sneaking off with something created by a bunch of real men and women?

Brick—Didn't you say a moment ago that you had a name for them?

Swiss—I did, and here it is. C-A-D-G-E-R-S. A cadger is a brainless biped that lacks the guts to play fair and pay his way.—Navillus.

CORRESPONDENCE

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

December 28, 1921.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, my vacation is at end now, and I am going to get back in harness again in the much-written-of studio city of Hollywood. As I am a pretty well-seasoned sort of guy, I guess the charms and charmers won't have any effect on me. Owing to the rainy season—a sort of Puget Sound brand of weather—did not get to do any fishing the last couple of weeks. I was just wishing I could get to see that delegate who made the spiel about Southern California being heaven. But, having never been there, I can not dispute the delegate's word. While I have no kick coming, as this is my home now, still I have nothing but praise for any part of the good old U. S. A. When one walks down Second Street and sees the army of unemployed there, it sure impresses one that it is hell for some of them. If these men of all crafts have not learned a thing or two the past winter, they sure are getting a lesson now, which ought to teach them that unless they belong to some real union and read the union and labor papers, they will be right back to where they were thirty years ago.

I have attended the meetings of central labor bodies here and elsewhere and from the delegates learned that the newspapers in the East and Middle West are the cause of this situation of unemployment, as it is their plan to keep the market so flooded with workers that, like any other commodity, they can hand us out these measly crumbs of jobs. I feel sorry for the "greasy spoon" artists who come out here without a stake, but do not agree with some writers that all are rats who have to patronize these slave markets. Many have been led here through fake advertisements. And say, mister, when a man or woman has a family or dependents, he or she will sure have to do something to get work. As I have stated in previous articles, "they can't keep you down." While they did not break me, they sure made a run on the "Tourist's till" or bank roll.

Many come here, it seems, who have heard and believe that there are plenty of jobs to be had, this impression having been made by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, which, like a well-known brand of pills, "works while you sleep," and has caused these czars to try to tell some workers what they will have to work for. No doubt during this crisis our ranks will dwindle some, but a day of reckoning is coming, and woe to him who makes an honest worker eat out of his hand the crumbs he himself would not have.

In my opinion, these panicky times will only tend to strengthen the labor movement, and if I knew of a worthy brother or sister who could not keep his or her dues paid up on account of not having the price, surely would not let him or her be suspended if I had the price myself. I have never in any part of the country failed to meet someone who would not ask me if I was in need of anything. Some of these men would not pass inspection on appearance at a dress parade, but under their bronzed skin and shabby clothing was a heart in the right place.

President Flore, and thanks to him for it, in his monthly letter in the November MIXER AND SERVER, page 8, said the whole truth. In all parts of the country are places called eat shops, cafeterias, lunch rooms, and by many other names, that we men class, and rightly so, as greasy spoons. They may look all right out in front; but, mister, did you ever go inside and look at what they call the kitchen? And did you ever happen to see where as high as eight and ten people have to change their clothes in a toilet which both men and women have to use? If you paid $50 or $70 for a suit of clothes, as you must nowadays, would you feel like hanging that only suit out in a filthy toilet at times?

Brothers and sisters, some of you know these to be facts. I have worked in such places, and I have also worked where they had lockers for cooks and waiters, shower baths and benches to rest on. No doubt when the labor movement gets into power, which I believe it will some day, no establishment will pass inspection unless it is a decent place to work in and is provided with a place to change your clothes. When that time comes you will not find the cooks classed as tramps because they do not come up to dress parade inspection. In my opinion, wise officials should pay more attention to a man's ability and standing, and not judge a fellow worker by his clothes. Unless you are a mind-reader, you can not read a brother's or a sister's heart.

Let me give you a tip—this is not a knock—don't go fishing unless you have tackle, bait and some grub. To tell you the truth as I see it, the coast is as far from heaven as any place I ever hit. If you are broke and out of a job, you can find a worldly heaven anywhere if you have got the worshiped dollar. Why, you are even welcome in Mr. Volstead's State if you have your friend Dollar with you—at least I was.

One of Mr. Hearst's newspapers out here has published a statement, a clipping of which I am enclosing, by which you will see that we don't need to go to Mexico for the spirit that keeps Mr. Pussyfoot and his hypocrites awake at night. I am not trying to "steal somebody's thunder," but if you, Jere L., see fit to put this in the February MIXER AND SERVER, you will be doing a good thing for humanity.

As Brother Nixon, of Local 14, Denver, Colo., would like to see a few lines, here they are, and every word of them facts. Not the whining of a disgruntled person, but just a letter from a contented "tourist."

With regards to all, and trusting all of you will stick to the staunch old ship, I remain

Fraternally yours,

JOHN HAUSS, the Tourist.

January 18, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Your favor of the 13th received, and I wish to state that I went to see Bro. Al. Hassel at the Labor Temple, who, with Organizer Beck and Brother Sesma, were at a meeting of Cooks' Local 468 this evening. But, as Local 468 has a press secretary, I will not intrude.

Am sending you a clipping that I cut from one of our dailies here. Was in to see Sister Helen Harding, of the waitresses' local, and showed it to her. If we could get every man who has the least bit of principle in him to read this one item, it would be the best solution of our situation. We should all organize and see that we elect only men and women who will uphold the principles of the American Federation of Labor. When we lay aside all personal grudges, quit throwing the bull and passing the buck on this and that, are honest in our dealings, quit calling names and attend to that which we have taken an obligation to uphold, then and only then will we succeed.

Los Angeles is no worse than many other localities; but remember this a large territory, not a mere city, this place Los Angeles, and only by striving and keeping a close watch can we keep the borers from within our ranks from tearing down what we have accomplished in the past. I hope every man and woman who reads this will awaken to the fact that while conditions are bad, they will be far worse if the merchants and manufacturers—or call them what you will—get us disorganized.

I have a letter from a northwestern city which shows that it is costing nearly eight dollars a month for dues and assessments to whip a few "ivory heads." If I could, I'd work for my keep the rest of the year to see if we could not get these same conditions here. It is only our "don't-give-a-damn" greediness that is letting these czars get away with their stuff.

The brightest spot in Los Angeles today is that monument on Maple, between Fifth and Sixth Streets, called the Labor Temple. I heard a report at the last meeting of the Labor Council in which it was stated that there was a debt of only $9,800 owing on the temple, and that the labor movement was in a good way to own their own picnic grounds also.

Professional writers and muck rakers can write what they will, but take it from the "Tourist," the labor movement in Los Angeles and vicinity is not asleep.

I notice the disrupters are also sulking about looking for a chance to help the M. & M. Shame on any person who will bow so low as to try to wreck what it has taken years to gain. "They shall not pass" is my motto with them.

The weather here is cool, and while there seems to be a little more work since the holidays, the slave markets on Second Street seem to be getting the most of the patronage.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN HAUSS, the Tourist.
Local 468.

NOTE.—Clipping referred to in foregoing is reproduced on inside of cover.—EDITOR MIXER AND SERVER.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have a very serious complaint to make to you in the matter of the sporting item appearing on page 10 of the December number, 1921 of the MIXER AND SERVER. You give in that tabulation and review the winners of all the leagues of professional base ball in the United States and Canada, but you overlooked one important league, the Pacific Coast League, an eight-team circuit, which we pride ourselves and claim it to be the minor Major League. Los Angeles was the pennant winner of the season 1921 and I deem it my duty as an ardent fan to advise you of that fact, as it seems that you are unaware of that, to us, important fact.

With best wishes for a Happy New Year, I am
Fraternally yours,

HUGO ERNST.

NOTE BY EDITOR—When the editor of the MIXER AND SERVER received that communication, he promptly responded and advised Brother Ernst that he had taken the "copy" prepared by Jack Ryder, Sporting writer on the Cincinnati Enquirer, and presumed that it was a complete summary for all the leagues in America, that he supposed the Pacific Coast League began its season late and finished late and that probably was the reason for not including the Pacific Coast League in the tabulation. Brother Ernst responds under date of January 9, 1922, in effect that the Pacific Coast League began its season on April 5, 1921, and closed the season October 2, 1921. He further advises that a league which sent such players as Oscar Vitt, Buck Weaver, Hal Chase, Jean Gregg and innumerable others who won fame and fortune in the Big Show was hardly entitled to be omitted in such an important summary. Finally he directs our attention to the fact that Jimmy O'Connell, whom John McGraw of the Giants passed over a check for $75,000 in order to secure, is a Pacific Coast League product and some ball player, and to show that he is in dead earnest, Ernst signs himself a "Dyed in the Wool Fan."

We might conclude this comment by imparting the information that the National League is about to lose two of its famous arbitrators, Hank O'Day and Bob Emslie, the former, so it is rumored is to leave this neck of the woods and will be found handling the indicator in the Pacific Coast League when the season begins. Bob Emslie, the dean of umpires may follow Hank. If that happens, and it seems likely, the base ball fans of the Coast cities are in for a real treat, for despite the inclination of the average fan to ride the umpire, no men in connection with the game are better liked or respected than Hank and Bob.—Editor M. & S.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

OMAHA, NEB.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Most culinary workers are of the opinion that Omaha is a city stuck somewhere out in the Central States but outside of that is a corpse. The hotel and restaurant owners have spent a lot of money and energy in trying to make such out of us but have at the time of this writing not succeeded in doing so.

The past year has been one of hard struggles to keep Locals 23, Cooks, and 143, Waiters, above water, but despite the fact that we have had quite a few strikes and lockouts, the spirit of the organization has been kept alive and instead of setting around the hall, as we did in the past, waiting for the bosses to throw us out into the street whenever they saw fit, we have taken the offensive away from them and have started to picket all unfair houses. At the present time we are picketing the Edwards Cafe and are of the opinion that in a short time we will be able to report success.

This action was taken only after repeated attempts were made to meet the owners in conference and have them recognize the union. Their refusal, forced us to place the pickets on; there is nothing like showing the town that your union is alive and progressive. We wish that other locals throughout the country would follow our course and get some life into them. In doing so we are not only protecting the jobs and conditions that it took years to attain but are on the road to better conditions.

Fighting these unfair houses has also had a tendency to draw our members closer together and to forget their petty grievances for the benefit of the entire organization. Our last meeting sure was proof of this as practically all of our members who were in the city and not on watch, attended, something new to this local. The following were the officers and committees elected for the next six months: Al Langfeldt, president; John Albin, vice-president; Joe Robinson, financial secretary and business agent; Roy Abidill, recording secretary; Bill McCall, inside guard; Fred Ganaway, inspector; Joe Davis, press secretary; board of trustees, Frank Durham, John Albin and Joe Davis; delegates to Central Labor Union, Al Langfeldt, Joe Robinson and Joe Davis; delegates to Local Joint Executive Board, Al Langfeldt, Roy Abidill and Al Martin.

Fraternally,
JOSEPH V. DAVIS,
Press Secretary, Local 23.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LONG BEACH, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am enclosing a clipping taken from the Long Beach (Cal.) Telegram, a daily paper published here, which is self-explanatory. I thought it would look well in the MIXER AND SERVER as coming as it does, from the home of Congressman Randall, the prime instigator of the Anti-Saloon League, and is a direct refutation of the claims of the Antis, that the country is better for being dry.

This community is supposed to be a model of sobriety and I am here to tell you that before prohibition became effective this town was as dry as any town I was ever in. But since the Eighteenth Amendment became law, it is as wet, or wetter than the wettest, which is some wet.

Fraternally yours,
ROBERT W. WATTS,
Secretary-Business Agent, Local 681.

SAYS APPALLING INCREASE IN DRUNKENNESS HAS FOLLOWED PROHIBITION.

Police Judge Hawkins Declares Drinking Has Doubled and Thrice as Many Women are Intoxicants. Volstead Act Can't be Enforced. Says Magistrate, Who Asserts Shellac, Perfumes, Toilet Waters and "Canned Heat" Supplant Whisky.

"Drunkness in Long Beach has increased 100 per cent since the national prohibition amendment went into effect," Police Judge Carl V. Hawkins declared yesterday afternoon in the course of hearings accorded two intoxicants and a bootlegger. "Intoxication among women in this city has increased more than 200 per cent," he added.

The degree of intoxication produced by the present illicit conditions, is far greater than that caused by the legitimate beverages dispensed before passage of the dry law, the judge also declared.

Judge Hawkins continued:

"It used to be that persons brought before me on charges of intoxication were able to remember distinctly what occurred up until the time they had taken the seventh or eighth drink. Now few of them can recall anything after the first drink."

The common story now is:

"Well, your Honor, I had no idea of getting drunk. My friend had a bottle of home brew and I just took one drink. After that I don't remember what happened."

In addition to practically every patent medicine on the market, the various defendants who have faced the judge during the past year, have admitted drinking "canned heat," boiled shellac and all kinds of perfume and toilet waters.

There are hundreds of offenders who never touched liquor before prohibition became effective, the judge asserted.

"It seems to be the natural tendency of the American people to want the thing they are told that can't have," is the way he explained it. "And furthermore, there seems to be a feeling that the people, themselves, had but little to do with the enactment of the dry measure.

"The present prohibition law is practically non-enforceable and is a breeder of disrespect," is the way he summed up the case.

Before the dry law was enacted, the local police had only to cope with intoxication. Now they have, in addition, to watch out for bootleggers, the judge declared.

Fred Welch, charged with selling Officers Smith and Richardson a pint of whisky for $5, was fined $300 yesterday. He pleaded guilty to the charge, but denied he had been engaged previously in illicit liquor trafficking.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PORTLAND, MAINE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few words from "Way Down East." It has been a long time since the MIXER AND SERVER has heard from Local 308, but we want you to know that we are still on the map. Everything is going along pretty smoothly at present.

We had a strike at the Congress Square Hotel and it is still on the unfair list. Our sisters and brothers from that house put up a great fight and showed true union spirit. They are all working now in some of our other houses under union conditions. The Congress Square Hotel has managed to keep open by getting cooks and waitresses from Boston and New York independent organizations, and conditions there are some different than under the "union bunch."

Our recent election of officers was a real lively one. In Brother Joe Askey, our new business agent, we have a live-wire and he is keeping everything on the move at all times.

Our installation of officers was very interesting. Officers installed for the coming year are: President, Clarence Potter; first vice-president, Pete Gandreau; second vice-president, Margaret Blake; recording secretary, Phil Legere; treasurer, James McKeough; financial secretary and business agent, Joe Askey; chaplain, Ray Briggs; inspector, Benjie Irving; inside guard, Martin O'Connor; outside guard, William Laughlin; trustees, Ella Young, Albert Anderson, Charles Jotberg.

Yours fraternally,
PHIL LEGERE,
Recording Secretary, Local 308.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The ushering in of the "New Year" made the "out-of-work boys" happy for the time being.

Local 763 closed the "old year" with as serious a menace as it could be confronted with, namely, "A Japanese Invasion."

My last letter mentioned the fact that the old "Genessee Valley Club" in this city was now known as the "Itta." We were under the impression that when this club was turned over to other hands that would be the last we would hear of it, but it seems that it was only a commercial transaction. The waiters and cooks formerly employed at the club were given to understand that their jobs were good provided the club established a dining service again. We received a "jolt" just before the New Year when the club again opened up and employed Japanese help to take the places of the waiters. We received an order for New Year's Eve, and the union decided that now was the time to teach "Mr. Jap" his lesson by notifying the steward of the club that our members would not work with such people. It seems to me that our western locals are making some "progress" (?) when we wake up in this of ours and find the same element that is being fought tooth and nail on the coast. We expect to be able to convince these birds that the best thing for them to do is to keep moving on "their way."

Another matter which has been receiving our attention is the "rumblings" of the chain hotel system. While these "noises" might not be calling all of the locals that might be affected, we in Rochester know what their intentions are. It has been rumored that some of these hotels are losing money on their dining-rooms, and the way they propose to remedy this situation is by opening up "coffee shops" or breakfast rooms. In this city we know what this means. It has already meant a decrease in the crews of waiters in the hotel we have in mind. They are now employing girls in the places of the waiters, and only paying them $40 per month. They have also added on lunch and dinner to the service, and this means less waiters for their other dining-rooms. Local 763 believes that now is an opportune time to call a conference of all local unions who are in any way doing business with chain hotels in the United States and Canada—the sooner the better. Our members are going to be "Johnny on the spot from now on."

The literacy test law which I spoke about last month is now the law of the State, and a campaign is now on to instruct these aliens in the English language, so they will be O. K. for the next election. She's an Empire State, by Heck! Youbetcha!

Somebody said that lack of money was the cause of poor business; interest on long time loans is 4½ per cent, the lowest since 1917. This ought to brighten things up a bit, cheap money and low interest always is a forerunner of good times. Money begins to do things when its ball and chain are made lighter.

In these "Prohi" days it's hard to tell from in front of a store and the stock displayed, what kind of a business the Geek is running in the rear. We have one around these parts whose front windows are full of "dummies" and the sign reads: Come up and save from 50c to $1.00.

Our out of work list remains the same, which means business is on the "blink." Are our meetings being attended? Well, I should say. S. R. O. sign hanging out. Some of the boys are even late on the job they are so interested.

Drip, drip, says my nose—some cold.

Yours fraternally,

MICHAEL J. MURTHA.

PEORIA, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been several years since I wrote for the entertainment of the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER. I take great pleasure at this time in going over some good old facts of Bartenders' Local 286. It is just twenty years ago, on January 7, 1902, that we received our charter from the International Union.

There is one policy that local unions must and shall follow, and that is, each local should be run on a business basis. Our local, from 1902 to 1906, was run very carelessly. We had poor business agents and our funds soon disappeared. Our membership dropped by the wayside. These members were not good union members, but were in the local to cause trouble and we had a pleasure club instead of a bona fide union. Our membership dropped from 110 to 35 members in October, 1906. The following list of thirty-five members are those who stood by the local union and for unionism after November, 1906; James Garbrant, Charles Farrell, Ernest Cox, George List, Harry Donnelley, Peter M. Shipman, John Gondolfo, John R. Huber, Rudolph Kothe, Charles M. DeVore, Herman Bauer, August Allers, Wm. Cleveland, Charles Bross, Wm. Jaes, Wm.

JOHN R. HUBER

Secretary, Local 286, Peoria, Ill.

Kowalske, Joseph Fink, J. W. Carey, S. J. Nichols, Andy Zink, Louis Ragen, Joseph Wolfram, Fred Dockstader, Oscar Bickerdt, Otto Hecker, Henry Wyles, Martin Wessells, Christ Seizinger, Edward Specht, Dick Reynolds, Daniel Lucey, Fred Zeisler, Ray Baker, Wm. Brash, Wm. Roloff.

We reorganized in 1907, elected a new set of officers, and our local was run on a business basis since. In 1907 the following charter members were elected to office: President, Jas. Garbrant; financial secretary, Chas. Farrell; treasurer, John Huber. In 1909 Brother Farrell resigned his office and Treasurer Huber was elected financial secretary for the year 1909. Brother Huber has continued to work hard for the success of the local. Monthly buttons and statements were issued and the local was run on a business basis, Secretary Huber going so far as to issue cards showing where our members were employed. In 1910 our membership increased to 121; and in 1916 the highest mark was reached, the local having 320 members.

In 1913 our local adopted a sick benefit fund.

and we have kept it up to the present time. It certainly makes a great hit with the members.

Bartenders' Union in this city was said to be the strongest of any local in this city. On January 1, 1913, we had cash on hand amounting to $1,969.22; January 1, 1918, $3,865.64.

Now I must give you some figures on membership since our country went dry: January 1, 1922, we had 56 members and $2,439.69 in our treasury.

The members haven't cold feet on account of the country being dry. Secretary Huber has been asked by some of the members, "When and how is the local union going to do with funds?" also, "How soon are you going to divide the money?" Secretary Huber issued a statement to the members of Local 286 on January 9, 1920, to the effect that the local can not split or divide the money now on hand. The August (1919) meeting of Local 286 voted to keep our local going and to keep the charter and to pay sick and death benefits.

Local 286 has quite a number of live members. Brother Frye has been delegated to the central body, and has been elected as secretary and treasurer of Labor Temple Building Association. Brother Frye has been faithful in attendance to the central body for some years past. Our president, John M. Irish, and Brother Otto De LaBell, have missed some meetings but are always present when needed.

Our local has sent the following delegates to International Union conventions: To Rochester, George Peterson; Boston, Huber and Bickerdt; Denver, Irish and Huber; San Francisco, Oscar Bickerdt; St. Louis, Irish, Huber and Fisher; Providence, John M. Irish.

At our last meeting, January 13, 1922, we held a social meeting for the benefit of our membership and some of our friends in the labor cause. Speakers of the evening were: President Irish, whose topic was, "What We Have Done." Secretary Huber gave his report on the business of the local; Brother Stach of the machinists' union spoke on "Unionism and How to Us It—and When." The meeting was also enlivened by songs and stories delivered by Dave McCluggage, Dr. O'Shaughnessy, Wilson and Roberts. Carl Fry, Mike McGuire, Henry Roll, Fred Dockstader.

The following officers were elected to serve for year 1922: President, John M. Irish; vice-president, Charles Krempf; recording secretary, Oscar Bickerdt; financial secretary, John R. Huber; treasurer, John M. Fisher; inside guard, Jerry Hogan; chaplain, Jas. Garrabrant; trustees, Oscar Bickerdt, Fred Dockstader, Henry Roll; sick committee, John Helmer, Wm. Stark, Otto De LaBell; delegates to Trades Assembly, John M. Irish, Otto De LaBell, Carl Frye.

Fraternally yours,

JOHN R. HUBER,
Secretary, Local 286.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Having been acting as a pinch-hitter for our former recording and press secretary, owing to his absence from the city, I was all set to turn over my goods and chattels to our newly-elected officer, but owing to his time being taken up on a personal matter which he could not postpone, he has asked me to sub for him in this issue. Next month Bro. Theodore Banas will start the ball rolling in order to let our numerous readers know that we are "still on the map."

As the clock struck nine on the first day of February, in the heart of the business section of the City of Brotherly Love an infant was born. No flourish of trumpets heralded its entry into the world; no skilled physician was present to greet the little stranger; no nurse to administer the usual care and comfort, yet from its very conception this infant was destined to make its presence felt throughout the entire city. To its immediate family it meant joy and enthusiasm. To those antagonistically inclined towards the family and its friends the news was received with astounding dismay. To the latter it was a warning—a substantial warning—because of the fact that these surprised people actually believed the parent of this new arrival was as barren as Greenland's icy mountains. But the child was born, the direct offspring of the Central Labor Union of Philadelphia and Vicinity, and they christened it the Producers and Consumers Bank. Every conceivable safeguard has been thrown around this institution, especially such as would thwart any attack from hostile forces lurking amidst the moneyed interests generated and supervised by the former monarchs who have accommodately saved our money for us until such time as it could be best utilized to force us into submission. The bank is as thoroughly co-operative as it can, with absolute safety, be made. Our working people are not skeptical of success; they don't fear for the proper management of the bank, and they don't have to. It is operated under a deed of trust, and all the trustees need do is watch for the prowlers in the dark, and especially beware of wolves, because there are some people who are not going to like our new kid. Now don't forget, you boys and girls who may contemplate honoring Philadelphia with your presence, that the labor movement has a bank of its own creation, the trustees of which carry cards of trades affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The town is "still on the map," even if you do have to sneak in some side doors to celebrate your birthday.

I believe the latest out of the linen basket is that our dear girls will have to take a course in a business college preparatory to being considered real up-to-date waitresses. I know our fair sex insist upon being in keeping with the times and are just as much on the qui vive for the latest styles as those who can enjoy the comforts of life without toil. The young ladies of our craft, when seeking a position, present a most pleasing appearance, and are generally prepared to answer promptly and efficiently any proper question that may be put to them. As waitresses—and that is what they claim to be—they are all that can be desired. But when asked, as they are in a couple of beaneries I happen to know, "Can you run a typewriter?" it is only natural some of them will look up with disgust. However, this is the latest essential and—one never knows—the disease may spread. From one of these two dining-rooms de luxe (I have this fact from their menu, so I will not dispute it) I received a phone call for a waitress with a pleasant disposition. I told the proprietor, in my most congenial manner, that all our girls were so gifted. The girl was sent from the office, reported to the de luxe manager, answered all questions in a satisfactory manner until he interrogated her on the typewriter stuff. Being a witty girl and good at repartee, she smilingly told his royal highness that she was a first-class waitress, could not operate a typewriter, but if necessary could play the piano. She didn't get the job, but is now working where a union printer gives you the latest hints in gastronomy on the menu. 'Tis a hard life, girls, but don't despair; you may never have the pleasure of sojourning here. Pretty soon all checks will require knowledge of shorthand. Tell your girl chums the draughts are very dangerous in the open shops.

This may be the last letter officially, but we may get an opportunity of butting into a fascinating pastime now and then, so with kind regards I remain

Fraternally yours,

GEO. F. ANDERSON,

Press Secretary, Local 279.

NOTE.—We shall really miss the fine contributions of Brother Anderson, providing he retires as one of our regular scribes. But he leaves us with the encouraging advice that he may "take pen in hand when the spirit moves." We hope that will be every month.—EDITOR MIXER AND SERVER.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

VICTORIA, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Regarding the trials and trouble of Local 459 since December 1, 1921, when we had a six months' contract to go into effect, we got all our former houses signed up except the Maryland Cafe, Kellway's Cafe and New England Cafe. I might state that the members of our local who worked at the Maryland and New England Cafes were loyal to their oath and came when called out on December 1, 1921.

At a special meeting held on December 29, there was a vote taken on what stand they wished to take, as there was a tendency towards the open shop regarding these houses. The vote was unanimous to come out if the contract was not signed. I am sorry to say that quite a few of our own brothers and sisters crawfished on us as in the case of one of our charter members, Charles Brock of Local 459, refusing to come out. Then the strike committee imposed a fine of $50 and expulsion from the International Union and instructed me to send the letter to him and one to Sister Torrence of same house with a fine of $25 and expulsion from the International Union, the said Charles Brock, charter member, sent his letter back with the sweet words of an educated waiter, "Go to H—l." Sister Torrence of same house also sent her letter back with the beautiful words of "Nothing Doing."

I might state that a few more of the boys and girls of this local are taking no interest in their welfare and will be very sorry before long, because if they keep it up they will find themselves back to the old twelve and fourteen hours per day, seven days a week; they will then start to think what a mistake they made. I might state before leaving my office of secretary, that there were quite a few of us old members of Local 459 who have done our best for the local, and I don't think there is any come-back on any of the officers.

As far as I can see we have not lost as much here as those birds who are working against us at the New England Cafe and stopping the house from signing up and being in line with organized labor. By refusing to pay the fines imposed on them by the strike committee or coming up to the union to fight their own cases, they will find their troubles some day, as they cannot work in Victoria all their days.

I might state that all members who lost out in the Maryland and New England Cafes have secured steady employment in union houses except two of our sisters. Will conclude by stating that I am on my way to some other town for a few months' work. I remain

Yours fraternally,

ALEXANDER GORDON.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Local 175, headquarters, 20 East Eagle Street.

On January 6 we held our regular meeting and installation of officers for 1922 and every officer was on the job. We were installed by our General President Bro. Edward Flore, and had a very large old-time meeting.

Bro. Flore made a very nice speech in regard to prohibition and told us to stick to the ship in 1922 and keep it afloat and in 1923 we would have clear sailing. So stick, brother, and keep her afloat.

Other speeches were made by Bros. Brandt, Brown, Klein, Christman, Hoeffle, Ray and others. After the meeting we had a fine spread served by our stewards, Bros. Wm. H. Brandt and Walter Spence, music, good singing and a jolly good time was had. It looked like old times, and the brothers who did not attend missed a real treat.

The following delegates were appointed: Central Labor Council, Wm. H. Brandt, Albert Roy, Chas. B. Klein; Local Joint Executive board, Wm. H. Brandt, Chas. B. Klein and Albert Roy; Label Trades Section, Wm. H. Brandt, Albert Roy. Bro. Oscar Geyer was elected inspector; Bro. Geo. Hoeffle, second vice-president, was appointed acting chaplain.

Bro. John Ganzmann is at the Musicians' Club. The Buffalo Service Club, a new club, 51 East Eagle Street, has just been incorporated. Bro. Geo. Jennings is president and steward of same. Bro. W. H. Brandt, our president and his assistant, Albert Roy, are doing some work collecting dues and getting old and new members into our local and they are swelling our treasury some, but Bro. Christian, our treasurer, can take care of it.

Wishing you and all members one grand success in the coming year, I remain

Yours fraternally,

FRANK R. BROWN

Vice-President and Press Secretary, Local 175.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Our hopes were realized and General President Flore came and installed our officers on the 6th of January and launched us on our way for 1922. Brother Flore gave us a very interesting talk and impressed on the members the necessity of co-operation, a factor of great importance in these trying times. We hope that these instructions have not fallen on deaf ears; that the members will not only give us their co-operation but exercise discretion and toleration, and abide optimistically to the mandates of the powers that be, and look forward to a brighter future.

In our last letter we told you that Bro. Thomas A. Tarrant was sick; we did not say he was seriously ill, though we feared for the worst, and hoped against hope for the best, but in spite of the best care Brother Tarrant passed away Tuesday morning, January 17, and was buried at Forest Lawn Cemetery, Thursday, January 19. Our heartfelt sympathy and condolences are extended to Mrs. Tarrant and family.

Bros. Jas. Sayles and Max Hess were reported sick since our last letter; let us hope their recovery will be speedy.

We are constrained to make a retort courteous to our contemporary, Bro. M. Murtha, of Local 763. In the December issue of the MIXER AND SERVER he told you that "Buffalo had often said that Rochester was dead, but that Buffalo members came to Rochester nevertheless, and now Rochester is very much alive and going good." So we appreciate the credit Brother Murtha gives to Buffalo members.

Thoughts while idling in the office: Out of work members sitting around with mournful expressions and vacant stares; poor fellows, wish I could do something for them. I ought to be more of an altruist. There goes the phone, I hope it's a call for fifty men. Here comes Walter Martin looking for mail. I'll write him today. There's Crouse, Murphy and Rudisili in confab; this trio will do good work for Local 196. The steward ringing up a sale—a rare occurrence these days; wonder who the spendthrift is. Here comes Bill Sweet; in a minute someone will mention Lloyd George, then pandemonium. There's Fritz Nold and Frank Dahman in their daily tete-a-tete. Wonder what Chas. Jameson is doing away up in Shenandoah, Pa. Gee, I wish I had the price and time to go and visit Brother Haffey at Rochester. I wonder what these members are gawping at me so intently for, they must think I'm hiding something from them. Albeit, they probably imagine I'm Fagin, or the keeper of the Mare's Nest. Here comes a bunch—wonder if any will pay in dues. I hope Jere L. won't throw this in the waste basket. Here comes Huttler full of song, poetry and speeches. Wish I had a flivver so I could cover all the places I have to go to; wish T—— would pay me those ten simoleons he borrowed a year ago. Gee, I'm hungry, guess I'll go to Jack Dunn's. Here comes a bird, it's a touch again. They must think I'm a millionaire. I'll duck and go and eat.

There is a new English chop house, lately opened at 491 Washington Street by Bros. Jack Dunn and John McMillan, splendidly fitted out and deserving the patronage of the discriminating. These two brothers should have all the luck in the world and success in their venture.

In a future letter we hope to comment on the expected co-operation of the members. We trust that we will be in a position to praise all and not censure any. Allowances will be made, and after all is said and done, we hope to be able to boast of as good a local as any in the country.

With kindest regards and best wishes, we remain as ever,

Faternally yours,

ED. A. DALANNE.

Business Agent, Financial and Press Secretary.
Local 196.

90-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

AKRON, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As it has been some time since we occupied any space in the MIXER AND SERVER, I will ask it as a favor, if you will publish these few lines in order to let the members of the International Union know that Local 118 is still in the ring, and doing business at the same old stand.

Local 118 is doing very well at present, and expects to do better. We have started the ball to rolling, and intend to keep it going; we have been able to keep most of our members working all of the time, but would advise any of the brothers out of employment who were thinking of coming this way, to change their minds for a while, until conditions are better and work is more plentiful. Things are a little quiet in the culinary line at this time, but we will do all we can for any of the boys who carry a paid-up union book, and happen along this way.

December 8, 1921, we held an election of officers for the coming year. Those elected were as follows: Joseph Viney, president; Arthur F. McClelland, vice-president; Frank Faup, treasurer; Wm. Robinson, secretary and business agent; Alfred H. Priewe, recording secretary; Lee Cox, Joseph Singerman and Louis Minotti, trustees.

Our hall, located at 290 S. Main Street, at one time was plenty large enough, but if our membership keeps on increasing we will have to look for larger quarters.

Our office is open all hours of the day and we are always ready to give the glad hand to all cooks, waiters and waitresses who come to see us.

Taken all in all, Local 118 is in a good healthy condition, but with plenty of room for improvement.

So, with greetings to all, I am

Faternally yours,

ALFRED H. PRIEWE,

Recording Secretary, Local 118.

290 S. Main Street, Akron, Ohio.

90-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

DETROIT, MICH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In accordance with my duty as press secretary will try to contribute in behalf of Local 705. Since my last letter to the MIXER AND SERVER will say we have had some changes. To begin with, Organizer Bro. Kavanagh called a special meeting, December 3, at which all officers resigned when the purpose of this meeting was explained. My reason for failing to mention why all officers resigned is that there are so many angles to the whole affair that it would be difficult to explain satisfactorily, and furthermore, I would not feel justified in using up so much valuable space when there are so many interesting articles from other cities. Great credit is due to Bro. Kavanagh who worked hard the last three weeks to adjust our peculiar matter.

Election was held Friday, December 16, the following officers being elected: President, A. J. Brown; vice-president, A. M. Pegg; recording secretary, S. Schwartz; treasurer, S. Koerns; financial secretary and business agent, P. Ericson; press secretary, L. Koenig, chaplain, J. McGee; trustees, C. Jacobsen, D. Nickas, J. Roth; sergeant at arms, S. Kaplan; inspector, W. Singer; delegates to local joint executive board, J. McGee, P. Schwartz and F. J. Wright.

Our club room is still running splendidly under the same capable management of Bro. John Budd.

After all this will say to you the union in which you hold membership is your business, and all of us ought to do something to make the business of the union thrive; this cannot be done by staying away and quibbling about the way the union is run. It is in fact, part of your business anyway, to see yourself personally taking an active part in affairs, and not throw the load on the other fellow and feel that you have nothing to do with the affairs of your local, or let the officers do everything. Your officers, of course, are doing the best possible, but they need your co-operation.

Jockey Burke, Joe McGee, is still waiting for those long shots.

Faternally yours,

LOUIS KOENIG,

Press Secretary, Local 705.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Culinary Alliance, Local 815, is still boosting for better conditions for its members and in order to make this boost more effective we have decided to enforce Section 43 of the By-laws of the local, which reads as follows: Any member failing to attend at least one meeting in each calendar month shall be fined fifty (50) cents, unless excused by the meeting. This will be enforced on all members regardless of who they are. The Wilson (Shafer) Cafe and Spary & Mahse are still on the list of "Unfair to all Organized Labor." We have some peculiar things put up to the proprietors of card houses, some of the business men in Salt Lake City have gone so far as to tell them that they would like to patronize them and if they will display the union card in some other place besides the window so as they can say they saw no card that they will eat with them. So this looks as though they were cheating a little or are ashamed of being an associated industry man. I should not be surprised if it was not the latter.

We had a real social and an educational meeting last Wednesday, January 18, which was well attended, nearly all the members who were able to get off and many friends of labor and others being present. The speakers were Wm. Kner, of the Industrial Commission of the State of Utah, who gave a good talk, and advised the members of all crafts how to get what was due them in case of accidents—that was to report to the management of your place of employment the slightest scratch that you may get in your work and take no chances. He also warned us of the spy in labor's ranks, to look out for them as they would spare no pains or principle to disrupt organizations of any trades or crafts. Judge A. J. Weber of the supreme bench gave us a real outline of Mooseheart and its workings, also stated that he was pleased that Local 815 had extended him the honor of addressing them. Judge Weber has always been a friend of labor defending them in courts and has never lost for them and he still stands ready to do so again. Brothers of the City Federation were in attendance, Harvy, Bales, Britzing and Warendolf, and many others whom we could mention if we had space to spare.

I wish to say I am pleased to receive many communications from other locals stating that they had marked the scabs whose names we have published in the MIXER AND SERVER and I believe that through this they will get all that is coming to them when they leave Salt Lake. Shellcross and Freeman are still working at The Wilson, as to how many hours I am unable to count them on my fingers, we only hope they will get plenty.

The printing trades are still going along but are gaining some points which is weakening the so-called American Plan which the boss wishes he could forget.

The City Federation is picking up as the last meeting was better attended than it has been for a year and they seem to be waking up to the real need of co-operation.

Thomas (Slim) Egan made us a visit a few weeks ago. He is working in Richfield, Utah, but made Salt Lake rather lively during his stay. Come again, Slim, as we need to be woke up often.

Sister Eva Barnes has gone to California to join her husband Clide. We are able to say that both are one hundred per cent union as shown by their acts. Tommy Tims has severed his connection with the Green Gardens and expects to go east some time soon. Good luck, Tom.

John (Toby) Obrion has been forced to take on a short vacation on account of a moon-stroke, so we would advise the brother to stay in at nights hereafter. Brother A. S. (Cub) Baer, of Twin Falls, Idaho, is with us at present, but can not say if he intends to locate or not.

Salt Lake is in the grip of the cold, the thermometer registered 8 below, but we have not heard of any one freezing, although there are many idle men here, but not so many of our craft, as we are doing the best we can for them all. We are not asking anybody to stay away from Salt Lake, but if they come they must take chances with the rest.

With best wishes to the MIXER AND SERVER and yourself I remain,

Yours fraternally,

JOHN MULLINS,
President and Press Secretary, Local 815.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—With gladness I again forward you this contribution for our International Journal, the MIXER AND SERVER, in behalf of Local 216, Bartenders, Waiters and Cooks, of Toledo, Ohio, after a silence of about half a year or more, as I was not connected with the official duties for the period mentioned, but here I am again to have the members at large to know what the Maumee City Local is doing.

Our biennial election took place on January 5, and I am taking the pleasure again to assume my former duties of Press Secretary as I was elected to that particular office. I will serve as faithfully as I possibly can as well as do other duties entrusted to me by the respective members of this local. The following are the names of the gentlemen who will conduct the affairs of Local 216:

President, Ernest Hilderbrant; vice-president, Frank Wise; recording secretary, Tony Adams; financial secretary and business agent, Arthur Booth; treasurer, William Ryan; chaplain, George Wilson; inspector, George Vogel; inner guard, Stive Kreth, trustees, Dan Curtis, Chas. Downer and Angelo Nick; delegates to Local Joint Executive Board, Arthur Scott, Ernest Hilderbrant and Wm. Ryan; delegates to Central Labor Union, E. Hilderbrant, T. Adams, D. Simon, A. Booth, W. Ryan, G. Flynn.

All these officers will serve the local to the best of their ability. Bro. Hilderbrant, who was elected to succeed himself, attends all meetings, whether regular or special, and is always on the job, and sees all actions of committees.

Our last regular meeting reminded me of the "Fourth of July," for matters of importance came for action, and a lot of other developments took place in our little meeting chamber, which, if they continue to develop in such a progressive manner, I will not be afraid to predict wonders for this little institution, and the culinary workers in general in this locality.

Let us hope that all members put their shoulders to the wheel and make the year 1922 a success for the catering industry in Toledo. I also wish to state that the stay away a long time members should attend the meetings and see what the live wires are doing. Let this be a warning to all of those mentioned, for if all would stay away as they do, I am afraid to say what the result will be. I am not making this as a request, but it is compulsory that you attend your meeting for your very own benefit, and do not wait until you lose your position and then take the "hike."

The wish of the present administration is to recruit an army to be known as the "Unbeatable Brigade of the White Apron." So make this a reality and their dreams will come true with your co-operation.

All the officers pledged themselves to serve gratis for the period of one year, on account of the abnormal number of unemployed. The collections are rather small, and it is up to the remainder to put it on a sound basis. A committee has been appointed to draft new by-laws and after they are approved by the members will be forwarded to the general president for his final approval.

The new business agent, Bro. Arthur Booth, will be found always in the Labor Temple Club Rooms, of which he is steward.

Well, Brother Jere, I think I have taken up more space than I am entitled to, so thank you for same.

With the season's greetings to the General Executive Board and locals of the International, Fraternally,

TONY ADAMS,

Recording and Press Secretary of Local 216,
Bartenders Waiters and Cooks, Toledo, O.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Another New Year's eve celebration has come and gone and what a difference from some previous occasions, when every mortal seemed bent on having one joyous time, and succeeded in having it.

This time, three hundred "Dry Maintenance League" men, assisted the regular police officers in preventing any and everyone from doing anything to change the funeral aspect.

Most of our boys worked on this auspicious occasion, however, as some of the hotels and restaurants took a chance and served elaborate menus of "Pigs' knuckles and sauer kraut." Neapolitan Ice Cream and Hard Boiled Cider and the boys obtained "flop" money for awhile and given added courage and strength to battle the "open shop" which, by the way, seems to be still sticking around.

Every industrial dispute seems to have this question brought forward by the employers, and with almost everybody opposed to it, including the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergy, I can't for the life of me, see what a few misguided individuals, who espouse the cause of the so-called "American Plan" hope to gain by it.

In this grand old town, the only individual that seems to be openly for it is Alexander Brown, the president of the local Chamber of Commerce, and he seems to be able to rope in some employers during industrial trouble and who generally succeed in making themselves ridiculous before the public.

As an instance, take the milk wagon drivers' strike of a short while ago: It could have been settled in no time at all, to the satisfaction of all parties to the controversy, but the "open shop" was injected into it and the trouble was prolonged for a long period of time. In the final settlement it was intimated that it was settled on an open shop basis.

What did it benefit anyone? The people who had been getting their supply of milk from the firm where the strike occurred, and who for the sake of principle ceased to take milk from them when the strike started, found they could obtain better quality from independent companies, not affected by the strike and now they for the most part are sticking with the companies who gave their employees and the public a square deal.

In this instance, at least, the Open Shoppers succeeded in arousing a lot more sentiment against themselves, which will be felt in dollars and cents.

Another remarkable thing happened—the Cleveland Press espoused the cause of the strikers and published scathing editorials, denouncing the American Plan or Open Shop movement.

Now comes Mr. F. H. Goff, a prominent banker of this city, who in a statement published in all the Cleveland papers, denounces the open shop in no mistakable terms.

In the face of all this, I will have to thank the American Plan Association for having made more "card men," honest to God trade unionists, more non-union men members of trades unions and more radicals of conservatives than any one agency I have ever come in contact with.

Bring on something else. We welcome it, whatever it is, in the hope and expectation that it will be as prolific in good results for organized labor as the "American Plan" has been.

My next letter will contain a history of the negotiations between the local unions and their employers in this city, last July, in which the open shop was attempted to be forced upon us, and I hope the recital will prove interesting to the general membership, who are interested in the progress of their local unions.

Fraternally,

EDW. A. WHISSEMORE,
Press Secretary, Local 106.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

DES MOINES, IOWA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On December 29 Des Moines opened one of the finest Chinese-American cafes in the central west, known as the Peking Garden. It has a seating capacity of about three hundred and is located at Seventh and Grand Streets in the New Cotillion dance hall and is featuring Dave Robinson's Melody Wonders, also a well-known singer, who no doubt many of the boys will remember as Broadway Jones.

The cafe also features the usual dinner and after-theatre dancing, the floor being one of the best. The room has ten alcove-like booths large enough for two duces, half of which are on the street side with four windows giving a good light for lunch and a view of a very busy street. At the head of the stairs is a large reception room and off of that the ladies' and gents' rest rooms. Overlooking the main dining room is a balcony seating about forty. The kitchen is divided with both American and Chinese gas ranges, two sides of the kitchen being almost solid glass, making it a very light and airy one.

Mr. Frank Lung, an American born Chinese and an American soldier, opened this place with a one hundred per cent American union crew with the exception of two Chinese cooks, and believe me, brothers and sisters, Local 223 is doing its best to make a showing with this house which makes the fourth house in this city to get all of its help through Local 223. Bro. Sammie Thompson is doing himself proud as head waiter and Brother Hickey is making a good showing in the kitchen.

Fraternally yours,

E. B. VROMAN,
Secretary, Local 223.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—During the past month the election of our officers was protested on the nomination and election at same meeting without any ballot. On appeal to the General President appeal was sustained, and Brother Wm. Quest, president of our central body, was empowered to reopen the election in the interests of the International and act as the representative of the International, which was done, and the officers were elected in accordance with the rules of the International. The following was clipped from the Evening Bulletin and will show the results of the election:

"William J. Guest, president of the Providence Central Federated Union, installed the following officers of the Providence Culinary Alliance, Local 307 (the Waiters' and Cooks' Union). The following result of the election was announced: President, Alex. Bouvier; vice-president, Joseph Casoli; financial secretary and business agent, John Ford; recording secretary, Lee McCormick; treasurer, Albert Binnell; chaplain, Joseph Tally; executive board, Alex. Bouvier, Dan McCarthy, Peter Barrett; delegates to Central Federated Union, John Tally, George K. McKenna, Joseph Casoli, Joseph Sweeney; inside guard, Sam Citron. An election had been held December 2, which was protested on the ground of a violation of the constitutional requirement of two weeks between nomination and election. The matter was carried to the president of the international union, who ruled that the election was void, and placed President Guest in charge of the local until such time as a legal election could be held. The result was that several of the men elected at the first attempt were defeated at the second."

President Flore paid this local a visit during the last week of January and the boys surely did enjoy his few well-chosen words on the general means and ways of getting the question at issue settled. His remarks were well received by the boys and what he said made a fine impression on one of the biggest meeting we have had since the local has been in existence. Brother Guest was in the chair during the remarks of the general president, after which the boys of Local 307, as one, gave the general president a rising vote of thanks and proceeded to the regular business of the meeting.

Business in this town is fair, with the New Biltmore to open in May; the Hotel Narragansett is to be greatly improved by Col. Jos. Fletcher, and we may look for some improvement soon after. Just now we are facing a big textile strike in our state and our city will feel the effects as much as any in the state.

Brother John Ford will again have the business agent's position of the local for 1922 as he has for the past year, and intends to introduce many novel and effective improvements to his office and the local; we also have again smiling, genial Alex. Bouvier as our president.

At our election we had very near the full strength of our local voting. The last vote being cast by club chef, in his working clothes, as he was on duty when the taxi called for him; it was up to him to do it quick as he had a party on, and without the taxi he could not get the time off.

To our brothers out on T. C. in other locals we send best wishes and best of luck from old friends on the job in Local 307 in Providence.

We wish to thank our General President for the manner in which he handled our trouble of the past, also Brother Guest of our city.

Fraternally yours,

GEO. K. McKENNA,
Publicity Agent, Local 307.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 471, Albany, N. Y., Waiters, is still up and going, as this communication will indicate.

We have just elected and installed the following officers: President, Otto Walthers; vice-president, Chas. Spencer; business agent, Wm. Matz; recording secretary, Chas. Oliver; guard, J. Pantalacous, inspector, Gus Landau; chaplain, John McGowen.

We have weathered the storm as far as conditions within and without this Local are concerned and hope to soon have that unity of endeavor that will spell success for both the officers and the rank and file.

In common with many of our sister locals, the least said of conditions in our town the better. We are looking forward to the summer months, when we can at least secure part of that which we formerly had.

Albany has always been a tourist town, although how they get that way is more than we can see, as we have very little to offer in the way of conditions and with scarcely an extra.

Many of our brothers in New York State will be pleased to know that we have as steward of our club, run in connection with our local, our old-time man of business, Bro. Gus Landau, who has acted in the same capacity, with great success, in the past. He has been away for the past eight months.

We are sure that he will have the co-operation of the members of this local in building up the financial end that we so much need at the present time.

Our new business agent has opened up a membership drive which has been successful from the start, and through the building up of our forces we hope to once more become the power we were of old.

Certainly we are headed that way. I shall endeavor to keep our members informed through the columns of the MIXER AND SERVER of the success that is our due.

CHAS. OLIVER,

Recording and Press Secretary, Local 471.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I notice in Chicago papers of last December 28th, that the Chicago City Council took action on light wines and beer. They sanctioned it by a vote of 51 to 6. Passed a resolution favoring an amendment to the State and National Prohibition laws to give such beverage a legal status. That's all well and good. Let's hope that something may develop in that respect. Let us not sit idly by and criticize and poke fun at the Prohibition party as we did in the past—we have to get busy.

Local 7 is making a drive for new members and reinstating old members and we are having a great success. By spring we will be in good shape, so let us all work to that end.

Three more of our loyal members have passed away: Brothers Robert Fox, Alex. Erwin and Chas. Grant. We know not how soon some others will follow and it behooves us all to be in good standing and have our current month's dues paid.

Our local has quite a few members on the sick list, but they have been well taken care of.

The weather is very fine here, but the jobs are scarce, and I would not advise anyone to come to Chicago at the present time, not if he expects to get work.

Brothers Ben Parker and Campbell of the Colored Union are organizing the negroes in the Black District, better known as the Black Belt. From all accounts they are meeting with great success.

With best wishes for a successful 1922 to you and all locals, I am

Yours fraternally,

ANDREW H. DUGAR,
Press Secretary, Local 7.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WICHITA FALLS, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just to let you know that Local 158 is still on the map as there may be some old members who wonder some time what we are doing. Well, we are not doing much, because there is not much to do, but we are going to put our shoulder to the wheel and stir up something and do better this year. Don't think that we don't welcome new members in our local, because we do, but would advise any one contemplating coming here to secure a job before coming, and if in bad standing don't come at all, as we have several members here in good standing who are out of employment.

We have a new contract coming up soon. Work is rather hard to find here, and it seems the same condition prevails throughout the country, but let us trust that the incoming year will bring better times to all, but good times must be met at least half way, and it is essential that the laboring man and woman wake up to their rights and liberties as citizens of a free country—rights which will do us no good unless we as a whole stand together and demand them—how? you will say—and the answer is: At the next election, whenever it may be, or whatever it may be for, let it find us with our poll-tax paid, and not only ours, but it is necessary that our wives assist us by their votes—all turn out and vote enmasse for men who will see that laws are enacted when they are elected that will help to make things better for us all. A new era has dawned, the day of the strike has gone—war, strife and discord, mobs and the like are going out of style—we must win our rights by legal lights, and we have men in the ranks of labor who have the brains, if we, the laboring man and woman, as a whole will back them and not stand back and say "Let George Do It."

Fraternally yours,

THOMAS BALLARD,
Local 158.

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Since I wrote you last concerning the affairs of Local 329, a matter of great importance has been brought to our attention—that of amalgamating Local 290, of Salem, Mass., with that of Local 329, of Lynn.

At a special meeting called Thursday evening, January 19, by order of the International Union, represented by Vice-president Conly and Organizer Thomas J. Durnin, this matter was brought to the attention of about eighty per cent of our members.

The discussion that followed proved very interesting and the organization finally voted unanimously in favor of inviting Local 290, of Salem, Mass., to amalgamate with Local 329, of Lynn.

Therefore, we have extended the invitation, and as soon as the necessary arrangements can be made, Local 290 will be transferred to Lynn, hoping for a bigger, better and 100 per cent stronger organization in the times to come.

Speaking of bowling, we have a "Hash" league in this town with about six of our union houses entered so far. As it looks now, it is quite hard to tell which will come out a winner. In one of the largest houses they have a team with six of the waitresses and six cooks. Up to a short time ago the cooks were the "champs," but they lost courage, went down to defeat. As some of the girls are practicing a mean ball across the alley, it looks bad for the boys of the kitchen.

Hoping this finds you all O. K. and best wishes from the entire membership of Local 329, of Lynn.

Yours fraternally,

EARLE M. TERRILL,
Press Secretary, Local 329.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PITTSBURGH, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to introduce the new administration. We had on Friday, January 6th, at the general meeting, the installation of the following officers: President, Jack Delaney; vice-president, Martin Luther; financial secretary, Alfred E. Manning; recording secretary, Thomas J. Morris; inspector, James Kehr; chaplain, William Gibbons; trustees, James Hayes, Henry Levine and Arthur Phillips; master of arms, Herman Hubert. A house committee of three was appointed and we are also making a strong campaign on citizenship and this is no town for those without their papers.

The breaking up of the waitresses' local should be a lesson to the men here, of what they can expect if the union should fall off. When the girls got up to four or five hundred members, the employers raised their salaries to ten and twelve dollars a week. Now they are reduced in some places as low as five dollars a week, and conditions are lost entirely.

I regret to announce the death of Brother Bert Henry, who passed out the morning of the 1st, with pneumonia, and was buried from the undertaking rooms at 1914 Carson Street, on Tuesday afternoon. The esteem in which the deceased was held was shown by the largest turnout this local has ever known.

Hoping this will prove the banner year for Local 237, with best wishes to you and other locals.

Yours fraternally,

R H. THORNDIKE,
Press Secretary, Local 237.

DAYTON, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Will offer you a few lines for publication pertaining to the depression of Local 579. The previous year, 1921, was a strenuous year for our boys and quite a number of them became disgusted, lost the union spirit. All you could hear was: What's the use, the unions are dead, but brothers I can't see it that way, but don't misconstrue my meaning and think I am only throwing bouquets at myself.

I have a just cause for expressing myself as I am. When I was elected to the office of financial secretary and business agent we had on our books only 34 members in good standing. When I started out canvassing the delinquent brothers all I could hear was: I am sick of your union; what's the use paying you $1.50 a month for nothing. But today, brothers, I have the membership up to 54, a seventy per cent increase in 30 days, and I have also lighted the torch of unionism and the union spirit is gradually heating.

With the co-operation of my fellow members and sister locals I shall strive to put Local 579 on record as a real local and have Dayton, Ohio recognized as a union town. So let's go!

Fraternally yours,

M. E. GOLDEN,

Secretary and Business Agent, Local 579.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

FORT WORTH, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been some time since you have heard from Local 748. The reason, I will state, is on account of election of officers. I wanted to wait until after the new officers were installed so I could turn in a list of same.

Following is a complete list of the officers: President, Al. Seorsy; vice-president, Myrtle Orr; financial secretary, Lydia Henshaw; business agent, Bill Pimuck; recording secretary, Dula Graham; trustees, Alma McCashin and Lee Dumes.

Will state that we have moved in our new offices located at 1502½ Main Street. We also hold our regular meetings here.

Conditions at present are not very good; we are hoping that business conditions will be better soon and we are working for same.

As I am now recording secretary I will do all that I can to make correct reports each month. I am

Yours fraternally,

DULA GRAHAM,

Recording Secretary, Local 748.

1502½ Main Street, Ft. Worth, Texas.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Local 135 to let the sisters and brothers know that we are getting along very well at the present time and are getting things in fair shape for our spring drive which we think should bring some good results. Any of the brothers or sisters coming this way, we trust, will bring their traveling card with them instead of trying to work in Tulsa under cover. We will appreciate their good will in this drive.

We held our election the first of the year, and I feel that we have a willing bunch of officers and that they will do all in their power to make this local one to be proud of, and through the assistance of Brother G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., we have been able to put a little harmony in the ranks of our organization in the last few months that was of great importance, and if we can continue along these lines we ought to be out of the old rut in the next few months and have a progressing organization.

At the present time we have some of the members on the out of work list and anyone really looking for work, I would advise them to look elsewhere; but if anyone comes this way I will do all I can to put them to work, provided they carry their card paid up.

The sisters and brothers of our International who know Brother William P. Tate will regret very much to hear of his death, as he was well thought of by those who knew him.

I will try and write every month or two to let the members know about this city hereafter

O. H. LAUCK,
Secretary, Local 135.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHOOZA DUBB?

John Henry Dubb, his wife, four boys and seven daughters live on Laggards Road, between Never-thoughtville and Procrastinationburg. John says that himself and family live on a quarter section, managing somehow to obtain enough food to keep himself and family alive. None of the children have attended the District School. When asked why, he offered the following reasons: One, the school is too far from his quarter section; two, he had never attended school himself (makes his mark when necessity requires signature), and cannot see any reason why his children should be made to attend school. When John Henry Dubb was advised that he should send his boys and girls to school, enabling them to acquire an education, which would be helpful to them in later years, permit them to read good books and keep in touch with what was taking place in the great big world, he stood stock still for a moment and said in language emphatic enough to carry conviction: "You say that an education will help my boys and girls to think. Why should they desire to think? They can do as my wife and I have done—get along without thinking. For myself I can say that I have gotten along many years without thinking and believe I can keep going to the end of the road. My children are no better than I am, what right have they to want to have something neither their mother or father had? All my children are expected to do is work. They have no time to think, and the first one I catch trying to think, will be made to feel my ire."

Are there any of that tribe in your neck of the woods? Perchance one of them will get hungry one of these days and call on you to feed them. Give them food, but for the love of Mike don't take them to your bosom and try and insert them into the catering industry. We have more than our share of the non-thinking aggregation now. Why add to our load?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

A PROSPECTIVE TREAT FOR OUR READERS.

Twelve sketches by Mrs. Thomas H. Hassey are to appear for twelve consecutive months in THE MIXER AND SERVER. We have arranged with Mrs. Hassey to publish twelve of her sketches, the first to appear in the March number, entitled "Alfalfa."

The sketches may be used by amateurs free of royalty charges. Professionals are not free to use the sketches, except by written consent of the author, whose address may be had by communicating with the publishers.

COMPLETE ROSTER OF LOCAL UNIONS.

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
ALABAMA
382, Mobile	First and third Tuesdays	Masonic Temple	A. A. Hudson	958 State Street
ARIZONA
111, Oatman	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Labor Temple	J. S. Novell	P. O. Box 207
380, Bisbee			J. E. Nelson	P. O. Box 1786
418, Tucson			Edward Wynne	P. O. Box 1376
680, Miami	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 4th, 5th, 7:30 pm; 2d, 10:00 pm.	Cooks' and Waiters' Hall	Joe M. Quann	Box 744
ARKANSAS
25, Hot Springs	Every Wednesday	Old City Hall, Prospect Avenue	W. L. Ham	Box 503
142, Eldorado			J. H. Dulin	Box 705
CALIFORNIA
17, Los Angeles	Every Thursday, 3:00 pm; except last, 8:45 pm.	432 S. Main Street	Charles C. Olsen	432 S. Main Street
30, San Francisco	Thursdays: 1st, 3d, 5th, 2:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 8:30 pm.	434 Eleventh Street	Hugo Ernst	828 Mission Street
31, Oakland	Mondays: 1st, 2:00 pm; 3d, 8:00 pm.	1075 Mission Street	F. L. Grateau	434 Eleventh Street
41, San Francisco	Thursdays: 1st, 4th, 2:30 pm.	83 Sixth Street	P. T. Barling	1075 Mission Street
44, San Francisco	Every Wednesday, 8:30 pm, except last, 3:00 pm.	1075 Mission Street	Julius Selma	83 Sixth Street
62, Fresno	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 3:00 pm.	451 Kearney Street	Laura Mollada	1075 Mission Street
110, San Francisco	Second and fourth Wednesday nights	Union Hall	Edward Keary	958 Broadway Street
141, Visalia	Second and fourth Tuesdays	Union Hall	Geo. P. M. Bovins	451 Kearney Street
180, San Jose	Wednesdays: 1st, 8:00 pm; 3d, 3:00 pm.	Labor Temple	R. P. Powell	401 E. Main Street
220, Eureka	Second and fourth Thursdays, 8:30 pm.	Union Labor Hall, 618 Second Street	Loretta Wheeler	Labor Temple
271, Petaluma		Labor Temple	Mrs. L. Messer	Box 691
284, Los Angeles	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 2:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 8:00 pm.	New Labor Temple, "J" Street	Geo. J. Kelterline	Box 577
328, Oakland	Every Thursday, 8:30 pm.	Labor Temple	A. B. Hassel	Labor Temple
378, Bakersfield			D. J. Jones	1781 Seventh Street
384, Oakland			W. S. Renfro	Box 12
401, Randsburg			H. B. Bullock	1779 Seventh Street
402, San Diego			Richard Grayson	General Delivery
404, Santa Rosa			W. C. Baker	Box 255
436, Chico			Lindsay Morrell	608 Chestnut Street
468, Los Angeles	Wednesdays: 1st, 2d, 3d, 8:00 pm; except June to September, 2d, 3:00 pm; 4th, 8:45 pm.	Labor Temple, cor. Tenth and "G" Streets	G. F. Devereaux	534 1/2 S. Spring Street
542, Modesto	Every Tuesday, 8:00 pm.	Maude Hall	J. H. Hayward	Box 937
550, Bakersfield	Every Monday	Labor Temple, 318 Virginia Street	R. F. McDonald	P. O. Box 808
590, Vallejo	Every Wednesday, 8:30 pm	719 1/2 "J" Street	R. F. Thomas	Labor Temple, 318 Virginia St.
591, Sacramento	Fridays: 2d, 4th, 8:00 pm; 3d, 3:00 pm.	216 E. Market Street	C. T. Peterson	Box 284
572, Stockton			E. G. Elliott	1205 1/2 E. Fourteenth St.
582, Los Angeles	Every Thursday, 8:00 pm.	719 1/2 "J" Street	James M. Brown	Box 284
586, Coalinga			Alice A. Roemer	Box 284
606, Sacramento	Fridays: 2d, 2:30 pm; 4th, 8:30 pm.	Central Labor Temple	Alice B. Bixler	Box 284
620, Los Angeles	Mondays: 1st, 2:30 pm; all others, 8:30 pm.	216 Markwell Building	Helen Harding	Box 284
633, San Bernardino			Ernest Chambers	Box 284
681, Long Beach			L. F. Kaufman	22 Markwell Building
703, Shalheim			John H. Jackson	Box 284
704, San Pedro			G. E. Dyer	Box 284
771, Tait				Box 284
CANADA
28, Vancouver, B. C.	Wednesdays: 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	614 Pender Street	A. A. Graham	441 Seymour Street
197, Hamilton, Ont.	First Monday, 8:00 pm.	Stroud's Hotel, Merrick Street	Robert Lanaway	233 Hamilton Street, N.
300, Toronto, Ont.	First and third Thursdays	Labor Temple	S. G. Baxter	R. 77 Yonge St. Arcade
316, Montreal, Que.	First two meetings, 3:30 pm; remainder, 8:30 pm.	464 St. Catherine Street, W.	B. Gray	198 St. Catherine St., W.
419, Ottawa, Ont.	First and third Monday evenings		Francis Linfoot	115 Spark Street

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
CANADA—Continued
434, Toronto, Ont.	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 9:00 pm.	63 Arcade, Yonge Street.	Jean Johns	63 Arcade Yonge Street
440, Montreal, Que.	Wednesdays: 2d, 4th, 9:00 pm.	249 Union Avenue.	Pierre Miquet	380 City Hall Avenue
446, Victoria, B. C.			Alexander Gordon	Box 1525
474, Edmonton, Alta.	First and third Fridays	Labor Temple, Room 2	W. H. Connors	Box 14
482, Quebec, Que.	Thursdays: 1st, 3d, 8:00 pm.	272 Des Rues Street	M. H. Koebling	Box 493
492, Winnipeg, Man.	First Monday, 9:00 pm.	A. O. U. W. Hall, 325 Smith Street.	William Reynolds	Rm. 14 1/4 Phoenix Bldg.
597, Calgary, Alta.	First and third Tuesdays	235 A Eighth Street, E.	W. A. Gray	Box 183
676, Vancouver, B. C.	Sundays: 1st, 2:30 pm; 3d, 8:00 pm.	614 Pender Street, W.	T. J. Hanahan	2376 Sixth Avenue, W.
CANAL ZONE
797, Cristobal	Second Monday, 3:00 pm.	Submarine Hall	C. A. Phillips	Box 72, Ancon, C. Z.
COLORADO
8, Denver	Fourth Sunday evening.	Club Building, 1731 Arapahoe Street.	Fred Wesel	1320 Sont Street
14, Denver	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 2:30 pm; 4th, 8:30 pm.	1923 Curtis Street.	J. M. O'Brien	1923 Curtis Street
18, Denver	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	1432 Arapahoe Street	Charles Packer	1432 Arapahoe Street
48, Pueblo	Mondays: 2d, 4th, 8:30 pm; Wednesdays: 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm	Labor Temple, Hall No. 4	E. M. Riley	321 Bradford Street
119, Silverton	First Sunday	Beuson Block	William Jones	Box 208
596, La Junta		1731 Arapahoe Street.	Joe Arellano	Manhattan Cafe
792, Denver			W. Johnston	1843 Lawrence Street
CONNECTICUT
159, Meriden	Second Sunday, 1:30 pm.	Building Trades Council Hall, 29 Colony St.	Michael J. Spellacy	70 Randolph Street
207, Hartford	Second and fourth Sundays, 3:00 pm.	Central Labor Union Hall, 21 Central Row.	Frank Madden	50 Annawan Street
217, New Haven	First Sunday, 3:00 pm.	Eagles Hall	W. F. Connelly	49 Sherman Avenue
254, Waterbury	Second and fourth Sundays.	151 Bank Street	W. J. Downey	1158 Bank Street
266, Bridgeport	Second and fourth Sundays, 3:30 pm.	Bartenders' Hall, 119 Wall Street.	Harry R. Lee	Box 492
306, South Norwalk	Fourth Sunday, 10:00 am.	Central Labor Hall.	J. F. Wollyung	14 Cross Street
308, Hartford	Second Wednesday during summer months.	Foresters' Hall, Main Street.	P. J. Mackintosh	28 Essex Street
318, Putnam	Second Sunday, 11:00 am.	K. of C. Hall, State Street.	Fred J. Mathew	35 Battery Street
306, New London	Sundays: 2d, 4th, 8 pm; June to Aug., inc., 2d only		C. H. Sullivan	50 Norwood Avenue
DELAWARE
466, Wilmington	Second and fourth Sundays, 2:00 pm.	Bartenders' Hall, Fourth and King Streets.	John J. Dowell	928 Spruce Street
DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
728, Washington	Second and fourth Friday evenings	2 Pythian Bldg., cor. Twelfth and You, N. W.	J. C. Cooper	1228 "S" Street
781, Washington	Fridays: 1st, 3d, 9 pm; June to Sep., incl., 1st only, 3	pm. 1012 "H" Street, N. W.	Charles H. Mayer	1012 "H" Street, N. W.
IDAHO
380, Twin Falls	First and third Thursdays, 7:30 pm.	Trades and Labor Hall, Bank Street.	M. A. Lavik	Box 968
436, Wallace	Tuesdays: 1st, 3d, 7:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 3:00 pm	Labor Temple	John G. Blanken	Box 136
510, Pocatello	Thursdays: 1st, 2d, 3d, 8:00 pm; 4th, 2:30 pm.	Labor Temple, 311 N. Tenth Street.	Jack Watson	Box 684
571, Idaho Falls			S. J. Mounts	Box 284
782, Boise			Lee Cotter	Labor Temple
ILLINOIS
7, Chicago	Every Tuesday, 3:00 pm	500 S. State Street.	Robert Hughes	500 S. State Street
74, Aurora	Sundays: 2d, 3:30 pm; 4th, 8:00 pm.	105 W. Madison	Mrs. Grace Penny	Care Patrick Hickey, 77 Fox
186, Chicago	First and third Fridays, afternoons.	Moose Club Hall, Nineteenth and State.	George McLane	105 W. Madison c/o Wait-
192, Granite City	Second Monday, 7:30 pm.	Bartenders' Hall, 80 E. Main Street.	Geo. Lewis	1918 "B" St. Jers' Club
117, Belleville	First and third Saturdays, 7:30 pm.	Hod Carriers' Hall	George L. Frey	217 N. First Street
218, Herrin	Second and third Mondays.	Bohm Building	David Stern	1005 N. Eleventh Street
238, Edwardsville			Simon Kellerman	111 Purcell Street
286, Chicago	Second Friday, 8:00 pm.	Labor Temple, 400 S. Jefferson Street.	N. S. Wims	820 Prairie Avenue
286, Peoria	First and fourth Sundays, 2:30 pm.	Erb Hall	John R. Huber	548 Peoria Avenue
327, East St. Louis	Every Friday and third Sunday, 2:30 pm.	Bartenders' Hall, 3100 E. Ninety-second St.	George Holtman	R. 503, Metropolitan
376, South Chicago.			Hunter B. Keith	3039 E. 91st Street (Bldg.
			Theodore Lask

City, Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
ILLINOIS—Continued
284, South Chicago	Mondays: 2d, 2:15 pm; 4th, 8:15 pm.	Swan Hall, 9137 Commercial Avenue.	Ella Niemeyer.....	9208 Houston Avenue
400, Chicago	First and third Fridays, 8:00 pm.	Masonic Hall	Lillian Powell.....	35 S. Dearborn Street
400, Calumet	Every Tuesday, 8:00 pm.	Labor Temple, West Prairie Street.	Mrs. Esther Wakefield.....	923 Lombard Street
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Traders and Labor Assembly Hall.	Maggie P. Langford.....	1105 E. Ninth Street
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Union Hall, 712½ Commercial Avenue.	W. C. Robinson.....	430 Bowen Avenue
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Dogston's Hall	Michael J. Cullen.....	709 W. Washington St.
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	Louis Ruggaber.....	511 Commercial Avenue
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	Ch. L. Dodgeon.....	Box 645
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	Charles W. Becker.....	111 Kip Avenue
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	E. A. McNulty.....	13 L. O. O. F. Temple
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	Madge Argo.....	406 Grant Avenue
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	Joe. Rizzie.....	311 E. Main Street
400, East Chicago	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	N. W. H. Hall	J. C. Staggenburg.....	500 S. State Street
INDIANA
185, Bicknell	Every other Thursday, 7:30 pm.	North Main Street	Anna Swan.....	General Delivery
487, Indianapolis	First and third Tuesdays, 8:30 pm.	Paper Hangers' Hall, 36 W. Washington St.	Richard M. Barry.....	438 Virginia Avenue
606, Indianapolis	First and third Thursdays, 8:30 pm.	Redmen's Building	Mrs. Sadie Harris.....	107½ W. Maryland Street
720, Hammond	First Thursday	Over 411 Walnut Street.	Nellie Kelly.....	182 E. State Avenue
794, Linton	Every evening, 8:30 sharp.	Labor Temple	George Esken.....	General Delivery
IOWA
223, Des Moines	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 8:30 pm.	Over 411 Walnut Street.	Edw. B. Vroman.....	P. O. Box 482
319, Sioux City	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 8:30 pm.	Labor Temple	Ed. Larivere.....	311½ Jones Street
387, Ft. Dodge	Second and fourth Wednesday evenings.	Redman Hall, Third and Pine Streets.	Thos. J. Kerby.....	P. O. Box 569
KANSAS
39, Pittsburg	Every Tuesday, 2:30 pm.	Labor Hall	Mrs. M. R. Thomas.....	421 E. Ninth Street
397, Parsons	First Sunday	Odd Fellows' Temple Bldg., 606 W. Walnut	Norbert Walker.....	P. O. Box 302
584, Topeka	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.	Heber's Hall, Eleventh and Central Avenue	George W. Kelly.....	1019 Madison Street
KENTUCKY
79, Louisville	First and third Sundays, 1:30 pm.	426 S. Sixth Street.	Albert Doerflinger.....	2100 W. "A" Street
149, Newport	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.	209 W. Second Street, third floor.	Fred Weber.....	338 Thornton Street
156, Paducah	First and third Sundays, 1:30 pm.	209 W. Second Street, third floor.	John C. Hast.....	711 Ohio Street
261, Louisville	Second and fourth Fridays, 8:00 pm.	209 W. Second Street, third floor.	E. B. Pickens.....	118 W. Walnut Street
352, Louisville	First Sunday	209 W. Second Street, third floor.	A. S. Starks.....	725 Speckert Avenue
690, Owensboro	Every Tuesday, 3:00 pm.	634 Gravier Street	B. L. Nixon.....	416 E. Eighteenth Street
LOUISIANA
58, New Orleans	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.	634 Gravier Street	J. Richardson.....	634 Gravier Street
264, Lake Charles	First and third Thursdays.	634 Gravier Street	Miss Eunice Simmons.....	212 Ford Street
588, Shreveport	First and third Thursdays.	634 Gravier Street	Mrs. Sybil George.....	815 Crockett Street
638, Haynesville	First and third Thursdays.	634 Gravier Street	William Moreland.....	Box 362
669, Shreveport	First and third Thursdays.	634 Gravier Street	Louis F. Lenelle.....	517 Cain Street
MAINE
308, Portland	First and third Mondays, 9:00 pm.	Moose Hall, Federal and Temple Streets.	J. M. Askey.....	548½ Congress Street
MARYLAND
592, Baltimore	First and third Sundays.	Partenders' Hall, 509 E. Baltimore St.	Bernard Stern.....	509 E. Baltimore
717, Baltimore	First and second Sundays.	126 N. Paca Street.	William I. Scotti.....	126 N. Paca Street
836, Baltimore	First Monday, 8:30 pm; third Sunday, 3:30 pm.	Elke's Home, 414 W. Hoffman Street.	M. S. Pollett.....	1930 Druid Hill Avenue
MASSACHUSETTS
34, Boston	Second Wednesday, 4th Tuesday, 8:30 pm; June to	Sent. inc., 2d Wednesday only.	Chris. Lane.....	1160 Washington Street
77, Boston	Second Sunday	326 Harrison Avenue	John W. Conley.....	188 Court Street
81, Holyoke	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	Silverman Hall, 437 High Street.	John J. McCoart.....	743 High Street
85, Lowell	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	Silverman Hall, 437 High Street.	John J. Quirk.....	56 Bridge Street

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
MASSACHUSETTS—Cont'd
92, Marlboro	First Sunday, 11:00 am.	5 Burker Block, 116 Main Street.	David J. Forrest.....	26 McEnnelly Street
93, Haverhill	Fourth Sunday, 10:30 am.	2 Gillman Place.....	Edward F. Jones.....	87 Franklin Street
100, New Bedford	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	Card Social Club, cor. Purchase and Penman	Andrew P. McMahon.....	1235 Brock Avenue
112, Boston	Second Wednesday, 8:30 pm; fourth Sunday, 2:30 pm, except from May to Aug., inc.	1160 Washington Street.....	Bessie C. Irving.....	276 Tremont Street
161, Brockton	First and third Tuesdays.....	Culinary Alliance Hall, 40 Center Street.	Mrs. Annie White.....	21 Ridgeway Street
201, Haverhill	Second and fourth Thursdays.....	2 Gillman Place.....	William Kiley.....	81 Merrimac Street
273, Springfield	Wednesdays: 1st, 3:00 pm; 3d, 8:00 pm.	Cooks' and Waiters' Hall, 275 Dwight Street.	T. M. Peterson.....	952 State Street
280, Salem	First and third Mondays.....	175 Esset Street.....	Robert Dearden.....	44 Buffin Street
329, Lynn	First Sunday, 2:30 pm.	Hotel Columbia, 122 Main Street.	Andrew E. Noble.....	138 Liberty Street
742, Southbridge	Fourth Sunday, 3:00 pm.	Unity Hall, 724 Washington Street.	William Roycroft.....	Hotel Columbia
853, Boston	Every Thursday, 9:00 pm.	352 John "R" Street.....	Patrick Hasungs.....	724 Washington Street
MICHIGAN
234, Detroit	Every Friday, 9:00 pm.	Moose Hall, N. Walnut Street.	Alphonse Friedrich.....	352 John R. Street
706, Mt. Clemens	First and third Fridays, 8:30 pm.	274 E. High Street.....	P. G. Ericson.....	29 John "R" Street
728, Detroit	Every Tuesday.....	239 Second Avenue, S.	Mrs. Lulu Neverman.....	44 Leslie Avenue
MINNESOTA
152, Minneapolis	Every Sunday, 2:00 pm.	54 Third Street, S.	Frank Hoffman.....	239 Second Avenue, S.
458, Minneapolis	Every Friday, 2:30 and 8:30 pm.	21 S. Sixth Street.....	Leslie Sutton.....	54 Third Street, S., 3rd fl.
536, Minneapolis	Every Tuesday, 3:00 pm.	Welcome Hall, Farrington and St. Anthony.	Sid Johnston.....	54 S. Third Street
543, Hibbing	First and third Mondays, 1:30 pm.	Howard Building, 709 Pine Street.	Elizabeth Makie.....	Congress Cafe
548, St. Paul	Every Sunday, 2:00 pm.	812 E. Twelfth Street.....	J. W. Kroger.....	3025 Oakland Ave., Minne.
556, St. Paul	First and third Sundays, 2:00 pm.	207 E. Fourteenth Street.....	Andy Kitchar.....	20 E. 7th St., lapolis, Min.
600, Duluth	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	307 Curtis Building.....	James Casperson.....	720 E. Fifth Street
630, St. Paul	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	County Court House Union Hall.	Ruby Carter.....	435 Main Street
634, Minneapolis	Tuesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 3:00 pm.	Moose Hall, 71 1/2 E. Park Street.	Alfred Moore.....	2929 Fifth Avenue, S.
MISSOURI
19, Kansas City	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 3:00 pm.	1230 Main Street.....	L. M. Carroll.....	1230 Main Street
20, St. Louis	Second and fourth Thursdays.....	705 1/2 Pine Street.....	Conrad Schott.....	Rm. 211, Pontiac Bldg.
31, St. Joseph	First Sunday, 10:00 am.	Labor Temple, Sixth and Francis Streets.	N. J. Tolin.....	1302 1/2 Third Street, N.
52, St. Louis	First Monday, third Tuesday, 3:00 pm.	3204 Lucas Avenue.....	George C. Wiesemann.....	3204 Lucas Avenue
203, St. Louis	Every Monday, 8:30 pm; 4th, 3:30 pm.	513 Walnut Street.....	Charles L. Crabill.....	513 Walnut Street
208, St. Louis	Wednesdays: 2d, 8:30 pm; 4th, 3:30 pm.	Howard Building, 709 Pine Street.	E. Pruitt.....	4569 Garfield Avenue
249, Kansas City	Every Monday, 8:30 pm.	812 E. Twelfth Street.....	Olive King.....	Rm. 404, Pontiac Bldg.
266, Kansas City	First Friday.....	207 E. Fourteenth Street.....	E. W. Mount.....	812 E. Twelfth Street
353, St. Louis	First and third Sundays, 2:00 pm.	307 Curtis Building.....	R. O. Brawley.....	312 E. Twelfth Street
420, Kansas City	Fourth Wednesday, 8:30 pm.	County Court House Union Hall.	R. F. Daley.....	207 E. Fourteenth Street
503, Kansas City	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	Moose Hall, 71 1/2 E. Park Street.	Louise Adams.....	812 Walnut Street
531, Jefferson City	First Sunday, 2:00 pm.	County Court House Union Hall.	Anton Blume.....	812 Walnut Street
712, Kansas City	First and third Fridays.....	Howard Building, 709 Pine Street.	G. O. Smith.....	1606 E. Twelfth Street
MONTANA
22, Butte	Second and fourth Mondays, 8:30 pm.	Labor Temple.....	C. H. O'Hara.....	Box 902
257, Livingston	Every Friday, 8:30 pm.	Carpenters' Hall.....	Margaret Telford.....	P. O. Box 8
427, Missoula	Mondays: 2d, 8:30 pm; 4th, 3:30 pm.	Labor Hall.....	Chas. J. Bloomquist.....	618 Brook Street
457, Butte	Wednesdays: 2d, 3:00 pm; 4th, 8:00 pm.	Carpenters' Hall.....	Lena Mattausch.....	825 E. Park Street
524, Miles City	First and third Tuesdays, 3:00 pm.	Room 1, Babcock Building.....	A. W. Knight.....	Box 484
612, Helena	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	108 S. Fourteenth Street.....	Dan Finnegan.....	Box 946
809, Lewistown	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	308 S. Nineteenth Street.....	Joe Mandy.....	General Delivery
861, Billings	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	1432 "O" Street.....	J. H. Danils.....	224 N. Twenty-sixth Street
NEBRASKA
23, Omaha	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	108 S. Fourteenth Street.....	Joe Robison.....	108 S. Fourteenth Street
143, Omaha	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	308 S. Nineteenth Street.....	Ned Nerness.....	824 W. Sixteenth Street
226, Lincoln	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.	1432 "O" Street.....	W. A. Shea.....	1432 "O" Street

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
NEVADA
46, Reno			G. W. Bostwick.....	212 N. Virginia Street
NEW HAMPSHIRE
398, Manchester	Second Sunday, 11:00 am.....	Eagles' Hall	John T. McLaughlin...	517 Chestnut Street
407, Manchester	First and third Mondays, 8:30 pm.....	Foresters' Hall, Elm Street.....	Helen Knight	82 Merrimac Street
NEW JERSEY
4, Hoboken	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.....	53 Fourteenth Street.....	F. Grobruegge.....	239 Bloomfield Street
10, Hoboken	Every Friday, 4:00 pm.....	239 Bloomfield Street.....	Herman Nienstaedt.....	200 Bloomfield Street
109, Newark	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.....	260 Washington Street.....	J. Kanizian	260 Washington Street
124, Trenton	Second Sunday	30 W. Front Street.....	Alfred Stults	330 W. Front Street
131, Newark	Second Sunday	63 Thirteenth Avenue.....	David Brown	66 S. Orange Avenue
488, Jersey City	Second Tuesday, 8:00 pm; fourth Sunday, 8:00 pm.....	63 Thirteenth Avenue.....	Thomas O'Neil	330 Whiston Street
491, Atlantic City	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.....	39 Gregory Street	P. Rohr	29% N. Pennsylvania Av.
508, Atlantic City	First and third Sundays, 2:30 pm.....	1620 Atlantic Avenue.....	William J. King.....	15 S. Delaware Avenue
576, Atlantic City	Every Thursday, 8:00 pm.....	104 S. South Carolina Avenue.....	Frank Stacey	37 High Street
682, Elizabeth	First and third Tuesdays.....	Turner Hall, 725 High Street.....	C. Frank	725 High Street
762, Atlantic City	First Tuesday	Bern's Hall, Harrison, N. J.....	William Harter	4 Manor Av., Harrison, N. J.
810, Atlantic City	Every Tuesday, 8:30 pm.....	118 S. South Carolina Avenue.....	Josephine Godfrey	220 N. Vermont Avenue
826, Atlantic City	Second and fourth Monday evenings.....	22 N. Indiana Avenue.....	L. R. Ball.....	123 N. York Avenue
881, Asbury Park	Every Monday, 9:00 pm.....	Elke' Hall, Atkins Avenue.....	W. R. Webster.....	P. O. Box 592
NEW MEXICO
442, Raton	Second and fourth Mondays.....	298 Park Avenue.....	Bud Larsen.....	P. O. Box 672
480, Tucumcari	First and third Wednesdays of the month.....	Federal Hall	August Genseke	Box 828
NEW YORK
1, New York City.....	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.....	122 E. Twenty-seventh Street.....	William Lehman	122 E. 27th Street
2, Brooklyn	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.....	228 E. Eighty-sixth Street.....	S. M. Solomon.....	21 Summer Avenue
3, New York City.....	Every Friday, 2:30 pm.....	247 W. Forty-second Street.....	Vincent Kroupa	427 E. Eighty-second St.
5, New York City.....	First and third Tuesdays.....	First Monday	W. R. Ahern	101 W. 38th Street
11, New York City.....	First Monday	Iroquois, 29 E. 132d Street.....	Arthur Cann	56 W. 139th Street
29, Bronx	First and third Wednesdays, 8:30 pm.....	Ryan Hall, 458 Willis Avenue.....	Chris Heinz	458 Willis Avenue, Bronx
66, Buffalo	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	387 Washington Street.....	W. C. Salter	428 Clinton Street
70, Brooklyn	Every Thursday, 8:00 pm.....	405 Evergreen Avenue.....	Otto Patburg	338 Tompkins Pl., Glendale,
76, Syracuse	First and third Sundays, 2:00 pm.....	149 James Street.....	Charles Yates	149 James Street
120, Utica	First and third Sundays, 11:00 am.....	T. & L. C. Hall, Reynolds Building.....	Fred Jones	208 South Street
124, Oneonta	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.....	332 E. Genesee Street.....	Oscar J. Wells.....	9 Valley View Street
150, Syracuse	Second and fourth Sunday afternoons.....	104 Reynolds Arcade.....	George Carisle	332 E. Genesee Street
171, Rochester	First and third Friday, 8:30 pm.....	570 Genesee Street.....	Emanuel Kovelski	104 Reynolds Arcade
175, Buffalo	Every Friday, 8:15 pm.....	338 Washington Street.....	Chas. B. Kline	20 E. Eagle Street
196, Buffalo	First Sunday	ArCADE Building	Ed. A. Lalanne.....	338 Washington Street
199, Jamestown	Every Tuesday, 8:00 pm.....	220 E. Eighty-sixth Street.....	George A. O'Donnell.....	707 W. Eighth Street
219, New York City.....	Second Sunday, 2:30 pm.....	19 Beaver Block.....	Chas. S. Lowy.....	220 E. 86th Street
228, Albany	Second and fourth Fridays.....	Corner Main and South Division Streets.....	Henry Hoffman	162 Broad Street
268, New York City.....	First Wednesday	104 Reynolds Arcade.....	Herbert W. Swire.....	2412 Seventh Avenue
347, Buffalo	First and Third Fridays, 8:30 pm.....	21 Summer Avenue.....	Mrs. Ella Berger.....	387 Washington Street
357, Rochester	Fourth Sunday, 2:30 pm.....	Germania Hall	Theresa C. Berns.....	104 Reynolds Arcade
381, Brooklyn	Every Monday, 2:30 pm.....	164 Jay Street.....	Z. Lederer	431 Gold Street
386, Poughkeepsie	Every Monday, 3:15 pm.....	228 E. Eighty-sixth Street.....	H. Miller	64 E. Fisher Avenue
438, Schenectady	Every Friday, 3:00 pm.....	Memorial Library, basement, First Ave., W. Moose Hall	W. B. Schamberger.....	12 Reed Place
470, Albany	Second and fourth Mondays.....	James	George Harper	164 Jay Street
471, Albany	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	James	W. Matz	14 Grand Street
719, New York City.....	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	James	William Harms	784 Elton Ave., Bronx
763, Rochester	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	James	Robert Hafley	5 Ely Street
NORTH DAKOTA
806, Williston	Second and fourth Mondays.....	James	Mrs. Ella Timmerman.....	Williston, N. D.
821, Mandan	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	James	Henry Meyers	Box 3

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
OHIO
68, Cincinnati	Wednesdays: 1st, 2:00 pm; 3d, 8:00 pm.	Ratterman's Hall, 31 E. Twelfth Street.	Charles Bente	1318 Walnut Street
72, Cincinnati	Every Friday, 2:30 pm.	620 Main Street.	William Frische	620 Main Street
106, Cincinnati	Every Friday, 3:00 pm.	1766 E. Twelfth Street.	Edw. A. Whisnmore	1766 E. Twelfth Street
107, Cleveland	Every Friday afternoon and evening.	320 Superior Building.	Mrs. Kitty Donnelly	320 Superior Bldg.
115, Akron	Every Thursday, 8:30 pm.	290 S. Main Street.	Wm. Robinson	290 S. Main Street
167, Cincinnati	Thursdays: 1st, 8:30 pm; 2d, 3d, 4th, 3:00 pm.	1805 E. Twelfth Street.	Tony Coletto	1805 E. Twelfth Street
177, Cincinnati	Second and fourth Thursdays, 8:30 pm.	802 Main Street.	Louis P. Mello	802 Main Street
216, Toledo	Second and fourth Sundays, 10:00 am.	Labor Temple	W. Arthur Booth	19 Labor Temple
222, Dayton	Fourth Sunday, 9:30 am.	332 E. Fifth Street.	J. F. Eichhorn	332 E. Fifth Street
335, Alliance	Every Monday, 2:30 and 8:30 pm., alternately.	Bartenders' Hall, 611 E. Main Street.	Charles F. Downey	P. O. Box 204
336, Toledo	First and third Sundays, 2:00 pm.	103 Empire Arcade Building.	Nida R. Pangle	Labor Temple
428, Portsmouth	Third Sunday, 2:00 pm.	218 Market Street, third floor.	George W. Schaffer	1317 Sixth Street
516, Chillicothe	Every Tuesday, 3:00 pm.	370 E. Main Street.	Oscar Marzluff	324 Clay Street
578, Dayton	First Sunday	210 S. Main Street, third floor.	M. E. Golden	210 1/2 S. Main Street
852, Tiffin	First Sunday	C. L. U. Hall.	C. H. Trimmer	28 1/2 S. Washington St.
OKLAHOMA
135, Tulsa	Mondays: 1st, 3d, 8:15 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:15 pm.	35 1/2 N. Main Street.	O. H. Lauck	35 1/2 N. Main Street
172, Henryetta	Every Monday, 8:30 pm, except last, 3:00 pm.	Eagles' Hall, 119 1/2 N. Broadway.	J. A. McNamara	Box 511
246, Oklahoma City	First and third Wednesdays.	Chickasha Business College, third floor.	Agnes Long	P. O. Box 721
325, Duncan	First and third Wednesdays.	Chickasha Business College, third floor.	Bert Jones	Senate Cafe
363, Sapulpa	First and third Wednesdays.	Chickasha Business College, third floor.	Virgil Moss	514 W. Russell Street
472, El Reno	First and third Wednesdays.	Chickasha Business College, third floor.	Joe Howard	219 Colorado Avenue
508, Chickasha	First and third Wednesdays.	Chickasha Business College, third floor.	Joe Howard	219 Colorado Avenue
OREGON
189, Portland	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 2:30 pm; all others, 8:30 pm.	270 1/2 Washington Street.	Ernest H. Williams	270 1/2 Washington Street
207, Portland	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.	Alisky Building, third floor.	C. T. Frederick	293 1/2 Stark Street
308, Portland	First and third Thursdays, 8:00 pm.	242 Ankeny Street.	May Holden	270 1/2 Washington
310, Portland	First and third Fridays, 2:30 and 8:00 pm.	Rosenberg Hall, Eleventh and Exchange.	W. E. Mayson	242 Ankeny Street
311, Astoria	First and third Mondays, 8:30 pm.	Eagles' Hall	Oscar Gustafson	Rosenberg Hall
364, Pendleton	Every Thursday, 8:00 pm, except last, 3:00 pm.	Odd Fellows' Building, Fifth and Main Sts.	Beryl Shustown	2102 W. Webb Street
391, LaGrande	First and third Mondays, 8:30 pm.	Eagles' Hall	W. S. Munkers	Box 639
424, Klamath Falls	Every Thursday, 8:00 pm, except last, 3:00 pm.	Odd Fellows' Building, Fifth and Main Sts.	Chas. Slater	Box 1072
476, Marshfield	Fridays: 2d, 1:00 pm; 4th, 8:00 pm.	410 Stock Exchange Building.	B. E. Stone	P. O. Box 121
496, Portland	First and third Mondays, 8:30 pm.	410 Stock Exchange Building.	E. H. Hirschler	402 Labor Temple
568, Portland	First and third Mondays, 8:30 pm.	410 Stock Exchange Building.	L. L. Lawson	307 N. Sixteenth Street
PENNSYLVANIA
78, Pottsville	First Sunday, 2:30 pm.	Moose Hall, Church Street.	Jacob H. Santmyer	183 Morgantown Street
116, Philadelphia	Sundays: 1st, 3d, July and August, 1st only.	1309 N. Fifteenth Street.	Richard Pipping	1309 N. Fifteenth Street
124, Philadelphia	Second and fourth Sundays, 2:30 pm.	220 Lackawanna Avenue.	P. J. Canavan	220 Lackawanna
154, Wilkes-Barre	First Sunday, 3:00 pm.	Union Hall, 12 E. Market Street.	William Kennedy	27 Moyallen Street
163, McKeesport	Second Sunday, 2:00 pm.	411 Blackberry Street.	Frank A. Decker	411 Blackberry Street
181, Easton	Second Sunday, 2:30 pm.	Labor Temple	Marshall T. Walters	333 Lehigh Street
188, Pittsburgh	First and third Sundays.	Quinlan Building	Harry J. Clair	Labor Temple, Uptown Sta.
190, South Bethlehem	First and third Sundays.	Nogowski Hall, cor. Tenth and Parade Streets	Louis Taglang	New Merchants Hotel
227, Erie	Every Friday, 3:00 and 8:00 pm.	Eagles' Hall, S. Jefferson Street.	Joseph Kress	262 E. 26th Street
262, Pittsburgh	Last Sunday of each quarter.	924 Walnut Street.	Samuel Grigg	1011 Liberty Avenue
278, Philadelphia	Every Wednesday, 3:00 pm.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	Harry Weinstock	924 Walnut Street
326, Pittsburgh	First and third Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	Peter Guggia	1013 Liberty Avenue
361, Allentown	First and third Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	J. A. Schiffrt	322 N. Fifth Street
380, Carnegie	First and third Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	J. C. Williams	6 Williams Street
449, Altoona	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	W. H. McKee	3612 Sixth Avenue
482, Butler	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	J. L. Harvey	300 W. North Street
669, Harrisburg	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	Morris A. Heagy	1849 Spencer Street
611, Williamsport	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	Geo. S. White	432 Erie Avenue
683, Pittsburgh	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	E. R. Sams	362 Chauncy Street
737, York	Second and fourth Sundays.	Wieler's Hall, Seventh and Hamilton Sts.	J. Paul Johnson	114 S. George Street

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
PENNSYLVANIA—Con'td
789, Brownsville	Second Sunday, 10:30 am.....	Goldstein's Hall	Edward O'Donnell	Barr House
811, Altoona	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 2:30 and 8:00 pm.....	Blair Conny C. L. Rooms, 1821 Eleventh Av.	Bertha V. Knayel.....	1015 Eighth Avenue
846, New Kensington	Fourth Sunday, 2:00 pm.....	Bloser Hall, Fourth Avenue.....	William Connolly	Arlington Hotel
854, Jeannette	Sundays: 1st, 3d, 2:30 pm; June to Sep., inc., 1st only	109 Second Street.....	John Meyer	401 Seventh Street
RHODE ISLAND
285, Providence	{ Sundays: 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm., Oct. to June, inc.; }	Bartenders' Hall, 285 Weybosset Street....	William J. Guest.....	285 Weybosset Street
307, Providence	{ July to Sept., inc., 2d only, 10:30 am..... }	205 Pine Street.....	John A. Ford.....	168 Pine Street
SOUTH CAROLINA
539, Charleston	First and third Wednesdays, 4:00 and 9:00 pm.....	Dart's Hall, Krakey Street.....	A. F. Allen.....	63 Kennedy Street
TENNESSEE
312, Chattanooga	First Sunday	10 McConnell Block	W. L. Bork.....	Hamilton Co. Hospital
338, Knoxville	Every Monday, 3:00 pm.....	C. L. U. Hall, 709½ S. Gay Street.....	S. J. Hansard.....	315 N. Gay Street
486, Memphis			William M. Warren.....	889 Looney Avenue
TEXAS
12, San Antonio	Second Sunday, 2:30 pm.....	Trades Council Hall, 114½ S. Alamo.....	Frank Zizik	418 North Street
69, Galveston	First and third Tuesdays, 8:30 pm.....	309½ Twenty-third Street.....	Martin Ohnstein	820 Winnie Street
188, Wichita Falls	First and third Tuesday evenings.....	Labor Temple	Floyd Mozley.....	Labor Temple
188, Amarillo	Wednesdays: 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 3:00 pm.....	Labor Hall, 284½ Pine Street.....	C. J. Paul.....	Jeff's Cafe No. 2
210, Abilene			C. J. Taylor.....	P. O. Box 452
230, South Bend	First and third Thursdays.....	Union Hall	Marie Castellaw	P. O. Box 65
230, Goose Creek	Mondays: 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th.....	I. O. F. Hall.....	W. E. Mansell.....	Box 681
299, Burkburnett	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 8:00 pm.....	Trades and Labor Council Hall	Tom L. Berry.....	P. O. Box 904
323, Electra	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 2:30 pm.....	Poe Building, Marston and Main Streets.....	A. C. Anderson.....	Box 1197
331, Greenville	Thursdays: 1st, 3d, 8:00 pm; 2d, 4th, 3:00 pm.....		Tuck Dial	815 W. Lacy Street
399, Ranger			W. J. McCarthy.....	Greenville, Tex.
403, Breckenridge			E. P. McKeon.....	Box 553
406, Bonham			E. N. Walker.....	P. O. Box 727
406, Wortham			Roy Justus	P. O. Box 498
420, Sherman			Harry Weber.....	c o The Senate
480, Ft. Worth			Joe Rakestraw.....	c o Box 298
511, Orange			L. P. Renton.....	1231 E. Lenda Street
512, Bonham			F. C. Flaungan.....	605 Green Street
513, Baird			Ollie Murphy	c o Barney Martin,
571, Mexia			Harry Carr	Box 727
604, Orange			Sip Rice	Box 201
638, Dallas	Wednesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.....	Labor Temple	Chas. A. Simpson.....	1108 Fourth Street
748, Ft. Worth	Tuesdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 4th, 2:30 pm.....	1413½ Main Street.....	P. O. Box 1365	P. O. Box 1365
753, Desdemona	Every Tuesday	Culinary Workers' Hall	Lydia M. Hinshaw.....	1502½ Main Street
777, Beaumont	First and third Mondays.....	I. O. F. Hall, Pine and Tives Streets.....	D. W. Taber.....	P. O. Box 593
808, Houston	Second and fourth Tuesdays.....	Labor Temple	Mrs. W. K. Fudge.....	955 Jefferson Street
848, El Paso	Wednesdays, 8:30 pm., except last, 2:30 pm.....		W. C. Wood.....	305½ Main Street
UTAH
581, Ogden	First and third Fridays, 8:30 pm.....	Eagles' Hall	Samuel Roberts	220 Twenty-Fifth Street
721, Salt Lake City.....	First Sunday, 1:00 pm.....	Labor Temple	Joe Lane	P. O. Box 882
815, Salt Lake City.....	Every Wednesday	137 East First Street, South.....	J. S. Dixon.....	P. O. Box 891
828, Salt Lake City			William Gregory.....	460 N. Sixth Street, W.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

Number and Location	Time of Meeting	Place of Meeting	Name of Secretary	Secretary's Address
VIRGINIA
652, Richmond	Second Tuesday, 8:00 pm.	Prices' Hall	Mrs. M. E. Brown	711½ W. Leigh Street
842, Richmond			Laura J. Payne	220 Charity Street
WASHINGTON
33, Seattle	Every Friday, 7:30 pm.	717½ Third Avenue	W. R. Barrett	Box 504
41, Tacoma	Second and fourth Tuesdays, 8:30 pm.	928½ Broadway	Marshall Hill	216 Perkins Bldg.
239, Seattle	First and third Fridays, 2:30 pm.	81 Pike Street	H. W. Rose	P. O. Box 488
240, Seattle	Second and fourth Fridays, 8:30 pm.	Labor Temple	Alice M. Lord	Labor Temple
241, Yakima	Mondays: 1st afternoon, others in evening.	Labor Temple	C. L. Fendergrat	13 N. First Street
242, Wenatchee	First and third Thursdays	Culinary Workers' Hall, 8 S. Mission St.	Chas. W. McLaughlin	P. O. Box 512
316, Centralia			Carl J. Thorson	712 W. Locust Street
349, Auburn	Every Thursday evening	722 First Avenue	F. M. Kucman	Park Hotel
400, Spokane	First and third Mondays	Labor Temple	Frank Seely	Box 510
439, Vancouver	First and third Mondays	717½ Third Avenue	L. O. Moore	Labor Temple
451, Everett	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Club Rooms, Donovan Building	Carl Leonard	Labor Temple
487, Seattle	Every Tuesday evening	Eagles' Hall	Thos. W. Stranger	Marion Temple
528, Seattle	First and third Wednesdays, 8:30 pm.	I. L. A. Hall	Mrs. Emma Elliott	Labor Temple
529, Bellingham	Thursdays: 1st, 2:15 pm; 3d, 8:30 pm.	Labor Temple	Ida Parberry	Box 128
538, Seattle	First and third Wednesdays, 8:00 pm.	Carpenters' Hall, 440 Burwell Avenue	H. C. Bell	201 Third Avenue, S.
567, Olympia	Every Tuesday		J. H. Howard	Box 54
618, Anacortes			Wm. Clouston	218 "O" Street
626, Walla Walla			M. Harris	121 W. Alder Street
780, Bremerton			Vela Smith	12 Central Building
791, Aberdeen			Mrs. Maude King	Box 17
WEST VIRGINIA
50, Fairmont	Thursdays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; Fridays: 2d, 4th, 8:30 pm.	pm, 311 Merchant Street	Lulu Montgomery	311 Merchant Street
242, Charleston	Every Wednesday, 8:00 and 7:00 pm alternately	U. M. W. A. Hall, Summers Street	H. Bias	122½ Summer Street
295, Wheeling	First and second Thursdays	1068 Market Street	Burt Mead	711 Market Street, rear
338, Huntington			J. Brown	838 Third Avenue
WISCONSIN
59, Milwaukee	Every Friday, 8:00 pm.		A. Siblak	91 Wisconsin Street
64, Milwaukee	Thursdays: 1st, 2:15 pm; 2d, 8:15 pm	300 Fourth Street	John Stiel	300 Fourth Street
128, Superior	Fridays: 1st, 3d, 8:30 pm; 2d, 2:00 pm.	Toner Hall	James Ryan	1708 Cummins Avenue
322, Racine	First Sunday, 8:00 pm.	Union Hall	Matthew J. Weber	1708 Center Street
379, LaCrosse	Second Monday, 7:30 pm.	Mains Hall	Fred E. Gerd	350 Mississippi Street
523, Kenosha	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	219 Main Street	Edward L. Veigle	350 Holland Avenue
590, Fond du Lac	First and third Mondays, 8:00 pm.	Trades and Labor Hall	Henry Grundt	304 P. First Street
637, Manitowoc	First Wednesday, 7:30 pm.	Union Hall	John Engebrecht	1023 S. Twenty-first Street
685, Eau Claire	First Tuesday, 8:00 pm.	Labor Temple	George Berg	740 E. Madison Street
WYOMING
337, Cheyenne	Mondays: 1st, 3:00 pm; 3d, 8:00 pm.	Labor Temple	Cap Patrum	Box 133
544, Douglas			S. B. Gristy	General Delivery
557, Greybull			Grace Whitworth	P. O. Box 416
842, Casper	First and third Mondays	Moose Hall	R. W. Emmet	P. O. Box 483
846, Sheridan	Second and fourth Sunday afternoons	Labor Temple Hall	Harry Thurmond	P. O. Box 122
849, Lusk			S. I. Mathews	P. O. Box 987
867, Laramie			J. C. Davidson	Box 103
867, Rawlins			C. N. Hunt	Rawlins, Wyoming
876, Laramie			Oliver Amos	808½ N. Fifth Street

Somebody's Sister

CONSIDERABLE newspaper and magazine space has been devoted to special pleas in behalf of men, women and children of a number of European countries, who are either on the verge of starvation, or actually starving. Organizations have been created for the definite purpose of collecting funds for the purchase of food and clothing, to be shipped overseas to the afflicted of other lands. The Government of the United States, through Congress, authorized setting aside of a goodly sum of money, so that the hungry and needy of other lands might be saved from untimely death.

Americans are generous responders to such appeals; the newspapers of America have recorded innumerable events having to do with "sending food and clothing and other necessities to the unfortunates of other lands." And while all of the appeals have been generously cared for, we have a very serious situation in this land we call America—a situation which appears to have been lost in the shuffle, if not wholly ignored.

One phase of that referred-to situation is so pertinently set forth in an editorial printed in the Los Angeles Record of January 18, 1922, that we reproduce same herewith:

ONE MAN'S OPINION

I wish I had a million dollars so that when I saw a thing like this I am going to write about I could remedy it.

In one of those big, immaculate restaurants, where eating is a fine art, I saw, the other night, a slip of a girl who was on the edge of the horrible.

She was shabby; her hat, her dress, her shoes, told of pinched pennies, her face told of a sunless hall bedroom—a child really, but old with the desperate struggle to exist in the city.

Under her arm was a pathetic little bundle, her waitress "uniform."

Dejected, pathetic, a drooping little unfortunate, she paused a minute to speak to the ornate, fat, red headed, blase goddess who presided at the cash register, and who evidently held the fate of the waitresses in her flabby hands.

The girl was hungry for an honest word of cheer to help her on her hard path; the cashier was chiefly interested in getting rid of the pathetic kid, standing drooping there in the tiled grandeur.

The girl smiled, though her lower lip quivered a bit; she made a desperate plucky fight to seem unconcerned, but her big, mournful eyes told the story; she had no job, and she had no money, and she hadn't a soul in the world who cared.

Did you ever look deep into the brown eyes of a collie when his master had abused him brutally? If you have, you know how the eyes of this girl looked that night.

And then she slipped away into the night, out onto heedless Broadway to what God only knows, and sometimes we think maybe He doesn't, for there are a lot of sparrows that fall to the ground in Los Angeles.

Dammit, this sort of a thing shouldn't be.

Let that sink in. Can you visualize what prompted that excellent editorial comment? Is it being duplicated in your town or city?

Doesn't it make your blood run cold to think of it?

Men and boys can and will put up a fight. What chance has a poor kid in skirts?

Somebody's daughter. Somebody's sister. Maybe yours. Who knows?

NAMED SHOES ARE FREQUENTLY MADE IN NON-UNION FACTORIES

Do Not Buy Any Shoe

no matter what its name, unless it bears a plain and readable impression of this UNION STAMP.

All shoes without the UNION STAMP are always Non-Union. Do not accept any excuse for absence of the UNION STAMP.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' UNION

246 Summer Street, BOSTON, MASS.

COLLIS LOVELY, General President

CHARLES L. BAINE, General Secretary-Treasurer

Your Library

Is incomplete without
the bound volumes of
The Mixer and Server.
A limited number may be secured at Two Dollars each.

Remit to—

Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan
at Cincinnati, Ohio

Show Your Colors

—WEAR THE—BUTTON
OF YOUR CRAFT

Order one through your Secretary.

Solid Gold Button
$1.00

All our Buttons are Union Made

JERE L. SULLIVAN
Secretary-Treasurer

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE BLDG.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

This Label

Is always used by us in filling your orders for Local By-Laws, Tickets,
Invitations, Programs and everything in the line of Printing. We do neat, clean, accurate work. If you like to see the label on your printing, and your local printer does not supply it, send us your orders.

Roessler Bros.
PRINTERS

528 WALNUT ST., CINCINNATI, O.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

This is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance
and
Bartenders International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 3

CINCINNATI, OHIO, MARCH 15, 1922

Press of
Roessler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio

A REGULAR FELLOW

Where he came from we did not know. He blew in one day, put on his working rags and was given the warmest station in the boat.

It was not long before we wised up to the fact that the new guy understood his business, and gee, boy, how he could work.

He was the first fellow I ever bumped against that begged my pardon. Just why he should beg my pardon, and the fault being all mine, I don't know; but he did.

When the silver was running low, he came to my station and said: "May I have a few of your teaspoons?" and when I nodded my head, he said, and quite plainly too: "Thank you," and smiled just the same as if he meant it.

In the middle of the rush the following day after asking for the teaspoons, I was as close to being stalled as any old-timer that ever peddled Queensware. He grabbed off the dead, a real load too, by gosh, smiling all the time and on the way back from the kitchen said to me: "Brother, you get the orders, I will fix the set-ups," and shush, that boy had 'em all set when I came back with the eats for the hungry horde that cluttered up my station. It never phased him a bit to hold down twelve chairs, and mind you, the Lincoln Cafe, where we were on the pay-roll, was some fast boat, believe-you-me. He was a sure go-getter. Never knew him to show that patronizing stuff that always gets a fellow's goat. He used to say: "I'm younger than you, old scout, let me take care of some of them." And he'd do that little thing and if there was any small change left on my station, honest-to-goodness, he picked it up, thanked the patron and slipped it to me. At first I was amazed at the fellow, could not figure him out, he was so different from any two-legged guy that I had ever worked with before. Not only did he lend me a hand, but I'm a son-of-a-sea-cook if he wouldn't go out of his way to help any of the bunch, and never gave one of us a chance to pay him back. Take it from me, that boy had this guy Chesterfield lashed to the mast. It did not matter when or where you happened to be, if he wanted to get in ahead, as a fellow will at times when he is going fast, he would look at the other guy, and with one of those everlasting smiles, and say: "May I?" or "Pardon me," and every bucko in the boat knew that he'd go through hell and high-water to help you if perchance you were stalled. Fast, that boy was streaked lightning, and it goes without saying that he had all hands wondering if he would hold out or blow up one day and spill the beans. Little Joe, whose station was on the opposite side of the boat, began to show signs of being out of whack; he was a plucky little scout and stuck it out as long as he could. You see we were a little off the main line, and the tourists seldom paid us a visit, so when one of the crew either laid off or was unable to work, we just had to hold her down as best we could. So one morning word came that Little Joe was sick, unable to come down and hold the job. One of us scouted about town trying to locate some one that could hold on until Joe came back, but nary a white-cloth man in sight, and we had to manage somehow. I remember, that day was sure a scorcher, it just seemed as if everybody in town came to the Lincoln to feed up. Well, to make a long story short, we pulled through with colors flying, but every man on the floor was dog tired when we got off watch. As we changed for the street, the new guy asked me if I knew where Little Joe lived or roomed, and I told him, and dang my buttons, if he didn't stop at the Ginnie's fruit stand, get a bag of fruit and went to Little Joe's room. Joe told me afterwards that the new guy—who, by the way, we nicknamed "Smiler"—came into the room, laid the fruit down, began asking Joe how he felt, and after giving him the once over, yanked the pillow off the bed, rolled Joe over on the other side, straightened the sheets and made a noise like a sure-enough Red Cross nurse, punched the pillow, washed Joe's face and hands just like he had been accustomed to that sort of thing, then went down to the Lunch Car and had "Red" fix up a nice tasty broth and a bit of toast. You ought to hear Joe tell about that visit, it would do you good. On the level, that fellow was a ray of sunshine. After he'd been with us about two weeks he asked me one day if we did not have a local union in the town and when it held its meeting? On the level, I felt like a wet rat, because we had not held a meeting for two months, and of course I told him so. When I told him that the president and secretary worked in another cafe up the street, he asked me to introduce him. Then I told him that we were not in good standing with the International Union, and he said: "I thought so." That was the nearest he ever came to criticizing us or our union. Seems he had tried to locate the former secretary, but that boy had moseyed along to another town. The following day after I had introduced him to the president and secretary, he asked every man in the Lincoln to come to the meeting the following evening. To show you how well the bunch liked the "Smiler," all hands except the night watch were on deck. Take it from me that was some meeting and none of us are likely to forget the good common sense talk that boy put up. Say he talked for twenty-five minutes and he uncovered more stuff about organization than I had ever heard before and me carrying a paid-up book for all of seventeen years. We got back in good standing, we began to hold our meetings every two weeks while the "Smiler" stayed in our town; we are still holding regular meetings and we claim our union to be a live one.

"Smiler" went overseas. He came back, but he left part of him in the Argonne. I am not ashamed to admit that tears came to my eyes when I saw him coming down the street on crutches, but that boy was smiling at me and telling me that it would be all right, for he was going to take vocational training. Later on "Smiler" wrote us from the big town. He began to study for a professional course, then one day we got word from his folks that "Smiler" had succumbed to the "flu," and had been buried in the old home town back east with military honors. One of the last messages he sent to us was: "Boys, keep your union going, it is your best friend." And we are doing it too, for we believe our little union is a monument to "Smiler," who was "A REGULAR FELLOW."

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD
At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 19, 1918.

Printed by
Roessler Brothers,
Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
Building,
Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor
Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE.....President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH.....First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN.....Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY.....Third Vice-President
509 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY.....Fourth Vice-President
183 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL.....Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO.....Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY.....Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG.....Eighth Vice-President
500 S. State Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN.....General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Compers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Members who have the ability to be helpful to their local union, yet refrain from using knowledge because of the fear of being deprived of credit are in reality doing more injury to themselves than to the organization. Your union is a combination of wage-earners. Whatever advances the interests of one is proportionately beneficial to the others. You may find that idea hard to accept, but if you mull it over a moment you will see the wisdom sticking out.

You willingly admit that when a member injures your organization, that such member injures you. Why won't the rule work both ways?

.

Unions are better equipped to stand an attack if they have experienced opposition. It is the easily constructed unions that clutter the failure field.

.

If a local union obtains concessions from employers without a struggle they are in duty bound to aid that employer by rendering such service that he will not regret his generosity.

.

Cut your eye teeth by reading a good labor paper—preferably one that you subscribe for. Help your own cause by helping to circulate the writings of the men of the labor press.

.

Have you ever taken note of the fact that the local unions which are out in front of the procession, winning converts and reasonable success, are the ones who devote very little time to boasting "What we done," but are employing time and ability in planning for what can be accomplished of a beneficial nature in the future? Give that thought a second look, then scan the field over and find that there is a lot more truth than poetry in the statement. The organization that is resting on its laurels is simply preparing itself for the industrial undertaker, and that worthy, though unseen agent, is not only on the job, but there with both feet. Be proud of what you have done for your local union, be equally proud of the accomplishments which are credited to your local union; but don't ease yourself into a rocker and imagine that the job is finished, for you may discover that while you were engaged in making a dent in the cushions, the opponents of your organization have plotted for its undoing. Employers do not give up good wages and all the beneficial conditions exacted by trades unions because they feel kindly toward the wage-earners. They surrender part of profits because of the knowledge that if they refuse they will invite the appearance of the unions' representatives, who seldom call to bid them the time of day.

Make it your business to be an active part of your union; see to it that when aid is sought by your officers that you are ready to put your shoulder to the wheel. The active members of your local find little time to devote to criticizing the local union officials, they know what the officers are trying to produce, and knowing, tender appreciation and co-operation. Be a critic, if you will, but be just at the same time. Be on the job when opportunity knocks, but don't knock at every opportunity.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-16

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Evidently we started something when we began to try and overcome the habit of some of our local union secretaries of eternally making membership records different than what the membership book provides for.

The little squib, entitled "Gumming the Cards," in a recent number, has produced several letters demanding to know what right we have to order changes in the operation of the laws of the International Union. We have written a few of those who seemed to be all het up, asking them if they will please indicate the law or laws which the general office has changed or attempted to change. So far we have not been the recipients of replies, for the reason that the letter writers are probably doing now what they should have done months ago; reading the Book of Membership and Constitution.

As we set forth in the little squib that appears to have created a "Tempest in a Tea-pot," we said quite plainly that Local Union Secretaries were not justified in making erasures of the words, "WAS INITIATED IN," and substituting the word, "REINSTATED IN."

In this article we propose to offer several exhibits that we hope may aid the secretaries of our local unions to keep and maintain accurate membership records. The first illustration will be that of John Doe, who as the item printed before indicated, became a member of Local 20 of St. Louis, February 10, 1909. The following is a reduced fac simile of the Membership page:

MEMBERSHIP CARD No. Ledger Page....

This is to certify that the bearer hereof, Mr. JOHN DOE, was initiated in Local No. 20, of St. Louis, Missouri, U. S. A., on February 10, 1909, and is a member of Local No. 20, of St. Louis, Missouri, U. S. A., until the last day of the last month marked paid up by stamp on the succeeding pages.

HARRY W. CORDES, President.

(SEAL) 20

THOMAS W. HOOPER, Financial Secretary.

Members should not relinquish possession of this book except for audit.

When surrendering your book insist on getting a receipt for it.

That exhibit shows a record that should appear in every book which a member may secure, no matter what Local Union he may transfer to. The record that we refer to is the one reading "This is to certify that the bearer, JOHN DOE, was initiated in Local No. 20, of St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A., on February 10, 1909. The reason must be evident, for we want to retain a record that shows where a member was inducted into the organization, and unless we reproduce the original and correct initial record, we make it possible for a member to be lost track of; to in fact, confuse the records and compel dependence upon inaccurate memorandum. Now let us take John Doe out of St. Louis and transplant him, so to speak, in Galveston, Texas. He arrives in Galveston with a Traveling Card, goes up to the local union headquarters and deposits said Traveling Card, issued by Local 20, of St. Louis, Mo., August 14, 1912. The secretary of Local 69, of Galveston, receives the Traveling Card, signs it and has the president of the local attest, then impresses the seal of the local on the card and is ready to mail it back to St. Louis, Mo., to the secretary of the issuing local union. But the secretary does something else. He takes John Doe's Membership Book, turns over to the page following the Membership Record, observes that the first item on that page reads—Initiated February 10, 1909, Local Number 20, and on the line following the name of the city—St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A. That means that the secretary of Local 20 cared for his part of the job. Now the secretary of Local 69 writes on the space just below, following the words "Transferred to Local No. 69. Date, August 14, 1912."

Supposing that you take your Membership Book from your pocket and follow the explanation by referring to the pages indicated. The Traveling Card coupon is now mailed to St. Louis, Mo., and to all intents and purposes, John Doe is a member of Local 69, Galveston, Texas. John Doe remains in the City of Galveston, until the end of the year 1913, but in the meantime John's Membership Book is lost and a new one has to be made out for him.

The secretary of Local 69 proceeds as shown in the following example, to make out a new Book of Membership for John Doe; but before doing so, he requires of John a statement reading in effect as follows: "I, John Doe, being a member of Local 69, of Galveston, Texas, having lost my Membership Book and am unable to locate same, hereby make application for the issuance of a new book, promising that in the event that my old Membership Book is found, to either turn same over to the secretary of Local 69 or surrender my new book, that I hereby make application for." Signed John Doe, this 16th day of November, 1913. The new book for John Doe should be made out as follows:

MEMBERSHIP CARD No. Ledger Page....

This is to certify that Mr. JOHN DOE was initiated in Local No. 20, of St. Louis Mo., U. S. A., on February 10, 1909, and is a member of Local No. 69, of Galveston, Texas, until the last day of the last month marked paid up by stamp on the succeeding pages.

(Signed) M. W. LUSK, President.

(SEAL) 69

MARTIN OHNSTEIN, Financial Secretary.

Members should not relinquish possession of this book except to audit.

When surrendering your book insist on getting a receipt for it.

And in ink, the words—"DUPLICATE BOOK, issued November 16, 1913, M. Ohnstein, Secretary," should be written on the margin of the page or at bottom of page.

John Doe has a friend working in the City of Dallas, Texas. He writes John that the State Fair will be on in a few months and urges him to come over to Dallas. John thinks pretty well of the suggestion and applies for a Traveling Card. John's dues are paid up for the months of July, 1914, and he makes application for Traveling Card on July 10, 1914. Armed with Traveling Card and Membership Book, he arrives in Dallas on July 12, 1914, and proceeds to deposit same with Secretary Charles A. Simpson. Galveston, Local 69 receives the Traveling Card coupon back on July 16, 1914, and a letter of inquiry as to the Citizenship record of John Doe, same having been omitted from the Traveling Card. Secretary Ohnstein looks over his files of Traveling Cards, locates the coupon issued by St. Louis Local 20, on August 14, 1912, and finds the following memorandum on the margin provided for that purpose. "The bearer of this Traveling Card was born in the City of Sedalia, Missouri, U. S. A., October 19, 1879, of native born parents and is a citizen of the United States of America. T. W. Hooper, Secretary, Local No. 20, St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A." August 14, 1912.

When Secretary Simpson receives the foregoing memorandum, he typewrites same on the Traveling Card in his possession, acknowledges Secretary Ohnstein's letter and suggests to the latter that he also make memorandum on the coupon of Traveling Card returned from Local 659, of Dallas. The next step that Secretary Simpson of Local 659 takes is to write on the page intended for the purpose, another memorandum reading in effect that John Doe transferred to Local 659 on July 12, 1914.

In the Spring of 1915 John Doe reads about the exposition at San Francisco, Cal., concludes that he must take a trip to the Coast and walks up to the desk of Secretary Simpson, shows that he is paid for the month of April, 1915, and asks for a Traveling Card. Traveling Card is made out on April 9, 1915, dues prepaid to May 1, 1915 and John Doe, with properly made out Traveling Card with Citizenship record completed by Secretary Simpson, proceeds on his way and arrives in San Francisco, Cal., April 15, 1915. Going to the headquarters of Local 30, John Doe deposits his card. Secretary Hugo Ernst takes the card, requires John Doe to sign said card, compares the signature with the one on the face of the card to see that they agree and shortly afterward the coupon is on its way to the issuing Local 659 of Dallas, Texas. In the meantime, Secretary Ernst has written on the page which records transfer of member, the memorandum to the effect that John Doe transferred to Local 30, of San Francisco, Cal., July 15, 1915.

John Doe continues to work in San Francisco, Cal., during the Exposition, and in December, 1915, his Membership Book is called in so that new books may be issued in time for the beginning of the coming term. When the new book is tendered to John Doe he finds the Membership record as follows:

MEMBERSHIP CARD No.... Ledger Page....

This is to certify that the bearer hereof, Mr. JOHN DOE, was initiated in Local 20, of St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A., on February 10, 1909, and is a member of Local No. 30, of San Francisco, Cal., U. S. A., until the last day of the last month paid by stamp on the succeeding pages.

(SEAL) 30 HUGO ERNST, President.
J. WEINBERGER, Financial Secretary.

Members should not relinquish possession of this book except to audit.

When surrendering your book insist on getting a receipt for it.

He also finds on the page facing the foregoing membership record, memorandum reading: "Initiated February 10, 1909, Local 20, St. Louis, Mo.," and the further memorandum, reading—"Transferred to Local 30., July 15, 1915." John Doe's old book is also returned to him, and if he is the careful man with a valuable document which his membership in our organization would indicate, he places that old book in a safe place for possible future reference.

Observe the records of transfer from Local 20 to Local 69; from Local 69 to Local 659 are omitted in the new membership book. The reason must be apparent. For, if members travel and transfer frequently, an added page would be required to hold the complete record. But the memorandum is not lost, for if the secretaries perform their duties, a record of issuance of Traveling Card is made on their reports to headquarters and the number of the Local with which the said Traveling Card was deposited. Many of our secretaries go farther—they do not only indicate the date of acceptance of Traveling Card, but the date of issuance of cards and date of receipt of same by the accepting local. In the foregoing an effort is made to make the method plain, so that secretaries may know the way to keep accurate records. There is a right and a wrong way to do things. It is as hard to do it wrong as it is to do it right. The latter has the distinct advantage of causing neither friction nor dissent.

A final word to officers. Don't use ordinary rubber type for signatures. If unable to afford a fac simile signature, then use pen and ink and write by hand; and above all things, write your name so that any one can "get it after it is cold."

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

REMEMBER THE WORM.

Don't be afraid of making mistakes. If you have that sort of fear, it's chiggers to chestnuts that you will never amount to a tinker's dam, either in the labor movement or in the industry that you are now engaged in. The wisest men in the world have made mistakes, but they endeavored to avoid repetitions. Men are not perfect; most of us can fall and some of us mighty hard.

A very wise writer said, that about the only thing that can't fall is a worm. He had it pretty near right when you come to think of it, but at that, a worm can turn, and in that respect has some of us two-legged meal hounds beat to a whisper. Making mistakes habitually gets you nowhere, but, as intimated, if you fear making an error, you are tied as much as if some one had used bailing wire to hitch you to a post.

If the problem looks too hard to tackle, get busy studying it; try and find out how the other fellows do the job and imitate them. The old saw to the effect that "there is nothing new under the sun," applies with reference to doing the seeming impossible or hard tasks. If one man can do a thing, there is reason to believe that another man can turn the trick, too. Embryo cooks grab the hot handles of pans, but they soon get wise to the fact that there is a way to handle a pan without getting their hands blistered. What is true of the embryo cook holds good in other things. The problem may be a hot one, but face it and you can find a method to handle it and do it right. Trying is worth a ton of fear any old time, in the day or night.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

HOW THEY STAND.

California	35
Texas	28
New York	28
Illinois	26
Pennsylvania	25
Washington	20
Massachusetts	15
Ohio	15
New Jersey	14
Missouri	13
Canada	13
Oregon	11
Minnesota	9
Wyoming	9
Connecticut	9
Wisconsin	9
Montana	8
Oklahoma	8
Colorado	7
Kentucky	6
Idaho	5
Indiana	5
Louisiana	5
Arizona	5
West Virginia	4
Michigan	4
Utah	4
Iowa	3
Maryland	3
Nebraska	3
Kansas	3
Tennessee	3
Arkansas	2
Rhode Island	2
North Dakota	2
District of Columbia	2
Virginia	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
South Carolina	1
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARTER ISSUED DURING FEBRUARY, 1922.

215 M, Bristow, Arizona.....P. A. Lawrence

LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR FEBRUARY, 1922.

Local 18—Oscar Berg.
Local 19—J. H. Hilton.
Local 115—Edw. Donnelly.
Local 361—Horace Heil.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

DEATHS DURING FEBRUARY, 1922.

Local 1—Berthold Korn.
Local 7—Robert Fox, N. Holmes, Alex. Irwin
Local 20—J. J. Cunningham.
Local 30—Otto Jobs, Louis Bernzaft.
Local 34—H. C. Hill.
Local 58—Rudolph Deville.
Local 115—Frank Custard.
Local 134—Jacob F. Hueter.
Local 207—Agnes Egerer, Patrick Sinnott.
Local 208—Robt. L. Malone.
Local 236—Victoria Daigle.
Local 237—Henry Bert.
Local 285—Thomas J. Finnerty.
Local 300—H. Peabody.
Local 491—Thomas Welding, Richard Fisher.
Local 509—Charley Griffin.
Local 582—J. A. Denny.
Local 659—Chas. Wiley.
Local 792—Jas. S. Lawson.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INTERNATIONAL AUDITORS.

In accordance with the provisions of Section 119 of the International Constitution and laws, local unions are hereby requested to present the name of one member for a position as International Auditor. Nominations which may have been offered previous to this notification may be offered again. In fact, no nomination which does not come in response to this notice will be presented to the General Executive Board for consideration. This rule is imperative, for it would be quite possible for a previous nominee to either become suspended or withdrawn from the local union which offered the nomination. Nominations must be in the general office by APRIL 15, 1922. Signatures of President and Secretary of the local union and the seal of said local must be attached in order to be entitled to official recognition.

PRESIDENTS PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., February 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following quotation might be well to peruse in these days of the open shop:

"I am glad that the system of labor prevails, under which laborers can strike when they want to, where they are not obliged to work under all circumstances, and are not tied down to work whether you pay them for it or not. I like a system which lets a man 'quit' when he wants to, and I wish it might prevail everywhere. I want a man to have a chance to better his conditions—that is the true system. I am not ashamed to confess that twenty-five years ago I was a hired laborer."—Abraham Lincoln.

Is labor awake to the danger before them? Judging from the lack of initiative and interest that they are displaying, we must conclude that they are not. At no time in the history of our movement was there greater danger of decapitation than confronts the workers of today. Legislation in the halls of congress, state legislatures and municipal bodies are everywhere placing on the statute books laws which take from the struggling masses liberties and privileges that they enjoyed in the past. Courts, from the highest to the lowest, are placing interpretations on our laws, which make it impossible for the workers to defend their position by aggressive action. Why remain dormant while these servants of the people are pilfering your rights as a citizen of a free country. Isn't it time that you had something to say about what's doing? We think it is. Do not wait until you have been stripped of all your rights and then proclaim loudly your remonstrance. Your voice may not be heard then and the relief sought will not be forthcoming. You will then have to suffer for your present indifference. There is an old saying that "A stitch in time will save nine," and that can be aptly applied at this time. Get out of that rut that you have permitted yourself to get into and get busy, there is danger ahead: Anti-strike legislation, industrial court and compulsory arbitration legislation, incorporation of labor unions, injunctions, compensation legislation, sick and disability legislation, immigration and tariff legislation, and a hundred other things are going on that you should be interested in. They all affect labor and should merit their close observation and consideration.

What are you doing to line up the workers for the congressional primary and election this fall? Do you know that the main issue before the people will be for a modification of the Volstead Act, permitting the sale for beverage purposes, of light wines and beer, and that the people are generally expressing themselves in favor of such legislation? The opportunity of electing men to congress pledged to support a modification was never better. All that is needed is to put life into our work and success will follow. Organize, initiate and encourage the workers to join with you, and the weight of your influence will be felt and observed in the most remote and secluded parts of our political and economic institutions.

In our January letter we told you about the law governing the bonding of officers and the compulsory filing of the same with the general office at Cincinnati. We have been asked whether it is necessary to file the bond itself or just a statement that the officers have been bonded. It is necessary to file the bond itself, and that in the case of a renewal, the renewal certificate or receipt must be filed.

A notice has been sent out by the National Surety Company within the past month, through the American Federation of Labor, that they will not accept any further bonds from our local unions. We paid a visit to the main office of that company in New York and took up with them the question of the withdrawal of that order. We were confronted with many evidences of bad risks and with a statement showing that the liabilities were greater than the income received from premiums from our local unions. We were therefore unable to accomplish the result we sought for. We were desirous, however of removing the stigma placed on our organization by this action of the bonding company and we did succeed in reaching an understanding whereby they would agree to bond our local unions through our International Union, with the understanding that we were to urge all our local unions to place their bonds with the National Surety Company, all claims to be paid through the International Union. The premiums for the bonds were to be fixed in proportion to the liability assumed, which figure they agreed to give within ten days. When we have this proposal in writing with premium charges before us, we will submit the same to the General Executive Board for their consideration, and if approved and accepted by them, more detail information in reference to the same will be sent to our local unions.

In connection with this subject, we must call to the attention of our local unions that a number of them have failed to file their quarterly audit for the quarter ending December 31, 1921, with the general president; the thirty day period has expired; a fine of $5.00 is fixed by the constitution for failure to file the same. If your local union is advised that there has been debited against their account in the general office the sum of $5.00 and that no stamps or supplies will be sent until the same has been paid, do not feel that you have been unfairly dealt with. We are giving you plenty of time and warning and if you fail to heed it, you have no one to blame for the extraction of the $5.00 note than your own carelessness; if you do not care to contribute $5.00 to the funds of the International Union, get your financial statement into this office before the 31st day of March.

During the month I visited Toronto, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, New York, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre. While in New York I attended a testimonial dinner given in honor of Brother William Lehman, secretary of Local No. 1, by a number of his friends. Brother Tony Schwartz acted as the toastmaster and director general and at the conclusion of the dinner and customary talks, he in a very befitting manner presented Brother Lehman with a chest of silver as a mark of esteem, love and affection that he is held in by his fellow workers, members of Local No. 1. Dancing was enjoyed and all present spent a pleasant and enjoyable evening.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

Jan. 25—To Toronto	$ 4.42
Jan. 26—To Buffalo	4.60
Feb. 13—To Detroit	10.88
Feb. 16—To Toledo	1.10
Feb. 16—To Cleveland and sleeper	7.49
Feb. 17—To Buffalo	7.91
Feb. 19—To New York and sleeper	19.57
Feb. 22—To Scranton and sleeper	7.84
Feb. 22—To Wilkes-Barre60
Feb. 23—To Buffalo and sleeper	12.78
Postage	5.00
Telegrams	2.50
Traveling expenses	63.00

Total.....$147.69

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1131.

February 4, 1922.

Mr. Chas. Packer, Secretary, Local 18,
1432 Arapahoe Street, Denver, Col.

Dear Sir and Brother—I have your communication of the 30 ult., wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Is a suspended member liable for an assessment levied by the local union while he is under suspension for non-payment of dues? Can such an assessment be collected along with reinstatement fee? Is a suspended member liable for an assessment levied in the month in which he applies for reinstatement?"

Decision 297, in May, 1913, issue of the Mixer and Server will advise as follows:

"You can not place an assessment against a member while he is under suspension. If any of these assessments were levied before his suspension he is liable for their payment, and they can be collected along with his reinstatement fee."

An assessment levied by a local union prior to a member's suspension can be legally collected along with reinstatement fee, an assessment levied while a member was under suspension is not legally collectable along with reinstatement fee; an assessment levied for the month in which a suspended member applies for reinstatement is chargeable to member after he has been reinstated but not collectable until after he has been reinstated; an assessment levied and spread over a given number of months, while a member was in good standing, would be collectable along with reinstatement fee if a member became suspended during the life of that assessment.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President,

Decision No. 1132.

February 7, 1922.

Mr. Jacob Schorr, Local 279,
924 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, Penn.

Dear Sir and Brother—I have before me your appeal from the decision of Local 279 in denying you the right to defend yourself against the action of a brother member in attacking your character in the presence of others than members of the local union and in the place where you are employed; that you rose in the meeting on a point of personal privilege to make your defense and was ruled out of order by the chairman and on appeal he was sustained by the meeting.

Meetings of the local union are not for the purpose of airing the personal affairs or business of members, particularly that which occurs outside of the meeting or headquarters of the local; controversies that arise in connection with the affairs or business of the local union, or interference with the work of the officers of the local, irrespective as to location, are matters of interest to the organization and proper subjects for the consideration of the local.

The subject matter upon which you base your appeal, was personal in character and therefore not germane to the business of the local. Your appeal, therefore, is not sustained.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1133.

February 8, 1922.

Mr. Michael J. Murtha, Local 763,
1144 Joseph Avenue, Rochester, N. Y.

Dear Sir and Brother—I have before me your appeal from the finding of Local 763 in reference to your claim for sick benefit dating from the time decision 332 was rendered in August, 1913, holding that the by-laws of the local union were in conflict with that decision. In that conclusion we acquiesce.

The by-laws of Local 763 containing the provision referred to in your appeal were approved by this office under date of November 6, 1911; when decision 332 was rendered in August, 1913, Local 763 continued to operate under the same law and no consideration was apparently given to the qualifications set out in that decision; no protest was entered by you against that action and we can not at this late date consider further than your present eligibility to sick benefits. However, in view of the fact that the local union has discontinued the payment of sick benefits, this office is without authority to direct their re-establishment, we can not, therefore, sustain your appeal.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1134.

February 9, 1922.

Mr. Phillip L. Brooks, Local No. 2,
Surf Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Dear Sir and Brother—I have before me your appeal as to the right of Local No. 2 to levy an assessment to be paid over to the treasurer of the Apex Waiters' Social Club, Inc. We are advised that the Apex Waiters' Social Club,

Inc., is a part of Local No. 2, which cares for the social features of the local, the maintenance of its headquarters and meeting hall and the holding company of its real estate; that its membership is composed of none but members of Local No. 2, in good standing; that the name and incorporation thereto attached, is made necessary for the protection of its property and real estate; that the only income of the said club is derived from the revenue secured from the social privileges and assessments levied by the local union.

In view of the fact that this club is an integral part of the local union and subject to its general supervision, the levying of an assessment to care for its operation by the local union, is legal. Your appeal, therefore, is not sustained.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

Decision No. 1135.

February 18, 1922.

Mr. Chas. W. McLaughlin, Secretary, Local 298,
Box 572, Wenatchee, Wash.

Dear Sir and Brother—We do hereby sustain the protest filed with this office against the recent election held in Local 298 and declare the same null and void. Local 298 is directed to hold an election for the purpose of electing officers, within thirty days from date—February 18, 1922, and the officers serving for the term ending in the year 1921 shall hold office until their successors have been duly elected and installed.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

Decision No. 1136.

February 23, 1922.

Mr. W. R. Barrett, Secretary, Local 33,
Box 594, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Sir and Brother—I have before me the charges filed by Local 33 against Brother Frank (Sovey) Sylvia, a member of Local 61. I find the said Frank (Sovey) Sylvia guilty as charged and penalize him in the sum of $25.00 and suspension from membership.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

Decision No. 1137.

February 24, 1922.

Miss Olive King, Secretary, Local 249,
Pontiac Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Dear Miss and Sister—I have before me the request of Local 249 for a decision as to the right of Sister Olive King to be seated as a delegate to the local joint executive board of St. Louis, said sister having been denied a seat on the grounds that she was the business agent or Local 249 and under article 3 of the by-laws was not eligible to serve as a delegate.

The by-laws of Local 249 do not provide for the election of a business agent and the records of the local show that Sister Olive King was elected to the office of secretary-treasurer.

We are advised that at a regular meeting of the local joint executive board held March 3, 1921, the following resolution was passed: "That the office of secretary-treasurer and business representative of Local 249 be qualified as business agent in the future relative to representation in the local joint executive board and that Local 249 be notified of this action.

There is no law which gives a right to the local joint executive board to qualify or designate the title of an officer of a local union, that is a matter over which a local union has a right to exercise local autonomy.

If Sister King was elected to the office of secretary-treasurer of Local 249, the fact that she also performs the duties which are customarily assigned to a business representative does not alter her official title as secretary-treasurer and as the by-laws of the local joint executive board simply refer to a business agent as not being qualified to be seated as delegates, we can not conceive the thought that any officer of a local union who functions as a business representative should come under the compulsory designation of business agent.

We therefore hold that Sister Olive King being designated by the laws of Local 249 as the secretary-treasurer of that local union, is entitled to represent that local union as a delegate to the local joint executive board.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

THE DREAM RIVER.

The Lickin' is a river

That keeps flowin' thru my dreams,

And the murmur of its ripples

Keeps a-callin' me, it seems,

To the dam where I went fishin'

And the millpond where I swum,

And keeps a-callin' plainly,

Tho it knows I can not come.

For he Lickin' that is flowin'

Thru my mind this autumn day,

Is the river of my boyhood,

And it's flowed on far away

Where it emptied into manhood

When the flush of youth was on,

But I can't go back to see it

For too many years have gone.

I have looked the country over

For another stream like that,

But it seems that God don't make 'em

Any place 'cept where that's at,

And I would go back to find it,

But the road is closed to me,

And the only trail that leads there

Is a happy memory.

—T. B. C.

Natives of the Blue Grass State will be glad to get "The Dream River" for their scrap books. The author was born at Richmond, Ky., his pen name is T. B. Crabb; he runs a column in the Albuquerque (N. M.) Morning Journal. His honest-to-goodness name is Curtis E. Lyter.—Ed. M. & S.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR FEBRUARY, 1922

Local No.		Local No.		Local No.
1 W, New York, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	190 B, Bethlehem, Pa.	Nov., 1921	382 RRM, Louisville, Ky.	Dec., 1921
2 W, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Jan., "	195 M, Kingman, Ariz.	Jan., 1922	384 SCF, Oakland, Cal.	Nov., "
3 B, New York, N. Y.	Jan., "	196 W, Buffalo, N. Y.	Jan., "	387 M, Ft. Dodge, Ia.	Dec., "
4 B, Hoboken, N. J.	Jan., "	197 B, Hamilton, Ont., Can.	Jan., "	389 B, Carnegie, Pa.	Jan., 1922
5 W, New York, N. Y.	Jan., "	199 B, Jamestown, N. Y.	Feb., "	391 M, LeGrande, Ore.	Jan., "
7 W, Chicago, Ill.	Jan., "	200 B, Hartford, Conn.	Jan., "	392 MC, Mobile, Ala.	Feb., "
8 B, Denver, Colo.	Feb., "	201 M, Haverhill, Mass.	Sept., 1921	394 M, South Chicago, Ill.	Aug., 1921
10 W, Hoboken, N. J.	Jan., "	203 C, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan., 1922	395 M, White Plains, N. Y.	Jan., 1922
11 WC, New York City	Feb., "	207 C, Portland, Ore.	Jan., "	397 M, Parsons, Kan.	Jan., "
12 M, San Antonio, Tex.	Jan., "	208 RRM, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan., "	398 M, Manchester, N. H.	Jan., "
14 W, Denver, Colo.	Jan., "	210 M, Abilene, Tex.	Jan., "	399 M, Ranger, Tex.	Jan., "
17 W, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., 1921	213 M, Herrin, Ill.	Feb., "	400 M, Spokane, Wash.	Jan., "
18 C, Denver, Colo.	Jan., 1922	215 M, Bristow, Okla.	Feb., "	401 M, Randsburg, Cal.	Oct., 1921
19 W, Kansas, City, Mo.	Jan., "	216 M, Toledo, O.	Jan., "	402 M, San Diego, Cal.	Jan., 1922
20 W, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan., "	217 B, New Haven, Conn.	Feb., "	403 M, Breckenridge, Tex.	Jan., "
22 M, Butte, Mont.	Dec., 1921	219 W, New York, N. Y.	Jan., "	404 M, Santa Rosa, Cal.	Aug., 1921
23 C, Omaha, Neb.	Jan., 1922	220 M, Eureka, Cal.	Jan., "	405 M, Bonham, Tex.	Feb., 1922
25 M, Hot Springs, Ark.	Jan., "	222 B, Dayton, O.	Feb., "	406 M, Wortham, Tex.	Dec., 1921
28 M, Vancouver, B. C.	Jan., "	223 M, Des Moines, Ia.	Jan., "	407 M, Manchester, N. H.	Dec., "
29 B, New York, N. Y.	Jan., "	224 B, Erie, Pa.	Feb., "	413 M, Tucson, Ariz.	Jan., 1922
30 W, San Francisco, Cal.	Jan., "	226 M, Lincoln, Neb.	Dec., 1921	419 M, Ottawa, Ont., Can.	Oct., 1921
31 M, Oakland, Cal.	Dec., 1921	228 B, Albany, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	420 B, Kansas City, Mo.	Jan., 1922
32 M, St. Joseph, Mo.	Feb., 1922	230 M, South Bend, Tex.	Feb., "	424 M, Klamath Falls, Ore.	Jan., "
33 C, Seattle, Wash.	Jan., "	234 C, Detroit, Mich.	Jan., "	425 M, Sherman, Tex.	Feb., "
34 M, Boston, Mass.	Jan., "	236 M, Goose Creek, Tex.	Oct., 1921	426 M, Wallace, Idaho	Jan., "
39 M, Pittsburg, Kan.	Jan., "	237 M, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Jan., 1922	427 C, Missoula, Mont.	Jan., "
41 B, San Francisco, Cal.	Dec., 1921	239 W, Seattle, Wash.	Jan., "	429 B, Portsmouth, O.	Jan., "
43 M, Pueblo, Colo.	Jan., 1922	240 WS, Seattle, Wash.	Jan., "	434 WS, Toronto, Ont., Canada	Dec., 1921
44 C, San Francisco, Cal.	Jan., "	242 M, Charleston, W. Va.	Jan., "	436 M, Chico, Cal.	Nov., "
45 M, Reno, Nev.	Jan., "	246 M, Oklahoma City, Okla.	Jan., "	437 M, Indianapolis, Ind.	Jan., 1922
48 WS, San Francisco, Cal.	Jan., "	249 WS, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan., "	438 B, Poughkeessie, N. Y.	Feb., "
50 M, Fairmont, W. Va.	Jan., "	253 B, Alliance, O.	Mar., "	439 M, Vancouver, Wash.	Oct., 1921
51 B, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan., "	254 W, Waterbury, Conn.	Jan., "	440 M, Montreal, Que., Can.	Dec., "
58 W, New Orleans, La.	Jan., "	256 B, Bridgeport, Conn.	Sept., 1921	442 M, Raton, N. M.	Jan., 1922
59 M, Milwaukee, Wis.	Jan., "	257 M, Livingston, Mont.	Oct., "	449 B, Altoona, Pa.	Jan., "
61 M, Tacoma, Wash.	Jan., "	258 RRM, New York, N. Y.	Dec., "	451 M, Everett, Wash.	Dec., 1921
62 M, Fresno, Cal.	Jan., "	259 B, Edwardsville, Ill.	Dec., "	457 MS, Butte, Mont.	Jan., 1922
64 B, Milwaukee, Wis.	Feb., "	261 WC, Louisville, Ky.	Dec., "	458 C, Minneapolis, Minn.	Jan., "
66 C, Buffalo, N. Y.	Jan., "	262 B, Newcastle, Pa.	Jan., 1922	459 M, Victoria, B. C., Can.	Jan., "
68 B, Cincinnati, O.	Jan., "	264 M, Lake Charles, La.	Dec., 1921	466 B, Wilmington, Del.	Feb., "
69 M, Galveston, Tex.	Jan., "	266 C, Kansas City, Mo.	Jan., 1922	468 C, Los Angeles, Cal.	Jan., "
70 B, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Jan., "	268 SCP, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921	470 W, Schenectady, N. Y.	Jan., "
72 W, Cincinnati, O.	Jan., "	269 B, South Norwalk, Conn.	Feb., 1922	471 M, Albany, N. Y.	Jan., "
74 M, Aurora, Ill.	Jan., "	271 M, Petaluma, Cal.	Nov., 1921	472 M, El Reno, Okla.	Feb., "
76 B, Syracuse, N. Y.	Jan., "	273 M, Springfield, Mass.	Jan., 1922	474 Edmonton, Alta., Canada	Jan., "
77 B, Boston, Mass.	Feb., "	279 W, Philadelphia, Pa.	Jan., "	476 M, Marshfield, Ore.	Jan., "
78 B, Uniontown, Pa.	Feb., "	284 B, Los Angeles, Cal.	Jan., "	479 B, LaCrosse, Wis.	Feb., "
79 B, Louisville, Ky.	Jan., "	285 B, Providence, R. I.	Jan., "	480 DSM, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Nov., 1921
81 B, Holyoke, Mass.	Jan., "	286 B, Peoria, Ill.	Jan., "	482 B, Butler, Pa.	Dec., "
85 B, Lowell, Mass.	Jan., "	290 M, Salem, Mass.	Jan., "	484 WS, Chicago, Ill.	Jan., 1922
80 B, Chicago, Ill.	Jan., "	294 M, Yakima, Wash.	Jan., "	485 RRP, Memphis, Tenn.	Feb., "
92 B, Marlboro, Mass.	Jan., "	295 M, Wheeling, W. Va.	Dec., 1921	487 SDD, Seattle, Wash.	Jan., "
93 B, Haverhill, Mass.	Jan., "	298 M, Wenatchee, Wash.	Jan., 1922	488 B, Jersey City, N. J.	Jan., "
100 B, New Bedford, Mass.	Feb., "	299 M, Burkburnett, Tex.	Jan., "	489 M, Galesburg, Ill.	Dec., 1921
102 B, Granite City, Ill.	Feb., "	300 W, Toronto, Ont., Can.	Dec., 1921	490 M, Tucumcari, N. M.	Jan., 1922
106 M, Cleveland, O.	Jan., "	303 M, Elctra, Tex.	Jan., 1922	491 B, Atlantic City, N. J.	Jan., "
107 WS, Cleveland, O.	Jan., "	304 M, Hartford, Conn.	Jan., "	492 M, Quebec, Que., Can.	Dec., 1921
109 M, Newark, N. J.	Jan., "	306 WS, Portland, Ore.	Jan., "	496 SDD, Portland, Ore.	Jan., 1922
110 M, San Francisco, Cal.	Jan., "	306 M, Williston, N. D.	Dec., 1921	500 M, Beardstown, Ill.	Oct., 1921
111 M, Oatman, Ariz.	Jan., "	307 M, Providence, R. I.	Jan., 1922	503 WS, Kansas City, Mo.	Jan., 1922
112 WS, Boston, Mass.	Dec., 1921	308 M, Portland, Me.	Jan., "	508 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Jan., "
115 B, Philadelphia, Pa.	Jan., 1922	310 M, Portland, Ore.	Jan., "	509 M, Chickasha, Okla.	Jan., "
117 B, Belleville, Ill.	Jan., "	311 M, Astoria, Ore.	Jan., "	510 M, Pocatello, Idaho	Dec., 1921
118 M, Akron, O.	Feb., "	312 B, Chattanooga, Tenn.	Mar., "	511 M, Orange, Tex.	Jan., 1922
119 M, Silverton, Colo.	Jan., "	315 W, Montreal, Que., Can.	Feb., "	512 CM, Bonham, Tex.	Dec., 1921
120 B, Utica, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	316 M, Centralia, Wash.	Jan., "	513 M, Baird, Tex.	Dec., "
124 B, Trenton, N. J.	Feb., 1922	318 B, Putman, Conn.	Feb., "	516 B, Chillicothe, O.	Jan., 1922
126 B, Oneonta, N. Y.	Feb., "	319 M, Sioux City, Ia.	Dec., 1921	521 M, Mandan, N. D.	Jan., "
128 M, Superior, Wis.	Jan., "	322 B, Racine, Wis.	Jan., 1922	523 B, Kenosha, Wis.	Jan., "
131 B, Newark, N. J.	Jan., "	325 M, Palestine, Tex.	Dec., 1921	524 M, Miles City, Mont.	Jan., "
134 B, Scranton, Pa.	Jan., "	325 M, Duncan, Okla.	Jan., 1922	528 MF, Seattle, Wash.	Jan., "
135 M, Tulsa, Okla.	Jan., "	326 C, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Jan., "	529 M, Bellingham, Wash.	Jan., "
141 M, Visalia, Cal.	Dec., 1921	327 W, Peoria, Ill.	Nov., 1921	531 M, Jefferson City, Mo.	Feb., "
142 M, Eldorado, Ark.	Jan., 1922	328 DCE, Oakland, Cal.	Sept., "	532 B, Baltimore, Md.	Jan., "
143 M, Omaha, Neb.	Jan., "	329 M, Lynn, Mass.	Jan., 1922	536 M, Minneapolis, Minn.	Jan., "
149 B, Newport, Ky.	Jan., "	330 M, Twin Falls, Idaho.	Dec., 1921	538 RRM, Seattle, Wash.	Dec., 1921
150 W, Syracuse, N. Y.	Dec., 1921	331 M, Greenville, Tex.	Dec., "	539 CC, Charleston, S. C.	Jan., 1922
152 B, Minneapolis, Minn.	Jan., 1922	332 M, East St. Louis, Ill.	Jan., "	542 M, Modesta, Cal.	Dec., 1921
154 M, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Jan., "	335 WE, Toledo, O.	Nov., 1921	543 M, Hibbing, Minn.	Nov., "
156 B, Paducah, Ky.	Jan., "	336 M, Huntington, W. Va.	Oct., "	544 M, Douglas, Wyo.	Oct., "
158 W, Wichita Falls, Tex.	Jan., "	337 M, Cheyenne, Wyo.	Jan., 1922	548 M, St. Paul, Minn.	Feb., 1922
159 B, Meridan, Conn.	Jan., "	338 M, Knoxville, Tenn.	Jan., "	550 M, Bakersfield, Cal.	Dec., 1921
161 M, Brockton, Mass.	Jan., "	347 WS, Buffalo, N. Y.	Jan., "	552 CC, Richmond, Va.	Jan., 1922
163 B, McKeesport, Pa.	Oct., 1921	349 M, Auburn, Wash.	Jan., "	556 C, St. Paul, Minn.	Dec., 1921
167 C, Cleveland, O.	Jan., 1922	353 WC, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb., "	557 M, Greybull, Wyo.	Feb., 1922
168 M, Amarillo, Tex.	Jan., "	356 B, New London, Conn.	Feb., "	560 M, Vallejo, Cal.	Dec., 1921
171 B, Rochester, N. Y.	Jan., "	357 WS, Rochester, N. Y.	Jan., "	561 M, Sacramento, Cal.	Jan., 1922
172 M, Henryetta, Okla.	Dec., 1921	361 B, Allentown, Pa.	Jan., "	567 M, Olympia, Wash.	Jan., "
175 B, Buffalo, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	364 M, Pendleton, Ore.	Jan., "	568 RRM, Portland, Ore.	Nov., 1921
177 C, Cincinnati, O.	Jan., "	365 M, Sapulpa, Okla.	Dec., 1921	569 B, Harrisburg, Pa.	Dec., "
180 M, San Jose, Cal.	Jan., "	376 B, South Chicago, Ill.	Jan., 1922	571 M, Idaho Falls, Idaho.	Jan., 1922
181 B, Easton, Pa.	Jan., "	378 B, Bakersfield, Cal.	Feb., "	572 M, Stockton, Cal.	Jan., "
185 W, Bicknell, Ind.	Dec., 1921	380 M, Bisbee, Ariz.	Dec., 1921	575 W, Jersey City, N. J.	Jan., "
188 B, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Feb., 1922	381 C, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Jan., 1922	577 M, Mexia, Tex.	Jan., "
189 W, Portland, Ore.	Jan., "

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Local No.		Local No.		Date Local
579 M, Dayton, O.	Feb., 1922	861 M, Billings, Mont.	Jan., 1922	7 7 Supplies	13 50
581 M, Ogden, Utah	Dec., 1921	862 M, Rawlins, Wyo.	Dec., 1921	7 78 Feb.	5 60
582 SCP, Los Angeles, Cal.	Jan., 1922	865 C, Chicago, Ill.	Jan., 1922	7 79 Jan.	22 60
583 RRM, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921	876 M, Laramie, Wyo.	Jan., "	7 106 Jan., supplies	144 60
584 M, Topeka, Kan.	Jan., 1922			7 210 Jan.	8 00
586 M, Coalinga, Cal.	Jan., "			7 253 Feb.	3 00
588 M, Shreveport, La.	Jan., "			7 282 Jan., stamps	6 80
589 M, Bloomington, Ill.	Feb., "			7 457 Jan.	71 80
590 B, Fond du Lac, Wis.	Jan., "			7 538 Dec., stamps	6 00
592 M, Winnipeg, Man., Canada	Jan., "			7 616 Jan.	16 40
595 M, La Junta, Colo.	Jan., "			7 659 Jan.	55 80
597 M, Calgary, Alta., Can.	Jan., "			7 857 Jan., stamps, supplies	4 50
600 C, Duluth, Minn.	Dec., 1921			7 117 Jan.	5 20
604 MC, Orange, Tex.	Feb., 1922			7 213 Stamps, buttons, sup-
605 MC, Indianapolis, Ind.	Jan., "			plies	19 00
611 MC, Williamsport, Pa.	Jan., "			7 312 Jan., Feb., Mar.	7 20
612 M, Helena, Mont.	Jan., "			7 11 Feb., supplies	4 80
616 HM, Sacramento, Cal.	Jan., "			8 41 Dec., cash	25 80
618 M, Anacortes, Wash.	Jan., "			8 152 Jan.	32 80
626 M, Walla Walla, Wash.	Dec., 1921			8 181 Jan.	8 20
627 B, Cairo, Ill.	Jan., 1922			8 217 Feb.	14 00
630 WS, St. Paul, Minn.	Dec., 1921			8 395 Jan.	4 20
634 ML, Minneapolis, Minn.	Nov., "			8 479 Jan.	5 00
637 B, Manitowac, Wis.	Jan., 1922			8 528 Jan.	3 00
638 M, Haynesville, La.	Jan., "			8 Ben T. Searcy, M. A. L.	2 00
639 WS, Los Angeles, Cal.	Dec., 1921			8 Lee Beckham, M. A. L.	2 00
650 M, Dallas, Tex.	Jan., 1922			8 Rein. Joe Lafond, Local
669 MC, Shreveport, La.	Oct., 1921			473	6 25
670 M, West Frankfort, Ill.	Jan., 1922			8 76 Jan., supplies	8 40
673 M, San Bernardino, Cal.	Jan., "			8 361 Jan.	27 40
676 SDD, Vancouver, B. C., Can.	Jan., "			8 237 Jan., supplies	111 00
680 M, Miami, Ariz.	Jan., "			8 592 Jan.	16 60
681 M, Long Beach, Cal.	Jan., "			8 25 Jan.	11 80
682 B, Elizabeth, N. J.	Nov., 1921			8 434 Nov., Dec., supplies,
685 RRM, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Nov., "			buttons	47 30
688 B, Eau Claire, Wis.	Jan., 1922			8 511 Jan., stamps, supplies,
690 B, Owensboro, Ky.	Nov., 1921			cash	56 90
692 M, Virden, Ill.	Jan., 1922			8 177 Jan., supplies	51 45
703 M, Anaheim, Cal.	Jan., "			9 5 Supplies	5 00
705 W, Detroit, Mich.	Jan., "			9 107 Buttons	2 00
709 M, Mt. Clemens, Mich.	Jan., "			9 115 Jan., stamps	116 80
712 MC, Kansas City, Mo.	Sept., 1921			9 142 Jan., buttons	37 80
714 B, Joliet, Ill.	Feb., 1922			9 199 Feb.	5 80
717 W, Baltimore, Md.	Jan., "			9 259 Dec., supplies	4 40
719 C, New York City	Jan., "			9 449 Jan.	18 20
720 M, Hammond, Ind.	Dec., 1921			9 605 Jan., stamps	8 60
721 B, Salt Lake City, Utah	Jan., 1922			9 842 Jan.	72 40
726 WC, Washington, D. C.	Nov., 1921			9 310 Supplies	1 00
728 WS, Detroit, Mich.	Jan., 1922			9 865 Supplies	5 00
730 M, Bremerton, Wash.	Jan., "			9 308 Dec.	47 00
737 B, York, Pa.	Jan., "			9 777 Jan.	10 00
739 B, Brownsville, Pa.	Feb., "			10 380 Dec.	2 20
742 B, Southbridge, Mass.	Jan., "			10 74 Dec., Jan.	18 80
746 W, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Jan., "			10 424 Jan.	14 00
753 M, Desdemona, Tex.	Jan., "			10 437 Jan., supplies	25 70
754 M, San Pedro, Cal.	Jan., "			10 561 Jan.	111 00
762 B, Harrison and Kearney, N. J.	Jan., "			10 721 Jan.	9 20
763 W, Rochester, N. Y.	Dec., 1921			10 792 Jan.	12 80
771 M, Taft, Cal.	Jan., 1922			10 Rein. Myrtle Hart, Lo-
777 M, Beaumont, Tex.	Jan., "			cal 596	3 25
781 W, Washington, D. C.	Jan., "			10 484 Supplies	5 00
782 M, Boise, Idaho	Oct., 1921			10 101 Supplies, stamps	50 00
788 M, Springfield, Ill.	Sept., "			10 737 Jan.	12 20
791 M, Aberdeen, Wash.	Jan., 1922			11 167 Jan.	74 80
792 M, Denver, Colo.	Jan., "			11 168 Jan.	9 00
794 M, Linton, Ind.	Jan., "			11 197 Jan.	3 40
797 B, Cristobal, Canal Zone	Jan., "			11 279 Jan.	88 60
801 M, Joliet, Ill.	Dec., 1921			11 389 Rein. of local	1 00
802 MC, Richmond, Va.	Oct., "			11 413 Jan.	13 80
806 M, Houston, Tex.	Dec., "			11 Rein. John Platis, Local
808 W, Lewiston, Mont.	Jan., 1922			413	3 25
810 WS, Atlantic City, N. J.	Oct., 1921			11 586 Jan., supplies	6 20
811 M, Altoona, Pa.	Dec., "			11 618 Jan.	8 40
815 M, Salt Lake City, Utah	Jan., 1922			13 1 Jan.	439 00
826 MC, Atlantic City, N. J.	Jan., "			13 30 Jan.	394 60
828 SCP, Salt Lake City, Utah	Oct., 1921			13 32 Jan.	8 80
831 MC, Asbury Park, N. J.	Feb., 1922			13 43 Jan.	9 30
836 WC, Baltimore, Md.	Jan., "			13 45 Jan.	39 00
842 M, Casper, Wyo.	Feb., "			13 159 Jan., supplies	5 45
844 B, Staunton, Ill.	Dec., 1921			13 222 Buttons	2 00
845 B, New Kensington, Pa.	Jan., 1922			13 240 Jan., supplies	135 40
846 M, Sheridan, Wyo.	Dec., 1921			13 240 Supplies	18 75
848 M, El Paso, Tex.	Jan., 1922			13 298 Jan.	25 80
849 M, Lusk, Wyo.	Dec., 1921			13 300 Dec.	66 00
852 B, Tiffin, Ohio	Mar., 1922			13 307 Jan.	67 00
853 WWC, Boston, Mass.	Dec., 1921			13 316 Jan., supplies, refund	33 80
854 B, Jeanette, Pa.	Dec., "			13 364 Jan., acct. R. E. Baker	27 80
857 B, Laramie, Wyo.	Jan., 1922			13 426 Jan.	14 20
				13 509 Jan.	6 60
				13 597 Jan.	22 00
				13 638 Jan., supplies	12 90
				13 685 Dec., Jan.	4 80
				13 673 Jan.	29 80
				13 748 Jan.	59 80
				13 876 Jan.	10 60

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date	Local
13	791 Jan., supplies	44	20
13	296 Protested check	52	80
13	Rein. James H. Peterson, Local 664	7	25
13	203 Jan., bal. due Dec. report	12	85
13	303 Dec., Jan., supplies, buttons	14	00
13	548 Feb.	24	40
14	472 Buttons, stamps	4	60
14	730 Jan., supplies	40	00
14	299 Cash	3	65
14	J. A. Russ, M. A. L.	5	00
14	39 Jan.	24	40
14	50 Feb.	11	60
14	22 Supplies	8	50
15	61 Jan.	76	80
15	180 Supplies	7	50
15	224 Feb.	18	20
15	771 Jan., buttons, supplies, stamps	52	10
15	801 Dec.	16	20
15	852 Jan., Feb., Mar., supplies	11	20
15	246 Jan.	40	80
15	332 Buttons	12	00
15	68 Bound M. & S., bal. due supplies	6	00
15	717 Jan.	19	40
16	12 Buttons, supplies	10	00
16	100 Feb.	9	60
16	142 Error Jan. report	20
16	220 Jan.	21	60
16	637 Jan., stamps	6	50
16	842 Supplies	2	50
16	347 Jan.	6	80
16	294 Jan.	19	20
16	838 Jan.	2	40
16	427 Jan., supplies	31	60
16	797 Dec.	12	20
16	134 Jan.	28	20
16	719 Buttons	5	50
16	511 Supplies, buttons	7	00
17	107 Buttons	5	00
17	223 Dec.	19	80
17	242 Oct., Nov., Dec., supplies	72	60
17	304 Nov., Dec., Jan., supplies	12	30
17	892 Feb.	13	20
17	400 Jan.	97	80
17	Rein. Antonio Riglini, Local 52	7	25
17	208 Dec., Jan.	32	60
17	781 Jan.	94	00
17	604 Feb.	3	40
17	Refund insurance rate.	1	16
17	3 Jan., supplies	37	50
17	33 Supplies	2	50
17	219 Jan., stamps	43	40
18	66 Jan.	26	00
18	249 Jan.	60	20
18	402 Jan.	88	40
18	468 Jan.	167	80
18	Rein. Wm. J. Leonhardt, Local 708	3	25
18	571 Jan.	8	20
18	659 Error Dec. and Jan. reports	40
18	353 Dec., Jan., supplies, buttons	55	15
18	305 Jan., stamps, supplies	100	20
18	427 Supplies	1	50
20	44 Jan., supplies	286	20
20	107 Jan., bound M. & S.	73	80
20	119 Jan., bound M. & S.	3	75
20	Rein. Ralph Strond, Local 505	7	25
20	223 Supplies, buttons	6	50
20	326 Jan.	89	20
20	329 Jan.	29	40
20	381 Jan.	9	40
20	459 Jan.	19	60
20	529 Jan.	33	20
20	590 Dec., Jan., supplies	6	60
20	680 Jan., buttons	16	80
20	836 Jan.	9	00
20	848 Bal. due Jan. report	10
20	295 Dec.	10	80
20	466 Jan., supplies	9	90
20	748 Bal. due Jan. report	2	00
20	792 Buttons	1	00
20	861 Jan.	34	20
21	48 Jan.	170	60
21	70 Jan.	30	80
21	135 Jan.	39	80

Date	Local
21	437 Supplies, buttons, bound M. & S.	14	00
21	457 Supplies	5	00
21	491 Jan., bal. due Aug. and Oct. reports, bal. due supplies, bound M. & S.	25	40
21	537 Feb., buttons, supplies	9	60
21	616 Bound M. & S.	2	00
21	676 Jan.	4	60
21	845 Jan., supplies	4	60
21	20 Jan., supplies, bound M. & S.	57	70
21	239 Jan.	54	20
21	398 Jan.	5	20
21	470 Dec., Jan., supplies	10	90
21	19 Dues Frank Gritti	1	25
23	61 Supplies, bound M. & S., bal. due stamps	16	10
23	161 Jan.	49	80
23	172 Dec., supplies	15	60
23	207 Jan., cash	111	60
23	223 Bound M. & S.	4	00
23	Rein. Fred Herman, Local 617	3	75
23	284 Jan.	9	60
23	306 Jan.	58	00
23	318 Feb.	2	20
23	471 Jan.	32	35
23	406 Jan.	41	60
23	567 Jan., buttons	21	30
23	588 Jan., supplies	18	10
23	719 Jan., buttons	29	40
23	728 Jan., buttons	52	70
23	815 Jan.	30	90
23	J. W. Allison, M. A. L.	2	00
23	523 Jan., supplies	11	80
23	797 Jan., buttons	12	60
23	Mrs. Helen Clark, M. A. L.	4	00
23	Joe Smith, M. A. L.	1	00
23	72 Jan., stamps, supplies	69	90
23	149 Jan., supplies	29	25
24	23 Jan.	30	00
24	142 Buttons, supplies	3	00
24	195 Jan., rein. of local	2	40
24	213 Feb.	15	00
24	681 Jan., supplies	54	80
24	885 Jan., supplies	85	00
24	266 Supplies	7	50
24	307 Bound M. & S.	4	00
24	228 Jan.	3	00
25	29 Jan.	6	80
25	31 Supplies	7	50
25	34 Jan.	278	80
25	279 Supplies	39	60
25	579 Buttons, supplies	3	00
25	Bud Larsen, M. A. L.	2	00
25	577 Dec., Jan., supplies	139	40
25	539 Jan.	8	40
25	556 Dec., buttons	45	20
27	7 Jan.	278	60
27	10 Jan.	14	80
27	19 Jan., supplies	46	90
27	51 Jan.	82	40
27	59 Jan.	37	40
27	64 Feb., supplies	4	90
27	124 Oct., Nov., Dec., Jan., Feb., supplies, rein. of local	12	50
27	143 Jan., supplies	29	90
27	223 Jan.	17	40
27	230 Feb.	3	20
27	273 Jan.	18	60
27	399 Supplies	3	50
27	420 Jan.	4	00
27	487 Jan., supplies, buttons	43	50
27	508 Jan.	12	00
27	536 Jan.	11	40
27	572 Jan., supplies, buttons	51	70
27	575 Jan.	5	20
27	659 Supplies, bound M. & S.	5	00
27	680 Bal. due supplies	7	40
27	681 Buttons	3	00
27	705 Jan.	54	00
27	753 Jan.	3	20
27	808 Supplies	5	00
27	Charles Grassman, M. A. L.	3	00
27	King H. Webb, M. A. L.	6	00
27	F. J. Sullivan, M. A. L.	5	00
27	Refund American Railway Express Co.	14	77
27	62 Jan.	151	20
27	8 Jan., Feb.	3	20

Date	Local
27	595 Jan.	7	60
27	Jos. Eckman, M. A. L.	1	00
27	376 Jan.	9	00
28	17 Supplies, bound M. & S.	12	00
28	484 Jan.	95	60
28	589 Feb.	29	60
28	739 Jan., Feb.	10	00
28	89 Jan., supplies, bound M. & S.	42	00
28	353 Feb., rein. of local	25	20
28	Rein. Katherine Lee, Local 130	7	25
28	92 Jan.	4	20
28	269 Jan., Feb.	1	60
28	236 Stamps, bal. due supplies	9	25
28	28 Jan.	71	60
28	2 Jan.	101	40
28	34 Bound M. & S.	6	00
28	68 Jan.	37	00
28	69 Jan.	29	20
28	110 Jan., supplies	227	60
28	118 Feb.	15	60
28	131 Jan., supplies	25	70
28	188 Feb., bound M. & S.	104	00
28	253 Mar.	3	00
28	451 Dec.	41	60
28	466 Feb.	9	60
28	627 Jan.	3	20
28	742 Jan.	1	80
28	831 Jan., Feb.	4	40
28	Interest	105	55
Total		$10,793 48

EXPENDITURES FOR FEBRUARY, 1922

Date
1	Rent	$206	00
1	Printing	279	57
4	Clerks	72	00
6	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20	00
6	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40	00
6	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40	00
6	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20	00
6	John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20	00
6	B. Gray, L. S. O., Local 315	20	00
6	Hazel Kopacz, L. J. E. B., Detroit, Mich.	100	00
6	Seals	18	51
7	Protested check, Local 206	52	80
8	Tax	451	79
8	Union Label Tax	100	00
11	Clerks	72	00
13	G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20	00
13	Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40	00
13	Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40	00
13	Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20	00
13	John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20	00
13	C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20	00
13	Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20	00
15	A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	166	62
15	P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	157	52
15	R. E. Crockey, Intl. Org.	150	00
15	Thos. Dempsey, Intl. Org.	150	00
15	Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org., defense	150	00
15	W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150	00
15	Mrs. D. A. Hurley, Intl. Org., defense	156	20
15	Harley Johnson, Intl. Org., defense	163	41
15	W. F. Kavanagh, Intl. Org., defense	154	70
15	Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org., defense	150	00
15	A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	150	00
15	E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150	00
15	Wm. Mackenzie, Intl. Org.	150	00
15	James Van Riper, Dea'sh Claim No. 11349, Local 763	50	00

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date		Date		Date
13 Leon P. Bridson, Death Claim No. 11354, Local 638	50 00	25 Clerks	72 00	Office supplies	7 95
15 Wm. P. Tate, Death Claim No. 11359, Local 135	50 00	25 Bud Larson, Local 385, defense	2 00	Towel supplies	1 15
15 George Rockey, Death Claim No. 11360, Local 175	50 00	27 A. C. Beck, Intl. Org.	2 65	American Ry. Express Co.	14 75
15 Jas. L. Lawson, Death Claim No. 11365, Local 792	50 00	27 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00	Stamps	181 20
15 John Cunningham, Death Claim No. 11366, Local 20	50 00	27 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00	Telegrams	2 03
15 Thos. A. Tarrant, Death Claim No. 11369, Local 196	50 00	27 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00	Total	$10,962 54
15 Geo. A. Dillard, Death Claim No. 11371, Local 17	50 00	27 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00	Cash on hand Feb. 1, 1922	$38,929 29
15 Findley E. Martin, Death Claim No. 11373, Local 339	50 00	27 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	Liberty Loan Bonds	95,480 07
15 Herman Gialich, Death Claim No. 11374, Local 31	50 00	27 C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20 00	Canadian Bonds	4,975 00
15 Richard Fisher, Death Claim No. 11375, Local 491	50 00	27 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	Receipts for February, 1922	10,793 48
15 Benj. Lauth, Death Claim No. 11376, Local 188	50 00	27 E. V. Mounts, L. S. O., Local 266	20 00	Total	$150,157 84
15 William Wells, Death Claim No. 11377, Local 485	50 00	28 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	168 99	Expenditures for February, 1922	10,962 54
15 Arthur Guilbert, Death Claim No. 11378, Local 254	50 00	28 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org., defense	167 08	On hand Mar. 1, 1922	$139,195 80
15 Eugene R. Whitted, Death Claim No. 11379, Local 538	50 00	28 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00	In Death Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$136,894 33
15 Wm. B. Schamberger, Death Claim No. 11380, Local 438	50 00	28 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org., defense	164 15	Appropriated to Death Fund, February, 1922	2,167 68
17 P. D. Campbell, Intl. Org.	7 34	28 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	158 40	Total	$139,022 01
18 J. H. Rolston, Washington, D. C., Local 295, Corrigan-Traux case, defense	12 53	28 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	161 75	Drawn from Death Fund, February, 1922	1,450 00
20 W. F. Kavanagh, Intl. Org.	34 20	28 Jacob F. Huester, Death Claim No. 11312, Local 134	50 00	In Death Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$137,572 01
20 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00	28 Clarence Williams, Death Claim No. 11381, Local 836	50 00	In Defense Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$907 49
20 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00	28 Frank L. Johnson, Death Claim No. 11383, Local 7	50 00	Appropriated to Defense Fund, February, 1922	1,395 12
20 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00	28 Thos. Fleming, Death Claim No. 11385, Local 285	50 00	Total	$2,302 61
20 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00	28 Thos. J. Finnerty, Death Claim No. 11386, Local 285	50 00	Drawn from Defense Fund, February, 1922	2,293 49
20 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	28 Charles H. Newman, Death Claim No. 11387, Local 7	50 00	In Defense Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$9 12
20 C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20 00	28 Harry Spielfogel, Death Claim No. 11388, Local 2	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Feb. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
20 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	28 Burnet C. Brunson, Death Claim No. 11389, Local 31	50 00	Appropriated to Con. Assmt. Fund, February, 1922
20 E. V. Mounts, L. S. O., Local 266	20 00	28 Herman Schmidt, Death Claim No. 11390, Local 31	50 00	Total	$1,204 10
20 B. Gray, L. S. O., Local 315	20 00	28 Frederick Guy, Death Claim No. 11393, Local 76	50 00	Drawn from Con. Assmt. Fund, February, 1922
20 Wm. Mackenzie, Intl. Org.	1 35	28 Maxine Giguire, Death Claim No. 11394, Local 818	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
24 Geo. L. Gibson, Org.'s fee, Local 604	10 00	28 Frank Baker, Death Claim No. 11395, Local 285	50 00	In General Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$ 410 07
24 Printing and mailing M. & S.	2,372 34	28 Charles B. Bennett, Death Claim No. 11396, Local 532	50 00	In Death Fund Mar. 1, 1922	137,572 01
24 Harley Johnson, Intl. Org.	6 40	28 Printing	748 15	In Defense Fund Mar. 1, 1922	9 12
		28 Jere L. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas.	400 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Mar. 1, 1922	1,204 10
		28 Ed. Flore, Gen. Pres.	462 99	Total	$139,195 80
		28 Janitor	15 00

HELPING YOUR LOCAL OFFICERS.

One of the chief reasons for the weakening of local unions is the failure of members to co-operate with their officers and inform them of the changes which take place in the houses where they are employed.

Instance after instance could be recited, where unions have lost control over houses because of the failure of the union members in that house informing their officers of the departure of a brother member and the hiring of an outsider, not a member of the organization. In one recent instance a stranger was allowed to hold a job in a union house for several weeks, when he was approached and asked to become a member, he not only refused but knew when he was making the refusal that the union was not in shape to bring about his dismissal from that job. In the course of a few weeks another outsider landed in time to fill a vacancy. With two out of six men on the floor it was but a question of time when that house was lost to the union, and the members had no one to blame but themselves. Many of our unions control houses without entering into any agreement with the employer, they manage to land members on the job as soon as a vacancy occurs, they make no pretense at seeking an agreement, for they know that all they need do is keep wide-awake and see to it that none but members are informed when vacancies occur.

Don't depend upon contracts to keep the place which employs you in line. Employers can't be blamed for hiring the first person that comes along when they need help. If the members in such a house begin to complain, they leave a fine opening for being accused of neglect of their own welfare.

When you know that you are going to leave a job, tell the officers of your union, or else see to it that a brother member who may not have steady employment, has a chance of applying for and getting the place. Just a little more concern about your fellow members and a little more attention to the interests of the union will prove beneficial to you and your organization. If you were without a job and did not know where there was a vacancy, it would come in very handy if a member put you wise. Then why not get the habit of watching and co-operating.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

HAVERHILL, MASS., Feb. 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February:

January 28, chef and crew of the Arlington, Boston, were discharged and a non-union force took their place. I tried to see the new chef, but could not get in.

January 29, special meeting of the Boston Central Labor Union. Brother J. J. Kearney and myself were the delegates from Local 34. This meeting was called for the purpose of better organizing this city, and it was a very interesting meeting.

January 30, 31, canvassed the "Back Bay" and downtown districts.

February 1, had a conference with the chef and steward of the Lenox. They contemplated a change in the working conditions of the cooks, in fact a return to the split-watch system. Returned there in the evening to have a talk with the night watch. Brother J. Lynch and I had a conference with Mr. Prior, proprietor and Mr. Hodgdon, manager of the Lenox and the Brunswick on the same subject.

February 3, new chef and crew at the American House, visited that place and had a talk with the new chef, who promised to do business with Local 34. Attended meeting of L. J. E. B.

February 5, attended meeting of C. L. U.

February 6, I canvassed the new crew of the American House and visited many other places. The cooks' meeting had a good attendance.

February 7, our committee of the L. J. E. B. with a committee of the C. L. U. had a conference with Mr. Allen, of the Arlington Hotel, concerning the unfair attitude of his new manager, Mr. Kimball. No definite results obtained so far.

February 9, 10, 11, was busy in the "Back Bay" district, especially at the Lenox. After several talks with Mr. Hodgdon, we arrived at a tentative agreement which the cooks accepted temporarily to see how it would work out.

February 13 to 16, I canvassed all over the city, and attended the meetings of the L. J. E. B. and of Local 34.

February 17, during the afternoon and night I attended the hearing of the State Volstead bill before the State Legislature. Brother J. J. Kearney made an eloquent speech opposing this bill.

February 20, I had a conference with Brother J. Conley on the situation of Local 201, in Haverhill, Mass. I was instructed to proceed there and straighten matters out. I attended the meeting of the executive board of Local 34 in the afternoon and a cooks' meeting in the evening.

February 21, arrived in Haverhill. I met Brother J. Lutts, who introduced me to Brother A. Poor, president of Local 201. In the afternoon I met Brother F. Emery, business agent, and C. Flannagan, secretary-treasurer, in conference. Had a another meeting with all of the officers in the evening. I found the books in very bad shape. Local 201 had been run as a one man organization.

February 22, I continued my investigation.

February 23, Vice-President J. Conley arrived. We had another conference with the officers. In the evening we attended a mass meeting of the local, which was well attended.

February 24, with Brother J. Conley, I visited several restaurants for our own information. Meeting of the officers in the afternoon and executive board meeting at 8:30 p. m.

February 25, I worked on the books, and called in all membership books. I wish to say that the new officers are all anxious to see their local union take its former place in the labor movement of Haverhill, which it will no doubt do in the near future.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

Boston to Haverhill	$1.19
Postage86

Total	$2.05
-------------	--------

Fraternally yours,

A. MARTEL,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HARTFORD, CONN., Feb. 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

January 31, met with the officers of Local 304 on matters pertaining to the local situation.

February 1, addressed a meeting of the Hartford C. L. U.

February 2, opened meeting of hotel and restaurant employees—poor attendance.

February 3, meeting of Local 81.

February 6 to 11, I canvassed hotels and restaurants, distributed notices for a mass meeting to be held February 12. The meeting was poorly attended. Those in attendance were discouraged at the lack of interest shown and decided that the workers in the catering industry in Hartford did not desire an organization, notwithstanding that we received sufficient number of promises that would fill a fairly good sized hall. They were of the opinion that it would be best to return the charter and outfit. After considerable discussion on the matter, I outlined a plan of campaign and our boys agreed to give it another trial and retained the charter and that we start a membership campaign. While we were not as successful as we anticipated and that we are handicapped on account of the large number of Greeks employed in the hotels and restaurants, who are working under deplorable conditions, low wage, fourteen and fifteen hours, seven days. They are willing that some one step in and change those conditions, but they refuse to have anything to do with a union. It seems impossible to get the workers of our craft to attend meetings, so we are going after the individual until we either win or lose. During our campaign I visited the various labor organizations asking them for their moral assistance in demanding our labels and buttons.

February 2, meeting of Local 200.

February 13 and 16, assisted the financial officers on their books, reports, etc.

February 15, addressed a meeting at the Hartford C. L. U. Canvassed a number of restaurants.

February 17, meeting of Local 273, where we were having trouble with the former financial secretary-treasurer, M. J. L. Betters, and the former business agent, J. R. Hyde, as well as a man by the name of Fitzgerald, who claims he is a member of Local 273, but there are no records on the books of Local 273 to show that he ever became a member of that local. Further publicity on this matter at this time is inopportune.

February 18, special meeting of the executive board of Local 273. Held conference with the attorney in the Betters and Hyde case, also with the district attorney.

February 20, canvassed a number of restaurants; attended meetings of the Street Car-men's Union, Polishers and Buffers.

February 21, called on the restaurants in "American Row." Attended meetings of the barbers and theatrical employees.

February 22, special meeting of Local 304, election of officers, etc. Attended meetings of the molders and sheet metal workers.

February 23, called on the restaurants at the "north end." Attended meetings of carpenters and steam fitters.

February 24, attended meetings of lathers, bricklayers and machinists.

The following is my expense account:

Feb. 3—Hartford to Springfield	$1.19
Feb. 6—Hartford	1.19
Feb. 17—Springfield	1.19
Feb. 19—Hartford	1.19

Total$4.76

Yours fraternally,

THOS. J. DURNIN,

International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

MUNCIE, IND., Feb. 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

January 27, canvassed the east side of town, got two applications.

January 28, attended the Central Trades Council, was credited with getting Mrs. Cox, of the State Industrial Board, to address them, and it was sure a treat to hear her tell the men they were to blame for the long hours the women had to work in Indiana.

January 29, 30, canvassed the hotels, especially the English Hotel, for it is the headquarters for the miners, every time they come here, but they are still sleeping.

February 1, canvassed the restaurants and soft drink places on Illinois Street, and got three applications.

February 2, arrived in Danville, Ill., and addressed the following organizations that night: plumbers, brickmakers, and street railway employees.

February 4, called on the soft drink places, also the restaurants, and found only two who were willing to take a chance. Addressed the Central Trades Council, and they appointed a committee to accompany me the next day, and visit the restaurants.

February 5, President Balser of the trades council and Brother Pritchard of the carpenters, accompanied me, and they were sure we would be able to reorganize them, but the boss where the majority of union make their headquarters, told us very plainly he would fire every one of his employees if they joined, so that had its effect. I also addressed the cigarmakers, bakers and freight handlers and told them of the places and the proprietors' actions; also got eight culinary workers around the Wabash depot who were willing to join but who had no dough, so I left for Indianapolis that night.

February 6, 7 and 8, canvassed the restaurants and cafeterias and secured eight applications.

February 9, called on two places that Local 437 has had on the unfair list, but failed to get them.

February 10, assisted the secretaries of both our locals on their books.

February 11, signed up the Dennis & Leiper's Cafeteria.

February 12, made arrangements for two thousand dodgers to distribute to the United miners during their convention.

February 13, attended Eagles entertainment; quite a few proprietors belong who run soft drink places; secured three applications.

February 14, assisted by Sister Trisler, formerly of Cleveland, Mother Lyons, Brothers Fields and Eaton, we distributed dodgers to the miners.

February 15, attended meetings of both our locals; initiated four applicants.

February 16 and 17, had the pleasure of signing up Oyster Frank's. I have battled this place ever since I came here; also the Lincoln Restaurant and the Gary lunch room. These three places were sure tough to get to, but when union men do their duty it don't take long to get them.

February 18, called on Spencer Cafeteria, the proprietor of which owns three places; he wanted to sign up for one only but I couldn't see him that way. He asked if I would appear before the restaurant men's association, he being one of the officers. I told him I would. I then called on Mr. Payne, who owns about eleven places, and is also one of the officers of that association. He informed me that he did not believe we could accomplish anything as they were true believers of the open shop.

February 19, called on the following places where the miners were patronizing, which included Fiddler's Buffet, Schofield's Cafe and the Friendly Inn, but I got the word that they didn't have to organize to get the trade—and they didn't.

February 20, canvassed the west side of town; secured two applications.

February 21, tried to locate the former Pullman porters to get their books and seal, but they claimed no knowledge of ever receiving them.

February 23, called on the manager of Hodges' Chili Parlor; he had brought a crew from St. Louis and he said he wanted a little time; one reinstatement.

February 24, accompanied by Sister Harris and Brother Fields, called on the president of the Colored Ministers' Alliance and secured permission to appear before them; also got the business agent of the cement workers to go with us; said conference is to take place on February 27.

February 25, called on Mr. Gerrard, who receives patronage from many printers. Brother

Chas. Specht has made several attempts to get this man; he used to be good when he ran a saloon, but he is different now.

Just received a letter from the Muncie Trades Council to visit that city, as they had appointed a committee to assist me in getting our people together.

The following is my expense account for the month:

February—

2—Indianapolis to Danville, Ill.....	$3 31
5—Danville to Indianapolis.....	3 31
Postage for the month.....	50

Total..... $7 12

ROBT. LYONS,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

KEWANEE, ILL., February 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

January 27, canvassed cooks and waiters in seven of the South Side places. Four reinstatements for Local 7.

January 28, in company with Brother Peabody of Local 865 canvassed cooks in eight of the West Side places, securing 1 application and re reinstatements.

January 30, went to Aurora, Ill., in the interest of Local 865. Canvassed employes in Steel's Restaurant; 1 application. Visited some of the former members of our former Local 191, asking them to reinstate through the International Union and join Local 74. Will see them again.

January 31, canvassed waiters in four of the large loop places; 3 applications, 2 reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; 3 initiated, 12 reinstated.

February 1, canvassed cooks at Kuntz Remers Restaurant, securing 2 reinstatements. Canvassed waiters in some of the North Side places, securing 2 applications. Attended grand ball given by Local 7 which attracted a big crowd and was a fine success.

February 2, went to Hammond, Ind., in the interest of Local 720. Canvassed suspended members in four of the places at East Chicago. Attended meeting of Local 720. Held a conference with some of the officials of the Hammond Central Labor Union.

February 3, 4, canvassed waiters in the loop hotels; 5 reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 484. Attended meeting of the Executive Board of Local 7.

February 5, attended meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

February 6, in company with a committee held conferences with three of the loop proprietors. Signed up for house cards with two of them. Attended meeting of Local Joint Executive Board.

February 7, canvassed waiters at the Brevort Hotel and Weiss Restaurant; 4 reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; 5 initiated, 8 reinstated.

February 8, 9 and 10, canvassed cooks and waiters in fifteen of the South Side places, securing 5 reinstatements for Local 7 and 1 for Local 865. Attended meeting of Local 583. Held a conference with our attorney in the interest of Local 865.

February 11, in company with our committee held conference with some of the employers on the West Side, and with the grievance committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

February 12, attended memorial meeting in honor of the memory of our late sister, Elizabeth Maloney. A great gathering of the former friends of Miss Maloney were present as a fitting tribute to her work in life.

February 13, canvassed bartenders in ten of the North Side places; 2 applications.

February 14, canvassed waiters in five of the loop places; 3 reinstatements. Attended meeting of Local 7; 4 initiated, 8 reinstated.

February 15, held conference with our attorney in the interest of Local 865. Attended meeting of Local 268.

February 16, cleaned up some call-backs, 3 reinstatements for Local 7, 1 for Local 89. Attended meeting of Local 865; 4 initiated, 6 reinstated.

February 17, in company with the officers of the locals held conferences with four of the loop proprietors. Will see them again. Attended meeting of Local 484.

February 18, held conference with Mr. Herman Bock, leading caterer, who employs hundreds of the members of Locals 7 and 865. Results satisfactory.

February 20 to 25, canvassed culinary workers at Kewanee, Ill. No results. They are working fourteen hours a day, seven days a week in that town, yet fear if they join a union they will lose their job and starve to death.

My expenses for the month were as follows:

Trip to Aurora, Ill., and return.....	$2.00
Trip to Hammond and East Chicago, Ind., and return	1.70
Chicago to Kewanee, Ill.....	4.17
Postage44

Total $8.31

With best wishes I remain

Yours fraternally,

E. W. PARLEE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

NEW YORK, N. Y., February 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month:

In addition to the routine work in New York City I have worked at Wilmington, Delaware and Albany, in the interest of our Bartenders' Locals 466 and 228.

February 8—I went to Wilmington and worked there until the 12th, at which date we held the largest meeting the union has had for over two years, I was informed. Officers were elected and installed; one candidate, George Fisher, was initiated, and many members paid up their dues and the local made provision for the re-opening of its club rooms and general harmony prevailed. On arrival I met former President Pat O'Connell and afterwards Secretary McDowell, with other officers of the union, and got a line on what was wanted and then got to work and visited every saloon in the city many times and was much pleased to meet a bunch of regular fellows who readily responded to my appeals for them to pay up their dues and keep the local going. Local 466 can easily boast of being a 100 per cent local, every bartender working at the business being a member and many of the boys who have had to seek other lines of work are still loyal and keeping their cards up. I also had a long talk with Brother Saylor, of the I. T. U., who runs the live labor paper in that city and who has done much to assist us on many occasions; it is only proper that I express my appreciation and commendation of the loyalty of the officers and members of this local. I also investigated the chances of organizing the culinary workers. I find the big hotel, the DuPont, employs members of Local 279, Philadelphia, that the restaurants are mostly owned and operated by Greeks who employ "pardners" only. They were once organized and disbanded just as quickly, on demand of their "pardners," the bosses. I was advised it was useless to waste time and effort on them.

February 21—I went to Albany, and with Secretary Hoffman, of Local 228, and Brothers Cummings and Grogan, of the Central Labor Union, we visited every saloon in that city. The response to our appeals to pay up and continue the organization was not as pleasing as one could wish, but the Central Labor Union has a live bunch of fighters and have resolved that Local 228 shall not go under and are in a position to enforce this order. We received many promises, some reinstatements, and many "who are waiting to see what the other fellow will do." We have some live members who have worked hard to keep the local going, Dick Nolan, Hoffman and others. I feel satisfied that this local, with the above mentioned help, will continue on our roster.

February 20—The friends of Billy Lehman, secretary of Local 1, gave him a banquet, chest of silver and other tokens for his long, hard and efficient work for the members of that union. It was a splendid affair graced by the presence of of General President Edward Flore and the officers of our New York unions. Some 500 participated, Tony Schwartz was toastmaster and the speakers included Brothers Flore, General President, Organizer Billy Kavanagh, myself and officers of our local unions.

In winding up my two and a half years' work in New York City and Brooklyn, I desire to express my deep appreciation for the many acts of kindness and consideration I have received from the officers and members of our locals.

My expenses are:

February—

8—Wilmington and return.....	$8 40
21—Albany and return.....	10 26
Postage	1 46

Total.....$20 12

Faternally submitted,

R. E. CROSKY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LOS ANGELES, CALIF., February 21, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of February, 1st to 14 inclusive:

February 1—With Business Agent Olsen, of Local 17, called upon the manager of the Alexandria Hotel relative to scale for short-hour work, the result proving satisfactory to the officials and members of Local 17. At 3:00 p. m., attended meeting of Local 468. Several applications received and quite a few reinstatements.

February 2—With Business Agent called upon the proprietor of Holiday's two co-operative lunch rooms relative to failure to pay wage scale. Due to a misunderstanding some of the employees had become members of Local 468, which compelled a higher rate of wages than were justified for the positions. The proprietor, however, showing a willingness to do the right thing, placed the matter in line for adjustment. At 3:00 p. m. attended meeting of Waiters' Local 17. Considerable improvement in manner of conducting affairs, both in headquarters and in meetings and the result is showing in the larger number of applications and reinstatements being received.

February 3—Routine work. Attended the meeting of the Central Labor Council and assisted in the election of International Vice President Al. Hassel as president of the Council, a position he has held for several terms to the great good of the local labor movement.

February 6—With Business Agent Olsen, of Local 17, called upon the manager of the Pallis Paris and adjusted a matter of vital importance to the local. Called up the manager of the Gates Hotel but failed to get much satisfaction, although this Hotel will undoubtedly come to terms before the summer gets very far under way. At 3:00 p. m. attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board, where considerable business was transacted, and plans prepared for the distribution of necessary literature advertising the House Card and Button.

February 7—Routine work. Assisted in checking up books of Local 639 and glad to be able to report that 639 is in splendid condition financially and the membership is determined to keep plugging along until they have put their numerical strength on a par with locals 17 and 468. Attended meeting of the local; three initiations and several reinstatements.

February 8—Called upon beverage dispensers in several establishments, but met with cold reception. Called upon one place where all employees had been members of Local 284, but failed to get satisfactory results. Hope to line this place up very soon. Attended meeting of Local 468. Several new applications on hand and Secretary Devereaux reports good progress both as to finances and membership.

February 9—Visited Redondo Beach and hope to line up two places which run the year round. Received in a friendly spirit by the longshoremen and lumber handlers who want to see our house cards displayed. An 3:00 p. m. attended meeting of Local 17. Attendance getting better and real progress being shown.

February 10 to 11—Routine work. Better feeling exists toward our card and buttons and with the continued support of the trades unions we will some day find the house without a card the exception.

February 12—With Business Agent Neumann, of Local 468, called upon the manager of the Anadale Golf Club. Found some of the employees were behind with their dues but intend to pay up. At 3:00 p. m. attended meeting of the Local Joint Executive Board.

February 13—Called upon Morris Rauch relative to signing up the string of places he controls. While not willing to sign up Mr. Rauch wants to get along with our locals and I believe we can, by persistent work, convince him that it would be a paying proposition. Attended meeting of Local 639 and found the girls busy preparing for a dance to be given on February 18.

This being my final report as International Organizer, I desire to express to the boys and girls who have in the past extended the hand of welcome to me, and assisted in carrying out the work undertaken, my sincere best wishes and thanks, and I hope all will put their shoulder to the wheel and push onward until our International Union regains its lost ground, for only by so doing can we expect to enjoy the decent conditions now held, let alone acquiring necessary improvements.

The following is my expense account for the month:

Interurban	$1 70
Postage	95
Total.....	$2 65

With best wishes,

Fraternally yours,

AL. C. BECK,
International Organizer.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

SEATTLE, WASH., February 17, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month from January 26 to date follows:

January 26—To Auburn. Attended meeting of Local 349. Matters pertaining to building up local taken up. Poor attendance; arranged special meeting for February 2.

January 27—Attended strike committee meeting, also meeting of Local 33.

January 28—Conference with musicians' and bakers' representatives. Program outlined, and matters relative to work on unfair houses disposed of.

January 30—Meeting of strike committee. Conference with the representatives of the State and federal departments of labor, relative to Meves situation.

January 31—Matter of settlement of Meves Cafeteria controversy before Joint Board.

February 1—Conference with labor representatives. Outlook for settlement of controversy with Meves Brothers very promising.

February 2—Writing story for Union Record, relative to strike situation. Attended strike committee meeting. To Auburn for special meeting of Local 349. Matters pertaining to welfare of union taken up. Three candidates initiated; one reinstatement to headquarters.

February 3—Attended meeting of Local 538. General discussion of the Pullman Company, plan of organization. Resolutions of condolences on account of death of former Secretary Eugene R. Whitted adopted. Attended to other matters in conjunction with strike committee. Attended meeting of Local 33. Cooks and all other culinary workers making headway toward winning strike.

February 4—Interviewed proprietors of several downtown restaurants. Attended strike committee meeting.

February 5—Getting out circular letters to all local unions and Central Labor Councils.

February 6—Had interview with restaurant men. Investigated report that members of Railway men's organizations were eating in Hicks Cafeteria, an unfair house.

February 7—Received long distance phone from United State representative of labor, on Meves situation. Appointment made for Sunday with labor representatives. To Tacoma for conference with new secretary of Local 61. Local making some headway. During January, secretary of Local 61, picked up nine applications, twelve reinstatements and five withdrawal card reinstatements. Total of 26 members.

February 9—In Seattle. Attended strike committee meeting. Routine work on strike affairs.

February 10—Conference with representatives of unions involved, and officials of the Department of Labor on the Meves situation. Also interview with Mr. Rippe, of Rippe's Cafe and Cabaret.

February 11—Got out circular letters for distribution. Also considerable correspondence out of way.

February 12—Attended meeting of the Legislative Committee of the State Federation of Labor, on initiative and referendum measures.

February 13—Meves situation and general strike situation unchanged. Attended strike committee meeting and other routine work.

February 14—Conference with representatives of State and Federal Departments of Labor. Was notified that Meves Brothers had again taken action to lock out our members and bakery workmen. Fight on again with a vengeance. Attended strike committee meeting.

February 15—Conference of our representatives and the officials of the musicians' union in regard to Rippe's Bungalow Cabaret. Looked somewhat bright for a settlement here. Apparently all differences adjusted except matter of wages to waiters in Bungalow. Another meeting with Mr. Rippe later, we found him just the contrary. Like Meves Brothers, one day things looks good for 100 per cent settlement, when next day a complete flop-over. I regret to report of break again with Meves Brothers. Looks now like a fight to finish with all unfair houses.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

Two round-trips to Auburn, Interurban fare.....	$2 20
Typewriter repairs and ribbon.....	2 10
Two round-trips to Tacoma by boat.....	1 60
Postage stamps	50

Total.....$6 40

Fraternally yours,

HARLEY JOHNSON,
International Organizer.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

VANCOUVER, B. C., February 15, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report from January 24 to date:

Working in conjunction with the officers of Local 28 and Local 676, picking up reinstatements, taking up grievances existing from time to time.

Our pickets on the Maryland Cafe, a Greek establishment, did very effective work, although I regret we had to withdraw them temporary; however we are not finished with these birds.

Considerable unemployment prevails at this time, the severe winter making the general situation worse than it would be otherwise. All lines of industry are practically at a standstill.

February 7, Local 28 held a very successful dance, and will have a tendency to get members a little more interested.

February 8, in company with a committee from the Local Joint Board, interviewed members of the City Council in regards to the selling of Beer in Clubs, with the hope of getting our members a fair show. This matter will come up on the 22nd of February.

February 8, to date, have been kept busy on routine work around the city; also sending circulars to our Eastern members. I regret to say the Boys in Eastern Canada cannot be made to realize that they are the stumbling block in the gaining of better conditions for the culinary workers through the Chain Hotel System, although I have repeatedly advised them to follow the lead of the Western boys in getting organized, evidently they are inflicted with some form of sleeping sickness, yet I always notice they are invariably the best growlers when out of work. I can foresee in the near future where the C. P. R. will trim off a few more cents of the miserable wage now paid.

For the information of those in the Eastern section of Canada, the dining room staffs of the Vancouver Hotel, Empress Hotel on the Coast are 100 per cent organized. The two hotels in the City of Winnipeg can boast of similar conditions. What is the matter with the rest? Don't blame the International Union if your conditions are not what they should be, for after all there is an old saying—"the Lord helps them that help themselves."

Expenses for the past month:

Stamps	$0 65
Car-fare, interurban	70
Total.....	$1 35

Fraternally submitted,

WM. MACKENZIE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-12-8-15

JERSEY CITY, N. J., February 6, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report covers from the 30th of January to February 15th, as follows:

January 30—Detroit, Mich. Assisting committee of cooks' union, Local 234, in going over accounts of ex-Secretary Jas. Palmer, with representative of bonding company, preliminary to a settlement for losses sustained in forged checks. Also attended meeting of Local Joint Executive Board and installed new officers.

January 31—Canvassed waitresses at National Restaurant. Informed that the proprietor, Mr. Burke, was hostile to union. We have some ex-members here. Referred the matter to committee of action of Central Labor Union. Also called at office of Mr. Fred Palliers, concerning appointments to health board of restaurant inspectors. They are anxious to secure some practical men from our ranks. Report progress.

February 1—Ten a. m. With representatives of cooks' and waiters' unions to adjust grievances at Joseph's Restaurants; then to Mt. Clemens, Mich., with Business Agents A. Fredericks, of the cooks, Peter Erickson, of the waiters, held conference with new proprietors of Pontchartrain Resort on the Lake and met with success. Assured our boys will be engaged instead of non-union help (as previously). This concession means much to our Detroit locals. Returned to Detroit and attended meeting of Federation of Labor and special midnight session at Waiters' Club, of waiters and cooks employed at Josephs Brothers' Restaurants, prospective trouble avoided by prompt action.

February 2—With three representatives of our locals held conference with board of directors of Elks' Club. Rumors of changing to non-union help was gone over and satisfactory impression made to change this move if really contemplated. Also addressed well-attended meeting of cooks' union; two applications and one initiation.

February 3—Called with representatives of culinary workers to Josephs' Restaurants. Attended committee of action session held at Labor Temple of Federation and evening meeting of waiters' union.

February 4—Canvassing for new applicants and delinquents with Business Agent P. Erickson, of the waiters' union.

February 6—With Secretary P. Erickson secured reinstatement at Statler Hotel.

February 7—To Ritz, Frontenac, Littles and Strykers with Secretary P. Erickson.

February 8—Attended important meetings of Executive Board, waiters' union and Detroit Federation of Labor.

February 9—Addressed meeting of cooks' union; also presided over committee meeting of Local 234, to confer following day with committee of action of Federation on city work concerning our crafts.

February 10—With delegation of our three locals, appeared before Federation committee of action and presented several propositions of interest to us. Evening, in attendance at warm session of waiters' union, and in the election of Brother Louis Koenig to succeed Brother P. Erickson, who resigned, as business agent, the progressives won by a great majority. Brother P. Erickson (a self-sacrificing young man), led the forces of those who by action strive to make their organization a bigger and better one, and while he stated his resignation offered meant a call to a more profitable position, his spare time would be devoted to assisting his successor and everyone. Even the opposition admit that Peter is a man to his word and with the evils omitted that formerly was a curse to progress, I can see Local 705 take her place among the leading organizations of our International Union.

On the 11th, I received instructions to proceed to Paterson, N. J. Arriving on the 13th, I found the culinary workers in no mood to consider reorganization until the unemployed become less in number.

I returned home on the 16th, as my term expired, and in closing wish to thank all those who co-operated with me during my career as an International Union employe.

The following is my expense account:

February—

1—Detroit, Mich., to Mt. Clemens and return	$0 52
12—Detroit, Mich., to Paterson, N. J.	24 82
Postage, city and inter-city carfare..	2 48
Sleeper	6 38

Total.....$34 20

Fraternally yours,

WM. F. KAVANAGH,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-12-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL., February 28, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

January 30, in St. Paul. Visited Williams' Box Lunch and the Gopher Restaurant, receiving dues and applications.

January 31, with Sister Smith, business agent of Local 630, held conference with the management of the Bordman Restaurant, who took the matter of the organization of the waitresses in his place under advisement and asked us to call later.

February 1, in company with business agent of Cooks' Local 556, called on the management of the Pioneer Restaurant which had recently changed hands; came to no definite agreement at this time but a number of our members are employed in this restaurant and a satisfactory agreement is expected to result later.

February 2, attended Trades and Labor Assembly meeting of Minneapolis.

February 3, called on the proprietor of the Atlantic Restaurant, in company with Sister Smith. A number of our members are employed there and we expect to get that restaurant signed up.

February 4, canvassed the members in South St. Paul, receiving dues and applications.

February 6, canvassed the waitresses in Lenox and Rockaway and Brady's restaurants.

February 7, visited the waitresses in Bruni's Restaurant and Harry's Lunch Room, collecting dues.

February 8, canvassed the waitresses in Bordman's Hotel, the Grill, and Flynn's Chicken Shop.

February 9, attended a meeting of Local 556, which was well attended.

February 10, attended meeting of Waitresses' Local 630 and also of the Trades and Labor Assembly of St. Paul.

February 11, as per instructions, proceeded to Chicago.

February 12, attended memorial for the late Sister Maloney which was arranged by the Women's Trade Union League of Chicago, and held in the Masonic Temple. The speakers, all prominent men and women in labor circles and civic affairs of Illinois, paid high tribute to the work and character of Sister Maloney. A resolution adopted by the executive board of the Illinois State Federation of Labor was read, as well as the telegram from General President Flore, both of which were made a part of the record. The entire proceedings were reported and will be prepared for a permanent memorial.

February 13, with Sister Alexander and committee, before the county board, with regard to salary increase for employes in county institutions.

February 14, with Sister Alexander, visited Gold's Restaurant with regard to grievances of our members employed there; management told us to return in a few days.

February 15, with Sister Alexander, canvassed a number of places where waitresses were employed.

Yours fraternally,
MARY DEMPSEY,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL., February 16, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past half month, including January 28, 29 and 30:

Canvassed the cooks in the California, Tip Top Inn and the Tremont Hotels, and a number of the restaurants in the Loop.

January 31, canvassed porters and waiters in the I. C., M. C., C. C. C. & St. L. railway stations.

February 1, canvassed porters in Northwestern & Burlington station and the waiters in the Tremont Hotel, and attended meeting of Local 583; fair attendance and one new member initiated.

February 2, canvassed waitresses and waiters at the South Side restaurants and had conference with the waiters and cooks in the Hayes Hotel.

February 3, canvassed cooks in the California Cafe and received one application; canvassed the waiters in the Lions Edge Cabaret with Business Agent Emerson of Local 7.

February 4, canvassed cooks and porters in the Northwestern, Pennsylvania and the C. & E. I. stations.

February 5, attended meeting of C. F. of L.

February 6, attended meeting of local joint board and arranged for a mass meeting for the waiters in the down-town hotels.

February 7, canvassed cooks and waiters in the Auditorium, Tip Top Inn, and attended meeting of Local 268 and Local 7.

February 8, attended meeting of Local 583 and canvassed porters in the I. C., Sante Fe, and Rock Island stations.

February 9, canvassed cooks in the Briggs and Palmer House Hotels and the porters in the Northwestern station.

February 10, canvassed cooks in Mitchell's and several of the Weeghman restaurants; and porters in the Pennsylvania Railroad station.

February 11, canvassed the Pullman porters in the Northwestern, C. & E. I., and Rock Island stations. Talked with quite a few of them and also met quite a few of the porters from the foreign district. All seemed to think well of the organization.

February 13, in conference with the officers of Local 268; took up matters of importance to this local and made arrangements for starting a campaign among the sleeping car men to try to get some of the suspended men reinstated.

February 14, called on Secretary Carithers of the U. S. Labor Board and secured application blanks to file case of the railroad men, which will be heard about March 6, before the U. S. Labor Board.

February 15, canvassed the porters in the Illinois Central, New York Central and Burlington stations. Attended meeting of Local 268 which was a special one, and Local 583. We had a splendid meeting of the cooks and waiters of Local 583; attendance of the porters was very poor.

February 16, canvassed the porters in the various stations; held conference with committee of Local 328 of Oakland, Calif., and arranged to take care of their grievance before the U. S. Labor Board. Also explained to them that it would be very necessary that they should straighten up their organization with our International Union. Brother Wilcox of that local assured me that he and the other loyal members of that organization would take care of the situation as soon as he arrived back in Oakland.

My expense account for the month follows:

Inter-city transportation	$4 88
Stationery, stamps for circular letters to various locals	2 46
Total.....	$7 34

Yours fraternally,

P. D. CAMPBELL,
International Organizer.

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

All set, pull the bell cord and off we go on another jaunt among the builders of opinion of this land we call America. Of course, it stands to reason that even if we did not say you are welcome, that you are; in fact, we want you to be with us on each truth-seeking trip, even if you don't get the wave of the hand or the howdy passed in your direction. We want to understand one another, to go along together picking information from the tree of knowledge, and we know of no greater fruit-bearing tree than the press of North America. Do you like your Kipling? Then get the following:

Could we judge all deeds by motives
That surround each other's lives,
See the naked heart and spirit,
Know what spur the action gives,
Often we should find it better,
Purer than we judge we should;
We should love each other better
If we only understood.

"If we only understood." Some chunk of wisdom concealed in that quartet of words, boys and girls—dig it out.

Well, the Armament Conference has adjourned sine die and most of the foreign participants have either reached home or will be there soon.

Off on the side lines there is a lot being said with reference to some of the provisions; quite a few steady searchers for fact persist in taking the viewpoint that the agreement is a thinly-veiled imitation of what was adopted by the League of Nations. There are several bright newspaper men who lay Article II alongside of Article X of the League of Nations and say with more than ordinary emphasis: "Lukatif" and show me the difference if you can?

Why worry? It will all come out in the wash some day; you and I will have to hustle quite as hard as ever and even if the Governments do save millions of dollars by curbing the construction of battleships, you can bet a little red apple that some Bimbo will call a quiet session of his fellow bucaners and "toot sweet" they will be into the pork barrel as deep as ever. But what can the plebe voter expect? He is made to dig up the price in taxes direct or indirect, and in addition is made to like the dish placed before him. Many of you will recall that there was a hulabaloo about putting a budget in operation down in Washington. It was loudly proclaimed from the house-tops that Hellandmaria Dawes would make 'em all sit up and take notice; but if you are interested, pick up any publication that presumes to speak for the outs and you will find that the supposed saving is a switch from one department to the other, and the bill of expense quite as formidable as it was a year or two ago. Government officers are not concerned about economy as long as they know that the little slip of paper from the Treasury Department will arrive on time and regularly.

Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes, no doubt, means well, but he is wise to the fact that he has the field against him, the field in this case being the bureaucrats of Washington. He tore the lid off on Feb. 3 when with a broom in one hand, he sailed into the office holders in charge of affairs in Washington and told them a few things about brooms. It seems that the officers who purchase goods for the navy went into the market and bought 18,000 brooms and Dawes said that there were 350,000 army brooms in the Government storehouses which could have been obtained for nothing. Dawes would not make a very nice Sunday school teacher, but they do say that he will perform the trick he set out to do or make some of the brainless wonders in Washington know that he was on the job. Go to it, Brigadier, you've got some hard nuts to crack before you clean up.

Talking about Washington reminds us of a reference we made some time ago to a law providing for registration of aliens. We find the following in the Times-Star of January 3, 1922:

UNIFORM REGISTRATION FOR ALL THE ALIENS.

Washington.—A uniform registration of all aliens and a complete system of directing their education along lines which will make for Americanization should be provided by extension of the Bureau of Naturalization, declares Secretary of Labor James J. Davis in a letter to Congressman Albert Johnson. Registration of aliens should be compulsory, he said, and should be entirely under Government control, but with co-operation from public schools. The wife and minor children of every alien should also be registered. The registration should be primarily to assign to the registrant educational facilities and to furnish him such information as would promote his Americanization.

It should be impressed upon him that the registration is intended to be entirely for his benefit, and by no means for the purpose of espionage. Still it would bring to notice the alien who declares himself or is known to be an anarchist, whose intentions are hostile or resistive, or who is for any other reason an undesirable. The registration should also provide for periodic surveys of public institutions, to ascertain the number and status of aliens in penitentiaries, poor-houses, insane asylums, and the like. Secretary Davis points out that registration would facilitate naturalization, because, if an applicant moves from one place to another in the five years' residence necessary, his record could be transferred with him and would be more trustworthy than the testimony of witnesses now required by law.

Every alien should learn to speak the American language. "To speak our language, to know institutions and principles and ideals for which they stand, and to learn to live them—these alone constitute Americanization," said the secretary. "I would not take from an alien his mother tongue.

It is dear to him. Nevertheless, he should also know our language.

There may be objections to such a proposed plan, but as we see it, there is need of "counting noses," to, in fact, get wise to those within our gates, and the registration idea might be developed into a useful proposition.

You have heard the compiler of these notes say on several more or less auspicious occasions that the aim of the Church Trust of America was to make all of you worship according to their dictation. Glimpse the following and do a little mental shimmying, for unless signs are at variance with what is taking place, similar items will become more and more frequent as we toddle along:

"QUIT CHURCH OR SOCIETIES."

North Tonawanda, N. Y.—Fifty members of St. Matthew's Lutheran Church have been given their choice of severing their connection with fraternal and secret societies or being dropped from the membership roll of the church congregation. The action of the church, the Rev. C. Frankenstein, the pastor, announced, was based upon a rule adopted by the Missouri Synod of the Evangelical Lutheran church which includes part of New York State.

As a sort of stable entry, we slip this item in just to keep you thinking in the same groove for a moment or two:

"RELIGION IS OPIUM FOR THE PEOPLE"

Moscow.—"Religion is opium for the people" is the slogan which the Soviet Government caused to be placed on a permanent stone tablet in the wall of the Moscow City Hall, facing the Iberian chapel. This little chapel stands at the entrance to the Red Square, and contains the Ikon, which is more sacred to Russian churchmen than any other in the entire domain of the former czar. The stream of worshippers at the holy shrine continues in spite of the slurring sign. Communists are expelled from the party in large numbers for having their children baptized, or for being married in a church, or showing religious tendencies.

No, we did not get that out of our garret, we scissored it from the Times-Star, December 15, 1921.

Do you recall the series of articles we printed describing the work of the strike breaking and union wrecking agencies? "The Labor Spy," that was the title of the series. All right, now peruse this little item and you will find that one of the most aggravating cusses connected with the spy game is doing a nice little stretch, not half as long, however, as he no doubt deserves. You said it—there is honor among thieves:

DETECTIVE SENT TO JAIL.

New York, Feb. 3.—Robert J. Foster of Newark, N. J., head of a detective agency, today began serving a thirty-day sentence for refusing to give the Lockwood Legislative Committee the names of fourteen of his men assigned to investigate labor unions. He was also fined $500.

Pope Pius XI, who ascended the throne of St. Peter as the successor of Benedict XV, is evidently going to handle the affairs of the Church in his own way and without heeding the so-called "irreconcilables." A few of the latter tried to persuade the new Pope not to appear on the outside balcony, but he waved them aside with "Remember, I no longer am a Cardinal. I am the Supreme Pontiff now."

Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston, arrived too late to participate in the balloting; he arrived, according to the news reports, just as the new Pope was blessing the multitude. Cardinal Gasparri will retain his office as Papal Secretary, having been re-appointed to the position immediately after Pius XI assumed his position.

If there was any reasonable doubt as to where Attorney General Daugherty and the present administration at Washington stand in the matter of strikes, the following news item should dispel said doubt:

PEOPLE TIRING OF STRIKES, SAYS DAUGHERTY.

Washington, Feb. 2.—"The people are getting tired of strikes," said Attorney General Daugherty today, in announcing that the Government would be ready to meet the situation that might arise in the event of a coal miners' strike at the end of next month.

Mr. Daugherty declared that he had no desire to obstruct any legitimate policies of the unions, but he would not let the unions break up the open shop against the wishes of the workers. The people of the country, he asserted, are more interested in work than in either the question of unions or open shop.

"I am satisfied," said Mr. Daugherty, "that there is all the law necessary to do all that is needed in such an event and additional legislation would not be needed nor helpful."

One of these days the common garden variety of voter will wake up and conclude that it's about time to send some one to Washington besides lawyers, whose feet are still damp from the mash in the old Dollar Mansion.

While on the topic of law makers, here is a bit for public consumption: During the discussion in the Newberry case, Senator Thomas Heflin (D), Alabama, said: "I hold to the doctrine that if a man will buy a seat in the Senate, he in turn will sell it. I do not care whether he is a Democrat or a Republican; if he buys it he will sell it."

If that axiom holds good, and we rather lean toward the idea that it will, would it be tendering unnecessary advice to the garden variety of voter to keep an eye on the senators who helped Newberry to make the grade?

The following item is short, but to use the language of the street, it says a mouthful. We clipped the item from the Times-Star of January 30, 1922:

JUDGE PARKER PRAISES STAND TAKEN BY LABOR.

New York, Jan. 30.—Organized labor has done more than any other agency to check the doctrine of "Russian Reds, I. W. W. and Parlor Socialists, who threatened the stability of the U. S. Government," Judge Alton B. Parker, once Democratic candidate for the Presidency, told the National Civic Federation here today.

Vice-President Conley sends us the two clippings which follow, both cut from the Boston Post of January 30, 1922. The first one will interest the men who "kill fish," as Pat Sullivan used to call his job, when he worked on the "raw box" close to the old show shop on East Baltimore Street, run by Kernan, after whom the Kernan Hotel was named:

It would appear that James Farren, who for the past 51 years has been on one job—opening oysters at the old Union Oyster House on Union Street, near Faneuil Hall, and who challenges the entire world to equal his record of oyster-opening, claiming to have handled more than 7,000,000 oysters in his half century and over, is in line for competition. Antonio Primiano, an employe of George F. Green's oyster shop at South Warren, R. I., and Edward Aldrich, who opens oysters six days in the week at the plant of the Rhode Island Oyster Farms Company in E. Providence, stand neck and neck in a race of their own with 40 gallons a day as their record.

Both these Rhode Islanders feel certain they can outdo Boston's claimant for the title, in their own particular line of oyster-shucking, which is the preparation of oysters for shipment in bulk as "cut-out" oysters.

May the best man win!

The second is an editorial on the subject matter of spuds; read it:

WOULD BE A CRIME.

News from Aroostock County, seemingly well authenticated, tells a peculiarly interested world—any food topic interests it—that 9,000 carloads of the 1921 potato crop may have to be "dumped," that is either thrown away or sold for starch. The reason given is that the crop in storage is larger than can be moved away.

This would be an economic crime. With food-stuffs still high and greatly needed the country over, to destroy a huge amount of potatoes should be a thing made impossible in these United States. The owners say that if shipments at the rate of 150 carloads a day can be kept up until mid-June, they can get rid of their surplus stock. And why can not they be so kept up?

If no other remedy appears, the United States Government would do a fine thing by buying the "spuds" and making them a part of the Russian relief commodities. That would solve the problem at once and in immeasurably finer fashion than by permitting the destruction of so much food.

Those of you who are so situated to get hold of a copy of the New York World or Globe, no doubt peruse the "Letters to the Editor," some of which are compositions of real worth. Here are two from the World of February 3 and 4, 1922, that will prove instructive reading:

NO PROHIBITION IN NORWAY.

To the Editor of The World:

In his letter in The World of today, a writer signing himself "Temperance," states that there is Prohibition in Norway. This is not so, as you can see from the inclosed clipping extracted from the American-Scandinavian Review of November, 1921:

The Storting assembled on August 30 for its autumn session. The outstanding event of the session so far has been the passing of the Prohibition Bill making permanent the law against the sale of liquor and wines containing more than 14 per cent alcohol which was established by Government decree during the war as a temporary measure. In the Odelsting the bill was passed with 51 against 42 votes; in the Lagting, with 18 against 14. The Storting has also passed a bill creating a state monopoly of wine and beer.

Of course hard liquors are officially prohibited, but the Norwegians have more sense than to prohibit wines and beer. Besides, this so-called Prohibition does not and can not prevent the constant smuggling of the forbidden goods into the country through every fjord and inlet from Christiania to Hammerfest, and in almost every home there is a still. Is it not evident to everybody with common sense that no people can be deprived of their personal liberty in a matter of this kind by the wholesale corruption of Legislatures by rich hypocrites and cranks or by being clubbed and shot into obedience or having their legitimate and paid-for property taken from them by a process not very much unlike an act of common burglary?—A. C. H.

New York, Jan. 30.

THE HIGH COST OF VOLSTEADISM.

To the Editor of The World:

According to William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, $100,000,000 is spent annually for Federal, State and local Prohibition enforcement. In other words, taxpayers are forced to contribute this immense sum for the purpose of conducting a fanatical experiment.

Although the process may provide amusement and satisfaction for Prohibition zealots, it is a costly spectacle. Why not require Prohibitionist taxpayers, including the unselfish soft-drink interests, to bear the entire expense of dry enforcement instead of compelling the victims of the experiment to pay for the privilege of being socially and psychologically vivisected?

It would be well if the monetary outlay were the only cost, but there are other items not reckoned in dollars. On the debit side should be shown the hundreds of deaths from poison Prohibition whiskey, excusable contempt for an unpopular law, artificially forced into the hitherto sacred Constitution; the enormous increase of drug addicts, more pitiable than any victims of alcohol; the alarming prevalence of drunkenness among young people of both sexes, tempted by "forbidden fruit"; and the crimes associated with bootlegging, which in comparison would make the erstwhile saloon seem almost respectable.

Why waste a hundred million dollars in futilely trying to prove that certain customs which are lawful and proper in Athelstan, Que., are criminal and reprehensible in Constable, N. Y., only five miles distant?—L. C. QUINN.

New York, Jan. 30.

No doubt many of you have perused the press dispatches about the warm wallop handed over to the organized fanatics in the State of New Jersey. Here is an editorial referring to same that may be useful when discussing the matter. It's from the New York World of February 3, 1922:

DISCOVERING A CONSTITUTION IN NEW JERSEY.

The New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals decides that so far as that State is concerned there are limits to the legislative power of the Anti-Saloon League.

As the decision says which overthrows the Van Ness State Prohibition Enforcement Act, "the touchstone is the Constitution, and that provides that the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate." Which means in this particular case, apparently, that while the Legislature can create a new offense and can call the new offending disorderly conduct when triable by a Magistrate without a jury, punishments cannot then be imposed of a degree belonging to crimes for which the Constitution makes a jury trial imperative. But this is what the Van Ness act sought to do and what has been repeatedly done in its enforcement. Nor is this the only trickery by which the statute sought to override the fundamental law of the State, as appears in this prevailing judgment of its court of last resort.

Congress recently discovered the existence of a Federal Bill of Rights in relation to searches and seizures as provided in the Federal or Volstead Enforcement Act. It made that and not the Anti-Saloon League the touchstone for certain amendatory legislation. Similarly the judicial power of New Jersey has discovered a State Bill of Rights which the Legislature had been driven to overlook or ignore by the Wayne B. Wheelers and William H. Andersons of that Commonwealth. By which, we are reminded that settled principles of government here and there in the United States cannot permanently be subverted by zealotry, however well organized.

One of our fellows asked me the other day if I thought beer was coming back. My reply was that, from all reports it had not been away, was still on the job and while some of it had little to attract attention, there was to be had real "suds" if one only knew the required pass word.

Right here is as good a place as any to reiterate what we have held to for several years. The pendulum is swinging back and the power of the Church Trust of America is weakening, which means that the time is not far distant when you can get your "high ones with a low collar," and that too, without fear of being haled to the police court for quenching your thirst.

The people are getting wise to the fact that it was the religious fanatics who put the Eighteenth Amendment over, and many of them vow that the churches will get no more spondulix from them until they can get their good beer back. One of these nice sunshiny mornings you are going to wake up and find that, a bunch of regular fellows have been elected to administer the affairs of the American republic, and one of the first things they will do after shunting the Eighteenth Amendment to a side track, will be to pass laws which will forever deprive the religious fanatics of the privilege of accumulating Trouble Funds while billions of their property rides on a pass. Just as soon as the real liberals of this continent stop dropping their small change in the contribution boxes, and seeing to it that church property is taxed at the same ratio as other people's property, just that soon will the soft handed pulpiteers get off the political firing line and pay a lot more attention to the saving of souls than has been evident among the high chokered aggregation for close to a decade.

* *

In the days when Sockless Simpson and Carrie Nation were pulling off their special stunts, some one made the interrogation, "What's the matter with Kansas?" On several occasions since there have been responses, some of them by very capable writers, born Kansans. One of the would-be critics of the Sunflower State said: "The matter with Kansas is, there is too damned much language and insufficient labor."

The foregoing ran through our mind as we perused a news item which recited that Mayor William Hale (Big Bill) Thompson, of Chicago, had appointed Rev. John H. Williamson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church as Law Enforcement Commissioner of Chicago, with supreme powers in caring for the city's moral welfare. The appointment was made on February 9, 1922, and was accepted, the Rev. Williamson resigning his job with the Church to enable him to devote all his time to the job. We are wondering who is trying to put the rollers under the big town on Lake Michigan, for when it becomes generally known that a preacher is in the referred to position, the city will be about as popular as Topeka, Kansas, as a place to have a good time. We are willing to bet a butternut that when the news of Rev. Williamson's appointment was made known to the assembled dry office holders of the present administration who were in attendance at the convention held at Columbus, Ohio, February 9, 1922, they winked at one another and no doubt said, "Another one of the dear brothers is cared for." Before leaving the subject of the Columbus gathering, it might be well to say that, its real purpose was to get the Drys together and shoot a boost over for Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty for the United States Senatorship from Ohio. Cabinet officers have, it is true, considerable prestige, but it seldom lasts over four years, whereas a Senator has almost a lead pipe cinch for several times four years. Assistant Attorney General Colonel Guy D. Goff and Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes were the boost shooters for Daugherty, and by the way, they were using some of the dough the Government collects from you while pulling off the boost shoot. It's great stuff if you don't weaken, and yet you will hear these men prate of honesty and the square deal. The choir will kindly turn to page 13 and sing that touching and beautiful song: "Every little movement has a value all its own."

Oh, by gosh, I forgot to relate that they (the newspapers) are now calling the Prohibition Commissioner "Majah" Haynes. Search me, I don't know where he fit, unless it was at the battle of—, was going to say Brandywine, but that was long before Heck was a pup. Let's see, the battle of Brandywine occurred September 11, 1777, Washington in charge of the Continental forces and Howe in charge of the British. Washington lost 1,200 and Howe 500 of their soldiers in that engagement.

* *

Many are called but few are chosen, is about the right caption to put over the following item clipped from a recent issue of the New York American:

The silk stocking was invented in the sixteenth century, but not all of it was discovered until recently.

The title of the paper from which that was clipped reminds us of a discovery made quite recently by the festive paragraphers, that the title of this country—not section—country, has the ad-mo-nition which made it great. Note the I Can in Amer-I-Can? For example, you may now say I Can pay my dues for the next two months—then do it. Call the next case.

* *

"Call the next case" must have been a rather frequent utterance in Beantown during the year 1921. From the Boston Globe of February 7, 1922, we pick the following:

BOSTON DRUNK ARRESTS SHOW MARKED INCREASE.

1921 Had 45 Per Cent More Than 1920.

In 1920 the total number of arrests for drunkenness was 21,800.

In 1921 the total number of arrests for drunkenness was 30,989.

People who have real stuff, keep it in their cellars, but a banker at Youngstown, Ohio, went the common folks one better, he kept his in his bank.

Police got wise, made a visit and just a mere 1,000 gallons was all they found and now Pasquale the banker can quench his thirst with Adams Ale, same as the rest of us plebes.

When keeping your ears to the ground A, B, C, always be careful, for you may get an earful of mud. And by way of offering suggestions to those who peruse the products of the poison pencil and pens of the scribes of the House of Morgan, read all you want to, but keep your belief open until convinced. The railway managers, owners and bond and stock holders have told the public through their personally owned organs, what a frightful mess the railway workers got the railroads into during the war. But Director Generals McAdoo and Hines knew better. Here is an item clipped from Labor, Washington, D. C., February 11, 1922, which you can read over carefully and no doubt be quite as astonished as we were when we perused it. Former Director General McAdoo remained silent a long, long time, but when he did speak, he said something. Read and satisfy yourself that our conclusions are justified:

REA AND WILLARD "LAY DOWN ON JOB," FIRED FOR GOOD OF SERVICE.

Two of the harshest critics of Federal control of railroads are Presidents Samuel Rea, of the Pennsylvania, and Daniel Willard, of the Baltimore & Ohio. Before the Senate committee on interstate commerce and various other forums they made detailed indictments of the alleged inefficiency of Government management.

A possible reason for this antagonism is supplied by William G. McAdoo, who, testifying before the Senate committee offered correspondence between the railroad administration and Rea and Willard, showing that first they were severely reprimanded for "laying down on the job" when the Nation was bending its energies to the winning of the war, and subsequently were fired when they disregarded a warning that they were on trial.

In his letter to Rea Mr. McAdoo said, among other things:

"We are in a great war, and excuses are not worth anything. The only thing that tells now is results. The public demands them, and the life of this Nation demands them.

"I would not be candid if I did not tell you that I am not fully satisfied with the efficiency of the management of the Pennsylvania Railroad. I believe that great improvements can be made, and I look to you and the officers of that system to bring that improvement about at the earliest possible moment.

"My personal regard makes me anxious for your success. But I would not be frank if I did not tell you that unless there is a decided improvement in the efficiency of the Pennsylvania railroad system a change of management will become inevitable."

The warning letter to Willard, presaging his early retirement, said in part:

"I would be less candid if I did not tell you that I am dissatisfied with the management of the Baltimore & Ohio. I think it has proven inefficient and unequal to the present situation. I am sure it can be improved, and I expect improvement.

"I speak thus frankly because I feel that you ought to know that a change in the management of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad will be inevitable unless better results are speedily obtained."

"Better results" were not obtained, and Rea and Willard were retired from active participation in railroad operation.

Ever since they have been throwing mud at Government operation of the railroads.

Just keep what you've read in mind, it may come in handy when you hear some of the agents of the interests peddle that "what labor did to the railroads during the war."

From Labor, the same publication from which we clipped the previous interesting news item, we scissor another, read it just to keep in touch with the character of stuff the wage earners have slipped over to them.

THIS TELLS WHY SHOES ARE HIGH.

A reason for the prevailing high cost of shoes is furnished by the annual report of the Endicott-Johnson corporation, the largest shoe manufacturers in the world, just made public. On a smaller volume of business in 1921 it made the largest profit in its history.

After paying all charges, including taxes, the Endicott-Johnson Co. showed net profits of $4,642,889, equivalent to 21.58 per cent on the common stock outstanding. This compares with net profits of $3,150,441, or 12.86 per cent in 1920. Gross sales in 1920 were $74,970,000 but dropped in 1921 to $58,892,000.

These figures will be interesting to farmers who find they have to pay the price of the entire hide for one pair of low-grade shoes. They should also be interesting to Attorney General Daugherty, who, he says, is making war on retailers as the principal cause of high prices.

To the best of our knowledge the Endicott-Johnson corporation does not employ members of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. To be on the safe side readers and members should see to it that the footwear they purchase bears the union label of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union.

The good people of the State which produces the brass-tipped, long-billed, armor-plated mosquito, have had the front page during the last few months several times, and the last effort in our way of thinking is going to prove a curtain wallop to the open shoppers. The following article is worth reading and keeping for reference, particularly by those of our members who are up against the open shoppers with their camouflaged American "Blam" Association. The article is clipped from the Jersey Journal, Jersey City, January 31, 1922:

STATE BUSINESS MEN DECLARE AGAINST ANTI-UNION COERCION.

Some of New Jersey's biggest business men, members of a committee of industrial relations of the New Jersey Chamber of Commerce, in a report made public today, caution all employers to avoid "anti-union coercion," to steer clear of the various "open shop" movements, and to co-operate with the workers in every possible way.

The report was written after a careful survey which extended over a period of nine months. It has been approved by the executive committee and adopted by the board of trustees of the state chamber.

It is pointed out that there are three roads open to employers. One is the road of constructive achievement within the shop; another is that of constructive co-operation between the organizations of employers and those of workmen, and a third is that of the "open shop." This last movement, in the opinion of the committee, is "undermining the confidence of labor in employers and ruining the foundation for co-operation between them."

"Similar campaigns in former periods of depression," the report continues, "have only resulted in redoubled growth of unionism and the adoption by it of more extreme measures in the periods of prosperity which followed and there is no reason to believe that the result of this campaign will be different. Campaigns of this nature are leading to oppression by employers and are playing into the hands of revolutionary elements."

"The road of anti-union coercion appears to us to be dangerous. It ought by all means to be avoided."

The committee strongly urges the maintenance of personnel departments in all big industries, and suggests the employment of experts in the problems of employers and employees.

"The efforts of all concerned," the report concludes, "should be directed toward devising measures for the regularization of industry and reduction and prevention of unemployment."

Activity is the middle name of our local unions in the city of Denver, as the following, clipped from the Labor Bulletin of that city, indicates:

GREEK MENACE.

The following communication containing data as to the number of Greeks in this country was sent to the Trades and Labor Assembly, with the request that it be given the widest publicity possible:

"Denver, Colo., Feb. 7, 1922.

"The Denver Trades and Labor Assembly.
Greetings:

"We beg to call your attention to the invasion into the United States by the Greeks, who have secured almost exclusive possession of the restaurant, candy, fruit and shoeshining business.

The following data was compiled by the Bureau of the Census, and furnished by Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L.:

"There are in the United States 175,972 Greeks. Of that number only 29,479 are naturalized, 21,451 have secured their first papers, and 117,295 have made no effort to secure their first papers. There are 7,747 about whom no information can be secured. Of the above 143,000 are men and 32,000 are women.

"In Denver there are 768 Greeks, of which only 133 are naturalized, 199 have taken out their first papers, and 498 have made no effort to secure their first papers, and 22 about whom no information can be secured. Of the above number, 718 are men and 50 are women.

"Moral; Patronize places of business which are operated by Americans, who employ American citizens, who spend their earnings in the United States.

"There are no Greek Union Restaurants in Denver."

If your town is similarly affected, take a tip from the Mile-High city catering industry workers and see what the results will be.

Do you remember when you were taken out to the woodshed back of the house—or was it down into the cellar, where Dad pulled off his correctional manoeuvre? Anyway, read the following and sit up:

URGES SPANKING.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 6.—Canadian judges propose a national spanking law, not merely for juveniles, but for all males less than 26 years old. Not the prison flogging, but punishment by hand with a young man sprawling across the knees of a burly constable, before the entire court, immediately after sentence is passed.

"Many young men, members of gangs, take jail sentences lightly, for when they are released they tell wondrous stories to their chums, and are honored as heroes," says Magistrate T. H. Brunton. "After a good, sound spanking from the broad hand of a policeman, with a courtroom full of people to look on, their gangs would not be inclined to idolize or envy them."

Magistrate Brunton says no young man spanked in his court has ever returned on another charge.

Clipped that from the Cincie Post, of January 6, 1922. Ticked with a barrel stave. Oh, joy. Oh, boy.

A little more light on the gland subject from a Seattle editor:

THE LINK THAT'S MISSING.

It's blamed funny why, if we are descended from the monkeys, we didn't inherit those glands.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Here is an item we clipped from the Post, of this city, that may interest some of you "who never stuck to Sunday School, but went gallivanting around on the Sabbath":

BIBLICAL BOOKS.

Is there a verse of poetry giving all the books of the New Testament?

Yes, as follows:

"Matthew, Mark, Luke and John write the life of their Lord;

The Acts, what Apostles accomplished, record;
Rome, Corinth, Galatus, Ephesus, hear
What Phillippians, Colossians, Thessalonians revere;

Timotheus, Titus, Philemon, precede
The Epistle, which Hebrews most gratefully read;
James, Peter and John, with the short letter Jude.
The rounds of Divine Revelation conclude."

And here is one that seems to show, which way the wind is blowing, for according to style experts, skirts are going to be longer—maybe:

SKIRTS LIMITED FOR THE LASSIES OF SALVATION ARMY.

Chicago, Ill.—The skirts of Salvation Army lassies must not be more than seven inches above the street level, according to an order issued here by Commissioner William Peart, leader of the organization in fifteen Middle-West States.—Cincinnati Times-Star, January 28, 1922.

* * *

From the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Tribune, of February 3, 1922, we learn that J. C. Skemp, general secretary of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, with offices at Lafayette, Ind., has tendered his resignation to take effect as soon as a successor can be elected. Brother Skemp is leaving his position because of ill health of himself and wife. Brother Skemp leaves his organization manifold better than when he took the reins, and every one that had the privilege of knowing him, wishes him and his wife success in their search for the greatest prize we know of—good health.

* * *

Our old friend, Henry W. Zeidler, of Local 134, Scranton, Pa., sent us the following clipped from the Scranton Times, of February 18, 1922. It is worth careful reading, for the Mayor of Wilkes-Barre turns loose several verbal wallops, prompting one to inquire, what sort of a skull hood a fellow must use who has nothing in his bean but a "sedlitz powder brain":

HART FIRES BOMB INTO CAMP OF HIS DRY LAW ENEMIES.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Feb. 18.—Attacked at a noon-day Bible class luncheon at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday, by the Rev. J. Mitchell Bennetts, president of the Anti-Saloon league, Mayor Daniel L. Hart fired another broadside into the camp of those who would assail him, and those of his colleagues in city council who passed a resolution favoring a modification of the Volstead act permitting the sale of light wines and good beer. Mr. Bennetts is reported to have used the word "leper" in his reference to the mayor and city fathers in his talk yesterday.

Mayor Hart says "a man with a seidlitz powder brain like Bennetts could not offer an argument but resorted to abuse" and has satisfied the mayor and the people "that mentally he (Bennetts) is as narrow as a string bean." Mayor Hart tells of his being a member of the Y. M. C. A., and its friends and recalls that "when nights were damp and chilly and those parlor nurtured brothers—like Bennetts, who seek greatness because of prejudice—were afraid to go out and risk their precious lives in soliciting money for Y. M. C. A. drives, I did it." The mayor says that in return all he has had "is condemnation, abuse and vilification from one who is supposed to be its leader."

KICKS "YELLOW DOG."

Here's the way Mayor Hart made answer to the Rev. Mr. Bennetts:

"I had determined not to reply to any more of the attacks of the cake-eaters, but when a man of the caliber of the Rev. Mitchell Bennetts, who has made a public nuisance of himself in this vicinity for years, attacks me, then I have to do as I always do to a yellow dog that snaps at my heels—kick him away. I do not know Mr. Bennetts—thank God, but I am satisfied that mentally he is as narrow as a string bean.

"He flashes across the pages of the newspaper occasionally with the brilliancy of a pumpkin moonshine and with just as much intellect. Of course, a man with a seidlitz powder brain like Bennetts could not offer an argument, but resorted to abuse. Somewhere in the Bible he found something about lepers and applied it to earnest men who are trying to give Wilkes-Barre good government. If Mr. Bennetts knew more about scripture he would have a broader view of life, less bitterness of mind and certainly a greater Americanism.

"Why does the Y. M. C. A., which is supposed to be a big, liberal and great American body, permit these Bolsheviks to gather for a so-called noon-day lunch, which, from their resolutions, seems to be a sort of old woman's sewing circle with criticism for only one class of people? In vain I have looked to come from this mud puddle of narrowness one real American thought. All that leaks out from their meetings is a protest against the laughter and enjoyment of the people.

"My God! Why is it that people who aspire to be recognized as holy think it necessary to reach up their narrow hands and try to shut out God's sunshine? No, I am not delivering a sermon, but if they keep this up, I'll hire a hall and show them what real religion is. Religion is God, who has been forgotten by these fellows who are worshipping in his stead, this disturbance-creating Volstead.

AGAINST UNFAIR METHODS.

"I am not against the Volstead act. Never was and never will be. But, I am against unfair methods used by men who insult God by using him as a shield and robbing Americans of their just right. I don't care what these fellows who do not understand life say. America is arising and will demand that this great question of beer be referred to the people. The man who opposes the right of the people to decide this question is not an American. He may preach, he may quote, he may shout, but this is a government of the people with the consent of the governed, and that's the kind of American I am.

"I am a member of the Y. M. C. A. I have been its friend. When nights were damp and chilly, and these parlor nurtured brothers—the Bennetts, who seek greatness because of prejudice—were afraid to go out and risk their precious lives in soliciting money for Y. M. C. A. drives, I did it. In return all I have had is condemnation, abuse and now vilification from one who is supposed to be its leader.

"For the benefit of Mr. Bennetts, who quotes scripture, I desire to quote the following taken from Proverbs, Chapter 31, sixth and seventh verses:

"'Give strong drink to them that are sad, and wine to them that are grieved in mind.'

"'Let them drink and forget their want, and remember their sorrows no more!'

"I am satisfied that if fellows like this man Bennetts, whose heart has never beat with religious tolerance for humanity, took a few shots of strong drink they would 'remember their sorrows no more.'

"Will this gang of Lenine and Trotsky's, who have noonday lunch at the Y. M. C. A., turn American? Will they please remember that with the Christian tolerance which they profess that just because a man does not think along their narrow lines he is no less the man and certainly no less the American.

WHY NOT TOLERANCE?

"Christ taught tolerance. Why don't these fellows preach it? There is a great song called 'Rally 'Round the Flag.' Wouldn't it be great if they would sing it and believe in it? Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could carry back to Monticello the great reverence and the great respect for the Declaration of Independence and the man who wrote it?

"To be absolutely candid, and everybody knows it, we must have less interference in government from narrow little people, be they clergymen or not. They must respect their fellow men if they wish their fellow men to respect them. The greatest problems the world has ever known have been solved by the American people without the aid of the clergymen or the church, and they are going to solve this one, which is beer and light wines.

"Bennetts for years has been making a living off the Anti-Saloon League. His bread came from narrowness and prejudice. He is not an adornment to any community.

"The passage of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead act was a fraud on Americans. They were enacted when the soldiers were abroad and they had no say whatever. We should have a vote and the old town will offer a tremendous majority in favor of light wines and beer.

"Some diluted minister in the southern part of the city attacked me also, but like most clergymen, he used a whole lot of words and did not say anything.

"Somebody told me Noah was a drunkard, but still he was the only man out of the whole world who was saved. His surroundings certainly indicated that he was wet? But why drag old man Noah into this controversy? He may have been all right.

"I am not speaking of all ministers. The majority of them are good, decent Americans. I am speaking of the cheap seekers of notoriety."

We are betting a choice chunk of gorgonzola that, Rev. J. Mitch Bennetts will be pointed out for months to come, as "the guy with the Seidlitz Powder Brain." At that, we believe Mayor Hart compliments J. Mitch, for the majority of his kind parade corn-meal mush in the dome for the stuff to think with.

One of the officers of the Salvation Army, in an address to women, not long ago, made a very vehement affirmation to the effect that a woman who painted her face was guilty of cheating. Be that as it may, one of the pupils in the back row of our little class, rises to say that "girls who do daub up with paint and cosmetics are only kidding themselves; they don't get away with it, for even a one-eyed guy wises up to the decoration."

Just as the year 1921 was skipping to a close we found the following item in our afternoon paper, which carries the A. P. service:

FACE PAINT COSTS MORE THAN HOUSE PAINT.

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 10.—Expenditures for cosmetics almost equalled the amount spent for house paint in St. Louis this year, according to estimates. A local wholesale drug company stated the annual bill for face paint, powder, etc., approximated $3,000,000 and the bill for paints and varnish totalled about $5,000,000.

If that Salvation Army officer is right, there's a lot of cheating being done in the Mound City.

As a reminder to the boys on the firing line, that the Volstead law is not making the moral clean up promised by the Anti-Saloon League, the following, printed in the New York Globe, February 17, 1922 is but one of many similar reports coming from all sections of the country:

Albany, Feb. 17.—A 25 per cent increase in the number of commitments to penal institutions in New York State in 1921 is reported by the State Commission of Prisons in a statement issued today. Commitments increased in 1921 to 73,947 from 59,033 in 1920.

James M. Allison, who furnishes copy for the department, "New York Day By Day," in the Times-Star of Cincie O-Dry-O, offered the following recently:

A Federal prohibition officer who has lately been made the responsible head of one of the departments of enforcement in this city, made this statement to the newspaper reporters yesterday: "I realized for the first time, early Monday morning, when I looked over a crowd of more than 2,000 persons, most of whom were drinking liquor with no attempt to conceal it, the hopelessness of the task which is before us in the attempt to enforce prohibition. Some of us favor prohibition, some of us do not, but all of us try to do our duty. I have felt heretofore that prohibition could and would be enforced, but the scenes I witnessed on the holiday nights have caused me to change my opinion. Prohibition will never be enforced in a place like New York until there is a decided change of sentiment."

This is a frank statement. And, in connection with it, one may unquestionably and quite reasonably ask why a man who is not in favor of prohibition accepts a job as an enforcement agent, and whether such a man can be depended upon to really try to do his duty or just to try to be comfortable and prosperous.

One of the toughest problems in the field of labor in this country is the textile trades. For decades the employes have been underpaid and overworked. Despite almost persistent campaigning the workers have been unable to see the need of organization. This has made the task of the United Textile Workers of America, gigantic in every respect. Right now the battle is on in the older textile centers, and the union men and women, as usual, bearing the brunt of the battle, a battle for conditions which the greater number of workers at the industry do not understand, because of inability to read or understand the common language of the country. The following editorial from the New York Globe of February 16, 1922, gives an assortment of facts and figures that will aid the reader to understand the real situation:

WAGES IN COTTON MILLS.

An extensive strike is being conducted in the cotton mills of New England. With few exceptions the mill operatives of Rhode Island and New Hampshire are reported to have stopped work in protest against a 20 per cent wage reduction and an increase in working hours from forty-eight to fifty-four a week.

No rule for fixing wages is commonly accepted in the United States. Most working people consider vaguely the cost of living on reaching a judgment on that question. Employers, especially in a time of falling prices, are inclined to think sufficient the market rate—that is, the least at which workers can be found. The public compromises between these two positions, tending to support the cost of living as a guiding principle in affairs of this kind.

The wages paid in the cotton industry are commonly low. It is possible to get a general picture of the situation from an inquiry conducted by the National Industrial Conference Board, an employers' association affiliated with the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association. The conference board copied the payrolls of manufacturing establishments. Its "Wage Changes in Industry," Research Bulletin 35, traces the wage changes between September, 1914, and December, 1920.

At neither period was the wage scale equal to the cost of living. In September, 1914, the manufacturers reported that their average wage to male workers was $9.91 weekly. In December, 1920, this had become $20.70. The average wage for female workers was $7.71 in September, 1914, and $13.95 in December, 1920. Since December, 1920, a number of wage reductions have been announced. Wages have tended to approach the pre-war level.

The National Industrial Conference Board has also made calculations of the minimum cost of living. This was done in behalf of the industrial associations which support the board, and the data were intended for use in wage controversies. The estimate for Worcester, Mass., for June, 1920, gave $1,733.38 as the minimum cost of living for five persons.

These figures, which have in every case been supplied by the manufacturers, explain the revolt in the cotton factories. The oldest industry in the United States seems unable or unwilling to pay living wages to the workers essential to its own life.

Seems a pity that there could not be established something on the order of the whipping post that Delaware became noted for some years ago.

Cotton mill owners and managers might be strapped over a barrel and good sense pounded into them and selfishness whipped out by persistent application of a good barrel stave. Fewer of them would be able to enjoy vacations in Europe if they paid a living wage to the men and women of the industry which is making them wealthy beyond the dream of the most insistent hop fiend.

Speaking about barrel staves, glimpse the following item just to get an idea of what a big stick really looks like:

LOG SO BIG IT RUINS SAWMILL.

Hoquaim, Wash., Feb. 17.—An enormous spruce log, 10 feet in diameter, believed the largest ever cut in this section, recently was sawed into 16,000 board feet of lumber here. When first put on the saw, the big log broke the mill machinery and was not cut until repairs were made.

Some time ago a larger log was brought here, but no mill would tackle it and it was placed in a Hoquaim park for exhibition purposes.

After reading that item you may have an idea of what the "log-rollers" could do if they would make up their minds to spend less time in their snore chambers. Betcha it won't be many days before some one of those lightning calculators will be telling us how many toothpicks could be made from that bit of timber.

If the powers-that-be do not put a stop to that man Samuel Untermyer, he will be telling a lot of inside stuff that will come close to spilling the beans. Here we have him quoted as saying that "The electric light bulb companies of America are picking off over and above legitimate profits, the tidy sum of a hundred millions of dollars annually. Bulbs that are made for less than six cents sell 28 to 35 cents each. Others produced at a cost of about 16 cents are sold for 52 cents each. He did not say anything about the trick wages paid to the makers of the bulbs, the workers in the shops, packers and shippers. Betting ten pennies that none of them own a fliv, and few of them know what a juicy tenderloin steak with fixin's, tastes like.

Did you ever meet up with a sockdolager? Well, make the acquaintance of one by perusing the following from The Auto Worker, February, 1922. The man responsible for the article is many removes from a meek conservative too:

SAVED AGAIN.

The workers of America may now heave a sigh of relief. All of the problems that have troubled us will promptly proceed to fade away. We are to be saved. Great leaders have been selected for us, programs printed and all of the skids greased for capitalism. The "Workers' Party" has been born.

Jack Carey or Elbert Hubbard, I can't remember just which, not having taken the Roth memory course, once said that in times of stress when real leaders are needed that "A Man steps Up From the Crowd." This time we are so fortunate as to have seventeen leaders climbing over each others' necks to lead us.

A convention was held in New York City where there gathered the brains of the coming revolution. Resolutions were passed announcing the downfall of capitalism, the bankruptcy of business and the end of the interests. All of the great working class organizations affiliated with the American-Labor Alliance were represented, as was also the Workers' Council and the Workers' Educational Association.

Thus representing nearly three hundred actual members this mighty convention proceeded to solve the questions of the hour. After disposing of a few minor matters such as the Dangers of Capitalistic Imperialism, Militarism, the Disarmament Conference, the Indestructibility of Matter, the Third International, the Ifness of the What and the Consciousness of the Unconscious, the convention devoted several moments to the formation of a real revolutionary party for the revolutionary revolutionists.

The chairman of the convention announced, "We offer to American labor a class conscious fighting organization, with a set of fighting leaders." Each and every one of the entire seventeen "fighting leaders" guaranteed to be staggering around with a load of brains heavy enough to cause flat feet.

These seventeen "fighting leaders" have fought their way to "leadership" despite the high cost of print paper and regardless of pied type. They will now proceed to bore from within the unions, having missed meals by being bores without. So if you notice a new "fighting leader" hanging around like a first mortgage on the old homestead, take off your hat to one of the head ushers of the coming revolution.

During election days watch for the Workers' Party to come leaping to the surface like a ton of lead. The Workers' Party will be known by its proclamations and communiques. They announce in advance that they will "arouse the millions" with a cry of "Hail, Hail, Hail." It will be "Hail to the Workers' Republic of Russia," "Hail to the Workers' Democracy of Japan" and "Hail to the Workers' Party of America." So take out your hail insurance now while it is still cheap.

The Workers' Party will open all meetings with their membership campaign song, "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles." The official emblem will be the sign of the cross (double) and the revolutionary auger (signifying the bore). All local unions should be on the watch for the messenger of revolutionary light assigned to bore from within their organization. He should be welcomed as a "fighting leader" deserves to be welcomed. Remember these leaders are of the type who will take a foot if given an inch. Better give them the foot first.

That will not set very easy on the chest of the fellows who can and do use that proletarian patter, but who as a rule are about the punkiest kind of workers, eternally asking "what the union is going to do about it?"

From the Kablegram, Mount Morris, Ill., we clip the following:

The secretary dreamed that he died and, of course, went to heaven.

St. Peter, before letting him pick out his harp and assigning him to a place in the choir, said he would show him around the place. So they went directly down to the regions that Dante made famous.

"Here," said St. Peter, pointing to a bunch of fellows stewing in a big pan, "are some fellows you used to know. All these boys were formerly members of that lodge of yours for which you collected dues. They stuck you for from two to a dozen payments. That's why they're here."

The secretary called for a fan and a chair and sat down to take a look at the scenery. "Come," said St. Peter, at last. "We must go back to heaven and get set." "I'm all set," said the secretary. "This is heaven enough for me!"

Just a nice, quiet little tip to you, gentle, or otherwise, reader. Look at your membership book, if you have not paid dues recently, make the secretary smile by offering him two months' dues instead of one—you would not care to be one of that bunch in the pan, would you?

Talking about pans, Senator La Follette accomplished a nice bit of up-to-the-minute pan-ning when he addressed the Senate recently. The speech was what most organizers would call a cracker-jack. Among other things he said was the following:

"The American worker is today receiving less real wages than before the war. Instead of being a profiteer, he is gradually being forced into a condition of abject poverty through conspiracy of large employers and the national government."

It is hardly likely that you will find the La Follette speech printed in your daily paper, your local labor paper may reproduce part of it. Labor, Washington, D. C., February 18, 1922, prints it. If you are not a subscriber, perhaps one of your friends is, borrow the number and read it. By the way, do you read your home town labor paper. We get most of our good stuff from that source.

Didn't know that there was any such thing as humor in South Carolina, but the credit mark on the following appears to approximate, as Grogan would say:

ROOSTERS AND MEN.

I love to watch the rooster crow,
He's like so many men I know,
Who brag and bluster, rant and shout
And beat their manly chests without
The first damn thing to brag about.

We clipped that out of an exchange which credits it to the South Carolina Pythian Bulletin.

One reason why we occasionally have doubts about giving credit, is that so many scissor handlers purposely or unintentionally overlook giving the author of a good story, poem or editorial credit due. In our March, 1921, number of the MIXER AND SERVER we printed—page 60—a little rhyme entitled "For Sale," which we clipped from the Elevator Constructor, and along about St. Valentine's day this year, we saw that bit of rhyme reproduced in the Cincinnati Post, and credited to a publication gotten out by a soap-making concern at Ivorydale, just beyond the grave-yard district of Cincin. In that one case it was "99-100 pure" grabbing of credit belonging to another fellow.

Judging from a news item bearing date of February 18, 1922, sent out from Washington, the housing problem may be on its way for solution; at least that is the impression left with us after reading the referred to item which we herewith reprint:

NEW AGREEMENT EXPECTED TO END BUILDING STRIKES.

Washington, Feb. 18.—A national agreement, designed to settle the disputes said to have caused most of the strikes in the building industry in the past, was reached by the Associated General Contractors of America, the American Institute of Architects, the Engineering Council, the National Building Trades Employers' association and the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor through the National Board of Jurisdictional Awards at its quarterly meeting just concluded here. The agreement provides that local building trade councils shall suspend unions, and refuse to recognize or support those which fail to abide by decisions of the board. It also provides that general contractors and sub-contractors shall incorporate into agreements with union labor, a provision for compliance with all decisions of the board and shall refuse employment to members of local unions, which do not agree to this. Architects and engineers also are bound to insert in all their specifications and contracts, a clause that all the board's decisions shall be followed.

Having perused that item, weighing it with care, there is chance for you to conclude that the outlook is "not so worse."

May you live to see the time when the International Union which the MIXER AND SERVER speaks for, will elect representatives to meet with the organized catering industry employers of the land, to enter into contractual relations for one, if not several years. Smile you son-of-a-gun, but that day is coming just as sure as that J. P. Morgan will never walk out of a cafe because the crew is a non-union crew; though if J. P. lives long enough he may find it hard pickings to locate a non-union feed shop.

Boy, page a flock of fellows living in close proximity to Seal Rock so that they can peruse the following, which is clipped from the Times-Star recently:

CORNER IN LOS ANGELES IS MOST CONGESTED IN AMERICA.

Los Angeles.—A report of the Greater Los Angeles Traffic commission, organized to study the city's traffic problems, shows that at Fifth Street and Broadway, in the heart of the downtown district, there is a greater congestion than in any other city in America. A recent census shows 36,000 persons walked across the intersection of the two streets in an hour.

Methinks I hear a voice, or, is it two voices, one from Manhattan, the other from Chi, both saying: "Huh, that town is trying to attract attention away from the events of recent occurrence. They'd better get busy out in the near-by sticks and have the movie 'maggots' pay a decent wage to their workmen." And that reminds me, are you slipping your small change over to movie houses that are running the films of the non-union concerns? If you are, how do you reconcile that sort of work with loyalty to other workers.

"Gassed." That word is going to have a new significance henceforth. In Nevada two Chinks are going to be sent "west" by lethal gas, the last week of April. The names of the two Chinks are Hughie Sing and E. Z. John. Some handles, eh?

One of our inquiring brothers asked if we could verify a statement relative to official announcements made by Empire State authorities, in effect that there are more alcoholic patients in the New York City hospitals than when the country was wet. We've got the dope, all right, but in advance of offering we want to know when the country has not been wet? The following is an Associated Press dispatch of the date given:

NEW YORK SUFFERING FROM TOO MUCH ALCOHOL.

New York, Jan. 25.—Commissioner Bird S. Coler of the Department of Welfare and Correction has made public figures showing that illness and disability due to alcoholic drinks is on the increase in this city. "There are more patients in the alcoholic wards than ever," declared Dr. George O'Hanlon, superintendent of Bellevue Hospital. "We are receiving more patients than before prohibition." Commissioner Coler declared.

At a recent banquet given in New York City, Father James Duffy, chaplain of the famous Sixty-ninth New York Regiment, one of the units of the 27th Division, is quoted by James Allison as having told the following stories:

Father Duffy's first story concerned a conversation with a New York sexton.

"Father," said he, "is it true that St. Peter was a Jew?"

"He was," replied the priest.

"And St. Paul?"

"He was a Jew, too. All the apostles were Jews."

"Thin how th' divvle did they let a good thing like th' Catholic church get away fr'm thim into th' hands o' the Eyetalyans?"

Recounting his military experiences, Father Duffy told of the feeling of conspicuousness which was his when he first donned uniform. A slight embarrassment in this respect was much accentuated when he encountered a group of women, among them a gigantic and hard-featured female of Fenian tendencies who was distinctly abusive, recognizing only the uniform and not its religious insignia. "A foin, brave man ye are," she said, "sthartin' out t' help th' English win th' war!"

This was more than even a pastoral temperament and a jovial spirit could tolerate in silence. "Madame," said the priest. "If you are married, I know a man who's braver."

Father Duffy told of the painful and unwelcome efforts at equitation which his duties occasionally forced him to make. Of all things military he despised horseback riding most. "Once," said he, "I think I scandalized Gen. Pershing by venturing the opinion that Henry Ford had made us a better horse than the Almighty."

Joe Walker, on his way to visit relatives in the Ould Dart, stopped in London for a couple of days. During his stay he learned the following song, which he says is very popular with a bunch working in the big town, former plate peddlers of the U. S. A., but right now not very anxious to return:

Sing a song of sixpence,
A bottle full of rye.
Four and twenty Yankees
Sitting parched and dry.
When the rye was opened
The Yanks began to sing:
"We won't go back to U. S. A.
God save the King!"

Speaking of London brings to mind the following clipping printed shortly after the demise of Viscount Bryce:

BRYCE LAUGHED ON BEING TOASTED TO YANKEE TUNE.

Tampa, Fla.—The sense of humor possessed by the late Viscount Bryce, formerly British ambassador to the United States, who passed away recently in England, was strikingly illustrated at a banquet tendered the statesman here some years ago by the Tampa Board of Trade.

The orchestra at the hotel where the banquet was held was composed of Tyrolese, none of whom could speak English. Willis B. Powell, then secretary of the board, was charged with the preparation of the musical programme and he undertook to instruct the orchestra leader that when the toastmaster did the honors to Great Britain and the ambassador, the orchestra should play "God Save the King." To be certain that the leader understood his instructions Powell whistled a few bars of the British national anthem.

The auspicious moment arrived. The toastmaster proposed a toast to the mother country and her ambassador, the company arose—and the orchestra burst out with "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

The guests were struck dumb and all eyes turned toward Mr. Bryce. That gentleman laughed until tears streamed down his face.

Mr. Bryce was so greatly amused at the incident he took steps to see that the newspapers in Great Britain recorded it and from that source it went all over the world.

While the soft-handed pulpit-pounders were following the instructions of the Strategy Board of the Anti-Saloon League, things happened in America which the Church folks are rather tardy in acknowledging. Newspaper space-sellers kidded some of them into advertising their churches and services. Here is how one of the live-wires regards that campaign:

Columbus, O., Jan. 24.—"Such a campaign as a 'Go-to-Church Sunday' is a frank and flamboyant confession of defeat," said the Rev. Lloyd C. Douglass of Akron, in an address at the Ohio Pastors' convention here. He added:

"It is equivalent to saying: 'The churches have become depopulated and the time has come when they must institute desperate measures to perpetuate themselves.'"

The right attitude for the church he said, was "the Galilean psychology of self-respect, conscious of its high commissions, fearless, exultant in its strength. If you desire the public's interest in your cause don't beg the public to accept it, but make it exert itself to find out about it."

Many of you will recall the "Save the Boy" campaign, how these sky-pilots rambled up one side and down the other pleading to the voter to kill the Court of Barleycorn, and while they were doing that task here is evidence from one of their own number admitting incompetency:

1,052,000 OHIO CHILDREN "SPIRITUALLY ILLITERATE."

Columbus, O., Jan. 24.—"Ohio has 1,052,000 children who are spiritually illiterate," Rev. J. A. Verberg, Columbus religious educational worker attached to Presbyterian State headquarters, declared today at the Ohio Pastors' convention here. "Many of them become a menace to the State."

If Ohio with its population of 5,759,394 offers such a showing, how about the other political units which make no pretense with keeping up such gigantic religious institutions as the Buckeye State?

Just to prove that we still think about the stuff that cheers, peruse the following which was printed recently:

"DRINK STRONG OR NOT AT ALL," EPITAPH ON TOMBSTONE ADVISES.

Marysville, O.—Dr. William M. Goff, of Marysville, while serving in the Medical Corps during the World war, copied the following epitaph from a tombstone at Winchester, England:

"In memory of Thomas Thatcher, a Grenadier in the North Regiment of Hant's Militia, who died of a violent fever contracted while drinking small cold beer when hot, the 12th day of May, 1764, aged 26 years. In grateful remembrance of whose universal good will towards his comrades this stone is placed here at their expense, as a small testimony of their regard and concern:

"Here sleeps in peace a Hampshire Grenadier,
Who caught his death by drinking cold small beer.

Soldiers, be wise from his untimely fall,
And when you drink, drink strong or not at all."
—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The next two exhibits were clipped from the Post, of this city, on the 22nd, Washington's Birthday. Are they worthy of perusal? If you skip them you lose information worth while possessing, that's all:

NOTHING IS IMPOSSIBLE.

Could you keep a fire burning under water?

It has just been done, 50 feet under the surface of New York harbor.

Near Staten Island, a 36-inch steel water pipe on the floor of the ocean was smashed by a dredge. It had to be cut away.

Divers came up out of the muddy depths and reported the water immediately extinguished their steel-cutting acetylene torches.

But an "underwater fire chisel" has been developed by a company that salvages submarine wrecks. This chisel was brought into play. As it burns, it generates a gas which forces back the water on all sides, leaving an open or hollow space for the flame.

That is scientific magic.

If the inventor had lived 500 years ago his exhibition would have made even kings kneel to him in superstitious terror.

Archimedes, who discovered the principle of the fulcrum, said he could move the earth if some one gave him a fulcrum, a long enough lever and something away from the earth to stand on.

Nothing was impossible, to Archimedes.

Yet, if he'd been asked to weigh the earth, he probably would have said it couldn't be done unless he had a big enough pair of scales and a star to rest them on.

Modern scientists, with a delicate mechanism which measures the attractive power of lead and other elements, have discovered the earth is about six times as heavy as an equivalent bulk of water.

Thus the earth has been weighed accurately—found to tip the scales at 6,000 billions of billions of tons.

Such achievements should inspire all troubled and discouraged folk. All problems can be solved. The solution is found by the one who never gives up the fight, who refuses to recognize the phantom, defeat.

Nutmeg State municipality follows lead of several mid-west cities in asking for a modification of Volstead law. Read about it:

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 14.—After a spirited debate the Hartford Board of Aldermen tonight passed a resolution calling upon the Government to modify existing prohibition laws so as to permit the sale of light wines and beer. The resolution was introduced by Alderman Theodore W. Laimen, whose original recommendation provided that money derived from this source be used to defray expenses of a bonus for ex-service men, but the bonus clause was stricken from the resolution before it was passed.

Mayor Newton C. Brainard said after the meeting that he would probably veto the measure.

Ben Brooks, of Columbus, Ind., condemned to die May 1st, for the murder of A. B. Montgomery, of Seymour, Ind., joked with his wife about his finish, saying: "Twont be long now until they will begin throwing dirt in my face." His wife laughed with him and thought it was a great joke.—Ivory.

.

Don't allow any one to convince you that little things don't count. You would hardly regard a dog's tail as being a big thing, and yet—but read further and discover why the comment:

TWO BOYS SAVED BY TAIL OF A DOG.

Fresno, Calif., February 1.—Floyd Johnson and Alton Self, both 16, lost in a blizzard in the mountains, 30 miles east of here were led to safety by holding to the tail of a dog, it was learned today. A short time later, a rescue party found two other boys, lost in the same blinding storm, lying in the snow exhausted.

Some tale, yeh, and some tail attached to that dog. Betcha he will have plenty of bones to hide in the future.

.

Can't tell you what happened in Chicago when the miners, railroaders and shop workers held a conference, but the papers speak of a triple alliance and leave the impression that something big is liable to come from the gathering. Maybe, can't tell from here; but if we do not get a better example of sticking to your friends than was put on exhibition in November, 1920—but that is getting away from the subject, ain't it? All right, bring on your triple alliance, possibly it may prove more effective than its name implies.

Might as well get ready to start something of that kind, for it seems that Morgan and the rest of the dollar barons have their name branded on the dominant political parties now. Well, who the Heck owns the Anti-Saloon League, anyway?

.

A real wise guy said that "Half trying is the secret of many failures." Give that another passage across your memory cylinder; let it make the required indentation.

Now you know the underlying reason for that down-at-heeledness of that local union you are or mayhap have been a member of.

Half trying like the fellow looking for a job and praying to beat the band not to find one.

Pushing a pound's worth and pulling back a ton: never get anywhere with that kind of boost—that is, anywhere up near the head of the procession.

We have been—and that means the whole bunch—sort of waiting to see what was going to happen, and while we were doing that little waiting stunt, every cross-road peddler, beefsteak burner and soft drink hister sneaked into a job, told the boss he'd do the job for less than the regular fellows, and now we are passing by the front wondering how the hades it all happened. But it's fact we are facing and not a theory, therefore we are overdue to get back on the firing line and look after our affairs.

We don't want to give the croakers a chance to say "What did we tell you." There's your union gone kersmash because that aggregation of high class workers were too doggoned tired and lazy to attend meetings, line up new members and show an interest in the only thing on earth that could be useful to them. No, that is not scolding, nor preaching; it's simply laying the cards on the table and inviting you to take a glimpse at a rotten hand.

We are going to do better later on; but why wait until a later date? We could begin now and get the old boat sailing along fine and dandy before the flowers begin to bloom. Well, fellers and girls, here is where we get off, thanks for your company; see you next month and hope that none of you will get the spring fever until after you land at least two new candidates for membership in your local union. JAY-ELL-Ess.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT SHOULD BE RECOGNIZED.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS in the American Federationist.

For more than a year the present government of Mexico, elected in what was undoubtedly the fairest election Mexico has ever had, has been in power and has maintained in Mexico a degree of public order that compares favorably with the degree of public order maintained in any other country.

If the State Department of the United States is operating under the formula laid down by former-President Wilson in his refusing to recognize the usurper the dictator Huerta, as it seems to be, the administration of President Obregon has undoubtedly met all the requirements of that formula and is entitled to recognition.

It is true that the United States government, through the State Department, has asked the government of Mexico to enter into a treaty prior to the extending of recognition. It must be admitted, however, that the Mexican administration has had all the better of the argument on this point.

It sets forth that it cannot in honor enter into an agreement which would compel it to do those things which it intends to do and is doing. This position is one which commands the respect of those who are not in downright opposition to everything Mexican. It is contended, furthermore, that such a treaty even if entered into would be a ridiculous proceeding inasmuch as a treaty with an unrecognized government—and that is what the American State Department is seeking—would be, after all, a worthless instrument unless ratified by the Mexican government following recognition.

Americans who are not prejudiced one way or another by a desire to get possession of Mexican natural resources upon the most favorable terms and conditions, are coming more and more to the conclusion that there has been something more than diplomacy at work in the relations between the two countries. It is a fact beyond dispute that American capitalists have sought to shape the policy of the United States in such a manner as to bring to American investors the largest possible return. When these investors felt that intervention in Mexico would be a good thing for them, they were for intervention. More recently it evidently has been their conviction that by attempting to retard the granting of recognition they could wring larger concessions and more favorable investment terms from the Mexican government.

It is quite possible that the complete story of the intrigues of American bankers, American oil interests and American investors and would-be investors in Mexican mineral, land and timber resources, will never be known. Sufficient is known, however, to make certain the fact that the amount of intrigue has been much larger than that of which we have knowledge.

In this connection it is interesting to note the curious conduct of William Randolph Hearst through his various newspapers in now attacking and exposing the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico, the principal organized exponent of American imperialism in Mexico and the principal organized appetite for Mexican oil and other natural wealth. It is being shown that representatives of this organization engaged in an intrigue for the fomenting of an armed rebellion against the government of President Obregon, the leader of which was to have been General Pablo Gonzalez. Of course, if this plan had succeeded, Gonzalez would have become President of Mexico and the service tool of the American investment interests.

At about the time when the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico is shown to have engaged in conversations with General Gonzalez, with a view to the overthrow of the established government in Mexico, the American Federationist published a detailed expose of that association and made clear its purpose and the character of its operations. In the American Federationist for June, 1920, in which the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico was fully discussed, the following conclusion appears:

The conviction is inescapable that the association has for its purpose the arousing of suspicion, distrust and enmity in the United States toward Mexico. They may never use the word "intervention" and they may decry its use but what need have they to ask for intervention if they can get everyone else to demand it! Their propaganda is of a character calculated to arouse anger and resentment. Once begin a search for information about Mexico in the offices of 347 Fifth Avenue, New York City, and you find yourself at the beginning of a trail which consists of one denunciation after another, one condemnation after another, one criticism after another, of things Mexican and of every policy of the government of the United States which seems to indicate a desire for peaceful and harmonious relations between the two nations.

This was shortly after the conclusion of the celebrated hearings held by the Senate Committee, presided over by Secretary of the Interior, Albert B. Fall, then a member of the Senate. The National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico made the fullest possible use of the hearings conducted by Senator Fall and it was freely charged that the association co-operated in the securing of witnesses and that the attorney for the Fall Committee was on the most friendly terms with the officers of the National Association. The manner in which the hearings were conducted lent much color to these assertions.

At the time when the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico was most busily engaged in propaganda and intrigue, the Hearst newspapers not only were silent, but were publishing with evident relish testimony before the Fall Committee which was unfriendly to Mexico and which was entirely satisfactory to the organized oil interests. As a matter of fact, the oil interests can be injured but little by an exposition now of what they were doing from a year to a year and a half ago. The Hearst publications could not have been in ignorance of the character of the National Association for the Protection of American Rights in Mexico at the time when that organization was most bitterly engaged in propaganda and intrigue, because sufficient information was available to them, as to all other publications, to indicate specifically what was that character.

Furthermore, in addition to the information which was made available about this particular organization, the Pan-American Federation of Labor subsequently made public protest against intrigue against Mexico which was being carried on in the border states of the United States.

What Mr. Hearst is saying now is interesting and it is to be hoped that all possible information not yet obtained will be secured and made public, but however important that may be, the paramount issue at the present moment is the issue of recognition of the legally-established and well-conducted government of the Mexican republic. By all of the standards of government in the diplomatic recognition of one nation by another, Mexico is entitled to recognition as an act of justice. Absolutely the only persons who can conceivably derive advantage from the continued withholding of recognition are certain American bankers who hope to drive a better bargain with Mexico by creating in Mexico the impression that they have some influence in determining the matter of recognition. For everyone else, whether Mexican or American, the advantage lies in granting immediate recognition.

The paramount reason, however, why recognition should be granted is that the Mexican government has comported itself in a manner which justifies recognition and the Mexican government is a government which holds its power as the result of the democratically expressed mandate of the people.

80-8-18--7--88-8-82-18-8-15

LAW OR NO LAW.

Congressman Gallivan asks "every man who means to be square with himself, sincere prohibitionists included, whether the conditions for the last two years have been anything but straight hell." Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, who does not rank as a Puritan, has appointed a Methodist minister to be Law Enforcement Commissioner of Chicago, "with supreme powers in caring for the city's moral welfare." In a Boston courtroom yesterday Enforcement Agent Roberts charged a United States Commissioner with blocking justice.

The night before, in a speech, Roy A. Haynes, National Prohibition Commissioner, used the words "apathetic" and "lethargic" in describing the public attitude on the drink question. What makes him talk so? To judge from the amount of space given to this subject in the press day after day, the public attitude on it is anything but "apathetic" or "lethargic."

Conferences on world affairs come and go. Congress sidesteps one important question, and then sidesteps the next. Fall sports fade into Winter sports, and Winter sports are about to give way to the Spring training season of the ball players. Even sensational murders have their day and are forgotten. But whatever happens or does not happen, alcohol is taken internally. There is always plenty of fresh and interesting copy on the desk of the rum editor.

More than two years ago, after six months of war-time prohibition, the 18th amendment became a part of the Constitution. Most people thought it meant that the country was going to be as dry as a salt lick. Some of the rest decided that it would be a lot of fun to watch the bootleggers being chased by the Federal agents. A few resolute wets put copper worms on the spouts of the family teapots and prepared to labor secretly.

No one foretold what has actually happened. There has never been a law broken with anything like the frequency with which the Volstead act has been broken. Every class has furnished a full quota of recruits to the ranks of the law-breakers. When a $6,000 limousine smashes itself, and its occupants, on a stone wall out by the Country Club, or when a wedding in a shanty down by the railroad tracks ends by three or four of the guests sticking carving knives into one another, everyone knows the reason. Even the smuggling of finery by stalwart Republicans during the days of high protective tariff was not a matter of which the smugglers boasted openly. But those who snap their fingers at the Constitution, as they open the back door for the bootlegger, are proud of what they do. When they tell about it the next day, their friends ask and receive the telephone number of the bootlegger.

The reason that most people observe the laws of their land, during the era when laws were kept, was not because of the number of detectives waiting to pounce upon the lawless. When laws are kept, it is public sentiment which keeps them.

The law against the manufacture, importation, transportation or sale of intoxicating liquors has been broken incessantly during the past two years. The contempt in which this law has been held is already weakening the authority of all laws. What right has the man who runs a still in a cellar to be horrified if some other man runs a counterfeiting plant in an attic? But the pick-pocket who goes to the penitentiary has a right to be grieved when he thinks of the immunity of those who are growing rich in the new and flourishing hooch industry.

The plain truth is that any law not enforced is a peril to all the other laws on the books. The drink question used to be a personal matter. It has now become a public affair of extreme importance. Are the American people to become law-breakers or law-keepers?

The situation cannot remain as it is, for it has developed an atmosphere in which no government can be expected to endure. We must make up our minds what to do with this 18th amendment. Our present attitude toward it is debauching public officials and giving private citizens a contempt for legal authority. Even the children are affected. Of what good is it to teach civics in the public schools when the children know of moonshine factories in their own homes?

Perhaps this law cannot be enforced. If so, a way must be found to get rid of it. But, if the law is to remain, there is no way out of enforcement. A few more years like the last two, and the typical American attitude toward law would be that of the anarchist.—UNCLE DUDLEY, in Boston Daily Globe, Saturday, February 11, 1922.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

OUTBREAK OF LAWLESSNESS

Is Due to Contempt for Law Engendered By Prohibition and the Volstead Act.

Professor Terry of Columbia, has this to say about Prohibition:

"I have a higher regard for the Anarchist than for the Supreme Court Justice who gives you a card to a 'safe bootlegger.'"

"If this (Volstead) law is not sacred, then no law is sacred."

"The Judge who breaks a law by buying a bottle of whiskey is giving the most plausible excuse possible to the hungry man who is tempted to break another law by stealing the Judge's pocketbook."

By LINDSAY DENISON.

Charles Thaddeus Terry, Dwight, Professor of Law at Columbia University, who is to retire from teaching in June, is of the opinion that all the crime waves and lawlessness and indifference to public rights today are due to the almost universal disobedience and flouting of the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and the Volstead Act.

"I have a higher regard for the Bolshevik and Anarchist who is against law and looks you in the eye and says so," he says, "than I have for the Supreme Court Justice who gives you a card to a 'safe bootlegger.'"

This isn't the reason for his retirement as law professor, of course. He is leaving Columbia to attend to his practice, because he thinks "that after thirty years there are enough lawyers scattered through every State in the Union who have heard what I have had to say. It is sufficient that among them there are a few who are so far from regarding me with aversion that they have some affection for me. This might not always continue to be true."

Mr. Terry smiles cheerily while he talks, but that is because he is courteous to all the world by habit. He interrupts his smile when talking about the harm already done and the danger of more harm to come by the public contempt of Law, and the Volstead law in particular. And he asks you to remember that while he is pleasant in discussing it, he is "good and plenty hot about it inside."

For purposes of getting a platform from which he can get attention to his preaching—for Mr. Terry's regard for Law duly enacted by representatives of the people has something of a religious fervor—Mr. Terry is willing to assume that the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act "were brought about by enormous pressure exerted by a small group of fanatics." He is willing to assume that the laws were "put over" while the soldiers were away in France, at a time when the folks at home were eager to forego anything—money, coal, sugar, meat—when told it was for the country's good. He admits that if the law had been made to suit his personal habits it would be "a temperance law, and not an absolute and indiscriminate prohibition."

"But," he retorts to these assumptions, "if the people have been fooled into adopting an unwise law—if they have adopted a law which they have learned not to like—there is just one way, and only one decent American way, of getting that law repealed or amended. And that is to enforce it so long as it remains a law."

"You can't sit down to dinner," he said, "without having Judges and lawyers begin winking and chuckling over the ease with which the Volstead Act can be cheated. Judges will offer you the address of a man who will have liquor sent to you on a truck with a Government agent sitting with the driver and a Government license number on the tailboard. Men who are chosen and sworn instruments of all law have so far forgotten their citizenship and their oaths and the faith of their fathers that they can sneer at an individual law which is no more and no less sacred than every other law in our whole Government. If this law is not sacred, enacted in conformity with all our institutions, then no law is sacred. And when we give common and easy consent to disregard for any one law, then we are headed toward anarchy."

"They tell me it is 'unpopular'; that the majority of the people are against it; that it can not be enforced. Then, for the sake of Heaven and the Government we love, which was framed by our fathers, let us take it out of the Law—but let us do it legally and decently."

"The Judge who breaks a law by buying a bottle of whiskey is giving the most plausible excuse possible to the hungry man who is tempted to break another law by stealing the Judge's pocket-book."

"Prohibition is no joke, in spite of those who try to make it a joke or pretend that they think it is a joke. So far from being a joke, it is Law, the mandate of the majority, which in a democracy is supposed to govern. It is little less than sickening to find those who pretend to glory in our democratic institutions, who put out their flags on national holidays, who cheer loudly at any patriotic sentiment, who would be inexpressibly shocked to be told to their faces that they are 'bad citizens,' nevertheless doing everything they can to undermine respect for Law."

"When the respect for Law is not itself an instinct in our citizens, our Government will fall. Never has there been such a riot of opposition to law and such connivance at its overthrow as has marked the conduct of the so-called 'best people' in connection with the Prohibition statutes."

"The other day a District Attorney of Pennsylvania boasted that he gave a 'party' to twenty-four other public officials, including Judges and members of his staff, and that because of the influence of some of the other public officials in attendance they were able to buy and transport and serve alcoholic beverages at their dinner, violating the law three different ways."

"At a very largely attended dinner of members of the Bar here about a year ago the subject of six out of seven speeches was ridicule of the Prohibition laws. Think of it! A party of lawyers, sworn by their oath of office to uphold the Constitution and the laws of the State, chuckling with satisfaction over stories of successful defeat of the statutes which they as officers of the court, were bound to uphold."

"All this would be highly amusing if it were not so deadly calamitous."

"The Law, in this country, is not a mere series of legislative or governmental pronouncements decreed by some arbitrary or tyrannical power. It is the pronouncement brought about by an opinion of the people themselves. It enters into every moment of our daily life, so that in a very true sense 'we live the Law.' The proper administration of the law, the effective execution of it, are vital to the maintenance of law and order."—New York Evening World, February 21, 1922.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

PROHIBITION SCARE HEADS.

Readers of newspapers—more particularly here than elsewhere, but pretty well everywhere, at that—are constantly confronted by headlines which announce plans of prohibition officials rigorously to enforce the law. "Lid to Be Screwed Down, Now," or "Town to Be a Real Sahara," or "Dry Forces Drive Booze to Cover" are examples of the felicitous way in which the headlines put it to us. When you read the articles introduced to your attention by these captional aphorisms, you usually find that a new prohibition officer, succeeding an old prohibition officer who has resigned or been transferred, has issued a formal statement about what he means to do; and, if you'd look up the newspaper files you'd find that the officer who has resigned or been transferred, issued just the same sort of a statement when he came on the job, with the result that there was a similar set of articles with a similar lot of zippy headlines; and meanwhile nothing much has happened except that sincere supporters of the law have gravely concluded that it is positively necessary to put more men on the prohibition pay roll, probably with the idea that the bootleggers eventually, however wealthy, will be unable to buy 'em all. This idea is one of the best things which ever developed for congressmen and other vote-sustained entities with minor dependents to take care of.

If you had read the New York newspapers during the last two weeks and had believed what you read, you would think New York surely was a dry town. The prohibition enforcement pay roll has been increased nearly one-third, by the appointment of additional agents. The enforcement offices have been moved into larger and more expensive quarters. Announcements have been issued daily about new enforcement plans and activities. Yet, the general and continuous sale of liquor goes on with positively not the slightest change. Prohibition absolutely does not function. No one can deny it. It may be unfair to call the enforcement exploitation mere hypocritical and time-serving pretense, but it is either that or impotence.

Last Saturday night, in one of the largest and best-known hotels, there was a banquet attended by more than three hundred members of a commercial association. Every sort of drink was served openly. True, the banqueters brought their own liquor supplies, but the waiters served everything in conventional style, and corkage was charged on scores of bottles of champagne, the waiters providing cooling buckets, ice and glasses. Even the check-room girls were tipsy when the affair was over. They begged for drinks instead of tips. That's one characteristic example of how prohibition prohibits.

On the first night of the blizzard a policeman entered one of the smart dancing places on Broadway. He stripped off the dripping raincoat which covered his uniform. Outside the wind howled and the flying sleet played a freezing tattoo on everything. The policeman settled comfortably into a chair at one of the outer tables. "Have a little ginger ale," said the head waiter, putting a glass before the policeman. "Do you good when you go outside again."

The policeman laughed and drank his highball with the enjoyment of a man who likes liquor and is chilled enough to need it. In plain sight, at nearly every other table, people were drinking wine, highballs or cocktails. Bottles were passed and glasses filled with no pretense at secrecy. Ten minutes after the policeman sat down and just before he started to leave, a fight started at a table half way across the room. Instantly the policeman, so complaisant about drinkers, was on the job. With husky strength and skill he extracted from the middle of a turbulent group the man who had started the trouble. "You must leave my place," said the proprietor. "We want only ladies and gentlemen here." "That's right," said the copper. "You'd better go home. You're drunk, now, and I don't want to pinch you." The policeman saw the tipsy belligerent into a taxicab and then strolled off into the blizzard.

In the side streets off of Broadway, dozens of new little restaurants have been opened in the past few months. In all of them drinks are served. That's why they were opened. It used to be that a restaurant needed a reasonably numerous patronage in order to exist. In little places like these one or two parties of an evening, buying drinks at the prevailing prices, put enough money in the till to leave a comfortable margin of profit on the day. There is a good deal to be desired with regard to the quality of the liquids they dispense, but at the worst, they are not poison, and that's the only essential requirement in the minds of the patrons of these places.

The further you get away from Broadway the more open is the disregard of the dry laws. There are scores of table d'hôte restaurants of the sort which have regular and accustomed patrons, where drinks are sold and served just as they used to be, except with regard to prices. Claret—really good claret, of which there is a mysteriously inexhaustible supply—costs two dollars a quart now instead of being served free, as formerly. Cocktails cost 75 cents each. Liquors of every variety can be had at 75 cents or a dollar a drink. With the prohibition officers announcing that New York is now nearly dry and soon to be completely arid, these are the conditions which exist. Hundreds of good citizens and their wives dine in restaurants every night and drink all they wish, in public.

In the past month liquor, supplied by the case, has grown more cheap and plentiful. Gin (Gordon gin, so far as label and taste go) can be had as low as $35 a case. Scotch, of standard brands and good quality, costs from $100 to $135 a case. American whiskey, though rather less plentiful, is about $10 a case cheaper than Scotch. Agents of the rum runners are now actually taking orders for "spring delivery"—goods to be brought in as soon as the snow is out of the mountains and motor travel practicable. You can order from these men any brand of any European wine or liquor in any quantity up to twenty cases. They will give you the price in advance and deliver the goods "as soon as they can be brought through." You pay nothing until your order has been filled. These chaps were making fortunes when winter stopped their operations. They pick up their supplies at secret points, on this side of the Canadian border, paying $60 or $65 a case for liquor which they sell here at a profit of at least 75 per cent. Spring, they say, will see them all briskly engaged again.—JAMES M. ALLISON, New York Correspondent of the Times-Star, Cincinnati, O., February 3, 1922.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

THE OPEN SHOP—AN ANALYSIS.

The following from the Oklahoma News, is an excellent analysis of the so-called "open shop." The writer understands his topic and discusses it so that he who runs may read:

Action of the packers which led to the present strike here and in other packing centers was a part of the open shop war now being waged in various industries by employers' associations throughout the land."

"Oklahoma thus becomes still more a battleground of the open shop war.

"Thousands of Oklahoma workers have been involved this year in struggles in which the open shop has been an issue.

"A man or woman, not a member of a labor union, is likely to say:

"Well, what about it? What do I care about unions? It won't make any difference to me if the unions are smashed."

"But it will make a difference to you. It will make a difference to all of us. If the open shop triumphs generally, followed as eventually it must be by reductions in wages and increases in working hours, the prosperity of the entire community will be affected.

"The merchant will suffer because low wages can't buy as often or as much as high wages.

"The money shortage will operate all along the line until it hits the professional man, none harder than the doctor, the dentist, the lawyer.

"The unorganized worker, whether in shop or office, suffers because it is impossible to injure one part of the economic body without affecting the body as a whole.

"We are of two groups, we Americans—those who can live without working and those who can't. All of the latter group will be affected by the success or failure of the open shop movement and a good many of the former group, whether they realize it now or not.

"Hence the open shop movement becomes something more than a dispute between corporations and unions. It is a matter of vast public concern, meriting the sober, analytical attention of every believer in fair play and the maintenance of American standards.

"The open shop almost always means the closed shop—closed to all men who believe that in union there is strength and that only by organizing, as their employers are organized, can they obtain and maintain recognition of their rights.

"There are employers who say they want the open shop merely because they dislike to deal with the unions. They say they are for high wages and good working conditions.

"Doubtless many of these men are sincere, and indeed there are today in Oklahoma, institutions in which union and non-union men work side by side at a wage rate and under conditions compatible with the union standards. But the employer hasn't always the full say. He is subject to circumstances and the conditions of competition.

"Standing together, workers can resist unfairness. Fighting single-handedly, which is the only kind of fighting they can do under the open shop, they can accomplish nothing.

"For instance, under the open shop there is nothing to prevent an employer from taking advantage of the present widespread unemployment, driving bargains with hungry men—individually, not collectively, playing off one man against another, whipping them one at a time.

"Let but one employer in an industry adopt this policy and all other employers in that industry would be compelled to follow suit. They would have to or competition would put them out of business.

"It is an undeniable fact that under the open shop an employer CAN reduce wages and upset working conditions and however fair-minded and humane, he WILL do this rather than be put out of business by competition.

"Little of the effect of the open shop can be seen at this stage of the war in Oklahoma. It will be years before the full crop of the open shop sowing will be ripe, but the harvest is certain and the fruit will be bitter.

"Collective bargaining goes by the board under the open shop. Without collective bargaining down goes wages and up go hours; back to the dark ages of industrialism for the worker.

"The bosses being organized and the workers being unorganized, disorganized, really, the bosses fix the workers' pay as they will and tell them how many hours they must put in for it. It is a take it or leave it attitude, with all the advantage on the side of the boss.

"In the old days, before men organized, the condition of the workers was little better than that of serfs. The 12-hour and 14-hour workday was common and the wage paid was only enough to keep body and soul together. Only by organization has labor brought about its present standards.

"And for those outside the unions, bear in mind that there is no genuine prosperity save that born of production, toil. When the producers, workers, have no money there is no money for most of the rest of us. Business is bad. The foundation stone of all material well-being is the toiler.

"Weaken him by underpay and overwork and you weaken the whole social structure. And the open shop in its final application means exactly that—underpay and overwork, labor prone and helpless under the heel of the boss.

"The open shop works its greatest benefit to those corporations which fatten on the misery of the mass."

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

"DENATURED AMERICANS."

Hudson Maxim at the Maximum of Indignation Over Prohibition's Invasion of the Home.

In 1755, twenty-one years before the Declaration of American Independence, when George Washington gave some practical advice to General Braddock, that pompous officer replied: "High times, high times, when a young Buckskin can teach a British general how to fight!"

The Americans of that day were pioneers of a new civilization—a civilization in which manhood should hold a high place and the puppet of privilege be eliminated.

Those old leather-sides lived close up to nature. Their house was the great outdoor, walled by the forest and roofed by the sky. They wore buckskin clothes, a dirk knife and a gun. They drank a brew to one another's health that would make the home-hootch of today seem like soda water, and yet their great drafts of it, taken with deep drafts of sunlight and open air, merely helped to soften and limber up the grim soul under the hairy breast as they clanked their glasses and pledged a larger brotherhood.

In their battling with the red Indian the American pioneers learned the science of warfare as it had never been learned before—every man for himself, fighting from cover to cover, from rock and bush and tree. Braddock's defeat was a lesson to the whole world in the military science of the young Buckskin, and even the great Napoleon profited by it. Modern trench warfare is a variant of American pioneer and redskin tactics.

The strong arm and alert brain that shielded the home from the red savage; the arm and brain that felled the forest and raised the rafters of the home, were the same arm and brain that framed the pronouncement of freedom, the Declaration of Independence, and that architrave of liberty, the Constitution of the United States; and the same arm it was, guided by the same brain, that raised the glass to the lips that said, "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death!" and drank the pledge of American union again oppression.

The liberty to which they drank was the sort they learned in their close-up association with nature and with nature's noblemen. It was individual liberty to the full, and a liberty that did not interfere with the exercise of equal liberty by others. Their home was their castle, and was inviolable.

So it was that, in their primal code of laws, they recognized the home as sacred and shielded it against violation. This code of laws shielded the individual everywhere and at all times, against search or seizure of personal property, so long as no act of his should aim harm at others or infract their freedom.

But those are bygone days, and those are bygone laws. The personal freedom for which they stood, for which they fought, for which they bled and died, is now bygone; and the denatured descendant of nature's American nobleman now stands meekly by, with no expression but a whimper, while he is held up on the highway and his vehicle and baggage and the persons of himself, his wife, and daughter, are ruthlessly searched for a secreted flask of alcoholic liquor. If the flask be found, his automobile is confiscated, and he and his family are led to jail, and heavily fined or imprisoned, or both, even though the flask may have been carried from large necessity for medicinal use.

The denatured descendant of a Daniel Boone, an Ethan Allen, an Israel Putnam, a Patrick Henry, now sees his home entered without a warrant, and on the merest suspicion searched and ransacked, from cellar to garret, by some contemptible weasel of prohibition. With all the manhood lost out of the denatured soul of his race, the modern householder merely whines and cogitates with himself, and tries to reconcile himself with free institutions, and to justify as a divine right of law, such a damnable infraction of personal liberty, when even to reason about such violation, under such shameful circumstances, with any countenance toward justification, is a depth of shame and dishonor which could find harbor only in the mind of a cringing contemptible cur, unworthy the name of American in the old undenatured sense.

History repeats itself. In Europe, especially in France, before the French Revolution, the common people had for centuries been subjected to the most debasing oppression. They had no rights whatever which any one of aristocratic blood was bound to respect.

The home of the hard-working farmer or humble artisan was frequently entered, the women of the household, mother and daughters, were seized, violated and dishonored by feather-head cavaliers out on a spree, merely to divert their jaded minds by new adventures. Father and big brother stood meekly by, whimpering to themselves their cogitations, trying to justify the damnable transaction with divine rights of some sort, just as the father and big brother now stand meekly by and whimper while their home is being violated by some accursed representative of the down-to-date aristocracy of prohibition.

O denatured Americans, awaken! Break from the thralldom that is fast smothering the last spark of manhood in your souls. Raise a new battle cry of freedom—personal liberty, inviolability of the home, and patriotism—one and inseparable!

HUDSON MAXIM.

Maxim Park, Landing, N. J., January 24, 1922.

—New York Tribune, January 29, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

ALFALFA.

By MRS. THOS H. HASSEY.

Scene: A ranch house in Napa, California.

The room is unfinished; there are many soap boxes being used as containers of food. Jack Handel is on as the curtain rises. He has four puppies in an upturned trunk cover now resting on a table. A tripod and camera stand in rear of left. Several chairs. Two doors to rear. Windows on both right and left wall.

Jack—(He is 25, tall, clean, philosophical, with the message of truth).

If those tourists had not stolen your mother, I'd not need to try to feed you with this nursing bottle. What does it get them, anyway?

Ivy—(She is a beautiful girl just 22. Her hair and eyes are brown. She enters left). Here is your bread, Jack. That Chinaman was late baking this week. Why, he always is late, any way.

Jack (taking away the puppies to room at left)—I have a whole loaf left from last week. What's the matter, Ivy? You seem to act as if you were some stranger. Now, you're not, are you? You are not going to go back on your word and marry some other fellow, are you?

Ivy—I'm all excited. Do you know what has happened again?

Jack—I have not the slightest idea. What has?

Ivy—Our first prize, Prairie Bell, got into your feed of alfalfa, ate enough to kill her. Why, the men on our ranch say it's you who broke down that fence; that you do it so the foreman will appear to be an incompetent workman. They even talk of stringing you up to a tree.

Jack—Not while my name is Handel, they won't. Why, there is one little line of forty feet of your Dad's ranch joins a corner of mine. What in the world do they or you take me for, anyway? What would be my object in putting up a perfectly good fence to tear it right down again?

Ivy—Well, you were seen in town talking to Berg, and every one knows he is to be one of the judges in the stock show next week.

Jack (seeing the humor of it)—Yes, I was talking to Berg; but it had to do with something far different than stock. Why, I'm not in competition with your Dad; I've one mile of alfalfa to keep me busy.

Ivy (jealously)—Were you talking about a lady?

Jack—Well, it was; I admit that it was a female of the species.

Ivy—Had she brown eyes and dark hair?

Jack—She had the most wonderful brown eyes I ever saw. Her eyes spoke to me; every time she wanted a thing she just looked into my eyes and I melted; I'd give her anything. And her hair was dark and soft. I put red ribbon round her neck, and she was pretty.

Ivy—Where is she now?

Jack—The last time I saw her she called to me as hard as ever a d—d lady could talk. Two desperate tourists dragged her into their car and made off with her. If I could only see her again she would (looking at door where puppies are) relieve me immensely.

Ivy—A pretty note, I must say. Where is the handsome photographer?

Jack—Oh, he is out getting scenery views; he is a fine man, too. He is not going to stay more than a day or two.

Ivy—That is not bringing us back a ten thousand dollar cow. Poor old Prairie Bell!

Jack—That foreman thinks pretty well of you, doesn't he, Ivy?

Ivy—I should say he does; he wants me to marry him; in fact, he is now waiting for me to tell him whether I will or not.

Jack—And as sure as life, it is Marko who is breaking down that fence.

Ivy—That's to be seen. Funny that everyone is suspecting you to be the guilty man.

Enter Loring. (He is self-confident, past 40, rather large and good looking).

Jack—Well, well! I hope you got some good views, Mr. Loring. Meet Miss Dearborn.

Loring—I met the young lady at her Dad's ranch the other day; and I am going to spring a bit of a surprise, too: I got the picture of the man who is undoubtedly the man who broke down the fence every time your Dad lost prize cattle. Also, I might as well own up, that I'm a detective employed by the insurance company. Marko is the man; not only that, he is wanted in New Mexico for cattle stealing.

Jack—Now, if you suspected me, you ought to ask my forgiveness, Ivy.

Ivy—Well, that doesn't explain about that dark eyed beauty.

Jack—(A black and tan dog, mother of the pups, comes racing through the door which Loring has not quite closed.) There is the lady of my dreams. (He stops to love the little beast, then lets her in to her puppies. Loring is busy with his camera.)

Ivy—Oh, but what were you talking to Berg for?

Jack—Well, you see he is a married man and I just could not go into the drug store to buy a nursing bottle. And those puppies had to have food. So I asked Berg to get me that bottle. Now do you understand?

Ivy—Oh, yes, thank heavens (looking out of window on right). See the men are coming and they have a rope. Oh, see, is not that? It is! It is! Marko!

Loring—My time to get busy (testing his gun).

The door opens and three very splendid men, Marko, very dark and showing foreign makeup, is in the center. On either side he has with him a large cowboy. Not a word is said for Loring places his man under arrest immediately which stuns the others with him. Tony Marko, you are my prisoner. Hands up. Marko holds up his hands and hangs head. The cowboys shake hands with Jack and ad-lib as the curtain slowly descends.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

THE "ONE BIG" UNION.

The "one big union" as outlined by its proponents hasn't the remotest possibility of ever being realized.

A mass movement among mankind never has and never will take place.

Armies are not mass movements, but compact forms of units giving the appearance of a mass movement. One part of an army may be on march, while the other parts are at rest. One part may be bearing the brunt of battle, while the other parts are going about serenely performing such routine duties as necessary.

The labor army will never move in mass. It is not in the nature of things that they should. Man is only gregarious to a limited degree. He only flocks with his fellows as conditions or necessity compels. Local conditions and local needs force men to common action. National needs cause a nation to act, but man's every day life is made up of local needs and local surroundings.

Local unions make their fights at home, with the moral and financial support from their international, but the real, actual fight is made by the men within the locality affected.

Craft organization will continue with the labor movement in the future as in the past, despite propaganda and preachments of dreamers.

Men in the labor movement will continue to form small or large groups according to their needs.

No doubt, many of our present methods will be abandoned and others adopted more in keeping with modern industrial development, as each part or group find need for the change.

There is no doubt in the mind of the writer but what in the near future we will see the highly centralized internationals relegated to the scrap heap and power invested in autonomous local councils, with the membership organized according to craft and affiliated with a state body and the state body in turn affiliated with a national body.

In other words, there is strong sentiment in labor ranks for decentralization or removal of power from the hands of individuals and placing the power in the hands of local councils in the district where men work, live and rear families.

This, in our opinion, is the trend of thought engaging the mind of workers the country over. We make no claim to infallibility and our opinion may be wide of the mark.

Just how far we are mistaken, future developments will determine. That changes are imminent and liable to occur at any time within the labor movement of America can hardly be denied by any one who has watched the trend of affairs.

Whatever that change may be, we are satisfied it will not be that of a "one big union" or propaganda councils of a revolutionary nature. Labor unions and labor papers should have free and open discussion on the movement of the future.

Many good thoughts and ideas will be advanced by the membership, who, regardless of opinions to the contrary, are not all dumb cattle, to be herded and driven.

All the brains and ability to think is not vested in the paid officials of the labor movement, neither have labor editors a corner on gray matter.—Sacramento Tribune.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

FANATICAL MAJORITIES INFRINGE UPON RIGHT OF MINORITY.

NOTE.—The following contribution was submitted to Leslie's Weekly as a part of their symposium on prohibition. It was either ignored or purposely omitted. Evidently Mr. Maskell said more than Leslie's expected or cared to print.—Editor, MIXER AND SERVER.

A historian said that the greatest evidence of liberty a country could show was the respect its people had for the rights of the minority. A fanatical majority in a democracy may plead human love as a justification for the most outrageous infringement on the rights of the minority.

Do the good men and women of the United States of America know that a political autocracy with a majority of one vote in each one of three fourths of the state legislatures and two-thirds of Congress, on a joint ballot, could nullify all those guarantees of civil and religious liberty so carefully provided for by the founders of this republic?

Do those good people who plead love and invoke law to impose their idea of personal conduct on the other fellow realize what may be the ultimate consequences of their disregard for the fundamentals of Madison and Jefferson?

Has it ever occurred to these holy men and women that there might arise within our boundaries a proletarian autocracy who might plead precedent and love as a reason for the repeal of every law or statute built up by hundreds of years of effort, for the protection of the property rights of the industrious and the frugal, who own shops and mills and homes?

Let us not forget that it was love and not hate that caused the Puritans to close the theaters in England.

It was love and not hate that caused the religious zealot to force, by torture, the unbelieving heretic to abjure his heresy.

It was love and not hate that prompted a great religious sect to ordain that its women must avoid those artifices that beautify and allure.

If they could muster a majority, love might cause a certain group to make the practice of medicine or pharmacy a crime.

Another group might, if they had the power forbid the use of the hog or the lobster as food.

The vegetarian would surely inhibit the use of flesh as food, and love would be the motive.

Tobacco is now taboo in Utah. Love and not hate governed the Mormon who controls. It may also lead to the elimination of tea and coffee, which are frowned on by the church.

Love and not hate caused the majorities in certain states to make the playing of billiards a crime.

It might have been islamic love, but it was not altruistic love that caused Mahomet to interdict the fermented juice of the grape.

If reason, rather than fanaticism, had guided our lawmakers, we might have had regulation instead of prohibition. We would have put the distilled liquors under the control of the physicians and the pharmacists.

Gambrinus and Christ would not have been regarded as potential criminals.

Beer and wine, the beverage of the ages, might still be the solace of a free people. Their temperate use have never impaired health.

We must remember that over 90 per cent of the diseases due to gluttony are caused by gluttonous eating, and less than 10 per cent are due to imtemperate drinking.

Of course, the advocates of intolerance have pleaded love for men and women and children as the impelling motive which spurred them on to action. But are these protestations of love most truly sincere and without guile?

Their love may really be altruistic, but we must not forget that a dry legislature voted against the child labor law in Missouri; a dry legislature voted against a law limiting the hours of labor for women in Illinois, and a dry Congress voted against the bonus bill which would benefit those men who offered their lives that our country might live.

JOHN M. MASKELL.

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

POETIC AD TIP.

This piece of poetic advice to the man who "cares more for rest than worldly gain" has been sent out by the Cincinnati Advertisers Club to members and friends:

MAY HE REST IN PEACE.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said:
"My trade of late is getting bad,
I'll try another 10-inch ad."
If such there be, go mark him well,
For him no bank account shall swell;
No angel watch the gold stair
To welcome home a millionaire.
The man who never asks for trade
By local line or ad displayed
Cares more for rest than worldly gain.
And patronage but gives him pain.
Tread lightly, friends, let no rude sound
Disturb his solitude profound;
Here let him live in calm repose
Unsought except by men he owes,
And when he dies go plant him deep,
That naught may break his dreamless sleep;
Wherein no clamor may dispel
The quiet that he loved so well;
And that the world may know its loss
Place on his grave a wreath of moss;
And on the stone above: "Here lies
A Chump who wouldn't advertise."

All of which, as Gilligan would say, is "germane to the subject" of agitational work for labor unions. Perhaps you feel that, inasmuch as you know your local union is alive and getting along, any worker at the Catering Industry should know where to locate its office and officers if he is inclined to apply for membership. We recall reading an article one time in which a man who worked as a waiter averred that he traveled from Boston to Seattle in 1912, worked in several prominent hotels in the cities on the main line of travel and did not hear a word about local unions of our crafts until he arrived and obtained a job in Seattle. If that man uttered the truth, he was boosting Seattle to the skies, but what he left to the imagination of his readers relative to the cities he had worked in as he made his way westward, was umpty-seven removes from complimentary.

Talk about your union, advertise its aims and objects, tell new arrivals where your union meets, advise them how they can become affiliated.

Local labor papers will gladly give you space for short newsy articles; in fact, glad to print the news of the work being done by local unions. Daily papers, too, will give your union space if you have something of interest to impart. Use printers' ink every chance you get. It will help you quite as much as the publicity used by business concerns.

QUICKSAND'S CHARACTERISTICS.

Quicksand is usually very fine in texture, and is mixed with a certain proportion of clay or chalk which helps it to retain moisture. But almost any sand can become quick under certain conditions. These are a large admixture of water and a lack of drainage. This is why such death traps are found only on flat, and not on sloping beaches.

Quicksands are found in many rivers. What is perhaps their worst and most dangerous feature, is that they are rarely the same from day to day. They change constantly in shape, position and depth.—Times-Star.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

POOR MADELON.

"Say, Madelon, this liver's something awful."
"I ver' sorry, mon cheri," answered his French bride, "I spick tomorrow wiz ze liveryman."—American Legion Weekly.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THEY WON'T COME TO YOU.

It is a mistaken view point to imagine that because you went up to the local union headquarters and planked down your coin after signing up an application form, thus becoming a member of your local union, that the non-union worker alongside of you will approach you and ask how he may file an application and become a member of your local union. Very few of your fellow workers voluntarily looked up the standing of the local union and sought one of the members seeking to affiliate. Most of the workers have to be asked, in fact must be urged, to join the union, for they are not so placed as to get the information as to the value of organized effort. Just make up your mind to one thing, that the non-members are not going to go out of their way seeking you, to ask you for an application form and hand you the amount for initiation. You've got to do the hustling, the talking and urging, and the quickest way to line up converts is get after them and show them why they should be members of your local union.

It is not customary to put a sign out in front of the place where you reside, the sign to read: John Doe lives in this house, he is ready and willing to talk to you and convince you that you should be a member of Catering Industry Workers' Union No. 41144. If that were the method, all might turn out well, but inasmuch as it is not the way—at least it has not been tried so far as we know of—then the old reliable method must be used. Get to know the non-member, have a talk with him, several talks if that be necessary and tell him what your union is and what it aims to accomplish. If you discover that your argument falls flat, don't give up in disgust, tell your troubles to one of your associate members, one that you feel can put up a better sales talk than you can. If he falls down, bring in another and still another until you land your prospect. Men and women with intelligence enough to hold a job in the catering industry will listen to reason, can be convinced that an organization such as your local union aims to be is a real necessity, a sure enough protector to the people who work at our allied trades. Make up your mind now that these non-members won't come to you, that it's your task to go to them, to make every legitimate effort to convert them and line them up as members of your union. They won't eat you up, in fact they may be just waiting for an invitation to become a member. Why not find out now while the finding season is on?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BIBBLES' SORE SPOT.

"Is Mr. Bibbles at home?" asked a voice over the telephone.

"No," replied Mrs. Bibbles, "but he telephoned a few minutes ago that he was on his way home."

"Then he will arrive shortly, I suppose?"

"Oh, yes, unless somebody stops him on the street and asks him what he thinks of the Eighteenth Amendment."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HAVE THEY CHANGED OR HAVE WE.

Do you remember with what a thrill you used to pick up your favorite afternoon or morning paper and read about the boys Over There? Did you ever catch yourself thinking that these soldiers and sailors were men of your age and before being trained to handle a gun and obey military orders were engaged in doing odd jobs here and there that required no great amount of courage or initiative.

Probably a member of your local union or perhaps several of them, had left you to don the habiliments of Mars and do their share of the fighting. You could not help comparing their chances with yours, they were going right into the thick of it, you probably were waiting for another call. You may not have been impressed with their fighting abilities because they had been engaged in a civil pursuit which did not require scrapping, and yet with so few exceptions as to be unnoticeable, all of them showed that they had the guts when the fighting game was hottest. Probably you got warmed up during the interval between their leaving and finally their trip over the submarine infested seas. You had a lot of courage then, at least you believed you had. If called upon you might have delivered the goods too, is the conclusion you arrived at. And now, after it is all over, a couple of years have passed into history and where is that courage of which you were proud, where are the boys who went over and came back, whose courage no one can doubt? What are they doing today? Are they lined up with their fellow craftsmen in their local union showing the way to go over the top, to put up the kind of battle that made them famous for all time? Why ask, you say. Well, there is a reason for everything and there must be a reason for the indifference of so many workers in the catering industry to the approaching displacement. Displacement of what? Can you see, can you visualize the hundreds of thousands of aliens rushing Americawards when the immigration laws have been fixed up to suit the United States Steel Trust and the House of Morgan? Are you at all interested in knowing that within a few months these aliens will be on this side of the Big Pond and seeking for jobs now held by Americans, and thousands who have not become American citizens?

True, they may not be catering industry employees, but when they shunt one man off a job and keep that shunting trick busy, will the displaced worker become your competitor or will he try some other industry? One thing you should keep in mind. The catering industry offers eats and drinks. Do you think that is less attractive today than it has been for decades?

Don't you think it is about time for the former overseas vets to get busy and lead the fellows who remained at home out of the prospective wilderness?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

"TODAY AND FOREVER."

Man builds a castle on a hill,
He makes a citadel or town,
And ere the world may know his skill
Another comes to tear it down.
Yet, day by day and year by year,
Through all the changing centuries,
While we appear and reappear.
God paints the sunsets on the seas.

Not all the years the world has known
Have changed the pattern of the stars—
Though men in conflict for a throne
Have mapped the world with battle scars,
Though men in their own blinded way
Have grown confused of wrong and right,
God gives them still the golden day
And silent glory of the night.

He turns time's record, page on page,
And writes his history the same,
While men blot out each bygone age
In mistiness of fading fame.
In countless numbers men arise
And try their weakness or their force,
Yet calmly through the endless skies
The earth holds its appointed course.

Man's dreams as deeds to him appear.
And dreamlike, deeds and words are gone.
But day by day and year by year
We have the sunset and the dawn.
We never come to understand
The trenchant message brought by these—
God limns his sunrise on the land
And paints his sunsets on the seas.

—Author Unknown.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

A GENUINE LOSS TO OUR ORGANIZATION.

Delegates to the Cleveland convention of our International Union will recall Delegate Eugene Whitted, who represented Dining and Sleeping Car Employees' Local Union No. 538 of Seattle, Wash. In a note from Vice-President Hesketh we are informed that Brother Whitted died on January 28, 1922, after an illness of several months. Brother Whitted endeared himself to all who had dealings with him, he was well liked because of his splendid judgment and unceasing activity. Local 538 of Seattle was his special obsession, he worked hard to create the union and harder still to make it one of the best affiliated with our organization. The Searchlight of Seattle, in its issue of February 4, 1922, prints the following:

MR. E. A. WHITTED DEAD.

Mr. E. A. Whitted died in this city Saturday, January 28, after a lingering illness. He was one of the well known citizens, a member of the Spanish-American War Veterans, well known in railroad circles. When taken ill he was manager of the Porters and Waiters' Club. The remains were shipped to Wichita, Kansas, for interment, in the care of his brother, Mr. Joseph Whitted, by the Blackwell Undertaking Co., Thursday.

Our organization suffers a genuine loss in the death of Brother Eugene Whitted. We tender to his family, relatives and friends, as well as the members of Local 538, sincere condolences, hoping that Local 538 will always remain an active unit of our organization as a monument to "Gene" Whitted's activities and desires to be helpful to the men of his race.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

A MILLION DOLLAR STRUCTURE.

From one of our exchanges we glean the information that the Odd Fellows contemplate the erection of a Million Dollar Grand Lodge Building in the City of Baltimore, and that funds to erect the said building are to be collected by a ten cents per member per year assessment for five years. That reminds us. Do you remember The Story of a Cent?

The Story of a Cent appeared in the MIXER AND SERVER some years ago; to be quite exact, the first installment was offered in the December, 1903 number of the MIXER AND SERVER. The last installment was printed in the April, 1905 number of the MIXER AND SERVER. If our organization had set aside One Cent a member a month from the date of the first installment, we could have had a Defense Fund worthy of the name and an office building too.

Don't overlook the fact that a Cent is a powerful bit of change when it is properly mobilized. That is the thought left with us after reading about the proposed ten cents assessment as set forth above.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

MAY AND DECEMBER.

A colored couple stood once again before the probation officer. "Now, this," the officer said to both, "seems to me a case where there is nothing very much the matter except that your tastes are different. You, Sam, are much older than your wife. It is a case of May married to December." There was a slight pause, and then Eva, the wife, was heard to remark in a tired voice:

"I—I really doan know what you means by yer saying May is married to December. If yer goin' to talk that way, it seems to me to be a case of Labor Day married to de Day of Rest."—Everybody's

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

TWINKLE, TWINKLE.

Just happened to read one of those brain drips from the pen of a writer of short, snappy squibs which read: "Twinkle, twinkle, movie star; how we wonder what you are." And just could not forget that we have a bunch of twinklers in our ranks whose light have either been dimmed or snuffed out.

We have in mind the aggregation, in your local as well as mine, who are wont to say about once and sometimes twice a year: "You can betcher life if I was president of this local things would be different." But suffering mackerel they slip away and no one ever observes anything remotely resembling on the level activity.

If you ever listened to them spout and stall you'd quickly arrive at the conclusion that they had their habits on; but they do think they are real twinklers in the local union firmament. Like the writer quoted, we are wondering what you are, and whether the Betcher Life Brigade, will ever change tactics and really pull something off besides that hookum stuff.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SHADES OF THE PIONEERS!

Terre Haute—Terryhut.
Pere Marquette—Peer Market.
Antoine—Antoyrn.
AuxGres—O Grease.
Beaulieu—Boloo.
Boise—Bos.
Charleroi—Charleyroy.
Detroit—Deetroyt.
Fond Du Lac—Fondelak.
Joliet—Jolly-ette.
St. Cloud—Saint Clowd.
Dubois—Dooboy.

—New York Herald.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ANOTHER MISSOURIAN.

"If you see it in the MIXER AND SERVER, is it so?" If you don't mind that sort of heckling, would you reproduce the article, or give name and date of publication, which recites the story or news item about a woman marrying several men in order to obtain passport? You had such an item in a recent number under the heading of 'I See By the Papers.' I am a member of Local — and paid up two months in advance," etc.

Glad to oblige. Just so happened that we did not destroy the item, which we clipped from the Times-Star of January 3, 1922. Can't overlook the information which the brother imparts relative to being "paid up two months in advance." Congratulations are tendered, hope the brother will always be able to make similar boast. The article, heading and all, asked for, follows:

WOMAN SOLVES PASSPORT PROBLEM BY MARRYING SEVERAL MEN.

Geneva (Associated Press Cable).—Marriage is, for one certain woman, the solution of the problem of getting passports to various European countries, the difficulties of which became almost insuperable after the war, a Lucerne business woman has discovered. Before the war this woman, who is well educated and good looking, earned some $10,000 a year by obtaining orders for millinery and furs from royalty in the several capitals of Europe, as a representative of French and Viennese dealers. After the war, while her former patrons had no money for luxuries a new class—the war profiteers—demanded her attention. The passport problem hampered her. She then formed the plan of marrying men of different nationalities and paying them to let her divorce them as soon as she had established a passport in her new citizenship. She at present has seven ex-husbands.

ELIZABETH FORD.

We carried her over the sea, we did,
 And taught her to hep, hep, hep—
 A cute little jinny, all noisy and tinny,
 But full of American pep.
 Recruited into the Corps she was—
 She came of her own accord:
 We flew at her spanker the globe and the anchor
 And named her Elizabeth Ford!

'Cute little 'Lizabeth, dear little 'Lizabeth,
 Bonnie Elizabeth Ford!
 She was short and squat, but her nose was sot
 For the Hindenburg line—O Lord!
 She hated a Hun like a son-of-a-gun,
 The Kaiser she plumb abhorred,
 Did chunky Elizabeth, Hunky Elizabeth,
 Spunky Elizabeth Ford!

We took her along on our hikes, we did,
 And a wonderful boat was she,
 She'd carry physicians, food and munitions,
 Generals, water or tea.
 She could climb a bank like a first-rate tank
 And deliver the goods aboard—
 When we touch our steel Kellies to "Semper Fidelis,"
 Remember Elizabeth Ford.

'Cute little 'Lizabeth, dear little 'Lizabeth,
 Bonnie Elizabeth Ford!
 She took her rests in machine gun nests
 And on bullet-swept roads she chored.
 Where the Devil Hounds were first on the grounds
 Of a section of France restored—
 Why, there was Elizabeth, Chunky Elizabeth,
 Spunky Elizabeth Ford!

But 'twas on the day at those murdered-woods
 Which the Yanks pronounce Belloo;
 We were sent to knock silly the hopes of Prince
 Willie
 And turn 'em around d. q.
 We prayed for munitions and cleared our throats
 With a waterless click—Good Lord!—
 When out of a crater with bent radiator
 Climbed faithful Elizabeth Ford!

'Cute little 'Lizabeth, dear little 'Lizabeth,
 Bonnie Elizabeth Ford!
 With a cylinder skip she made the trip,
 —Water and cartridge stored.
 With her hood a wreck and broken neck
 She crawled like a rotten board,
 Hunky Elizabeth, chunky Elizabeth,
 Spunky Elizabeth Ford!

When they towed her out of the town next day,
 Said Corporal Bill, "Look there!
 I know of one hero who shouldn't draw zero
 When they're passin' the Croix de Guerre.
 Who fed the guns that's startin the Huns
 Plumb back to Canal du Nord!"
 So his Cross—and he'd won it—he tied the bonnet
 Of faithful Elizabeth Ford!

'Cute little 'Lizabeth, dear little 'Lizabeth,
 Bonnie Elizabeth Ford!
 Where shrapnel has mauled her we've now overhauled her.
 Her wheels and her gears restored.
 Her record's clean, she's a true Marine
 And we're sending the Dutch War Lord
 A note by Elizabeth, chunky Elizabeth,
 Spunky Elizabeth Ford!
 —WALLACE IRWIN, in American Legion Bugle,
 Bentley Post.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE A FEW HOURS MAKE.

"I know that in offering the following, with the understanding that you will withhold my name, it may bring to the attention of our boys and girls a situation that has not gone so far that it can not be remedied—one that, to be exceedingly frank, in the premise, should not be permitted to continue, not for another hour. As you know, or at least as I advised you, it was my intention to visit my old home town, to sort of get acquainted with the family and look around for a couple of weeks. After arriving, feeling the need of breakfast, I walked into one of the first string houses of the city, was met by the man in charge, who directed me to a vacant seat and I forthwith ordered a meal. Fortunately—and I say it advisedly—none of the crew knew me from Adam's off ox. The meal was well cooked, the service as good as the best and prices within reason. Observing the waiters with care, all of them were fairly well groomed and their attitude toward one another very friendly and polite. The use of the words 'thank you' and 'I beg pardon,' as well as 'please,' was heard between these workers, and naturally the conclusion was reached that these were well bred wage earners and accustomed to treating one another with careful civility. When you make it your business to listen in, you hear a lot, at least that is my experience, and I admit listening in with avidity.

"Being pleased with the treatment and meal, it was natural that I should bring my folks to that establishment when I was 'blowing' myself as it were. The impression gained at first visit was strengthened and all was well, my little party being pleased, in fact, gratified with the service and meal.

"Well, to make this as brief as conditions allow, I concluded to visit the local union, which, by the way, is a mixed union—that is to say, composed of all our allied crafts. Located the hall—not a very nice one, though—showed my book and gave the pass word and secured a seat in the second last row of seats, but an excellent point of vantage. The meeting had just reached reading of the minutes of the last session as I sat down, very little attention being given to secretary, though I must say he had a very pleasing and clear voice. Under the head of 'correspondence,' a letter was read from the secretary of a sister union asking information about a former member. That was quickly disposed of; one or two others, bills. I think they were, and the next order of business arrived.

"The committee of three, to whom had been referred several applications, began to read off their report, and then the circus began. In all of my experience—and it is not brief by any means—I've never heard so much downright, insinuating and insulting language used between members, nor have I ever seen so little respect given to a presiding officer. The astonishment was the greater because of the fact that of the seven men engaged in the talkfest, every man Jack of them were employed in that establishment where I had taken my meals when in the business section of the city. I was so astonished that it was minutes before I got myself in hand, renewed my normal method of thinking. At first it struck me as a good plan to rise up and register protest, but on second thought I remained in my seat to the end of that meeting, making my escape quickly and without trying to get acquainted with any of the members. Prolonging my stay at home for several weeks, permitted me to test out several of the other catering establishments and I admit that the high standard of service and politeness prevailed in every one of the four I visited. No one knew me, and I made no pretense at seeking acquaintanceship. As the union met fortnightly, I made up my mind to attend, arriving a few moments before the president called the meeting to order. As before, I secured a seat well back, for I wanted to see without turning my head, and where I was located, all was before me. Things went along very nicely until the order of balloting for new members was called for. Now, if I understand our laws, we have no secret ballot, but that local had its little box and a goodly supply of black balls, for several of the members chuckling with something resembling vicious glee arose, walked to the center of the hall, where the box was placed on a stand, and without any attempt at hiding their actions, deliberately lifted a black ball casting it in the box and swaggering back to their seats amidst the laughter of their friends and co-workers. Out of 37 ballots cast, 14, or almost half of the number were black balls. Beat that if you can!

"At the risk of having a member ask me, 'What's it to you?' I moved from my seat and selected one close to a member who had cast one of the black balls. I whispered to him; asked him the reason for the opposition, and he came near knocking me off my seat when he replied: 'What the hell do we want any more of them guys in here for; we have a tough enough time to get a job now!' Not a thing against the character of the applicant—just did not propose to allow him to get inside and get a chance to be a union man.

"What I am unable to understand is how any body of men can work with one another in a cafe or restaurant, be gentlemanly, considerate and all that sort of thing, and just as soon as they arrive at their meeting rooms the veneer of politeness and gentility is doffed and they become sure-enough rough necks.

"That, Mr. Secretary, is a problem for you to solve; perhaps if you give this recital of my experience space in the MIXER AND SERVER, it may disclose to these members how utterly ridiculous they act, how unmanly they are toward one another in meetings and the very opposite on the job."

That is all of the story. We have no further comment to make than that there must be something in the song entitled, "What a Difference a Few Hours Make." There is a chance for improvement in that local, and right now we hope the members will peruse this item and profit thereby.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

OSTRICH FEATHERS NEVER PLUCKED UNTIL QUILLS ARE DRIED.

In no case is an ostrich feather cut or pulled as long as there is a vestige of life in it. This is easily recognized by the green appearance of the quill, whereas, when the feather is dry, the quill is white or transparent and of a horny substance. The farmer is particularly cautious to examine every feather before cutting or pulling, in order not to touch a green feather, the removal of which would injure the socket and either stop its production forever or produce a badly defective feather, virtually worthless, for many years to come. Thus, the so-called plucking is no more painful than the cutting of one's nails or hair.—Dry Goods Economist.

RELEASE.

I had a house, a tiny house,
So pretty and so warm.
And only, faintly, through its walls,
I heard the wind and storm.
I wandered up and down inside
And sang—nor knew the world was wide.

Then lightning struck, like a dagger thrust,
And tore my house apart!
With a thousand whips the wild rain stung
And cruel the cold! My heart
Choked with terror as, all alone
I groped my way from the tumbled stone.

But, oh, to run with the pouring wind,
To know the dark blue night,
To watch appear, o'er folded hills,
The first star's lovely light,
Were worth the cold—worth even fear
When furtive wolves come lurking near.

Better than sitting by the fire,
All bundled up in shawls,
Than safety in a little house,
With silly papered walls,
Is beauty on a dangerous height,
In green woods, dark and still,
Though there, I know, do lean wolves spring—to kill!

—LOUISE SAUNDERS PERKINS, in Leslie's.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE NEW BROOM SWEEPS AND SPEAKS.

"Boys and girls, the members of this local union went to the polls on our regular election day and when the ballots were counted, you as well as I, found that the majority of our associate members believed we had the required material to take hold and manage as well as administer the affairs of our little union for the ensuing twelve months. The honor conferred upon us is not a little thing—it should be borne in mind that placing upon our joint shoulders the present and future of our unions is a big responsibility—one that it is my present purpose to direct your attention to. We want to act during the year in such a manner as to turn over to whoever may succeed us, the affairs of this little union of ours in better shape, with a more numerous membership and with funds sufficient to prove that the faith placed in us was genuine and not a mistake. If we work together, help each other in our respective duties, we can produce the character of returns to merit praise of our men and women, and there is nothing which equals that as a reward. We are the new brooms of our local union; let us sweep clean from the beginning and keep the corners cleaned of anything that may resemble indifference or inactivity. I want your co-operation, you are promised mine to the limit of my ability and endurance."

Some conversation to offer to newly-elected associate officers by a local union president-elect, but every word we print as well as much which we had no room for, strikes us as being a move in the right direction. We are going to keep an eye on that local union, for it seems destined to make a new mark. How did we get the information? That would be telling, we got it in a legitimate business-like way from one of the officers who listened to the good, common sense start. If all presidents-elect were to imitate the move, get their colleagues working with them, better results might be evident.

PRAISE INDEED.

When the Restaurant Men's Association held their meeting in Cleveland a few years ago, one of the members of that organization, who it appears had tried to kill off one of our local unions, said:

"Gentlemen, you may as well make up your minds now as later on to the fact that the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and B. I. L. of A. is here, and here to stay. I happen to have paid for my experience and consequently believe I know what I have to say is the solemn truth. While the organization is part of the American Federation of Labor, it leans so little on that organization that it is hardly noticeable. You caterers who have not had to contend with that organization can hardly understand its immense resources, not only in money but in methods of fighting you and depriving you of patronage. Instead of wasting our time here and now in trying to originate ways and means of weakening and crippling the organized wage earners in our industry, we better devote our time and a lot of attention to the methods they employ to organize and maintain their unions and imitate them; our present system does not increase our size or prestige. In Salt Lake City just a few months ago, the local union became involved with one of the so-called independent caterers. Without a moment's warning a score of men appeared in front of that place, began to walk in circles, and kept that walking maneuver up for a solid hour, during which time not a patron was able to enter the place. A similar stunt had been employed in the city of Omaha the year before; it proved too heavy a burden for the employer and he surrendered. This circle of men never said a word, looked straight ahead and kept on walking in a circle, which made it impossible for any one to break through without having had experience as right half or quarter back on a football team. You may carry an idea that you are going to destroy that organization, but you will find the task formidable if not impossible. Its general and local union officials say very little, but, gentlemen, they know how to saw wood."

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE PIKER.

The bally piker gets my goat who bets a measly dollar note upon a baseball game and, losing it, starts in to snort that baseball is a crooked sport and nothing but a frame.

The true fan in the bleacher sits applauding skillful plays and hits—they bring sweet joy to him—while Mister Piker damns the luck unless he wins the measly buck to pad his bankroll slim.

With honesty, a virtue lost, he says, "All baseball games are tossed!"—that is his mournful moan; he's always willing to confide the mortar is all set and dried before a ball is thrown.

Oh, piker, while you rant and cry, don't judge the baseball diamond by the diamond on your paw; the diamonds of the tenements, the minor leagues and big league tents, have in them not a flaw.—GEORGE MORIARTY in Cincinnati Post.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HER METHOD.

Mrs. Post—"Do you get husbands for all the girls you chaperone?"

Mrs. Worldwide—"No, but I make things more uncomfortable for non-proposers."—Judge.

THE MONKEY GLANDS.

I keepa da monk and I playa da org
And I maka da plenty mon.
Da monk do da dance and passa da cup
And maka da keeds da fun.
Witouta da monk, I maka no biz
And panic will come instead.
Oh, what will become of Italian boy
When all of da monks ees dead?
Eet maka me sick by da heart to know
They cuta da monk for glands,
And they will be after my monk, too.
Dees ees a helova lands.

Oh, why not they carve up da hippopot,
That mountains of fish and bone,
Da lion, da snake or da elephant,
And leave-a da monk alone?
Da times will not be what they used to is Withouta no monk and cup;
Oh, why not they carve up da poodle-dog
Or some other reech man's pup?
My heart, she ees very sad today,
No song by da night I sung.
Oh, why should they keela my leetle friend
To maka da old man young?
—ROY K. MOULTON, in the New York Evening Mail.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHAT LOCAL UNION OFFICERS SHOULD KNOW.

The astonishing amount of loose facts which are allowed to remain uncollected by local union officials, is quite beyond the understanding of an investigator seeking data relative to the catering industry. To illuminate the point and incidentally offer a serious suggestion:

A representative of the Department of Labor came to general headquarters recently and asked us if we could supply him with data of a certain chain hotel corporation. The data he sought was substantially as follows:

"Can you inform me as to the average number of employees in the — hotel at —?"

The answer to that question was an admission that we did not know.

"Surely you can advise me as to the number of cooks they employ in that hotel?"

"Sorry to admit that we are unable to do so," was our reply.

"Well, how about the waiters? Do you know the number of them which the — hotel employs?"

"Sorry the second time," we replied.

"Do you mean to tell me that you do not collect that character of data?"

In reply to that query we said: "Here are several items printed in our official publication, seeking to induce our membership to compile data such as you are making inquiry for. You will observe that we have placed before our membership suggestion after suggestion, but unfortunately they do not regard our suggestions with any favor, for we have no such data turned into this office."

"I should imagine," said the referred to government employe, "that you could not very well get along without knowing all the facts concerning the innumerable hotels, cafes and catering establishments generally. How do you manage to dispose of applications for financial aid with nothing more before you than the bare fact that there is a strike or lockout on in a certain city. Surely it is inviting unnecessary trouble and expense to engage in a struggle with an employer not knowing the actual conditions prevailing, the number of non-members who may take the places of your members, the number of non-union houses, the possibilities of such concerns being in a position through organization to defeat you before you get a real start. The way you are now, you are compelled to go it blindly, trusting to Providence to take care of your flock, as the ministers would say."

Much more than the foregoing was offered by an astute examiner of trade conditions, a man trained to investigate, and who found himself wondering how we ever managed to keep going and occasionally winning contests.

Rough stuff to swallow, you say. Yes, but what could we do? We didn't have the facts for the very simple reason that local union officers never reported them to headquarters. Without stopping to figure the thing out, can you give approximately the number of jobs requiring skilled workers which your city offers? Stop to think the thing over and you will admit that we are missing on several cylinders when we should be hitting on all.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE WAY TO SAFETY.

A pedestrian saved himself by leaping upon the hood of the automobile that was intent upon running over him. The way some drivers swish around street corners, it is even better to leap into the air and let the car and driver pass in under.—Minneapolis Journal.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BOW WOW!

"Your Honor," said the prosecuting attorney, "your bull pup has chawed up the court Bible."

"Well," grumbled the judge, "make the witness kiss the pup; we can't adjourn court to get a new Bible."—The Labor Clarion, London.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE WAY WE DO IT IN OUR TOWN.

"We have put over a quiet plan during the winter months which has made quite a hit with our membership. Early in November I was seated with five of our members, and I happened to make reference to a bit of information which I read in the MIXER AND SERVER (October number), and one of the boys spoke up and said he doubted my statement. At first I was a bit taken back, but after several questions had been asked of him the discovery was made that while he gets the MIXER AND SERVER, he never reads it. Right then and there I made up my mind that at every meeting we would devote at least thirty minutes to getting wise to innumerable things which were taking place in this bustling and busy world. I read the MIXER AND SERVER, and check off the items which appeal to me, and with a minute book as a cover I read from the MIXER AND SERVER the picked items. With the exception of the two secretaries, not a member is wise to the fact that the interesting things I read them are printed in their own official paper. Further than that, I invite discussion on subjects and you'd be astonished what an improvement there is in my bunch and how willingly they came to meetings for these little seances.

I thought I would write you about the scheme, but please omit my name, for if the bunch wakes up, they may read the official paper at home and not come to the meetings where we need them."

Another local union officer writes us that the letters we have been sending to our locals monthly are read at two meetings and then after the second reading they are posted on the bulletin board at the reading room. He says that we ought to print those letters and thus reach all members, but if we have any large number who, as the first officer quoted says, "get the MIXER AND SERVER but do not read it," we fear it would be adding expense which is hardly justified at this time.

What method do you employ, Mr. Local Union President, to secure a good attendance at meetings? Let us hear from you; it may be possible that you have a solution for non-attendance.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE SHAMROCK.

Saint Patrick is said to have made use of that species of the trefoil, to which in Ireland we give the name of Shamrock, in explaining the doctrine of the Trinity to the pagan Irish.

Hope, among the ancients, was sometimes represented as a beautiful child, "standing upon tip-toes, and a trefoil or three-colored grass in her hand."

Thro' Erin's Isle,
To sport awhile,
As Love and Valor wander'd,
With Wit, the sprite,
Whose quiver bright
A thousand arrows squander'd—
Wh'er the pass,
A triple grass
Shoots up, with dewdrops streaming,
As softly green
As emeralds seen
Thro' purest crystal gleaming!
Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal Shamrock!
Chosen leaf of Bard and Chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock!

Says Valor, "See,
They spring for me,
Those leafy gems of morning!"
Says Love, "No, no,
For me they grow,
My fragrant path adorning."
But Wit perceives
The triple leaves,
And cries, "Oh, do not sever
A type that blends
Three godlike friends,
Love, Valor, Wit, forever!"
Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal Shamrock!
Chosen leaf of Bard and Chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock.

So firmly fond
May last the bond
They wove that morn together,
And ne'er may fall
One drop of gall
On Wit's celestial feather!
May Love entwine
His flowers divine,
Of thorny falsehood weed 'em!
May Valor ne'er
His standard rear
Against the cause of Freedom!
Oh the Shamrock, the green, immortal Shamrock!
Chosen leaf of Bard and Chief,
Old Erin's native Shamrock!

—THOMAS MOORE.

AN INQUISITIVE INDIVIDUAL WITH A PURPOSE.

A man dropped in on Secretary L. B. Boone of Local 299, Burkburnett, Texas, in the early part of February, claimed that he was "Shlitz, International Auditor," just from headquarters at Cincinnati, asked to see the books, looked them over, made many pertinent inquiries, said that after he visited Duncan, Oklahoma, he would come back and attend a meeting of Local 299. He is described as about 5 feet 11 inches, weight about 145, age 45 or thereabouts; wore a derby hat; excused himself for being untidy because of constant traveling, having visited many locals on his way out. Secretary Boone and Brother Cox say he is undoubtedly of Jewish parentage.

Of course Mr. Schlitz never came back; he was looking for information, probably for a very definite purpose, which may develop later, if it has not already done so. "Mr. Schlitz" took copious notes along with him, and if, as we suspect, he is working for a union wrecking agency, the employers of Burkburnett have a pretty good grasp of the internal affairs of Local 299.

According to the two brothers who had a chance of giving "Mr. Schlitz" the once-over and watched him work, he is a smooth article, which is all the more reason for officers and members of our locals everywhere acquiring the Missouri habit. Make 'em all "show" you and there won't be much chance of any one getting a look over your books unless they are entitled to the information. We have no such officer as a traveling auditor, nor have we any one on the pay roll of the International Union by the name of Schlitz or Shlitz.

Strangers coming to your city making claim that they are organizers or representatives of this organization won't get far if demand is made for credentials. Genuine representatives of this organization can show the goods; those who are pulling a faking stunt can not.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE RULING PASSION.

He owned a handsome touring car,
To ride in it was heaven.
He ran across some broken glass—
Bill $14.97.

He took some friends out for a ride—
'Twas good to be alive,
The carburetor threw a fit—
Bill $20.85.

He started on a little tour,
The finest sort of fun,
He stopped too quick and stripped his gears—
Bill $90.51.

He took his wife downtown to shop,
To save carfare was great;
He jammed into one lamp-post—
Bill $268.

He spent about all that he had,
And then in anguish cried:
"I'll put a mortgage on the house
And take just one more ride."
New York Evening Mail.

Clarence Gray, Seattle, is 11 years old. He's a Union Record Booster and a Totem Pole fan. He sends us this:

WHEN A FELLER NEEDS A FRIEND.

When it's way late in the autumn
An' leaves are fallin' through the air,
An' you're wonderin' what to do
An' there's a not a person there,
Then you feel a little lonesome
An' start wanderin' around,
A lookin' at the trees
An' a pokin' in the ground.

An' then all of a sudden
You look up in a tree,
An' hear a funny noise
An' you're scared as you can be.
An' you see it's just a chipmunk
An' you grab it by the back
An' take the rascal home with you
In an old tobaccer sack.

An' when yer mother sees it
She jest yells an' screams at you,
An' gives you half an hour's scoldin',
An' yer don't know what to do,
An' when yer pa comes home,
He gives you a sharp glance,
An' goes an' gets his razor strap
An' he surely makes you dance.

I don't seem to get along
Around this house of mine,
The people here don't like me
An' I'm in trouble all the time;
I'm continually gettin' lickins'
An' my troubles have no end,
That's just the way it is, folks,
When a feller needs a friend.
Seattle (Wash.) Union Record.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?

If members lose money as easily as they do their membership books, it's a moral certainty that they are broke half of the time. Your membership book is not a bulky package, not a thing that you can afford to leave in your room at home. We know of one instance of recent occurrence that taught a member to carry his book with him all the time. He was making the trip from Chicago to Cleveland, but did not get far before he was asked to "show me something, bo"; and being unable to do so, was dropped off at a water tank just beyond the Illinois state line. Keep your membership book handy, can't tell when it will come in just at the right time.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

"END OF A PERFECT JAY."

The cannibals had just dined sumptuously. And as the servants removed the celluloid collar, the suspenders, the gold tooth-pick, the striped hose, the made-up four-in-hand tie, the white-edged vest, the light-yellow button shoes, the red bandana handkerchief, and the knife with which their dinner had been eating pie when he was caught, the company, led by the chief, leaned back from the table and sang: "We have come to the end of a perfect jay."—Farm Life.

CORRESPONDENCE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

On February 20, at 8:30 p. m., the members of Waiters and Waitresses' Union, Local 1, attended a banquet at Ebling's Casino, given in honor of the secretary, Wm. Lehman for his good work and untiring efforts in the years passed for the Ganymedes. The large ballroom was beautifully decorated and in large electric lights above the stage glittered the words, "Welcome to Our Bill."

At 11 p. m. the dinner march was started, led by Brothers Wm. Lehman and wife; next followed General President Flore, Brothers Wm. Kavanagh, Rohwolt, Richard E. Croskey and wife; John Finkelstein and wife; Sam Turkel and wife; Wm. B. Ahern and wife; Wm. Harms and Chas. Meyer (the Gold Dust Twins of Local 719), Brothers Chas. Levy and L. Pollak (the man that beats the band) of Local 219.

The dining room was elaborately decorated, and in large letters made of "green leaves" (you know we always stick to our color), on the head table, shone the name, "W. Lehman."

Tony Schwartz, better known as "Frisco," acted as toastmaster, and he surely made a good job of it. The service and the cooking were certainly a credit to Locals 1 and 719: The treasurer of the affair, Wm. Dreyfuss, known as "Charlie Chaplin," had the hardest work of all, but he done it so that everybody can be proud of him. The committee also deserves a word of appreciation for the able manner in which they handled the affair. The committee was composed Fred Walther, Meyer Lippkiss, N. Lemesch, John Senno-vitch, Karl Eidner, Eddie Fabbri (better known as "Fat Eddie"), and R. F. Kade.

Speeches were delivered by Brothers Sam Turkel, John Finkelstein, Wm. B. Ahern, R. E. Croskey, Wm. Kavanagh and General President, Edward Flore.

The toastmaster then presented the guest of honor with a little token for which he, with smiles all over him, responded.

Everybody was happy, but how could it be different, when Sisters Connelly, Tracy and Friedman were there? The party finally dispersed in the small hours of the morning.

The menu served was as follows:

Olives	Pickles	Celery
	Canape a la Russe
	Consomme Jardiniere
	Half Broiled Spring Chicken
Potatoes Risole	Asparagus, Hollandaise
Fancy Ices	Coffee	Cakes
	Tablewater
	"Ebling's Extra Brew"
Cigars	Cigarettes
	R. F. KADE,
	Press Secretary.

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local No. 7 gave their sixteenth annual ball on Wednesday, February 1, at the North Side Turner Hall. Once again Local No. 7 proved that when it comes to putting on a real live wire entertainment and dance, that they are thoroughly able to carry it out. The fun began at 8:30 p. m. and lasted until 3:30 a. m., and was thoroughly enjoyed by a packed hall, over 500 couples were on the two dance floors. Although we had the eighteenth amendment to contend with, it did not interfere with us having a good time. The committee in charge worked hard, and from the results obtained, it can safely be said that it was a grand success.

Waiters attired in their regulation costumes attended to the wants of the thirsty and did a good job, serving drinks and sandwiches. While we are on the question of drink, let us not forget we have no easy job on our hands, those of us who favor light wines and beer. The Prohibition Party is wide awake and it behooves us to be the same. Use your voice and vote, because it means much to those of us who handle drinks and well do we know it.

Our initiation and reinstatement fees were cut to $3.10 in order to get new members and give the delinquent members a chance to square up. A great many have taken advantage of it. Time will expire March 1, 1922.

Our International Organizer E. W. Parlee and Special Organizer Ben F. Parker, President Fred Ragan, Business Agent William Emerson and the office are working hard trying to build up Local No. 7. They are doing good work collecting dues and reinstatements and are meeting with some success.

Our local buried two more of its members, Brother Frank L. Johnson, one of the oldest members in the point of age and also membership, also Brother Harry B. Edwards.

We still have quite a few members on the sick list. They are being well taken care of. Members, be sure you have your current month's dues paid, so that you can secure your sick benefit.

With best wishes to you and all locals, I am,

Yours fraternally,

ANDREW H. DUGAR,
Press Secretary Local 7.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-18-8-18

VICTORIA, B. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It is a long time since you had a real good long letter from your humble servant, but that does not mean to say that this local has been sleeping all the time, for I can assure you that it has been a hard struggle for the past few years. What with bucking Chinese cooks all the time and a lot of would be caterers it has kept us busy and always will until we can get all the workers of our class thinking our way. I guess that time will come all right, although at present we have not more than half of the houses in Victoria displaying the Union House Card. We still control the majority of the workers, however, and believe me, when it comes down to business the proprietors holding our card know that they are doing the bulk of the business.

Well! We lost three good houses last December, but that did not put us on the down grade, for when the boys and girls walked out of the New England Cafe and the Maryland Cafe, believe me, it was not long before they were working again in other jobs; that is, all of them excepting one by the name of Fred Garland, who is a charter member of this local and a dirty louse at that, for the said F. G. got cold feet (or I should say has still got cold feet, for he had them in 1917, when we put through the eight hour day) and refused to come out with the rest of the boys. Well, we thought that he had learned a lesson by now, but no, for he was the only one of four members called upon to walk out of the New England Cafe, who returned to work and scabbed on the local. He was "belly aching" to go back from the time the boys walked out, and although Brother Alf. Hoskyn offered to take a vacation so that F. G. could take his job and not lose anything, and although the local put an assessment on all members working to provide wages for those members called out and who failed to find jobs elsewhere, he returned to work as a scab.

Well, this Fred Garland and William Brown, a suspended member of this local, with another, Joseph Vincent, a suspended member of Local 28, Vancouver, B. C., are all working at the New England yet. But, listen, maybe these scabs think they have married the job, but I guess they have another think coming pretty soon, for there will not be such an overflow of unemployed this year as there was last. Of that I am sure, for things are beginning to look rosier out this way already.

Well, as far as Joe Vincent is concerned, I should say he is nothing but a dirty skunk. No, I should not say that, for he is a gentleman of the first water, but I think the water came right through the sewers of both the U. S. A. and Canada, for when this Joe Vincent blew into the vicinity of Local 459, about four months ago, he was a suspended member of Local 28, as I said before, and the boys did not like to see anybody of our craft stay on the outside, so they took him in out of the cold and gave him all the extra jobs that were going, although we had a few of our own members on the sidewalk with a paid up card at the time. We gave him the use of the hall, allowed him the privileges of one of us, and then the skunk turned around and scabbed on the boys who had made good fellows of themselves and helped him out.

Well, we have a couple of others here yet, and they are Brother Charles Brock, another charter member of this local, and Sister Torrens. Charles Brock turned down the boys when the new contract went through on the first of December last, for he absolutely refused to walk off the job when the proprietor refused to sign and also enticed Sister Torrens to stay on the job with him. This is the second time for him to turn the same trick, for he did a similar thing before the World war, but he went overseas with a good many more of our boys and was lucky enough to return, and then we took the fine of $25 off or him and reinstated him just the same as if he had a withdrawal card in his pocket. Well, everything went along all right until this contract was put through, when, as I said, he refused to walk off the job; so the local put a fine on him and expelled him. When he and Sister Torrens were notified by registered letter of the decision of the local, they showed their brotherly and sisterly love and ignorance by returning the notice to the Secretary with the words written across the back, "Go to Hell." If the brother was not so old and did not have false teeth and no hair he would receive a nice reply, but I guess that will come later for as I said before, it is easy to marry a job, but a lot easier to get divorced.

Well, Mr. Editor, I guess this is all I can think of just now, so if you can find space in the MIXER AND SERVER to give these scabs publicity I think it will do us more good than anything else that I can think of.

I remain,

Fraternally yours,

W. H. HATCHER,

Financial Secretary Local 459.

P. S.—It was necessary for Organizer Brother McKenzie to make several trips to Victoria during our trouble, and I must give him credit for working so hard for the International.

W. H. H.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-12-8-15

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It has been a long time since you have heard from Local 59 due to the fact that I have been very busy the past year holding two positions, secretary and business agent, but since January 1, 1922, I have been relieved of the last named office and will be able to pay more attention to our correspondence. Of course, I can not write an article for the MIXER AND SERVER without roasting somebody so here it goes.

During our campaign of two years ago we organized about ninety per cent of the waiters and cooks in this city, then our strike was called and after battling for three months, we settled, for the benefit of all men working in this industry, even those who did not join our union were given a raise in wages and better working hours. It seems to me that many of our members thought that after getting good conditions they did not need the union any more and dropped their membership. I also find that many hate to part with that big dollar they pay into the union every month, not realizing that it is the best investment a man or woman can make. No doubt the bosses know that we have lost members and are taking advantage of it by cutting wages and increasing hours. The majority of cooks are working split watch again. The conditions in the lunch rooms especially are deplorable, the average wage being $20 per week and twelve hours per day. Still these muttonheads won't wake up. They keep on slaving while their masters are raking in the money, the early slave drivers were pikers compared to the bosses of today.

Although it does look discouraging, we will try again this spring to organize those on the outside, and I am sure we will succeed as our International Organizer Ed. Parlee and Eighth Vice President J. Staggenburg have promised to be on the ground and start the ball rolling. A few weeks ago the common council of this city passed a resolution favoring beer and wine, which has since been indorsed by the merchants and manufacturers and many other organizations. If your council has not taken any action in that direction, I ask all members to go after them and make them, no doubt it will mean a fight with the prohibition highbinders. We licked them to a frazzle and you can do the same if you make up your mind to do it.

Our election took place the last Friday in December, with the following result: H. Hoppe, known as Jack Redmond, the fighter, who some years ago almost succeeded in knocking the crown off Ad. Wolgast into an ash can, was elected president; Ed. Perkins, vice president; H. Borst, treasurer; W. Doyle, business agent, W. Shortell, inspector, Ch. Stephen, guard and yours truly was re-elected secretary.

With success to all locals and best wishes to all ex-members of Local 59, I am,

Fraternally yours,

A. SIBILSKY,
Secretary, Local 59.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 763, Rochester Cooks and Waiters' Alliance, is sailing along smoothly as far as our crafts are concerned at the present time. Business is still quiet and our out of work list remains large. We are in hopes that when the birds start singing business will pick up. We thought that when the building trades had agreed to the changes in the building codes that we would not hear any more threats of vicious legislation against organized labor, but we had a terrible jolt handed us when on February 7, the so-called "Compulsory Labor and Anti-Strike Bill" was introduced by Senator Duell and Assemblyman Miller, both chairmen of the committee on labor and industry. This measure, which reads like a chapter out of the efforts of the Bolsheviks to rule Russia, provides that employers and employees who may differ as to wages or conditions of employment shall not have any communication with each other except by letter, and all copies of such correspondence shall be filed, sworn to, with industrial commissioner. If no agreement is reached by such correspondence, the employees must remain at work and may not be discharged, but the employers or employees may sue in the supreme court to have decided matters involved in dispute. The judgment is to be enforced by orders restraining employees from striking or employers from locking out employees, and no one is to strike or ask another to strike. If employees are employers do not seek courts to sue, a group of non-involved citizens may do the suing with the same results. The court may, in order to enforce its decision, also take over any business and run it and is further authorized to assume jurisdiction over labor unions and employers associations and direct their action as in any receivership proceedings. For the purposes of the bill, all industries relating to mining, transportation, food, fuel, clothing and shelter and any thing or agency that may enter into their manufacture, transportation and distribution are declared to be effected with "public utility" and all employed in such industries included. This would mean most of the industries of the state. The penalty for violation is a misdemeanor.

The labor unions of this city are up in arms over this bill and are determined to send the biggest delegation representative of organized labor to the Capital at Albany so that the Senators and Assemblymen from this city will surely know that the union men and women of Rochester are not sleeping when it comes to destroying their organizations. This bill is sponsored by the New York Chamber of Commerce and the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, their membership includes such enemies of labor as J. Pierpont Morgan, Irving T. Bush, Thomas Lamont, L. F. Loree, Wm. E. Peck, and others too numerous to mention. Organized labor will resist with all the power of massed strength the capitalistic drive at Albany to deprive labor of a right to strike, its only weapon of self defense. The fight is on and the party in control will be held accountable if this bill is passed.

Our meetings are well attended. Members seem anxious to want to know whats going on. A lot of good work is being done by the label league of our craft, and our members are co-operating by assisting the crafts in the demand for the union label.

New York State is all "het up," but listen in on your own legislature.

Yours fraternally,

MICHAEL J. MURTHA.

1144 Joseph Avenue.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 815 of the Culinary Alliance is still wrestling with the eight-hour stretch for a day's work. Our only trouble seems to be with the members who seem to think if they fail to get that overtime they can't exist, thus making it hard for those who are not after the glittering gold. But conditions in hours above all things to be considered. Our highest aim should be to reach that goal, eight hours, live and let live, for when we are dead, we will be a long time dead, then it will be time to consider more than eight hours. More working hours would not give sufficient time to enjoy what was left. Local 815 is holding its own as shown by the good attendance at meetings; since we are enforcing the fine for non-attendance, many members have found that they have plenty of time to attend meetings and it is not such a hard thing as they had imagined.

The so-called associated industries and the misnamed "American Plan" are having their troubles as the business men have become tired of this future prosperity, which is all wind, blows over until they can find some other excuse for delay. Mr. Reese, the great miner (calcliminer) who white-washes things over so as to fool the business man, is growing thin and his scheme is showing through, as he has changed his field to Butte, Mont., where, if he don't make a better showing than he has in Utah, he is in danger of coming to his fields' end (rope's end). If organized labor could strike the employer as hard as whitewasher Reese has in Utah, business would be a thing of the past.

The Wilson (Shafer) Cafe, George Shellcross and Albert Freeman are still in the toils of the evil one (the Devil) and we expect to hear of a real explosion at almost any time, for it is becoming a case of the dogs growling over the last bone, as they can't quit. They have no place to go and can't be fired, since there are no more narrow minded to draw from.

Some of the restaurants have changed hands and are being managed by persons who seem to be favorable to unions. We are not losing any places, but every time a change is made we gain and we are striving for a general culinary alliance making our local one hundred per cent.

This may look a long way off but we will reach it in the end let come what will.

We have had it put up to us that the houses can not get by unless they work nine hours. We would advise those places to put in a union card, as the card houses are getting by nicely with eight hours and no complaint.

Uncle Dan Ryan has taken one of his famous wild goose chases flying toward the northwest. Uncle Dan may find some real icebergs but he is used to them. J. S. Dixon is still on the job, and is making a real campaign towards building up the local to where it belongs. Everybody help and he will get there. Jas. A. McCormick is still putting his best efforts into action for the betterment of the local. Jack Johnson is still at the Vincent. Jack says that the meeting is in the meeting hall and not on the street, so come in and help. H. J. Schwartz has just driven in from Soldier Summit. Henry has been out for some months and had to come in to see if Salt Lake was still here and to have a chat with the boys. Cal. Bowen is still in the game. Our last accounts of Cal. is that he has added to his pets a real new dog. C. E. Barber, our inspector, has become a regular attendant at meetings and seems to be interested in his work. Harry Brueger is still working, but spends his time playing pool. Harry gets a real kick out of it win or lose. A. E. LaFlore is still exhorting the members to read their Bibles (by-laws) and become more enlightened.

Work has started in Salt Lake, as the city is cleaning the snow off the streets and have started the municipal wood yard for the unemployed. We expect that it may grow to be a real industry under the American Plan, this is some of the building boom that we could not see some months ago. If the railroads and miners go out on a strike, we will need a real coal yard.

Local 581, of Ogden, Utah, is still flourishing as shown by the dances, well attended, always a good crowd and a real success. Let's hear from you 581. What has become of John J. Foley, the chili man? Let's hear from you, John. Wake up and shake off that Van Winkle.

The Salt Lake Federation is preparing to start with the tide this spring and see to it that there is much needed work for all. The Union Label League is not doing much as there is no buying going on until the laborers make it, here is where the money circulation starts.

With best wishes to the MIXER AND SERVER and yourself, I remain,

Fraternally,

JOHN MULLINS,
President and Press Secretary Local 815.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-15

FORT WORTH, TEXAS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Having been recently appointed Press Agent of Local 480, I desire to ask for space in the MIXER AND SERVER, to tell of the progress being made by this organization in the city of Fort Worth.

Notwithstanding the fact that the past year was filled with thorns this organization is forging ahead in a remarkable way and is recording fast gains.

The membership is considerable and growing steadily, thus keeping in step with the progress march. The spirit of the men is of the first order and is evidenced by the interest shown.

At our last meeting it was voted to increase the sick fees from $3.00 per week to $5.00.

Conditions are improving fairly well, previous to the formation of this organization many hardships were suffered by the boys, but through the untiring efforts of our grievance committee we can boast of many improvements.

Organizer P. D. Campbell plans to make a strenuous fight for back time, overtime, restoration of the 240 hour basic month, and increase of wages to members of this and the Pullman porters class of employees, we hope that each member of the railroad department will exert every available means to assist Brother Campbell in making this department of our International one hundred per cent by the time he appears before the United States Labor Board. Too much praise can not be given Organizer Campbell, and General Secretary Sullivan for the efforts they have employed to help this class of employees.

Hoping that this letter of mine won't take too much space in our valuable MIXER AND SERVER.

Fraternally yours,

LOUIS CRENSHAW,
Press Secretary Local 490.
1301 New York Avenue.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-15

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Kindly allow us a little space in the MIXER AND SERVER and publish for Local 58 our thanks to the traveling members who visited us and helped along in our efforts. There were quite a few dropped in this winter that were a credit to the vast organization, of which they are members, whose very presence in our local was indirectly responsible for a good many of our new members. In saying these few words about visiting members, I am only giving them another view of the esteem and friendship that Local 58 has for them. May they live long. Of course, we have had some of the other kind, but they got plenty of "hot tongue" while they stuck around.

Local 58 has gone on record as admitting the Rev. Wm. Reese Chaplain to honorary membership. He has always assisted in every way to help us.

The summer is almost here already and we are having beautiful weather.

Most of our boys are registered voters, and the candidates for the different offices are seeking our endorsement and support and at every meeting we initiate one or two new members. Now Brothers, I hope you will not blame us for boasting, but I think that is not so bad for us young fellows. Brother Richardson, our secretary, is helping along always to keep up his end of it and is always scheming new plans for the betterment of the Local. The same can be said for Brother Lavagna, our president. The surprise of the officials though is centered on a brand new live wire developed since our last election, that is our Chaplain Brother Murret. Oh! Boy! Say he sure can go. Brother Morris Shifford is still with us, and his past experience has been a great help to our organization. He wishes to be remembered to the boys in Detroit.

Thanking you in advance and wishing you the best of health, I remain, with sincere good wishes.

Fraternally yours,

FRANK REED,
Recording and Corresponding Secretary,
Local 58.

TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In reading the report of A. C. Beck of his recent visit to Tucson, I noticed the following:

"Visited Tucson, where I failed to get in touch with either President Arthur Snellgrove or Secretary Zimmer. Tucson suffering from the same malady that affects nearly all the Arizona towns—an after effect of too much I. W. Wism, etc., and no one evidently ambitious enough to keep the organization moving forward."

For a point of information Local 413 would like to know where Brother A. C. Beck got his information regarding the after effect of too much I. W. Wism in Tucson. Had Brother Beck taken the trouble to inquire in any of our Union Houses, he would have been give any information regarding when Local 413 meets and its activities in the labor movement here.

From information received Brother Beck visited Labor Temple Saturday, December 3rd, at 11:00 P. M., and again at 10:00 A. M., Sunday morning. If conditions were as reported to Brother Beck, why did he not stay over until meeting night and try to better conditions here?

For Brother Beck's information Local 413 is one of the live organizations of Tucson, with two of its delegates to Central Labor Council, officers of that body.

Local 413 has fifty-seven members in good standing and meets every Thursday at 8:00 P. M., and our delegates attend Central Labor Council regularly. Local 413 resents the imputation that there is too much I. W. Wism in our Local.

Fraternally yours,

B. P. CARPENTER,
President.
EDWARD WYNNE,
Secretary.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

TULSA, OKLA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Tulsa, Okla., to let the sisters and brothers know that things at the present time are still a little slow and we have had quite a lot of brothers out of work here the past month, but have been lucky to get enough extra work to exist and that is about as well as a lot are doing at the present time from all reports throughout the country. At this writing wouldn't advise any one looking for permanent employment to come this way. We have a surplus here on account of the condition in the Mexia oil fields the past five or six weeks.

I stated in my last letter to the MIXER AND SERVER that we are putting into effect an organizing campaign the first of March and we expect at least fifteen international and local organizers here to take part in the campaign. From all indications at this time we should meet with great results.

I returned from the convention which was held at Shawnee, Okla., on the 23rd and 24th of this month, known as the Farm Labor Reconstructive League, and from all indications should be a great benefit to all the workers and farmers of this State, as they feel that it is time to do something besides talk and are uniting for the purpose of getting men in the State capital who are friendly to the common masses in the State, and who will try to enact laws which will be to the interest of the farmer and workers as well as the best of the people who make up this great State of Oklahoma. There were seven hundred and fifty-two delegates composed from the Farmers' Union, Farm-Labor Reconstructive League, Oklahoma State Federation of Labor and delegates from every local union throughout the State and if they continue to show the spirit after getting back here that was shown at the convention, there is going to be something doing in this State in the August primaries and fall elections, as it is the first time for many years that the farmers and workers in this State have united for the one great cause, to elect friends to State offices instead of enemies.

Fraternally yours,

O. H. LAUCK,
Secretary Local 135.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

PITTSBURGH, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well the election is over, the new officers are all on the job and I think we are running with less friction and agitation than at any time I have known. We have a new steward on the job and he sure is the goods. He works in harmony with the house committee and he is a good business man, and we have had more improvements and the club kept in better order than at any time in the history of the club. This has been the slowest winter that Pittsburgh has known for years. There are over one hundred thousand men out of work for a year, and every business place in town has felt its effects and what men that are working (we have over a hundred out of work) are just getting a living, and they are talking of putting girls in the country clubs, so Pittsburgh is a good place to keep away from. We have a live wire for president and two business agents on the job and if business will only start up we will have a great year. With best wishes to you and other locals.

Yours fraternally,

R. H. THORNDIKE,
Press Secretary Local 237.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WINNIPEG, CANADA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We are "still on the international map," and making every effort to increase our membership out of the multitude of culinary workers now in Winnipeg, who are unorganized, and we are also trying to avoid such obstacles as are resisting the international trades union movement in Canada.

One of our most powerful opponents in the Province of Manitoba, is the "Employers' Association of Manitoba," affiliating three hundred employers, who paid $23,500 into their 1921 budget to fight labor.

Their latest weapon is a monthly "rag," named "The Payroll," to be distributed from coast to coast as a medium for information on how to pare the pay roll.

This infant is to be fed from the estimated revenue of $84,000 for the first twelve issues, the fund to come from advertisers which compose the list of subscribers.

In Volume 1, No. 1, of the "Pay Roll," page 8, they state that A. F. of L. closed shop tactics fundamentally limit production, and preach class struggle, and that the closed shop, is an extra burden on the consumer's purse. They also write that they always are in close touch and can anticipate any move by labor against their purse; bragging of their efficient body of stool pigeons, which they call their "economic research committee," they also have committees on finance, publication, legislation and membership.

The legislation committee have nine bills on their 1922 program, two of which have been introduced at this session of the Legislature. One to prohibit strikes and force arbitration and one to make trade unions responsible to the law for their acts. The other bills aim to destroy all that labor has accomplished through legislation in Manitoba.

Your scribe is rather proud to think he is a member of an organization which is strong enough to arouse such activity amongst the breeders of dissatisfaction, starvation and "scabs" and am always pleased to see a campaign of this nature started, as it shows the worker what a selfish man his master can be when forced to loosen up with a living wage.

The rank and file should never hesitate to co-operate towards an increased membership, flavor our parsimony with a little self denial, called generosity and try to get them all on the international band wagon.

Any brothers who think the grass is more green in Winnipeg, will please take a little kindly advice. We are fixed like the fellow who fell in the river and the fellow who applied for his job found the fellow had it who pushed him into the river. We have twenty men working on the extra list and two houses to work.

Hoping this maiden attempt to perform in the good old bartenders' guide, having the sanction of the body will be considered. We thank you in advance for any advice regarding future contributions.

A. DOANE.

Press Agent Local 592.

P. S.—By request. We are badly in need of a paid organizer here the year round, as there is an ever changing field here of new material to work on.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Again a short article from Albany, N. Y.

In accordance with the plans of our officers we are going ahead with an effort to recover from the severe attack of cold feet that had affected a part of our membership.

After a thorough house cleaning, we have a very fine upstanding body of men who are loyal union boys with the interest of Local 471 at heart.

We are gaining ground almost daily in recovering the work that has been going to the "Outside the Pale" gang, among whom are several misled boys who are more to be pitied than censured.

It is difficult to conceive how hard it is for the light of reason to strike some people, there are none so blind as those who will not see.

Our club, which is situated in the heart of the city, has become again a scene of activity, and you can find all the regular fellows around most any afternoon or evening, but what else could you expect when the business agent and steward are on the job all the time, no days off on those jobs.

Our international delegates, who are, from time to time, delegated to the capital city of our Empire State, in the interests of our crafts, usually make it a point to stop in and have a friendly chat with the boys, all of whom are interested in their work.

The Legislature, which is now in session, has been the means of increasing business in the hotels of the city, which has been advantageously taken care of by our members, that, together with several large extras, has made the past month a prosperous one, which, of course, means an up to the minute paid up membership.

Success for Local 471 is now an assured thing which, of course, is most pleasing to all.

Fraterally yours.

CHAS. E. OLIVER,

Recording and Press Secretary Local 471.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It is very gratifying to note the great number of members who take keen interest in the MIXER AND SERVER, amusing to see a few toss it aside without even trearing off the wrapper and the next minue see them perusing absorbingly their (Bible) racing form. Since we have sent in a corrected roster of addresses and the members are now receiving their copies, expressions of satisfaction and approval have been heard regularly showing a manifest appreciation. Some have had the good graces to comment on its interesting pages and to compliment us on our contributions. Now we do not feel that we merit compliments or praises, and besides we do not care for them. Oh! no! no! Not any more than we care for our beer, or a baby cares for his milk, or a blind man cares for his restored eyesight. We were particularly pleased to hear that Mrs. Joe Springler had appreciated our efforts as well as a few others, hence our chagrin at not being a learned scrivener.

We received a letter from Sister Bessie Hays, of Local 180, San Jose, Cal., giving us advice for one of our sick members. Sister Hays saw our item in the MIXER AND SERVER mentioning the sick brothers and she sent along some very useful recommendations. We appreciated the noble impulse that prompted her to help a brother, showing a true and sincere fraternal spirit, and we thank here sincerely for her action. We feel sure the brother for whom it was intended will benefit by it.

A page from our diary, in the vocabulary of a modern Samuel Pepys: Up betimes, in dread and apprehension as to what the day will bring forth; my wife, poor wretch, trying to cheer me with delicious coffee and noble pancakes. To the office where I find the artisans already assembled, mostly all out of work but albeit very cheerful withal; Arthur Neppel there, doing some comical antics, and uttering some rare bits of drollery; Harry Jackson at the piano, rendering soothing melodies; Bill Sweet singing, "O Lord, I am most frantic and hard put to write aught, they gaze at me and snicker, the great zanies." At lunch hour to visit the sick brothers. Saw Brother Chas Robson cheerful after having an abcess in his mouth lanced. Saw also Mrs. Robson, she being very cordial like to me. Back at my stint till late, wishing the morrow was the Sabbath, my poor head aching, my nerves on edge, and sadly in need of quiet and rest. Home to a spicy hot meat pye; very contented; and to bed.

We saw a sign posted for the benefit of the employees of a small shop, containing only five words, but notice the order in which they read: "Shut up, Think, Work, Produce." We thought this was a good one, for there is no thinking until a person shuts up; no work until he thinks, and no production until he works. Among the multitude of mottoes there is one that says something. Of course, if Father Adam had said, "Thanks, I don't need apples," we would not be in need now of mottoes or innuendos.

In our last contribution we told you that we hoped to be able, in the near future, to comment on the expected co-operation that was urged on the members by General President Flore and the newly elected officers of Local 196. We had hoped that the appeal would not fall on deaf ears, so it is with the keenest pleasure that we are in a position to state at this time that our wish came true, that we see a great many of the members have taken cognizance of the prevailing conditions and are co-operating and boosting like genuine good fellows and thorough labor union men. Of course, we have our quota of dissatisfied grumblers and knockers, but fortunately they are in the minority and their knocks and senseless agitation are turned into boosts and intelligently tolerated by all those directly or indirectly interested. Hence, we are now trying to re-establish the harmonious feeling that prevailed in Local 196 in the past, we are looking for a brighter future, and the realization of our fondest dream—good will and harmony among men.

Fraternally yours,

ED A. LALANNE,

Business Agent, Financial and Press Secretary,
Local 196.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

YONDER, WYOMING.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Live and learn, for tomorrow the shoe may be on the other foot.

It has been some time since I've written for our Journal, so here goes. I note in the past three or four issues appear many articles from old friends of mine, especially Johnnie Hauss. Will say if he don't cut that fishing propaganda out, I know one cook that is going to resign a position the next warm day that comes.

I also note Brother Jack Nolan, press secretary of Local 577, and the way the old-timers got to Mexia, Texas, and would like to ask Jack to explain to us how he got there. I wish to compliment the members of Cooks' Local 266, of Kansas City, Mo., for the excellent entertainment they pulled off October 21 and honors bestowed upon their old faithful war horses, Brothers Franklin, Murray and Paxton, for I know they stayed with the old ship when she did not have a sail.

Well in the past few months I have not let much grass grow under my feet, and have had the pleasure of visiting many of our local unions throughout this part of the country. Work is a little scarce, about the same as other parts of the country, but the same spirit prevails in all the different locals I've visited, that there is a better day coming.

Being the author of some of the amendments adopted at our last convention in Cleveland, Ohio, and also the author of some amendments that were voted down, and believing that I am in my right mind now, and was when I drew these amendments up and knowing I had the same right as any other member in good standing had, to present to the convention for their approval or disapproval any law I felt would benefit us, and when I read the proceedings of the convention I was well satisfied as an individual and felt the convention had made a step forward and strengthened the foundation of our International that has taken so many years to build. But attending a few of our local unions in the cities I've been in—I always attend whenever it is possible for me to do so—to my astonishment I have heard communications read for a referendum vote on the salaries paid an International officer. Now I've been called a Red, a Bolsheviki and God knows what all, and I've sent out circular letters to local unions for something I thought was right, but I never thought of trying to send some of the families of our organizers to the poor farm, and advocating for our General President and Secretary to work lunch jobs to get by.

I know of no enemy I have in our International Union and hope I never will have any, but I will say one thing and I don't care whether its Ed. Flore, Jere L. Sullivan, Sis Hopkins or Susie Jones, I believe in a living wage and reasonable work day. And just as long as we advocate cheap skates in our own ranks just that much longer and that much harder it's going to be for us to accomplish our end.

One that believes in living and let live, and the older I get the more I learn what the boss really wants—long hours and little pay—and I for one refuse to let him get by with it, so I am a little local by myself, way out here fifty miles from nowhere and I know that ninety-five per cent of the members of this International have the same feeling, and the other five per cent will come out of their dreams the same as I did, so let us go to the bat with the boss and open shoppers, get what's coming to us. Fight an officer in August every two years if necessary, if they fail to hit on high at all times.

Best wishes for success to each and every member of our International.

Respectfully,

JACK RICHARDS,
Member-at-Large.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On January 13, Brother George Rocky, one of the loyal old members of Local 175, was called to the Great Beyond. It was a great shock to his many friends when they heard of the death of Brother Rocky, for he was beloved by all and Local 175 extends its sympathy to the bereaved family. May Joe Rocky's name never be forgotten and may his soul rest in peace!

Brother Rocky had been with Eckert & Heller, at the Majestic Hotel, for a number of years; he dropped dead while ringing up his cash register at 11:30 p. m.

Brother George Veal is on the sick list.

Brother Albert Roy is doing some good work collecting dues, and has a good report at every meeting. The club is running along fine. Brothers Oscar Geyer and Edward Guilfoyle are back of the bar. Chas. B. Klein, our secretary is always on the job. Brother Geo. Christman, our treasurer, is the right man in the right place. Brother Wm. H. Brandt, our president, is proud of his staff of officers, for they are always there and on the ob. We are doing well, and it is good to see some of the old members back in line.

Yours fraternally,

FRANK BROWN,
Vice-President and Press Secretary,
Local 175.

NEWARK, N. J.

February 10, 1922.

Mr. Jere L. Sullivan, Commercial-Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—You will kindly publish the following item in the next issue of the MIXER AND SERVER:

Wanted—Information of former treasurer, Louis Techner, of Waiters' and Cooks' Union, Local 109, of Newark, N. J. Absconded with funds of this organization. We request all locals to furnish Local 109 with information which would lead to his arrest and conviction. He is about 5 feet 8 inches tall, dark hair; waiter by profession. The above cut is a good likeness of him.

Local 109 will assume the responsibility of this publication.

Fraternally yours,

[SEAL]

H. MAERTENS,

262 Washington St., Newark, N. J.
NEAL RYAN, President, Local 109.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In my last letter I promised I would write of our negotiations with our employers last July, but before doing so I would like to say something about the interesting affair of the Cooks' Local 167, the same being a grand ball and culinary exhibit, which they managed at the Winton Hotel, Saturday, February 4.

The culinary artists, employed in the various hotels and restaurants in this city, surely done themselves proud and their efforts resulted in the most beautiful works of art in their line that it has ever been my good fortune to gaze upon.

The public were invited to view the exhibition free of charge and the great numbers who took advantage of the opportunity to view the handiwork of our fellow craftsmen, were amply repaid for the time spent, for it proved a pleasing and surprising skill to those who are not familiar with the trade of the "man at the range."

The "Ball" was attended by a large crowd, who enjoyed themselves immensely and it was indeed a memorable occasion for Local 167 and here's hoping they repeat next year.

Now to the main subject of this letter:

On July 15, 1920, the local unions of this city entered into a two-year agreement with their employers, consisting of all hotels and the larger restaurants, which provided amongst other things, a union shop for all, and a wage of twenty-one dollars per week of six days, nine hours per day, worked within fourteen hours.

As early as April, 1921, the Hotel Association wrote us to the effect that they expected some material reductions in the wage scale and while not stating any specific figures, they told us of the rapidly growing business depression and what they claimed, "the much lowered cost of living." At this time it might be well to state that we had a verbal understanding at the close of negotiations in 1920 that either party to the agreement might open the same for revision of the hour and wage scale, at the expiration of one year, by giving the other party thirty days notice in writing.

The unions replied to their first letter, by asking what they considered a fair reduction in wages, etc., not conceding, however, that living costs had been reduced to such an extent as would permit of much reduction.

The employers did not reply to this for quite some time and when they did it was to practically repeat their former expressions.

The unions' reply to the second letter was to offer a new wage scale providing what they considered fair adjustments.

We asked for conferences on the subject, but the Association did not mention anything about talking the matter over in a subsequent letter, but they told us what they would consider fair conditions for their employees: Reduction of waiters' wages from $21 to $15 per week, with the same hours, nine in fourteen, and a split watch for cooks, instead of the straight watch that they were working.

Local 106 agreed to accept the $15, but on a nine in twelve hour basis and the cooks offered a ten per cent reduction in wages with the straight watch to continue in effect.

All through their correspondence the Association intimated they would not agree to a continuation of the union shop agreement and finally hired a leading attorney to attend to their correspondence, who with legally worded epistles, sought to confuse the issue and denied the existence of the two-year agreement, honor binding, at least on both parties.

We made repeated efforts to obtain conferences upon the subjects in dispute but owing to the well-laid plans of the Statler Hotel Corporation, who was the dominating influence in the controversy with their "open shop" policy, which they had succeeded in putting over in other cities, where they were operating, we did not make any headway until Mayor Fitzgerald virtually forced them into meeting with the representatives of their employees.

In the final negotiations we obtained for Local 106 a wage of $16 per week, nine hours in thirteen and accepted a ten per cent reduction in wages for the cooks, with a split watch in some departments.

We learned, amongst other things that employers will not hesitate to repudiate their agreements, given in honor, despite the fact that the unions successfully lived up to their part of the agreement in letter and spirit, and they would probably have gotten away with it had they not feared public criticism of their unfair tactics when exposed.

It is well to pay strict attention to the "open shop employer" for in the words of McCone of the Buffalo Commercial, which were attributed to him by the Plain Dealer of this city, in quoting his speech at the Chamber of Commerce, "We are not concerned with principles, we are concerned with profits."

In the light of recent events, I believe he spoke the truth.

Believing I have encroached upon the patience of the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER, as well as on your valuable time and space sufficiently for one time, I will close with a request that "Paddy" O'Connor take notice—The Mayor of Peking, Honest John Farley, passed out last week.

EDW. A. WHISSEMORE,
Press Secretary Local 106.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My friend Brother Banas, our worthy press secretary is still suffering with an attack of charley horse, therefore it is up to your Uncle Dudley to put a few lines together in order to keep pace with our esteemed contemporaries.

It would be a pleasant task indeed to sit and write if only a little progress could be reported, but such an article has been lost or stolen, anyway it is a cinch it is missing. It seems to me that the advice sent out in the last general letter addressed to the various locals should be heeded, especially in this town where a darn good prescription is necessary. Desperate diseases require desperate remedies and the sooner our boys and girls get together and inject a little harmony stuff into their step the sooner Local 279 will gain some of its lost prestige. I know the truth hurts, but, so do results of a lack of the proper spirit necessary to make everyone join in an effort to build up. Sisters and brothers, it doesn't require a college education to size up the situation. Don't you see we are slipping and don't you understand the weakness of one local in our craft has an indirect bearing on other locals in neighboring States? We all realize what a jolt so many industrial crafts have received, we know without consulting an attorney the damage created. We feel the same as they the reduction in wages and don't you know that in far more essential walks in life than ours the limit of endurance has been reached. The result will show at some future date. Once again will all crafts realize that without organization, without harmony and good will one to the other, the working class must be the sufferers. Long ago when things were claimed to be good, appeared the handwriting on the wall, but strange to say it was heeded just like the cry of "wolf." Every day now one hears of the lengthened hours, the ringing in of that seventh day for good measure and the little envelope cuts, yet we scrap amongst ourselves, and what is worse, the happenings back of the curtain are conveyed to the world of employers and when they tell about it they use a keen razor for emphasis.

We have no reason to wait for others, we should encourage the affiliation of all capable craftsmen and craftswomen, here is where they belong and when they are with us the employer knows, at least, that our hand is ever on the hilt of the sword even though it should not be necessary to use it. The time is ripe to profit by mistakes of the past, let us realize we are the workers, the regular army, and what we need is concerted effort. By having faith in ourselves and our fellow workers and offering the helping hand therein lies success.

Circles of 28, as Ed. Lalanue calls it, and puss-in-the-corner whisperings, are assets which never had any market value. (Here is a co-incidence, just as I write the word "value," I receive a letter from Ed. Lalanue, wherein he says in answer to my inquiry, that the Circle of 28 are behaving like good sports. Good for Buffalo.)

I guess that article in the February issue, "Between Ourselves," didn't disclose some of the secrets that have been locked in the prison cell of the knowledge of many a Secretary and Business Agent. How often, O how often, do we receive censure from the employers regarding incompetents and get facts that no amount of intelligence can combat or gainsay. Yes, it is time we accept applicants for what they are and not for what they hope to be. There are so many "accidents" running around in the guise of waiters who are impeding the progress of our locals, and if the Business Agent does not keep them well supplied with work he gets roasted and toasted to the king's taste. Let us sell what we claim we have to sell, service, and do not let us be compelled to ring in damaged goods representing themselves as qualified workers. I can't make it too strong and I dare a denial of the fact that if the local has the material it does not have to solicit work, your telephone will do the trick, they will come to you. Do not hamper the Business Agent in his selections. The quality of your service will give the employer confidence and then your official has always good backing for his arguments should any arise. If you know you are delivering the goods then the battle is nearly won. Refrain from being an obstructionist, you have taken the pledge to assist, not to tear down, and anything we agree to do we should go through with, no matter how it hurts.

A few weeks ago one of our local evening newspapers devoted quite a lot of space to the revival of that ever perplexing tipping problem. The letters published on the subject must have sounded somewhat ridiculous to members of our craft and I for one am frank to admit that if the writers of these letters were, as they claimed, dining room mechanics, that I am eligible to pass for the position of civil engineer. However, there is consolation in the fact that the solution would baffle the brains of Tom Edison and other celebrities.

Was certainly pleased to see in our General President's letter in the MIXER AND SERVER his comment upon the high initiation and reinstatement. This is alright in a well organized locality, but in other places it can only tend to keep prospective members out of the fold where the rate is high.

Trusting this will reach you in time for publication, with best wishes, I remain

Fraternally yours,

GEO. F. ANDERSON,
Press Secretary, Batting for Banas.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, here is Local 466, Bartenders of Wilmington, Del., again. We had one of our largest meetings on Sunday, February 12, 1922. Elected all new officers with the assistance of Organizer R. E. Croskey, for the year 1922. They are: President, James Fox; vice-president, Chas. Banner; treasurer, Wm. G. Platt; trustees, Leon Klund, chairman, John J. Ryan and George Bleyer; outside guard, Pat. J. McConnell; inside guard, Edward Can; chaplain, James Parks.

Well, it looks like old times; Brother Joseph

Corrigan was out in full blast. Brother Corrigan has what it takes to get the pepper in this local. The old timer has it.

We had one application for membership, Mr. Geo. Fisher. We put him through alright.

Brother McConnell has a Ford car and Pat sure is having a big time. Well, I suppose you will let this go in the MIXER AND SERVER next month.

Yours truly,

JOHN J. DOWELL,

Local 466.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Am taking the pleasure to forward you this contribution from Local 216, and wish to say that we are working, gaining in membership and finances gradually. On February 17th we were favored a conference with the General President, Edward Flore, who stopped here on his way East. The executive board was well represented. The result of the conference was beneficial in every respect, also the advices of the General President were appreciated.

Business Agent Arthur Booth, who has been successful for the short time he has been in the office, declared in the presence of Mr. Flore that the membership will be more than doubled by September of 1922. Let us hope so. If the members feel the same way about it, the outcome will be wonderful. We will give him all the support we can for he is sincere in organization and he really deserves more credit than is given to him. He is a worker and encouragement is necessary.

We are about to start a campaign to organize the Grecian culinary workers of Toledo. This has proven a failure in other large centers, nevertheless we will try our best to organize them; nothing like trying. We already have met with some opposition as a few have stated that they are "the menace of the country." This has been heralded by one of the representatives of our industry in the past, and it seems to have some effect as opposition. We have considered all points to the best of our ability and the result is that an International or local organizer is necessary to participate in such a move, and soon we will request that the General Secretary accommodate us for such a mission, which will be greatly appreciated by the membership of Local 216.

All dues paying members are under employment, some in non-union houses, and as the Spring season is getting nearer and nearer, we expect that new jobs will be created by the opening of the summer resorts, and we do hope that the conditions will improve soon.

We have a committee appointed to re-draft new By-Laws that will conform with the present conditions. Of course, it doesn't mean that we will give ground to the restaurant keepers, by any means. The committee, Tony Adams, Dan Curtis, Wm. Ryan, Frank Wise, Sydney Eckett and President Ernest Hilderbrant, who is a member of all committees. Committee to get in touch with Grecian culinary workers: Tony Adams, Gus Pares and Steve Kretch.

Our meeting days have been changed for convenient reasons. Commencing April, meetings will be held on first Thursday of each month in the office room, No. 19. All members must attend this one meeting a month or suffer the consequences. The penalty for non-attendance is one dollar, payable with dues on or before the first of each month. Sickness or working are the only excuses accepted by the Financial Secretary; other excuses will be considered and decided by the local. Be on the lookout.

Bro. Ray Hixon has surrendered his apron and is now a salesman for a city concern. Bro. Tom Cotter is now working in Pittsburgh, Pa. Bros. Frank Ringtenat and Arthur Gunderman are in Portland, Ore. Bro. Jack Morgan is figuring on buying a new "flivver," if he can save that much money. So is Bro. Adams. Bro. Gus Pares is working at Kests Cafe once in a while.

Bro. John Vossily, now in Greece, is contemplating to return to the United States. You are welcome, John, we will be very glad to see you. John is in a wet country and he is liable to spring something when he arrives here. Look out, John.

Dyer's Chop House, which has been on the unfair list of Local 216, is employing members of Local 335. The boys walked out fighting to keep up the standards of living.

Next meeting will be held on April 6, 3 p. m. Attend.

With greetings to you and all. Trusting to be favored with publication, allow me to remain,

Yours truly,

TONY ADAMS,

Recording and Press Secretary, Local 216.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The cooks, waiters and waitresses of Local 329 are still in the field for better conditions and striving for the membership to be educated to the best interest of all concerned, as many seem ignorant as to what unions stand for. (Co-operation.)

In many cases they seem to think that their dues are the only things to be considered and as long as they keep them paid have excuses for not attending meetings, and oftentimes have no excuses at all.

If the truth were known, only lack of being interested could be advanced.

With the first of May, at which time our agreement expires, quickly drawing near, very shortly our new agreements will be presented to the proprietors, and we are all in hopes that there will be no trouble experienced in this undertaking. With the "open shop" advocates and talk of wage cuts there seems to be little doubt but what there will be some obstacles, but in the event that we do have them, we are ready to face it and win out.

At the present time we have forty-eight restaurants and lunch rooms and every one of them a 100 per cent "union house," and out of our membership of 175 we have only two of our sisters on the out-of-work list.

There is considerable sickness going around but we have been quite lucky in our line, with only one sister ill at the present time.

The shoe industry here, for which our city is noted, is still undecided but in the hopes that this month coming will show considerable increase as practically all of the shoe unions have accepted new agreements and their various troubles have been patched up to a such an extent that in a very short time conditions will show an increase in the production of shoes in this city, and of course this will mean increased business for our many union houses so favorably patronized by many of the shoe workers. Yours fraternally,

EARL M. TERRILL,

Press Secretary, Local 329.

“PEG”

Two incidents occurring within a few weeks of one another focused our attention to the new man on the broiler. He came to us with a traveling card from an eastern local, visited the local union office, deposited the card, asked that the record of transfer be recorded on his book, and the next time we noted him was at one of our meetings when nominations for officers for the coming term brought out a larger crowd than usual. He took an end seat in the body of the hall, where, as a rule, but few of the members cared to sit—probably because of poor illumination in that part of the meeting hall. Generally the members came up the middle aisle, took seats in that section, where they could see and be seen.

Just after reading of the minutes, one of our admittedly hard boiled eggs came strolling in, and instead of proceeding up the main aisle, walked to the left and with his usual swagger toward the spot where the new man, all unconscious of the approaching H. B. E., had slipped a foot out into the aisle. We did not know then, but we were soon to find out the reason why that foot was in that position. There were two distinct sounds; one of something breaking, the other a cry of distress; while a third followed which soon developed into a pretty good sample of blasphemous vituperation. The meeting was in uproar. Few recognized what had transpired and it was with difficulty that the president managed to bring order out of seeming chaos. The Hard Boiled Egg was fuming with rage, all the more sultry because of being deprived of—as he later expressed it—a good, stiff punch at the new man. The new man was observed during intervals when he was not absorbed in listening to the business of the meeting, to feel of his leg and shrug his shoulders, leaving the impression that he was quite as much hurt as the Hard Boiled Egg who had tripped over his foot.

Under the head of Good and Welfare, the new man arose, and in language which left no doubt as to sincerity, offered a dual headed apology. First to the president for being the innocent cause of disturbing the meeting. Second to the Hard Boiled Egg for having impeded his progress and causing him to lose his balance, landing him on the floor before the members. After delivery of the referred to apologies, he gave us a five-minute talk that made all of us sit up and take notice. That fellow sure did know what unionism meant and gave his interpretations of united action that won for him hearty appreciation and applause.

The second incident occurred in the kitchen of the Jefferson Cafe.

The new man had won the nickname of “PEG,” due to the fact that it was noted that he walked with a perceptible limp. Next to him on the range was the fry cook. The latter as well as “PEG” had to work fast during the late breakfast on Sunday to care for the innumerable short orders. Business was unusually brisk, waiters in and out and each leaving orders as well as taking those ready for serving. The fry cook had but a few moments before removed a basket of French fried and had gone to the ice box for the purpose of obtaining a new supply of lard, the supply in his fryer having reached that stage where a change was imperative. One of the kitchen girls, unknown to the cooks on duty, had taken the fry basket, loaded it with fresh sliced and wet potatoes, proceeded to the range and dropped the basket into the boiling fat. Hardly before she realized what had taken place, the hot fat and wet potatoes accomplished an astonishing transformation over the hot range and onto the thoroughly frightened girl, the blazing fat enveloping her. Shrieking in frenzy and pain, the girl fell before the range and not even Hard Boiled Egg, who was one of the excited onlookers, had the courage to come to her aid. Not so with “PEG,” who, without a moment's hesitation, grabbed the girl off the floor, limped to one side of the kitchen with her in his arms. His own clothing meanwhile catching fire. But that did not phase him; grabbing a knife, he made fast passes over the clothing of the girl, pulling off her outer garments, leaving her almost nude, but really saving her life. Willing hands took the girl to the dressing room for the women, while “PEG” was being given first aid by the boys who had crowded into the kitchen.

It was observed that the left leg of “PEG'S” trousers was burned to the knee, and upon closer scrutiny the left leg proved to be made of wood, around which had been wrapped and tacked about a yard of one inch leather strap. Later, while “PEG” was in the hospital being treated for the burns he had accumulated in saving her (she having recovered before “PEG”), Nellie paid him a visit, and noting a package at the head of his bed, asked “PEG” what it contained. “PEG,” with a tremble of the lips, replied: “That's my new leg that arrived from Washington yesterday. As soon as my face heals a little more Doctor says I can try it out.”

Hard Boiled, in tripping over “PEG'S” wooden pin, had landed on it and almost put it out of commission. The leather straps “PEG” had wound around and tacked over the pine peg so that he could keep going until the new pin arrived, but “PEG” put the old pin to good use along with similar courage as he had displayed July 17, 1918, under the French General Mangin near Soissons.

“PEG” will probably bear face scars for life, but Nellie says that “PEG” is the best looking and most courageous American she ever met or ever expects to meet. To which we tender willing and emphatic assent.

NAMED SHOES ARE FREQUENTLY MADE IN NON-UNION FACTORIES

Do Not Buy Any Shoe

no matter what its name, unless it bears a plain and readable impression of this UNION STAMP.

All shoes without the UNION STAMP are always Non-Union. Do not accept any excuse for absence of the UNION STAMP.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' UNION

246 Summer Street, BOSTON, MASS.

COLLIS LOVELY, General President

CHARLES L. BAINE, General Secretary-Treasurer

Your Library

Is incomplete without
the bound volumes of
The Mixer and Server.
A limited number may be secured at Two Dollars each.

Remit to—

Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan

at Cincinnati, Ohio

Show Your Colors

—WEAR THE—
BUTTON
OF YOUR CRAFT

Order one through your Secretary.

Solid Gold Button
$1.00

All our Buttons are Union Made

JERE L. SULLIVAN

Secretary-Treasurer

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE BLDG.

CINCINNATI, OHIO

This Label

Is always used by us in filling your orders for Local By-Laws, Tickets,
Invitations, Programs and everything in the line of Printing. We do neat, clean, accurate work. If you like to see the label on your printing, and your local printer does not supply it, send us your orders.

Roessler Bros.

PRINTERS

528 WALNUT ST., CINCINNATI, O.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

This is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance
and
Bartenders International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 4.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, APRIL 15, 1922

Press of
Roessler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio

HAMMER OR HORN

AWAY back yonder after Brigadier General Zebulon Montgomery Pike first saw the shadow of the wonderful pinnacle of earth and rock, which was later to bear his name, in commemoration of his discovery and work as an explorer, there lived in what many of us still persist in calling The Centennial State, an ordinary garden variety of toiler, who, from being a worker close to nature, acquired wisdom beyond the average possession of his compatriots, yet was a simple soul, as all great men invariably are.

This worker in nature's vineyard made innumerable discoveries and acquired a philosophy which he practiced to the end of his allotment of years, and on occasions before he passed to the great beyond, he was heard to say that "You Can't Saw Wood With a Hammer," nor can you win life-long friends by using that useful article for purposes other than it was originally designed.

Another resident of that section of the world said: "One Does Not Have to be a Musician in Order to Blow a Booster's Horn"; yet there are many mountain folks, and some folks of the plains, who insist on blowing wind into trumpets for no other purpose than to get rid of excess lung-power. Other philosophers have followed in the steps of the two referred to, not exactly in the same paths, but leading in a general forward direction; these latter have taken from the two expressions, so chock-full of clean wisdom, inspiration for other wise sayings, some tinged with the chatter of the sidewalk, others with the color of modernity, but all purposeful.

"Throw Away Your Hammer and Grab a Booster's Horn."

The aliveness of that expression sinks in, it is unlike the raindrops hitting the back of the duck.

"It ain't the tool you use, it's you."

One does not accompany that expression with a bill of particulars; it would be confusing instead of advantageous.

"Half-finished jobs need a cleaner-up later." Probably that is one requiring elucidation; but it is simply a rehash of the old maxim:

"Things done by halves are never done right."

In our affairs we have been, and may probably continue to be, less anxious to employ the Horn than the Hammer; yet each has its place in the scheme of things, but used out of place harm results which takes many men and maids to obliterate.

Whenever you feel like saying mean, harsh things about your fellows, check-up, stop your "hawses," then keep your mouth closed. That is good, sound advice and worth taking over as a part of your daily routine. If you say mean things about your fellows, others may do the same about you, and where is the advantage in that?

"We should thank God that He did not give us the power of hearing through walls," says Austin O'Malley, "otherwise there would be no such thing as friendship."

If you think well of yourself, others may be induced to believe in you; but no man, or woman either, ever burned up the road of success, or amounted to a hill-of-beans, who devoted their spare time to finding fault with others, or using their hammers on the reputations of friends or co-workers in the industry. Whenever you see a hammer—think of Construction, for that is what it was intended for in the first place. Whenever you see a Horn, think of Boosting. Be right with yourself, be right with your union, and when you pass in your checks people will not say: "Good Riddance to Bad Rubbish"—they will be sincerely sorry to lose you, and your memory will be a sweet and wholesome possession to those who enjoyed your friendship.

Vol. XXXI

CINCINNATI, APRIL 15, 1922.

No. 4

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 19, 1918.

Printed by
Roessler Brothers,
Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
Building,
Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor

Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE.....President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH.....First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN.....Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY.....Third Vice-President
509 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY.....Fourth Vice-President
183 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL.....Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO.....Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY.....Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG.....Eighth Vice-President
500 S. State Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN.....General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Compers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Whenever you become tired of listening to members boast about the number of new members they have induced to become members of your local union you may be in a fair way to becoming inoculated with the organizing bug.

A sure method of preventing boasting in your presence, is to be able to match the record made by the other fellow. The first and necessary step is to obtain from the secretary the required application forms, the next move is to locate your prospect and begin peeling off convincing language—the kind that sells the goods.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

The only impediment in the way of success of some local unions is, that they have placed obstacles before them instead of removing and cleaning up the path ahead. They resemble the fellow who built a boat in his cellar and did not discover that it was too large to pass through the doorway until it was completed. The old saw, "Look before you leap," may be as ancient as dodo's egg, but it applies to these days and times just the same as if it had been the brain drip of a present-day writer.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

Failures stiffen the back bones of real men and women, while they scare the blood from the face of the weakling. The best and most successful local unions on the roster of our organization are those who were faced with adversity at the start and who experienced several hard bumps as they made their way forward. The weak vessels foundered, the others weathered the gale and will be found doing business with a vigor and vim that astonishes the neverwassers. Trying to conduct your local union on so-called original lines, may be pleasing to the vanity of a few, but the substantial successes the unions that have gotten somewhere and can point to worth-while accomplishment, followed the steps of those who went ahead, being satisfied that the trail-blazers of the trade union movement didn't pick out the route without knowing where it would land them.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

When inclined to speak disparagingly about your union or its members, stop long enough to consider, that in the former case you are throwing stones at yourself, for you are part of that union. In the second case, be reminded that speaking ill of others invites attention to your lack of balance, to your poor training and absence of qualities which gave Solomon a reputation for wisdom.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Have you ever gone along for months at a time paying no special attention to what was happening in and about your neck of the woods, and, all of a sudden wake up by a jar given you when you least expected it?

Possibly that is not quite clear. Occasionally we find it difficult to get a good start, but have a little patience and we will get the old hoop rolling in the right direction. One would have to be the possessor of whatever it is that is given to the graduates of Pecan University, to be able to close one's eyes to facts that loom up bigger than a bill board, just before the "Greatest Show on Earth" makes its appearance on the old town circus lot. Now, to get back to making that intimated start: Some months ago a committee from one of our local unions, made an appointment with the employers of what they called the "Class A" houses. At the appointed time the committee and the employers' representatives met, and, after exchanging the usual "howdosedoes," they unrolled large sheets of paper and began discussing some of the various points that appeared to be agreeable to one side and the contrary to the other. One of our members, speaking for the men and women of the organization, said, with rather vigorous emphasis, that the men and women of the industry were paid less money than the wage-earners of any other skilled trades in America. That meant what some of you would call the beginning of the blow-off, for immediately following that statement, came one from the employers and which was in substance, that the union representative was unacquainted with the facts or was purposely stating what was not true. The union representative came back with quoting the wages paid in other industries and endeavored to convince his opposite that the catering industry employees were to the bad in the money question several good, hard, iron dollars. "Evidently," said this employer, "you are ignoring the fact that the men and women in our dining rooms are getting as much in the form of 'side money' as their wages amount to. Are you going to ignore the fact that the large majority of skilled table service employees prefer our character of houses to the Class B establishments, where the perquisites are less and the labor harder. Even allowing," continued this employer, "that the Class B houses pay a trifle more wages in the long run, it stands to reason that the workers show preference to the Class A houses, for the very excellent reason that, all told, wages included, they are better paid than any of the skilled workers whom you make mention of."

"Upon what ground do you base your conclusions relative to so-called tips," asked the union's representative.

"Upon the best grounds—that of having personal knowledge of the average picked up daily by my girls and boys in my cafe and restaurant. Now, I don't want you boys to assume for a moment that I am talking through my hat, for I can assure you, and I think I can prove my contention to your satisfaction, that the girls and boys working in my place seldom pick up as pourboire, as the Frenchmen call it, less than five and oftener eight to ten dollars a day! How do I know that to be a fact? Let me make myself quite clear: As some of you who have worked for me know, it is my daily practice to be on the job; if I am not in the back part of the house, you can find me circulating on the dining room floor; at other times I can be found close to the cashier's desk, and in the latter place I can always be found after each meal, for then is when we make settlements and provide for banking the income of the place. Not one of my girls or boys but what make daily visits to the cashier's desk, dump a lot of 'bird feed' as they call it, but, so much of it that the cashier exchanges for the 'bird feed' a bill seldom less than five and frequently twice that amount. These employees have made no secret of the fact that they make, as they call it, good money. I am willing to place you in a position in my establishment where you can scrutinize every check that is handed over to the cashier, and during the period of time I am willing to wage that at least half of my dining rooms crew will make a visit to the cashier and exchange 'bird feed' for larger bills. I say I am willing to show you, but you would have to agree that you would be sportsmen and not warn your members in my employ in advance of this proposed investigation or exhibit of facts as I know 'em. Why, my dear boys, I never for a moment had any idea of spying on my help, in fact I don't have to; we have always looked upon the 'picking up of change' as a part of the business. The workers come to my place because they know in advance, that if they render good service the patrons will pay, and some of them generously. The dressing rooms for our girls are so located that the walls adjoin another building; there is an air shaft used jointly by the two buildings or those who occupy the buildings. Our store room is just above that dressing room, and it is not unusual to hear our girls, while taking a rest after the meal, discuss the 'pickings' as some of them call it, for the meal just finished.

"I only made three dollars for lunch today," says one. Another responds: 'Three dollars! Oh, pshaw, it would almost make me quit my job if I did not make more than that; why, I have not made less than five dollars for lunch in months.'

"I see you shake your head. If you are in doubt, just take your pencil and figure it out. Our stations are eight-chair stations, and you boys know as well as I do that they are filled all the time. But let us assume that we did not average over sixteen patrons for the hour on that eight-chair station; let us assume that these patrons only gave up a dime each—that means 160 cents the hour; and let us further assume that our lunch was limited to three hours, which is not the case, for it runs from 11 to 3, and all of that time all hands are going at top speed. Using the sixteen patrons to the hour for an eight-chair station, that means that each eight-chair station has run four hours, and four times 16 is 64 patrons. But I want to be liberal, in fact, am going to be, and I shall limit the number of patrons to 48 for the lunch hour, and if, as already indicated, they get a dime from each patron, they go to their lunch with four dollars and eighty cents in dimes or its equivalent. I said that I was going to be liberal in making this estimate, but you boys know, for two of you have worked in my place, that the ten-cent patron does not compare in numbers with the patrons who pass you fifteen to twenty cents. Now, then, we have figured one meal—lunch; shall we size up our dinner, which begins usually about 5:30 in the afternoon and seldom shows slacking until after 8:00 o'clock. Even if the boys and girls did not serve half as many patrons for dinner as they did for lunch, and letting the average of ten cents a patron stand, they would finish the day's trick with dimes and nickels to the tune of $7.20. And, keeping your pencil working, you will find that a six-day week at $7.20 means a pick-up of $43.20, making a total, with their wages, of something in excess of sixty dollars the week; and that says nothing whatsoever about the board they get, and in my place they are fed as well as I am. There is no Red river stew put before them, for we do not have it on our bill of fare.

"We have rush times, the same as other establishments, and patrons eat and get out in a hurry. When we have rushes, the 'pickings' as you boys call it, increase in the ratio of the number of people served. We do not feel that you should make demands upon us because of these rushes, in fact, you have not, and on the other hand we retain our usual crews when trade falls off, for we know that our help is not responsible and that, mayhap, in a day or two, the trend will be in the other direction. Then again, when we obtain a good working crew it is to our advantage to retain them, for they know our system and understand our trade."

It is not the purpose of the writer of this comment to discuss any of the points made in the foregoing. What he desires to do is to emphasize what he has told our members, time and time again at their meetings, that it is the height of folly to discuss too freely in rest rooms or locker rooms the alleged events of the day transpiring in the dining room or kitchen, and it is plain, every-day damphoolishness on the part of wage earners to stop at the desk before or after getting ready for the street and innocently ask the cashier whether she has any use for about five or ten dollars in small change, and will she kindly give you paper money, for the hard money is so heavy, don't you know.

The undersigned is not pulling the foregoing out of the air, he knows what he is discussing, for not so very many months ago I witnessed one of our girl members dump small change to the extent of ten dollars on the cashier's desk, asking for paper money in exchange and the manager of the house standing along side watching the proceedings. Later on when we cautioned the girl about the action, she gave us the fish-eyed glare and told us rather curtly that we would be kept right smart busy if we "just tended to our own business." Keep your mouth shut, and if you do get enough small coin to exchange for a bill, get accustomed to doing the exchange stunt elsewhere than in the house where your name is on the pay roll. That will be all for today. I thank you.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

BUSINESS BROTHERS.

President Neilson of Smith College, was making a rather tedious journey and was glad when the man who had the seat in front of his, turned around and began a conversation. The man proved to be a traveling salesman and took it for granted that Dr. Neilson was another. "What's your line?" he asked. "Mine's skirts." "Well, so is mine," said the president of Smith.—New York Evening Post.

FACTS ABOUT COAL MINING.

TO THE EDITOR MIXER AND SERVER—Newspapers all over the country within the last few days published a statement by J. D. A. Morrow, vice-president of the National Coal Association, that he did not testify concerning retail prices of coal before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Mr. Morrow, however, did state that during the seven months, April-October, 1921, the average cost for labor at the mines was only $1.97 per ton, and he substantiated this testimony with tabulated statistics. The United States Bureau of Labor Statistics, which collects and publishes the Government information on prices and the cost of living, states in its Monthly Review for January, 1922, that the average retail price of bituminous coal throughout the United States was in October, 1921, between $10.40 and $10.41 per ton, so that the fact that the retail price amounted to over five times the labor cost is a fact, whether it comes from Mr. Morrow or from the Government Bureau.

It should also be pointed out that this average price of $10.41 for October, 1921, is considerably below the prices that have prevailed for some time. For instance, the retail price, according to this Government Bureau, was in October, 1920, $12.50 per ton, and at this time the cost of labor at the mines was no more (and probably a little less) than it was last October, so it is evident that then the consumer was paying at retail for his coal more than six times as much as the mine workers were getting for digging it out of the ground.

The profits made by the operators during the year 1921 were not excessively high. The National Coal Association states that the average margin (which includes all taxes as well as profits) during the twelve months was only about 10 cents per ton, but in the few years prior to 1921 the profits were unusual. For instance the vice-president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, which sells annually from 13,000,000 to 18,000,000 tons, stated to the Senate Committee on Manufactures in January, 1921, that the profits of his company were between 6 and 13 cents per ton during the four years, 1913 to 1916, inclusive, but rose to 81½ cents a ton during 1917, and averaged over 64 cents a ton during the first eleven months of 1920. In 1917 the total cost of mine labor in the Pittsburgh District was, according to the Federal Trade Commission, only $1.04 per ton, so the profits made by this company over and above all of its expenses were equal to four-fifths of the total wages of the mine workers.

It is well to remember that this same company, the Pittsburgh Coal Company, is one of the very powerful companies that now refuse to meet with the United Mine Workers of America for the purpose of negotiating a new wage agreement and is leading the fight against the miners' union on the ground that miners' wages are too high and must come down.

ELLIS SEARLES.

Editor United Mine Workers' Journal.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

TOO MANY.

"I'm bothered awfully with insomnia, doctor."

"Um-m, what time do you go to bed?"

"I go to bed between 8 and 9 every night."

"No wonder,—that's too many in one bed."—The Totem Pole Man in the Seattle Union Record.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

HOW THEY STAND.

California	35
Texas	29
New York	28
Illinois	26
Pennsylvania	25
Washington	20
Massachusetts	15
Ohio	15
New Jersey	14
Missouri	13
Canada	12
Oregon	11
Minnesota	9
Wyoming	9
Connecticut	9
Wisconsin	9
Oklahoma	9
Montana	8
Colorado	7
Kentucky	6
Idaho	5
Indiana	5
Louisiana	5
Arizona	5
West Virginia	4
Michigan	4
Utah	4
Iowa	3
Maryland	3
Nebraska	3
Kansas	3
Tennessee	3
North Dakota	3
Arkansas	2
Rhode Island	2
District of Columbia	2
Virginia	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
South Carolina	1
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARTERS ISSUED DURING MARCH, 1922.

Local	Location	Organizer
M 475-	Lawton, Oklahoma	Joe C. Howard
M 615-	Paris, Texas	Myrtle Berry

DEATHS DURING MARCH, 1922.

Local 17:-	G. A. Dillard.
Local 68:-	Eugene Rudd.
Local 76:-	Frederick Guy.
Local 152:-	Wm. H. Wynne.
Local 254:-	Arthur Guilbert.
Local 285:-	Frank Baker.
Local 318:-	Maxim Giguire.
Local 438:-	Wm. B. Shamberger.
Local 485:-	Wm. Wells.
Local 532:-	Emil Seidlich.
Local 572:-	V. Dvorak.
Local 836:-	Clarence Williams.
Local 865:-	George Smith, Albert Ortnr.

LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR MONTH OF MARCH, 1922.

Local 18-	George S. Kelly.
Local 815-	C. C. Clauson.
Local 865-	Edward Behl, Edward J. Murphy.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BURKE'S IMPEACHMENT OF HASTINGS.

"The story of the crimes of Hastings," says Macaulay, "made the blood of Burke to boil in his veins. He had a native abhorrence of cruelty, of injustice, of disorder, of oppression, of tyranny, and all these things, in all their degrees, marked the course of Hastings in India. They were, moreover, concentrated in individual cases, which exercised Burke's passionate imagination to its profoundest depths, and raised it to such a glow of fiery intensity as has never been rivaled in our history."

"The energy and pathos of the great orator," in his final speech, as Macaulay puts it, "extorted expressions of unwonted admiration, even from the stern and hostile chancellor; and for a moment seemed to pierce even the resolute heart of the defendant." At length the orator concluded. Raising his voice till the old arches of Irish oak resounded, he said:

"Therefore hath it with all confidence been ordered by the Commons of Great Britain, that I impeach Warren Hastings of high crimes and misdemeanors. I impeach him in the name of the Commons House of Parliament, whose trust he has betrayed. I impeach him in the name of the English nation, whose ancient honor he has sullied. I impeach him in the name of the people of India, whose rights he has trodden under foot, and whose country he has turned into a desert. Lastly, in the name of human nature itself, in the name of both sexes, in the name of every age, in the name of every rank, I impeach the common enemy and oppressor of all."

PRESIDENTS PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The advent of Spring brings with it the thought, that within the next few weeks we will see a change in the industrial conditions of our country that will bring to the workers in our industry, an opportunity to shake off the weariness of the long winter months, with its lack of employment and hardships and come forth with a bright prospect of a busy and energetic Spring and Summer.

It is true that there is considerable industrial unrest in the air just at this moment. Employers of all types have been taking advantage of the conditions of the labor market brought about by their own manipulation of the industrial standards and have forced labor into a position whereby they have had to suffer temporary abuses and reduction in wages, under the threat of loss of employment. Thanks to the evolution of time, such condition shall not remain a permanent fixture. Labor will have his day, and he will maintain his right to sell his labor at a price and in a market whose standard will bring him a fair return, with the inherent right to bargain with his fellow man collectively and through those of his own choosing, for the sale of such labor.

Man's labor is all that he has, and when his right to market that labor at an advantage to himself is denied him, then his freedom and right to justice ceases to exist and he has a moral and fundamental right to register an emphatic protest and to demand relief.

Much of our own success depends upon our own initiative. Nothing comes from condemning those who are trying to do the things that ultimately bring returns. Success or failure depends largely upon co-operation. Often too much energy is wasted in criticising the officers of a local union, particularly the business representative for failing to provide work, and the most unfair at times are those who insist upon the job being made to suit them and not they the job. The officers of the union cannot make the jobs; when they are there the best they can do is to try and get them for the members of the union and like all of us, they derive their incentive to do that work, from the spirit passed on to them by the membership of the local union. You show a man or woman that you are willing to be helpful and they will spring forth with a vigor that will surprise you. Just give them a cheerful word and a helping hand and you will find your local union increasing in membership and prestige, which carries with it increased control of work and the opportunity of placing men and women in employment befitting to themselves. Now then! Let us all put our shoulder to the wheel and push—that's it.

Keep in mind what we said in our January letter about low initiation and reinstatement fees and sharpen up your edge for the Spring drive. You will be able to make the grade if you only half try—it is worth it, boys and girls. Make your organization the best and do not slacken up your speed until you can boast that you have every man and woman employed in and at the catering industry in your city under the control of your organization—a one hundred per cent town is what counts the most and brings in the best returns.

Some of our local unions have permitted themselves to become suspended from the International Union, due mostly to the lack of interest, no one wanting to assume the burden of caring for the work that such an organization entails, the "Let George Do It" attitude prevailing among them, with the result that when "George" fails to put in an appearance, there is no organization. Members become suspended along with the charter of their local union and when they drift into another city where they have to renew their membership, the secretary in that city will accept their reinstatement fee and without looking up the standing of the local union in which the member is suspended, send the money on to the secretary whose name appears in the roster as published, or as it may be known to him; sometimes you get word back with a traveling card—if their supply has not been exhausted—more often you get no acknowledgment at all. This delay and chance of loss can be avoided, if the secretary of a local union will carefully scan the "How They Stand" columns in the MIXER AND SERVER each month, before any money is sent to a local union, and if you find them more than two calendar months in arrears, send money and application to the general office at Cincinnati and they will care for the application, reinstate the member and issue him a traveling card. Always have the current issue of the MIXER AND SERVER close at hand and before you send any money to another local union, look up their standing.

A local union two calendar months in arrears for per capita tax automatically becomes suspended and that carries with it the suspension of its membership and their forfeiture of all benefits guaranteed them under the constitution. If you are interested in protecting your membership and maintaining it in good standing with the International Union, see that the officers entrusted with the duty of paying the tax to the International, do so.

During the month I visited the following cities: Albany, Rochester, Toronto and Detroit.

In Albany I joined with about twelve hundred other representatives of labor in opposing the Duell-Miller Industrial Servitude bills. The main address in opposition to the enactment of the said laws was made by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. The strength displayed by the organized labor movement of the State of New York in opposing these bills was a remarkable demonstration of co-operation and loyalty and is the kind of work that brings success to the labor movement.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

February—
28—Albany and sleeper	$13 99
March—
1—Rochester and sleeper	11 34
2—Buffalo	3 23
5—Toronto	4 42
6—Detroit and sleeper	11 30
8—Buffalo and sleeper	12 00
Subscription for N. Y. Hotel Review (two years)	6 00
Typewriter ribbon	1 00
Postage	5 00
Traveling expenses	42 00
Total	$109 98

Respectfully submitted,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,138.

February 28, 1922.

MR. ERNEST H. WILLIAMS, Secretary, Local 189,
270½ Washington Street, Portland, Ore.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication on the 21st, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"When a restaurant signs a contract and no house card is displayed, has a local the right to prohibit their members from wearing the monthly or International working button? Can a member be prohibited from wearing the monthly or International button while working in an open shop? Must such restrictions be a part of the by-laws of the local before they can be legally enforced?"

Members working in union houses should be privileged to wear their union buttons while working, regardless as to whether a house card is displayed or not. The union can restrict and prohibit the wearing of the union button in "open shop" establishments. Restriction and prohibitory rules or laws do not necessarily have to be a part of the by-laws of the local union, they can be enacted by resolution.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,139.

February 28, 1922.

MR. E. V. MOUNT, Secretary, Local 266, 812 E.
Twelfth Street, Kansas City, Mo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed against Brother James Moran of Local 266 by International Organizer Robert Lyons. I find the said brother guilty as charged and do hereby penalize the said James Moran in the sum of $25.00 and suspension from membership in the International Union.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,140.

March 11, 1922.

MR. J. S. DIXON, Secretary, Local 815, Box 891,
Salt Lake City, Utah:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We are in receipt of a request from a member of Local 815, properly certified, for a decision on the following:

"The by-laws of Local 815 provide that if a member fails to attend at least one meeting each month he shall be fined fifty cents, unless properly excused. Can this fine be levied on a member without charges first being filed and the member afforded a trial in accordance with sections 169 and 170 of the constitution? If the member failed to pay the fine and becomes suspended as provided for by the by-laws, must he pay the International reinstatement fee of $1.00 when applying for reinstatement, if his membership dues were paid in accordance with the constitution?"

An offense committed in the presence of the local union for which a constitutional fine is fixed, is not dependable upon Sections 169 and 170 of the constitution; a fine levied upon a member for non-attendance at meetings is therefore not subject to the provisions of those sections; the fact that a member fails to appear at meeting without offering a proper and legal excuse, is sufficient evidence of guilt to warrant imposition of penalty. Members suspended for failing to pay penalty, irrespective as to whether their dues are paid to date or not, must pay the International reinstatement fee of $1 when applying for reinstatement.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision 1,141.

March 11, 1922.

MRS. M. R. THOMAS, Secretary, Local 39, 421 E.
Ninth Street, Pittsburg, Kans.:

DEAR MADAM AND SISTER—I have your communication of the 3d, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Two men and their wives claim to be partners in a cafe; the wives are willing to become passive members of Local 39; if accepted into membership, would they be restricted to the same working regulations as active members?"

Regulation provides that we recognize the right of two working proprietors. The constitution makes provisions for the election of proprietors to passive membership without voice or vote. Decision No. 756 holds that the hours of labor of a passive member can not be restricted; Decision No. 893 says that the wife of a proprietor does not become a passive member unless the laws of the state make her a co-partner. The two men and their wives referred to being equal partners in the business, those who applied for membership could only be accepted as passive members and as such the local union would have no authority to qualify or restrict their hours of employment; the union could, however, exercise its autonomy in the issuing of house card and could decline to issue said card if, in its judgment the issuing of same would prove injurious to the best interest of the local union.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1,142.

March 15, 1922.

MR. M. SOLOMON, Secretary, Local 2, 21 Sumner Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We have before us the protest of Local 2 against the membership of Brother Adolf Lauf in Local 7, on the grounds that he was a member in good standing of Local 2 at the time he applied for and was accepted into membership by Local 7. We are hereby sustaining the protest and do cancel the membership of Brother Adolf Lauf in Local 7.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

Decision No. 1,143.

March 21, 1922.

MISS BESSIE IRVING, Secretary, Local 112, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I have before me the appeal of Local 112 from the decision of the local joint executive board of Boston on the question of jurisdiction over female workers in the kitchens of Jewish restaurants. It is alleged that the following resolution was adopted by the local joint executive board: "To give jurisdiction over female workers in the kitchens of Jewish establishments to the auxiliary of Local 34." Local 112 claims that since its inception it has exercised jurisdiction over all female workers in the culinary industry of Boston and that its by-laws, which were approved by the General President, read, "female workers," instead of waitresses.

The approval of the by-laws of a local union does not carry with it an extension of jurisdiction. The jurisdiction as set forth on the charter of Local 112 and as later extended by the International Union, if such an extension was granted, is the basis upon which this appeal must be judged. In the year 1911, the General Executive Board rendered the following decision:

"The General Executive Board defines a cook to mean: a male or female fully qualified to prepare and cook food to be served to patrons in any catering establishment.

"A waiter is defined as any person, male or female, fully qualified and capable to serve food and drink to patrons of catering establishments.

"All other persons engaged in and around catering establishments, either in the capacity of cooks' apprentices, cooks' helpers, omnibuses (buses), and what is generally known and called miscellaneous employees, are and shall be regarded as apprentices to the trade, and shall be known as miscellaneous employees."

The local joint executive board is empowered to adjudicate questions of jurisdiction in establishments where more than one craft is involved; that right, however, does not carry with it a right or power to add to or take from any local union, the jurisdiction guaranteed them under their charter, nor does it permit them to extend or grant jurisdiction to a local union or auxiliary thereof, over workers engaged in a branch of the industry over which no charter rights have been extended.

The local joint executive board erred in adopting a resolution covering all workers, male and female, employed in kitchens, as their jurisdiction only extended to journeymen cooks and apprentices; however, insofar as the resolution covered cooks and their apprentices, male and female (that being the main contention in the appeal before us), as well as the miscellaneous help, we are constrained to divide the subject before us and to hold, that so far as the resolution in question applies to cooks and cooks' apprentices, male and female, we are in accord with the judgment of the board; insofar as the balance of the resolution may apply that is a question of organizing, and the application for jurisdiction over those workers should be made to the General Executive Board of the International Union.

The appeal with the qualifications noted above, is not sustained.

With greetings.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

$25,000 FOR THE WOMAN WHO MADE HASH FOR MARK HANNA.

New York.—Maggie Maloney, who received $25,000 under the will of the widow of Mark A. Hanna, which was probated in Washington, D. C., is famous in fiction, history, reminiscence and legend as the cook who brought corned beef hash to its perfection. The legacy of $25,000 is one of the largest ever received by a cook and is especially notable in this case because the total estate is valued at only $150,000.

Maggie is the original of the cook who, in a novel by David Graham Phillips, influenced legislation by her hash. She has been mentioned in the published recollections of statesmen. In the verbal tradition of the capital she occupies the position of the greatest of a long series of Washington cooks. The days of her prestige and power were from 1897 to 1900, when she composed corned beef hash for Senator Hanna at his home in Washington while McKinley was President. This famous dish was produced for the 10 o'clock Sunday morning breakfasts of Mark Hanna, which were attended by many of the leading men of the country during that period.

President McKinley, who had been an admirer of Maggie for many years and had taken Sunday breakfasts occasionally with Hanna in Cleveland, would often leave the White House on a Sunday morning and walk to the Hanna residence for a plate of Maggie's hash. Some of the frequent breakfasters with Hanna on Sunday mornings were Vice President Hobart, Secretary of the Navy John D. Long, Secretary of War Russell A. Alger, Secretary of the Interior Cornelius N. Bliss and Senator Scott of West Virginia, who was called "Scotty" by "Mark"; General Charles G. Dawes, then Controller; Myron T. Herrick, Acting Secretary of State William R. Day, now of the United States Supreme court; Senator Nelson Aldrich of Rhode Island and many others.

Maggie was induced to dictate her hash formula, which was widely circulated in American cities and foreign capitals. Her masterpiece, however, was seldom successfully copied. It was rumored that she made a secret of ingredients which made her hash supreme. On the other hand, it was held that her work could not be reduced to rigid mathematical demonstration because she elaborated her batches of raw material with a freedom of method which varied with her mood and inspiration. This was held to produce a personality in the hash which could not be translated. Maggie's hash was never a sensational success, except when evolved in the Hanna kitchen.—Times-Star.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR MARCH, 1922

Local No.

1 W, New York, N. Y.	Feb., 1922
2 W, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Feb.
3 B, New York, N. Y.	Feb.
4 B, Hoboken, N. J.	Feb.
5 W, New York, N. Y.	Jan.
7 W, Chicago, Ill.	Feb.
8 B, Denver, Colo.	Feb.
10 W, Hoboken, N. J.	Feb.
11 WC, New York City	Feb.
12 M, San Antonio, Tex.	Feb.
14 W, Denver, Colo.	Feb.
17 W, Los Angeles, Cal.	Feb.
18 C, Denver, Colo.	Feb.
19 W, Kansas City, Mo.	Feb.
20 W, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.
22 M, Butte, Mont.	Feb.
23 C, Omaha, Neb.	Feb.
25 M, Hot Springs, Ark.	Feb.
28 M, Vancouver, B. C.	Feb.
29 B, New York, N. Y.	Feb.
30 W, San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.
31 M, Oakland, Cal.	Feb.
32 M, St. Joseph, Mo.	Mar.
33 C, Seattle, Wash.	Feb.
34 M, Boston, Mass.	Feb.
39 M, Pittsburg, Kan.	Feb.
41 B, San Francisco, Cal.	Jan.
43 M, Pueblo, Colo.	Feb.
44 C, San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.
45 M, Reno, Nev.	Feb.
48 WS, San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.
50 M, Fairmont, W. Va.	Mar.
51 B, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.
56 W, New Orleans, La.	Feb.
59 M, Milwaukee, Wis.	Feb.
61 M, Tacoma, Wash.	Feb.
62 M, Fresno, Cal.	Feb.
64 B, Milwaukee, Wis.	Mar.
66 C, Buffalo, N. Y.	Feb.
68 B, Cincinnati, O.	Feb.
69 M, Galveston, Tex.	Feb.
70 B, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Feb.
72 W, Cincinnati, O.	Feb.
74 M, Aurora, Ill.	Jan.
76 B, Syracuse, N. Y.	Mar.
77 B, Boston, Mass.	Mar.
78 B, Uniontown, Pa.	Apr.
79 B, Louisville, Ky.	Mar.
81 B, Holyoke, Mass.	Mar.
85 B, Lowell, Mass.	Mar.
89 B, Chicago, Ill.	Mar.
92 B, Marlboro, Mass.	Feb.
93 B, Haverhill, Mass.	Feb.
100 B, New Bedford, Mass.	Mar.
101 M, Great Falls, Mont.	Jan.
102 B, Granite City, Ill.	Mar.
106 M, Cleveland, O.	Feb.
107 WS, Cleveland, O.	Feb.
109 M, Newark, N. J.	Feb.
110 M, San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.
111 M, Oatman, Ariz.	Jan.
112 WS, Boston, Mass.	Feb.
115 B, Philadelphia, Pa.	Feb.
117 B, Belleville, Ill.	Mar.
118 M, Akron, O.	Feb.
119 M, Silverton, Colo.	Feb.
120 B, Utica, N. Y.	Dec.
124 B, Trenton, N. J.	Feb.
126 B, Oneonta, N. Y.	Feb.
128 M, Superior, Wis.	Feb.
131 B, Newark, N. J.	Feb.
134 B, Scranton, Pa.	Feb.
135 M, Tulsa, Okla.	Feb.
141 M, Visalia, Cal.	Feb.
142 M, Eldorado, Ark.	Feb.
143 M, Omaha, Neb.	Feb.
149 B, Newport, Ky.	Feb.
150 W, Syracuse, N. Y.	Jan.
152 B, Minneapolis, Minn.	Feb.
154 M, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Feb.
156 B, Paducah, Ky.	Feb.
158 W, Wichita Falls, Tex.	Feb.
159 B, Meridan, Conn.	Mar.
161 M, Brockton, Mass.	Feb.
163 B, McKeesport, Pa.	Oct., 1921
167 C, Cleveland, O.	Feb., 1922
168 M, Amarillo, Tex.	Feb.
171 B, Rochester, N. Y.	Feb.
172 M, Henryetta, Okla.	Jan.
175 B, Buffalo, N. Y.	Feb.
177 C, Cincinnati, O.	Feb.
180 M, San Jose, Cal.	Feb.
181 B, Easton, Pa.	Feb.
185 W, Bicknell, Ind.	Jan.
188 B, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Mar.
189 W, Portland, Ore.	Feb.

Local No.

180 B, Bethlehem, Pa.	Jan., 1922
185 M, Kingman, Ariz.	Jan.
186 W, Buffalo, N. Y.	Feb.
187 B, Hamilton, Ont., Can.	Feb.
189 B, Jamestown, N. Y.	Mar.
200 B, Hartford, Conn.	Mar.
201 M, Haverhill, Mass.	Feb.
203 C, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.
207 C, Portland, Ore.	Feb.
208 RRM, St. Louis, Mo.	Jan.
210 M, Abilene, Tex.	Feb.
213 M, Herrin, Ill.	Mar.
215 M, Bristow, Okla.	Feb.
216 M, Toledo, O.	Feb.
217 B, New Haven, Conn.	Mar.
219 W, New York, N. Y.	Feb.
220 M, Eureka, Cal.	Feb.
222 B, Dayton, O.	Mar.
223 M, Des Moines, Ia.	Jan.
224 B, Erie, Pa.	Mar.
226 M, Lincoln, Neb.	Jan.
228 B, Albany, N. Y.	Feb.
230 M, South Bend, Tex.	Feb.
234 C, Detroit, Mich.	Feb.
236 M, Goose Creek, Tex.	Jan.
237 M, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Feb.
239 W, Seattle, Wash.	Feb.
240 WS, Seattle, Wash.	Feb.
242 M, Charleston, W. Va.	Jan.
246 M, Oklahoma City, Okla.	Feb.
248 WS, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.
251 M, Dickenson, N. D.	Feb.
253 B, Alliance, O.	Apr.
254 W, Waterbury, Conn.	Feb.
256 B, Bridgeport, Conn.	Sept., 1921
257 M, Livingston, Mont.	Oct.
258 RRM, New York, N. Y.	Dec.
259 B, Edwardsville, Ill.	Jan., 1922
261 WC, Louisville, Ky.	Feb.
262 B, Newcastle, Pa.	Jan.
264 M, Lake Charles, La.	Jan.
266 C, Kansas City, Mo.	Feb.
268 SCP, Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921
269 B, South Norwalk, Conn.	Feb., 1922
271 M, Petaluma, Cal.	Nov., 1921
273 M, Springfield, Mass.	Jan., 1922
279 W, Philadelphia, Pa.	Feb.
284 B, Los Angeles, Cal.	Feb.
285 B, Providence, R. I.	Feb.
286 B, Peoria, Ill.	Feb.
290 M, Salem, Mass.	Feb.
294 M, Yakima, Wash.	Feb.
295 M, Wheeling, W. Va.	Jan.
298 M, Wenatchee, Wash.	Feb.
299 M, Burkburnett, Tex.	Feb.
300 W, Toronto, Ont., Can.	Dec., 1921
303 M, Electra, Tex.	Feb., 1922
304 M, Hartford, Conn.	Feb.
305 WS, Portland, Ore.	Feb.
306 M, Williston, N. D.	Feb.
307 M, Providence, R. I.	Feb.
308 M, Portland, Me.	Feb.
310 M, Portland, Ore.	Jan.
311 M, Astoria, Ore.	Feb.
312 B, Chattanooga, Tenn.	June
315 W, Montreal, Que. Can.	Feb.
316 M, Centralia, Wash.	Feb.
318 B, Putnam, Conn.	Mar.
319 M, Sioux City, Ia.	Jan.
322 B, Racine, Wis.	Feb.
323 M, Palestine, Tex.	Jan.
325 M, Duncan, Okla.	Feb.
326 C, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Feb.
327 W, Peoria, Ill.	Feb.
328 DCE, Oakland, Cal.	Sept., 1921
329 M, Lynn, Mass.	Jan., 1922
330 M, Twin Falls, Idaho.	Dec., 1921
331 M, Greenville, Tex.	Jan., 1922
332 M, East St. Louis, Ill.	Feb.
335 WE, Toledo, O.	Nov., 1921
336 M, Huntington, W. Va.	Oct.
337 M, Cheyenne, Wyo.	Mar., 1922
338 M, Knoxville, Tenn.	Feb.
347 WS, Buffalo, N. Y.	Feb.
349 M, Auburn, Wash.	Feb.
353 WC, St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.
356 B, New London, Conn.	Apr.
357 WS, Rochester, N. Y.	Feb.
361 B, Allentown, Pa.	Feb.
364 M, Pendleton, Ore.	Feb.
365 M, Sapulpa, Okla.	Feb.
376 B, South Chicago, Ill.	Feb.
378 B, Bakersfield, Cal.	Feb.
380 M, Bisbee, Ariz.	Jan.

Local No.

381 C, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Feb., 1922
382 RRM, Louisville, Ky.	Dec., 1921
384 SCP, Oakland, Cal.	Feb., 1922
387 M, Ft. Dodge, Ia.	Dec., 1921
389 B, Carnegie, Pa.	Jan., 1922
391 M, LeGrande, Ore.	Feb.
392 MC, Mobile, Ala.	Mar.
394 M, South Chicago, Ill.	Aug., 1921
395 M, White Plains, N. Y.	Jan., 1922
397 M, Parsons, Kan.	Feb.
398 M, Manchester, N. H.	Feb.
399 M, Ranger, Tex.	Feb.
400 M, Spokane, Wash.	Feb.
401 M, Kandsburg, Cal.	Oct., 1921
402 M, San Diego, Cal.	Feb., 1922
403 M, Breckenridge, Tex.	Feb.
404 M, Santa Rosa, Cal.	Aug., 1921
405 M, Bonham, Tex.	Mar., 1922
406 M, Wortham, Tex.	Dec., 1921
407 M, Manchester, N. H.	Feb., 1922
413 M, Tucson, Ariz.	Feb.
419 M, Ottawa, Ont., Can.	Oct., 1921
420 B, Kansas City, Mo.	Feb., 1922
424 M, Klamath Falls, Ore.	Feb.
425 M, Sherman, Tex.	Mar.
426 M, Wallace, Idaho	Feb.
427 C, Missoula, Mont.	Feb.
429 B, Portsmouth, O.	Mar.
436 M, Chico, Cal.	Jan.
437 M, Indianapolis, Ind.	Jan.
438 B, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.	Feb.
439 M, Vancouver, Wash.	Oct., 1921
440 M, Montreal, Que. Can.	Jan., 1922
442 M, Raton, N. M.	Jan.
449 B, Altoona, Pa.	Feb.
451 M, Everett, Wash.	Feb.
457 MS, Butte, Mont.	Mar.
458 C, Minneapolis, Minn.	Feb.
459 M, Victoria, B. C., Can.	Feb.
466 B, Wilmington, Del.	Mar.
468 C, Los Angeles, Cal.	Feb.
470 W, Schenectady, N. Y.	Jan.
471 M, Albany, N. Y.	Feb.
472 M, El Reno, Okla.	Feb.
474 M, Edmonton, Alta., Canada	Feb.
475 M, Lawton, Okla.	Mar.
476 M, Marshfield, Ore.	Jan.
479 B, LaCrosse, Wis.	Feb.
480 DSM, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Jan.
482 B, Butler, Pa.	Mar.
484 WS, Chicago, Ill.	Feb.
485 RRP, Memphis, Tenn.	Feb.
487 SDD, Seattle, Wash.	Feb.
488 B, Jersey City, N. J.	Feb.
489 M, Galesburg, Ill.	Feb.
490 M, Tucumcari, N. M.	Jan.
491 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Feb.
492 M, Quebec, Que. Can.	Feb.
496 SDD, Portland, Ore.	Feb.
500 M, Beardstown, Ill.	Oct., 1921
503 WS, Kansas City, Mo.	Jan., 1922
508 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Feb.
509 M, Chickasha, Okla.	Feb.
510 M, Pocatello, Idaho	Jan.
511 M, Orange, Tex.	Jan.
512 CM, Bonham, Tex.	Jan.
513 M, Baird, Tex.	Jan.
516 B, Chillicothe, O.	Feb.
521 M, Mandau, N. D.	Feb.
523 B, Kenosha, Wis.	Feb.
524 M, Miles City, Mont.	Jan.
528 MF, Seattle, Wash.	Mar.
529 M, Bellingham, Wash.	Feb.
531 M, Jefferson City, Mo.	Mar.
532 B, Baltimore, Md.	Mar.
536 M, Minneapolis, Minn.	Feb.
538 RRM, Seattle, Wash.	Jan.
539 CC, Charleston, S. C.	Feb.
542 M, Modesta, Cal.	Feb.
543 M, Hibbing, Minn.	Nov., 1921
544 M, Douglas, Wyo.	Oct.
548 M, St. Paul, Minn.	Mar., 1922
550 M, Bakersfield, Cal.	Jan.
552 CC, Richmond, Va.	Jan.
550 C, St. Paul, Minn.	Feb.
557 M, Greysbull, Wyo.	Mar.
560 M, Vallejo, Cal.	Jan.
561 M, Sacramento, Cal.	Feb.
567 M, Olympia, Wash.	Feb.
568 RRM, Portland, Ore.	Feb.
569 B, Harrisburg, Pa.	Feb.
571 M, Idaho Falls, Idaho	Feb.
572 M, Stockton, Cal.	Feb.
575 W, Jersey City, N. J.	Feb.
577 M, Mexia, Tex.	Feb.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Local No.		RECEIPTS FOR MARCH, 1922.	Date Local		Date Local
579 M.	Dayton, O.	Mar., 1922	6	600	Supplies, stamps	4 10
581 M.	Ogden, Utah	Feb., "	6		Fred McKelvey, M. A. L.	5 00
582 SCP.	Los Angeles, Cal.	Jan., "	6	201	Stamps, supplies	67 50
583 RRM.	Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921	6	777	Feb., cash	8 60
584 M.	Topeka, Kan.	Feb., 1922	6	809	Feb., stamps	13 40
586 M.	Coalinga, Cal.	Feb., "	7	30	Bound M. & S.	2 00
588 M.	Shreveport, La.	Feb., "	7	59	Supplies	1 00
589 M.	Bloomington, Ill.	Mar., "	7	106	Feb., supplies	147 90
590 B.	Fond du Lac, Wis.	Jan., "	7	111	Stamps, supplies	5 00
592 M.	Winnipeg, Man., Can.	Feb., "	7	304	Supplies, bound M. & S.	3 50
595 M.	La Junta, Colo.	Jan., "	7	484	Bound M. & S.	4 00
597 M.	Calgary, Alta., Can.	Feb., "	7	531	Mar.	2 60
600 C.	Duluth, Minn.	Feb., "	7	714	Mar., bound M. & S.	11 00
604 MC.	Orange, Tex.	Feb., "	7	763	Jan., Feb., supplies	138 20
605 MC.	Indianapolis, Ind.	Jan., "	7	117	Feb.	4 20
611 MC.	Williamsport, Pa.	Feb., "	7	690	Dec., Jan.	3 60
612 M.	Helena, Mont.	Feb., "	7	76	Feb., bound M. & S.	9 00
615 M.	Paris, Tex.	Mar., "	7	85	Feb., Mar., supplies	7 00
616 HM.	Sacramento, Cal.	Feb., "	7	177	Feb.	54 60
618 M.	Anacortes, Wash.	Feb., "	8		Bal. due rein. W. H. Thomas, Local 17.	2 15
626 M.	Walla Walla, Wash.	Dec., 1921	8	78	Mar., bound M. & S.	7 60
627 B.	Cairo, Ill.	Feb., 1922	8	79	Feb.	17 60
630 WS.	St. Paul, Minn.	Dec., 1921	8	115	Feb., supplies	121 40
634 M.L.	Minneapolis, Minn.	Nov., "	8	128	Feb.	15 20
637 B.	Manitowac, Wis.	Feb., 1922	8	141	Jan., Feb.	4 00
638 M.	Haynesville, La.	Feb., "	8	172	Jan., bound M. & S.	12 60
639 WS.	Los Angeles, Cal.	Feb., "	8	181	Feb.	8 00
639 M.	Dallas, Tex.	Feb., "	8	226	Jan., buttons, stamps	29 80
669 MC.	Shreveport, La.	Oct., 1921	8	509	Feb., supplies	14 10
670 M.	West Frankfort, Ill.	Jan., 1922	8	34	Supplies	25 00
673 M.	San Bernardino, Cal.	Feb., "	8	51	Bal. due supplies, bound M. & S.	27 10
676 SDD.	Vancouver, B. C.	Feb., "	8	361	Feb., bound M. & S.	28 60
680 M.	Miami, Ariz.	Feb., "	8	89	Feb., bal. due supplies	26 40
681 M.	Long Beach, Cal.	Feb., "	8	398	Bound M. & S.	4 00
682 B.	Elizabeth, N. J.	Nov., 1921	8		Albert J. Martin, M. A. L.	6 25
683 RRM.	Pittsburgh, Pa.	Nov., "	9	18	Bound M. & S.	4 00
685 B.	Eau Claire, Wis.	Jan., 1922	9	250	Jan.	5 40
690 B.	Owensboro, Ky.	Jan., "	9	357	Feb., supplies, bound M. & S.	15 30
692 M.	Virden, Ill.	Mar., "	9	579	Supplies	1 00
703 M.	Anaheim, Cal.	Jan., "	9	213	Mar., supplies	18 55
705 W.	Detroit, Mich.	Feb., "	9	101	Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec., Jan.	28 40
709 M.	Mt. Clemens, Mich.	Mar., "	9	612	Feb., bound M. & S.	18 00
712 MC.	Kansas City, Mo.	Sept., 1921	9	762	Feb.	1 60
714 B.	Joliet, Ill.	Mar., 1922	9	199	Mar.	5 80
717 W.	Baltimore, Md.	Feb., "	9	808	Jan., supplies, bound M. & S.	33 35
719 C.	New York City	Feb., "	10	31	Bound M. & S., error	2 40
720 M.	Hammond, Ind.	Dec., 1921	10	224	Mar. report	16 40
721 B.	Salt Lake City, Utah	Jan., 1922	10	315	Stamps	50
726 WC.	Washington, D. C.	Nov., 1921	10	327	Dec., Jan., Feb., supplies	83 50
728 WS.	Detroit, Mich.	Feb., 1922	10	337	Feb.	30 60
730 M.	Bremerton, Wash.	Feb., "	10	542	Jan.	9 40
737 B.	York, Pa.	Feb., "	10	561	Feb.	106 80
739 B.	Brownsville, Pa.	Feb., "	10	794	Feb., supplies	9 25
742 B.	Southbridge, Mass.	Feb., "	10	842	Feb.	59 20
748 W.	Ft. Worth, Tex.	Feb., "	10		A. J. McQuarty, M. & S.	50
753 M.	Desdemona, Tex.	Jan., "	10	512	Stamps, supplies, buttons	8 10
754 M.	San Pedro, Cal.	Feb., "	10	475	Charter and outfit	15 75
762 B.	Harrison and Kearney, N. J.	Feb., "	10	61	Feb., supplies	96 50
763 W.	Rochester, N. Y.	Feb., "	10	474	Feb.	36 80
771 M.	Taft, Cal.	Feb., "	10	190	Dec., Jan.	10 40
778 M.	Beaumont, Tex.	Feb., "	10	197	Feb., bound M. & S.	5 40
781 W.	Washington, D. C.	Feb., "	10	611	Feb.	4 00
782 M.	Boise, Idaho	Oct., 1921	11	1	Feb., buttons, bound M. & S.	394 00
788 M.	Springfield, Ill.	Feb., 1922	11	112	Jan.	84 60
791 M.	Aberdeen, Wash.	Feb., "	11	234	Feb.	51 40
792 M.	Denver, Colo.	Feb., "	11	253	Bound M. & S.	2 00
794 M.	Linton, Ind.	Feb., "	11	384	Dec., Jan., Feb.	7 20
797 B.	Cristobal, Canal Zone	Feb., "	11	440	Jan.	9 40
801 M.	Joliet, Ill.	Jan., "	11	457	Feb., bound M. & S.	72 00
802 MC.	Richmond, Va.	Oct., 1921	11	513	Stamps, supplies, bound M. & S.	6 75
806 M.	Houston, Tex.	Jan., 1922	11	560	Jan.	32 80
809 M.	Lewiston, Mont.	Mar., "	11	581	Jan.	23 00
810 WS.	Atlantic City, N. J.	Dec., 1921	11	791	Feb., supplies, bound M. & S.	44 00
811 M.	Altoona, Pa.	Mar., 1922	11	810	Nov., Dec.	15 20
815 M.	Salt Lake City, Utah	Feb., "	11	811	Jan., Feb., Mar.	1 80
826 MC.	Atlantic City, N. J.	Feb., "	11	142	Feb.	22 60
828 SCP.	Salt Lake City, Utah	Oct., 1921	11	119	Feb.	2 20
831 MC.	Asbury Park, N. J.	Feb., 1922	11	528	Feb., Mar.	4 00
836 WC.	Baltimore, Md.	Mar., "	11	588	Feb., bound M. & S., supplies	21 00
842 M.	Casper, Wyo.	Feb., "	13	40	Feb.	385 60
844 B.	Saunton, Ill.	Dec., 1921	13	45	Supplies	39 75
845 B.	New Kensington, Pa.	Mar., 1922	13	59	Supplies, bound M. & S.	5 05
846 M.	Sheridan, Wyo.	Dec., 1921	13	180	Supplies	5 00
848 M.	El Paso, Tex.	Feb., 1922	13
849 M.	Lusk, Wyo.	Dec., 1921	13
852 B.	Tiffin, O.	Mar., 1922	13
853 WWC.	Boston, Mass.	Dec., 1921	13
854 B.	Jeanette, Pa.	Dec., "	13
857 B.	Laramie, Wyo.	Jan., 1922	13
861 M.	Billings, Mont.	Feb., "	13
862 M.	Rawlins, Wyo.	Feb., "	13
865 C.	Chicago, Ill.	Feb., "	13
876 M.	Laramie, Wyo.	Feb., "	13

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date Local			Date Local			Date Local
13 210 Feb., bound M. & S.	13 20		20 219 Feb.	43 60		27 754 Feb., supplies	74 20
13 240 Feb., bound M. & S.	120 00		20 220 Feb.	21 40		27 Shoe Dealers' Adv. Co.
13 307 Supplies	2 20		20 338 Feb., bound M. & S.	6 75		adv. M. & S.	285 48
13 316 Feb.	31 20		20 387 Supplies	4 50		27 615 Charter and outfit, sup-
13 Rein. Paul Howard, Lo-			20 426 Feb.	16 20		plies	30 50
cal 195	7 50		20 503 Buttons	2 00		27 149 Feb., supplies, bound
13 471 Feb., supplies	25 80		20 532 Feb.	4 20		M. & S.	25 90
12 489 Supplies	50		20 639 Bound M. & S., sup-			28 45 Supplies	1 50
13 490 Dec., supplies, buttons.	14 60		plies	6 40		28 110 Feb.; error Nov., Dec.
13 556 Jan.	40 80		20 717 Feb.	19 60		and Jan. reports.	201 90
13 571 Feb., stamps, buttons,			20 20 Feb.	45 20		28 207 Feb., supplies, cash	111 35
supplies	12 20		20 239 Feb.	48 20		28 284 Feb., bound M. & S.	10 20
13 579 Stamps	8 00		20 468 Feb.	169 80		28 429 Feb., Mar., bound M. &
13 586 Feb.	9 80		20 568 Stamps, bound M. & S.	7 40		S.	14 00
13 659 Feb.	56 60		20 25 Supplies	1 00		28 536 Feb.	11 80
13 771 Feb., supplies	28 70		20 161 Supplies	7 00		28 312 Apr., May, June, sup-
13 854 Supplies	16 65		21 426 Bound M. & S.	2 00		plies, bound M. & S.	9 80
13 861 Feb.	34 40		21 492 Jan., Feb., bound M. &			28 59 Feb.	33 40
13 112 Supplies	5 00		S.	10 75		28 466 Mar.	8 40
13 781 Feb.	83 00		21 584 Buttons, bound M. & S.	4 00		28 14 Buttons	12 00
13 158 Feb.	22 00		21 676 Feb.	7 00		28 420 Feb.	3 20
13 298 Feb.	21 60		21 326 Feb.	83 80		29 7 Error Jan. and Feb. re-
14 100 Mar., bound M. & S.	11 60		21 66 Feb.	29 60		ports	40
14 167 Feb., supplies, bound M.			22 7 Supplies	2 50		29 51 Feb.	75 60
& S.	82 20		22 29 Feb., bound M. & S.,			29 135 Supplies	3 00
14 168 Feb.	8 20		supplies	8 50		29 307 Feb., supplies	37 60
14 217 Mar., bound M. & S.	17 20		22 398 Feb.	5 00		29 508 Feb., bound M. & S.	15 80
14 236 Stamps, supplies	10 25		22 405 Mar., supplies	7 40		29 579 Mar.	16 60
14 316 Protested check	22 00		22 572 Feb.	48 80		29 185 Stamps	5 40
14 403 Feb., buttons, supplies.	36 20		22 107 Feb., buttons	65 60		29 246 Feb.	31 80
14 424 Feb., bound M. & S.	19 60		22 305 Feb.	90 50		29 836 Mar.	8 20
14 637 Feb.	4 00		22 407 Jan., Feb.	66 80		30 4 Feb.	6 20
14 39 Feb.	20 60		22 528 Bound M. & S.	2 00		30 10 Feb.	14 80
14 427 Feb., bound M. & S.,			22 502 Feb.	15 00		30 62 Feb.	126 40
supplies	39 60		23 48 Feb., bound M. & S.	176 40		30 110 Supplies, bound M. & S.	7 90
14 801 Jan.	14 60		23 308 Feb.	68 80		30 156 Feb.	3 40
14 10 Bound M. & S.	2 00		23 Rein. Ethel Foley, Lo-			30 159 Feb., Mar., bound M. &
14 279 Feb., bound M. & S.	83 20		cal 359	8 00		S.	12 00
14 Cut. Edward Teller			23 Rein. Mary Whalen, Lo-			30 325 Feb., supplies	18 70
Combs	4 50		cal 359	5 00		30 719 Feb., buttons	23 40
15 41 Jan.	25 80		23 311 Feb.	25 20		30 792 Feb., buttons	16 20
15 44 Feb.	288 00		23 471 Supplies	6 25		30 92 Feb.	4 20
15 152 Feb.	31 20		23 815 Feb.	17 80		30 575 Feb., cash	5 30
15 331 Jan., supplies, buttons.	6 75		23 876 Feb., buttons	8 20		31 18 Feb., supplies	42 60
15 436 Dec., Jan., supplies.			23 347 Feb., bound M. & S.	6 60		31 Rein. Chas. V. Tuttle.
buttons	20 00		23 725 Return of funds	17 00		Local 52	7 25
15 516 Feb.	5 40		23 72 Feb., stamps, supplies,			31 200 Feb., Mar.	9 00
15 748 Feb.	52 00		buttons	79 25		31 242 Supplies	1 85
15 111 Rein. Zetta Maloy, Lo-			24 34 Feb.	252 00		31 306 Feb.	3 00
cal 195	7 25		24 264 Supplies, stamps, bal.			31 332 Feb., bound M. & S.
15 51 Bound M. & S.	2 00		due Dec. report, rein.			bal. due Nov. report.	36 05
15 118 Buttons	1 25		of local	11 20		31 484 Feb., buttons	102 00
15 818 Mar., bound M. & S.	4 00		24 381 Feb., bound M. & S.	11 40		31 542 Feb.	8 05
15 Interest	595 00		24 459 Feb.	15 20		31 589 Mar.	27 60
15 451 Mar., supplies	10 00		24 557 Mar., supplies, bound			31 826 Feb.	2 40
15 226 Jan.	40 80		M. & S.	11 50		31 14 Feb., bound M. & S.	116 80
15 226 Supplies	1 00		24 201 Oct., Nov., Dec., Jan.			31 33 Feb., stamps	116 80
15 365 Jan., Feb.	4 00		Feb., supplies	154 90		31 69 Feb.	28 80
15 509 Supplies, bound M. & S.	2 95		24 539 Feb., supplies	14 40		31 286 Feb.	10 80
16 Rein. J. R. Kelly, Lo-			24 288 Feb., bound M. & S.	4 00		31 68 Feb.	43 00
cal 422	7 25		24 Joe Smith, M. A. L.	1 00		31 569 Jan., Feb.	4 00
16 43 Feb.	17 40		25 23 Feb.	23 40		31 2 Feb., bound M. & S.
16 208 Supplies	1 50		25 402 Supplies	12 00		bal. due July to Jan.	101 60
16 295 Jan.	8 60		25 548 Mar., supplies	23 00		31 31 Feb.	174 60
16 616 Feb.	11 60		25 681 Feb.	37 40		31 70 Feb.	31 00
16 680 Feb.	16 80		25 484 Supplies	2 00		31 112 Feb., supplies	32 10
17 213 Bound M. & S.	1 65		25 581 Feb.	14 00		31 131 Feb.	24 20
17 Rein. Adelaide Reis, Lo-			25 797 Feb., supplies	12 00		31 161 Feb.	48 00
cal 668	7 25		25 865 Feb.	84 00		31 304 Feb.	5 00
17 249 Feb.	56 20		25 523 Feb., bound M. & S.	12 00		31 327 Cash	2 50
17 356 Mar., Apr.	7 60		25 861 Supplies, cash	2 50		31 337 Mar.	18 80
17 380 Jan., supplies	2 90		27 5 Supplies, cash	5 00		31 391 Feb., bound M. & S.,
17 400 Feb., bound M. & S.,			27 7 Feb.	220 80		supplies	11 50
supplies	77 00		27 17 Stamps	54 00		31 458 Feb.	65 20
17 561 Supplies	7 50		27 19 Feb.	42 20		31 742 Feb.	1 80
17 597 Feb.	20 00		27 64 Mar.	4 20		31 Interest	40 20
17 638 Feb.	20 20		27 106 Bound M. & S.	2 00		Total	$12,611 83
17 242 Supplies	9 00		27 118 Supplies, buttons	3 00		EXPENDITURES FOR MARCH, 1922.
17 489 Jan., Feb.	27 00		27 158 Supplies, bound M. & S.	4 00		Date
17 134 Feb.	29 40		27 171 Feb., bound M. & S.	18 20		1 Rent	$206 00
18 3 Feb.	35 60		27 290 Feb.	5 70		3 Jas. Grayson, defense, Lo-
18 30 Supplies	10 50		27 364 Feb., bound M. & S.,			cal 424	50 00
18 402 Feb.	85 60		stamps	26 20		4 Clerks	72 00
18 449 Feb., bound M. & S.	19 20		27 376 Feb., bound M. & S.	13 00		4 Seals	12 89
18 482 Jan., Feb., Mar., sup-			27 392 Mar., supplies, bound			6 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O.
plies	14 95		M. & S.	18 10		Local 135	20 00
18 484 Buttons	1 00		27 487 Feb., buttons	38 30		6 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Lo-
18 529 Feb.	29 00		27 480 Supplies	60		cal 7	40 00
18 618 Feb.	4 00		27 496 Feb., bound M. & S.	36 40		6 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Lo-
18 673 Feb.	21 40		27 556 Feb.	36 80		cal 685	40 00
18 862 Jan., Feb., buttons.	18 70		27 681 Supplies, buttons, bound			6 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Lo-
18 503 Protested check	43 10		M. & S.	20 50		cal 728	20 00
18 203 Feb., bound M. & S.	13 20		27 680 Supplies	4 50
18 730 Feb.	31 00		27 692 Feb., Mar.	4 00
20 23 Buttons, supplies	4 00		27 705 Feb., error Dec. and
20 135 Feb.	33 60		Jan. reports	59 00

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date		Date		Date
6 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	20 C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20 00	31 Morris Roth, Death Claim No. 11424, Local 1	50 00
6 C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20 00	20 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	31 Charles F. Clarkson, Death Claim No. 11425, Local 471	50 00
6 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	21 Office Insurance	23 00	31 Robt. W. Smith, Death Claim No. 11426, Local 110	50 00
6 E. V. Mounts, L. S. O., Local 286	20 00	23 Printing and mailing M. & S.	2,252 70	31 Henry Roll, Death Claim No. 11431, Local 286	50 00
6 B. Gray, L. S. O., Local 315	20 00	23 Lawrence Nelson, Local 101, Defense	50 00	31 Protested check, Local 347	6 80
9 Protested check, Local 503	43 10	24 Tax	435 61	31 Printing	341 75
10 Tax, A. F. of L.	441 06	24 Label Trades Department, Tax	100 00	31 Jere L. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas.	400 00
10 Tax, Union Label League	100 00	25 Clerks	72 00	31 Janitor	15 00
11 Clerks	72 00	25 International Labor Press	2 00	Stamps	80 90
13 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00	27 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00	Towel supply	1 15
13 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00	27 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00	Office supplies	5 83
13 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00	27 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00	American Ry. Express Co.	18 21
13 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00	27 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00	Total	$9,694 97
13 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	27 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	Cash on hand Mar. 1, 1922	$38,760 23
13 C. M. Brooks, L. S. O., Local 72	20 00	27 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	Liberty Loan Bonds	95,480 07
18 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00	29 Mary Dempsey, Intl. Org., bal. acct.	21 02	Canadian Bonds	4,975 00
18 E. V. Mounts, L. S. O., Local 286	20 00	31 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	170 12	Receipts for March, 1922	12,611 83
15 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	150 00	31 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org., Defense	154 76	Total	$151,807 13
15 Thos. Durnin, Intl. Org., defense	150 00	31 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00	Expenditures for March, 1922	9,694 97
15 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00	31 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	157 12	On hand Apr. 1, 1922	$142,112 16
15 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org., Def.	150 00	31 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org.	152 05	In Death Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$137,572 01
15 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., Def.	150 00	31 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	158 31	Appropriated to Death Fund, March, 1922	2,423 88
15 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150 00	31 Edward Flore, Gen. Pres.	497 69	Total	$139,995 89
15 E. F. Patterson, Death Claim No. 11370, Local 315	50 00	31 Chris Trieber, Death Claim No. 11387, Local 119	50 00	Drawn from Death Fund, March, 1922	1,650 00
15 Berthold Korn, Death Claim No. 11382, Local 1	50 00	31 Robt. Malone, Death Claim No. 11397, Local 208	50 00	In Death Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$138,345 89
15 Robt. E. McKibben, Death Claim No. 11391, Local 730	50 00	31 Charles Isham, Death Claim No. 11403, Local 575	50 00	In Defense Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$9 12
15 Harry Wieman, Death Claim No. 11398, Local 222	50 00	31 James Wilson, Death Claim No. 11405, Local 311	50 00	Appropriated to Defense Fund, March, 1922	1,565 92
15 Bruno Wobst, Death Claim No. 11399, Local 10	50 00	31 James M. Reed, Death Claim No. 11408, Local 189	50 00	Total	$1,575 04
15 Anton M. Cerbett, Death Claim No. 11400, Local 30	50 00	31 Robt. W. Stevenson, Death Claim No. 11409, Local 239	50 00	Drawn from Defense Fund, March, 1922	1,514 76
15 Harry Collins, Death Claim No. 11401, Local 30	50 00	31 Anthony Borgna, Death Claim No. 11410, Local 237	50 00	In Defense Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$60 28
15 Eugene Rudd, Death Claim No. 11402, Local 68	50 00	31 George Bush, Death Claim No. 11411, Local 77	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Mar. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
15 Chas. Vallancourt, Death Claim No. 11404, Local 18	50 00	31 Wm. H. Wynne, Death Claim No. 11412, Local 152	50 00	Appropriated to Con. Assmt. Fund, March, 1922
15 Chas. May, Death Claim No. 11406, Local 51	50 00	31 Wilbur Hughes, Death Claim No. 11413, Local 254	50 00	Total	$1,204 10
15 Eugene Curry, Death Claim No. 11407, Local 115	50 00	31 Frank O. Ruckman, Death Claim No. 11414, Local 199	50 00	Drawn from Con. Assmt. Fund, March, 1922
15 L. Nelson, Local 101, Defense	50 00	31 Geo. Proctor Farmer, Death Claim No. 11415, Local 240	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
18 Clerks	72 00	31 Adolph H. Tegan, Death Claim No. 11416, Local 20	50 00	In General Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$2,501 89
20 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00	31 Edward McAndrews, Death Claim No. 11417, Local 115	50 00	In Death Fund Apr. 1, 1922	138,345 89
20 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00	31 Walter Schylla, Death Claim No. 11418, Local 188	50 00	In Defense Fund Apr. 1, 1922	60 28
20 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00	31 Alfred Hensich, Death Claim No. 11419, Local 51	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund Apr. 1, 1922	1,204 10
20 Cora Edmonds, L. S. O., Local 728	20 00	31 Orval G. Gooch, Death Claim No. 11420, Local 286	50 00	Total	$142,112 16
20 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	31 Lee Huic, Death Claim No. 11421, Local 14	50 00

AND HE CALLED HIMSELF A SPORT.

He had just come through the gate after the last race at Bowie, his face bore anything but an angelic smile, he was tearing up a couple of losing tickets, when I concluded to get his goat. Easing up close to him as we hopped onto the train coming back to town, I asked him how he had made out today, and he gave me the icy stare, muttering the word rotten, rotten several times. He dove into a side pocket and among other odds and ends disclosed one of last year's Blue Books.

"Ah," I said, "what local are you a member of?" And then he opened his book, showed a stamp covering November, 1921, and just as I expected, he began to hammer the business agent in my town because the said B. A. refused to let him work a sure enough union job. He could find the fare from the big city to Bowie and return, he was able to dig up a five spot to play the ponies, but he was a cripple when it came to slipping over a dollar a month for his dues—and that hunk of cheese had nerve enough to "call himself a sport."

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

AKRON, OHIO, March 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

February 26, I arrived in Muncie, Ind., and addressed a mass meeting of the trades, and left a charter blank with the president of the Central Labor Union.

February 27, as per instructions, left for Dayton, Ohio, where I got in touch the following day with Secretary Golden, and soon learned the conditions were very bad; attended meeting of Local 579, twenty-two members being present, and made some recommendations, on which the members took action. One was to reduce the initiation and reinstatement fee to $2 for ninety days. It is hoped that any members who live outside of Dayton who read this will get back into the ranks.

March 1 to 5, accompanied by Secretary Golden, we canvassed the waitresses; the best we could do was to get six applications. Salary is low, side money is scarce, long hours are plentiful, and the eight-hour law is violated all over town; also attended meeting of the local joint executive board held at Bartenders' Hall; every delegate promised to make special efforts to organize the women.

March 6, addressed the city fire fighters and carpenters.

March 7, visited the dairy lunch rooms, but could not interest them; addressed the Dayton Trades Council same evening.

March 8 to 11, canvassed restaurants and lunch rooms on Third Street, and believe that if some effort is made these places can be organized.

March 12, attended bartenders' meeting, and it sure put me in mind of old times—initiating new members instead of suspending them—and they pay more money for sick and death benefits than any fraternal society in Dayton. There are no slackers among the crew of "Baldy" Eichhorn.

March 13, held meeting with the officers and the house committee of Local 579. As per instructions, left for Akron.

March 14, called on Secretary Robinson of Local 118 and he gave me information on the entire trades of Akron.

March 15, received a list of suspended members and called to see them; some promised to come back.

March 16-17, assisted Local 118 in getting out circulars announcing two open meetings. Brother Robinson and several members assisted in the distribution. Addressed the building trades council and the molders.

March 18-19, assisted Secretary Robinson, and addressed the bakers, machinists, hoisting engineers, elevator constructors, also the organizing committee of the trades.

March 20, held two open meetings for the culinary workers; only four showed up in the afternoon, but the night meeting was a success; initiated three.

March 21-23, canvassed the cafes and hotels, and made special efforts among the colored waiters, but they failed to make good their promise.

March 24, attended the Akron Labor Council meeting; over 800 men and women were present. Vice-President H. H. Broach of the International Electrical Workers; Organizer Emmett Adams of the A. F. of L.; O. E. Woodby, organizer for the carpenters, and myself addressed the meeting. Ex-President Sam Newman of the trades council presided over the meeting.

March 25-26, canvassed the lunch rooms and places around the rubber factories

My expense account is as follows:

February—

26—Indianapolis to Muncie..... $1 76

27—Muncie to Dayton..... 2 66

March—

13—Dayton to Akron..... 6 75

Total.....$11 17

Yours fraternally,

ROBT. LYONS,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--88-8-18-8-15

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., March 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

February 27, in Kewanee, Ill.; canvassed culinary workers, trying to get enough of them to make application for a charter; could only get three promises.

February 28, to Peoria, Ill.; visited the members of Local 327 on the job in four of the places.

March, 1, 2, 3, 4, in company with Brother George Holtman, business agent of Local 327, made a canvass of all of the members of the local we could find on the job, about 65 in number; we were successful in straightening up a great number of delinquents; 2 applications; 3 reinstatements.

March 6, canvassed seven of the lunch rooms; attended meeting of Local 327; 2 initiated; 2 reinstated.

March 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, made a canvass of the culinary workers in 18 of the lunch rooms and 3 hotels; about 35 of the workers in these places promised to join the local in a short time; 2 reinstatements.

March 13, canvassed beverage dispensers in several of the soft drink places; attended meeting of Local 286; 16 members of the old guard of the 56 members in good standing were present at the meeting, and took a lively interest in the proceedings.

March 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, canvassed the culinary workers and beverage dispensers in a majority of the places. In company with a committee from Local 327, held conferences with the proprietors of the Fey Hotel, Orpheum Restaurant, American Restaurant, and the Dewdrop Inn, asking them to unionize their places; looks favorable in three of these places. We signed up the Dewdrop Inn; 1 reinstatement.

March 20, canvassed cooks at the Jefferson Hotel; visited about forty of the members of Local 327 on the job, asking them to attend the meeting of the local. In the evening, attended meeting of Local 327; 2 initiated; 3 reinstated.

March 21, held conferences with the employers in three of the places; two of them said they would see the committee from Local 327 later. Both of our Peoria locals are very fortunate in having splendid officers who are doing the best they can for their locals under very unfavorable trade conditions. This kind of energy should make itself felt in a very short time if the membership of the locals will give them the kind of support they are entitled to. While in Peoria I addressed the meetings of twenty-three labor organizations in behalf of the culinary workers and beverage dispensers. Most of these meetings passed motions before I had left the hall to give their support. The only organization to turn me down was Barbers' Union, Local 40, of Peoria. This local, after I had been promised the floor, let me stand in the ante room one hour and ten minutes, and then closed its meeting without hearing me.

March 22, to Springfield, Ill. I find Local 788 in very bad shape. I am canvassing the members and former members of this local for a meeting, to be held March 27; have addressed meeting of the Springfield C. L. U. and two of the miners' organization in behalf of the local.

My expenses for the month were as follows:

Kewanee to Peoria.....	$2 33
Peoria to Springfield.....	2 21
Postage	62
Printing, as per bill.....	1 00

Total..... $6 16

Fraternally submitted,

E. W. PARLEE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

HAVERHILL, MASS., March 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of March:

March 1, executive board meeting, at which the general situation of Local 201 was thoroughly discussed.

March 16, two meetings called—3 p. m. and 8:30 p. m.—to take up the proposition of an assessment of $2 to be levied at once in order to raise cash which was badly needed. Vice-President J. Conley addressed both meetings. The members cheerfully accepted the assessment.

March 7, Brother Conley and I had a conference with Mr. Bragdon, one of the restaurant proprietors who had told his employees that he would not sign the next agreement. He told us the same thing, but I have since had several interviews with him, and I am pretty sure he will be all right.

March 9, attended meeting of Local 201; good attendance; a wage scale committee of nine was appointed to frame up the new agreements.

March 10, attended special meeting of the employes of Mr. Shute, where trouble was brewing; all promised to stick by the local.

March 13, with Business Agent Fred Emery, had a conference with Mr. Bragdon. Same evening attended wage scale committee meeting, at which it was decided to present practically the same agreement as last year.

March 14, visited Shute's Buffet Lunch with Business Agent Emery; at 11:30 he took out the union house card and at 11:45 we returned it, as Mr. Shute agreed to all our demands.

March 16, special meeting at 8:15 p. m., to accept or reject the wage scale committee report. After long discussion it was accepted as presented.

March 22, we mailed the reports of October, November, December, January and February to general office.

March 23, meeting of Local 201 and completed the roster of the membership of the union.

March 24, accompanied Secretary-Treasurer C. A. Flannagan and Business Agent F. Emery to a bonding company to have their bonds fixed up.

Local 201 is now again on its feet. When I came here no report had been sent to the general office since September, 1921. Mr. Kiley, business agent, had decamped, leaving the organization penniless. New officers were elected who were willing but without experience. The books were in an awful condition. I had to start them all over again. Secretary-Treasurer Flannagan and Business Agent Emery are very active and sincere workers. With them and President Arch Poor, also an active worker, besides a good set of trustees, there is no question about Local 201 forging ahead. It is paid up to March 1st, all bills paid, and has $101 in bank besides. The books are in good shape and will be audited next Sunday. The membership in good standing on March 1 was 182. The new agreement will go into effect April 16.

My expenses are: Postage, 75c.

Fraternally submitted,

A. MARTEL,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows:

Pursuant to instructions I finished my work in New York and on March 3rd I left for Wilmington, Delaware. Before leaving I was waited on by a committee from Local 3 and presented with a very handsome traveling bag as a gift from the members of that union, to whom I desire to express my thanks for this fine present.

Finding our members of Local 466 in good shape in Wilmington, I left for Baltimore, and worked there from March 4 to March 7. Attended the meetings of Locals 717 and 836. Local 532, bartenders, are holding on and will never quit, but not much work for them and the membership much decreased. Local 717, white waiters, have the best places where their class of waiters are employed and have in Brother Wm. J. Scorti, as secretary and business agent, a very competent and energetic official; the same can be said of Brother M. S. Pollett, who acts in similar capacity for Local 836, our colored cooks' and waiters' union. The bosses of the big hotels, I found, have a scheme to prevent their men from organizing or let the organizers get too well acquainted with their help, in that the chain hotel system being in vogue, the men, cooks and waiters, are being continually shifted from one city to another, where they operate the hotels on their chain. In this way the colored waiters especially, are shifted around.

March 7 I left for Washington, D. C., and at once got in touch with Local 781. Secretary and Business Agent Chas. H. Mayer and the membership of this union are a high class of workers. They have all the best hotels, clubs and cafes under agreements. My arrival in Washington was opportune as the signing of the 1922 agreement was progressing with the usual frictions that occur at such times. I found the cafes were signed, but the hotels while agreeing to a continuance of existing conditions—all asked by the union—were not disposed to give any signed agreements. To complicate matters, some of the hotel proprietors and Brother Mayer were laid up with attacks of the "flu" and inaccessible for business.

I attended three large meetings of the union and found the officers and members on the job and a level-headed body of men who are not liable to let anything but reason govern their actions, so I feel confident matters will be adjusted without any radical or ill-advised steps being taken.

I looked up the remains of our late colored local and found nothing encouraging for a reorganization of that union, in fact found little but antagonism and indifference; the same applies to the waitresses, a woman's minimum wage law being in effect of $16.50 for all women workers, with eight hours a day and six days a week's work.

The cooks are very indifferent to organization; in the hotels are one class, while in the cheaper class of cafes are mixed crews of white and colored, kept that way, I was informed, to prevent organization. I canvassed these men and had lots of talks with many of them without arousing any enthusiasm for a union. Some day they may wake up but at present they have no desire other than to hold their jobs.

I also visited the towns of Alexandria, Va., and Annapolis, capital city of Maryland, and found very little in the way of catering employes in these old-time places.

My expenses have been:

New York to Wilmington.....	$4 20
To Baltimore	1 05
To Alexandria and return.....	50
To Annapolis and return.....	1 93
Postage	73

Total $8 41

Fraternally submitted,

R. E. CROSKY,

International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

HARTFORD, CONN., March 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

February 27—Canvassed the North End restaurants.

February 28—Meeting of Local 273.

March 1—Canvassed the city, attended a meeting of the Hartford Central Labor Union.

March 2—Canvassed restaurants in East Hartford, accompanied by President McIntosh; one re-instatement and collected some dues.

March 3—Canvassed the South End restaurants; two re-instatements and one application.

March 4—Accompanied by Secretary J. J. McCourt, Bartenders' Local 81, called on a number of the soft-drink places; secured five new applications and four reinstatements.

March 5—Meeting of Local 81; meeting fairly well attended; important business transacted in the interest of pending legislation at the State House, Boston; initiated five new members and five reinstatements.

March 6—At the request of Local 273, attended special meeting on account of trouble at the Highland Hotel, where our members were discharged and non-union men put in their places. It was voted that we call the union men out if matters were not straightened out. The grievance was turned over to me to try to adjust. I took the matter up with the head-waiter and after going over the proposition the trouble was straightened out satisfactory to all concerned and our boys put back to work. The non-union men went back to Hartford to try to get another "slave's" job where they claim they don't need a union, independent workers, 14 hours per seven days. They can tell their friends in the Capital City if they want a white man's job in Springfield, they have got to come clean and with a card.

March 7 to 25—With the assistance of Secretary Emery Mayoros and President P. J. McIntosh, canvassed the city; while we were successful in signing up five houses, securing some new and reinstated members. We did not accomplish what we anticipated and it was not for the lack of work, time and energy that was put in on the job. Without exaggeration we have visited practically every hotel and restaurant and lunch-room from ten to twelve times. We get that "come-back-tomorrow and next-week" stuff, excuses and alibis of what happened in Local 304 eight or ten years ago. Some of them weren't over from Greece at the time or years after. I was obliged to remove several union house cards that were displayed; the proprietors wanted to pay for the use of them but were informed that our International did not do business in that manner. Only one way to obtain and display our label—run a union house.

March 15—Addressed a meeting of the Hartford Central Labor Union.

March 19—Meeting of Local 304.

I regret to say that we are not receiving the support of the Trades Unionists of the city in demanding our buttons and labels, particularly the crafts that would raise a fuss if their labels were not displayed. We are trying to bring this fact to their attention by visiting the various labor organizations, addressing their meetings evenings. We are commencing to see a little improvement and we intend to keep right on reminding them until we see a bigger improvement.

The following is my expense account:

February—

28—Springfield and return..... $2 38

March—

Springfield 1 19 |

Hartford 1 19 |

Total..... $4 76

Yours fraternally,

THOS. J. DURNIN,

International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

A RESEMBLANCE.

"Your husband says he leads a dog's life," said one woman.

"Yes, it's very similar," answered the other. "He comes in with muddy feet, makes himself comfortable by the fire, and waits to be fed."—The Labor World, Duluth, Minn.

Digitized by Google

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

Welcome to our little party, we shall begin our monthly journey to read what the pencil pushers of the nation and some with world reputations have to offer. We shall start off by keeping in mind the wisdom of one of the savants of an early day who said: "He bids fair to grow wise who has discovered that he is not so."

One of our friends, a resident in California, sent us a copy of the San Francisco Chronicle of March 1, 1922, marking the articles describing the Mardi Gras spectacle which was pulled off at the Civic Auditorium the last day of February. There are columns of vivid writing such as the following sample clipped from the publication already mentioned:

"The Thousand Nights and a Night" never embraced anything quite so intoxicating as the Arabian Nights Mardi Gras which took place at the Civic Auditorium last night.

A symphony that included every nuance of light, color and sound that art and skill could create to beguile the senses, always done to the theme of fantasy and rollicking fun—that was one idea that suggested itself. Flame hues and flower colors, intense to exaggeration, seemed saturated throughout the huge ballroom in which several thousand persons danced at the most beautiful Mardi Gras ever held in San Francisco.

A Bostonian could not do any better than that, and as intimated, there were many columns of similar descriptive writing, proving that our boys know good stuff when they see it, as well as have an appreciative gesture for the beautiful in dress, scenic effect and all that sort of thing.

While gazing down Market Street in the direction of the ferry, let us call your attention to this bit of editorial comment from the San Francisco Chronicle, of the same day that "March either comes in resembling a lion or a lamb"—in this neck of the woods March came in like a 'bloomin' blizzard,' but that's that—the referred-to comment runs as follows:

"Looking around at the army of boot-leggers who would vote against it, what chance appears for a loosening of the Volstead act by popular referendum?"

Seems to me we have heard that word—Boot-leggers—before. In the Buckeye State they call 'em Hootch-Haulers and Prune Juice peddlers, as well as several other names not generally used around the family table, at least not when the kiddies of school age have their faces in the feed-bag.

Just another choice bit from the M. H. de Young paper. This is from the Chronicle columnist, E. A. B.'s section:

"There seems to be a general howl because the marines on guard at the post office point their guns every way but heavenward. But it is not very often that a post office bandit goes up in the air."

One more and then we will be on our way; this is also from the de Young publication's columnist:

"Berkeley is yelling its head off for thirty red-headed girls," wrote a scribe in that town. And then the dashed printer had to go and set it "thirsty," and more than double that number responded."

By the way, did you observe Prune Week?

That query reminds me of Mike Shannahan, one of the early queensware manipulators, whose activities were confined to eat-shops close to Clark and Madison Streets. Mike was "among those present" when one of the gambling houses suffered a raid early one Sunday morning. Down to the Harrison Street Station went the hurry-up chariot with its load. Later when the Judge was looking 'em over, he asked Mike, how come? Mike affirmed with some warmth that he was on his way to church and just dropped in to get a thirst-quencher. At that Mike was not running light so far as beverages were concerned—he had a fair-sized package. The Judge turned to one of the station officers and said:

"McCloskey have a talk with this young man and find out how much he knows about church."

McCloskey took Mike in hand, asked Mike to repeat one of the hymns that were sung in the church he was going to. Mike with one of those wabbles of voice due to yelling at the umpire, began to warble:

"Prunes for breakfast, prunes for dinner, prunes for supper, prunes, prunes, prunes."

Evidently Mike made a hit with McCloskey, for soon after he was back on Clark Street meandering in the direction of that well-known hostelry called Vinegar Hill, the rendezvous of the tourists, the home of some of the Windy City's early exponents of "straight-arm work."

Hostlery—Another one of those old Clark and Madison Guards was asked what hostelry enjoyed his patronage, where was he stopping? "Well, by gum, I am stopping at a real rooming house; none of that stable stuff for me," was his sudden but effective come-back. But gaze upon the following. Chi is bound to be out there in front somewheres and now it is to be—but read the item:

LARGEST HOTEL IN WORLD TO BE IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Mar. 3.—Plans for a new hotel, to contain 3,000 rooms, at a cost of more than $12,000,000, have been announced. It will be the largest hotel in the world. It will be 25 stories high and have a convention hall that can accommodate 4,000 persons. It will also have an airplane landing on the roof. The new hotel will be just south of the Blackstone.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

What a lovely time the prohibition enforcers will have in a house that size! Three thousand rooms; some little building to hold that many cubicles saying nothing about the amount of space devoted to the lobby, tea rooms, eat shop and innumerable other needful departments to make it resemble home.

.

Speaking about enforcers of the prohibition law, take a second or two to peruse the following, clipped from the Cincinnati Enquirer of February 26, 1922:

VOLSTEAD LAW A JOKE.

Modification of the Volstead law, to make it less sweeping and more susceptible of enforcement, was advocated by Rabbi David Philipson, in his address at Rockdale Avenue Temple yesterday morning.

Asserting his belief that individual freedom should not be interfered with, but that the law, since it is a law, should be obeyed, Rabbi Philipson said:

"To my mind, the most serious feature of the situation is that the law has become a joke for myriads.

"When any institution reaches this pass, it may well give us pause. And this is the pass which the prohibition law has reached. A large section of the American people does now consider the law a joke. They break it without the least compunction. They consider it a lark to circumvent it. This breeds a spirit of lawlessness which has as a result a good-natured contempt for enacted legislation. This is a danger sign which our public men may well heed.

"When laws lack the enforcement of public opinion among a free people they are dead letters no matter how many officials there may be to enforce obedience.

"The constant and continuous infractions of the Volstead act indicate that it should be amended and made less sweeping in its provisions. I have not the least doubt that this is the desire of a great portion of the American people. The sooner this is given heed to, the more it will insure that respect for law in general on the part of the people which is an absolute condition for the safety of our free institutions."

Possibly you may conclude that we are paying a lot of attention to a subject that has been filed for all time, but there is where you are in error, for there is not before the public at this time, a subject that engages more people's attention than the operation of the Volstead law or more accurately speaking the operation of the Eighteenth Amendment. Before me, as this memorandum is being made, there are clippings sent in by Brother T. J. Durnin from the Boston Post, covering near every day in the month of February, and what do you guess is the heading of these articles? Sit tight. "Post Prohibition Forum," is the caption, and in each day's issue there are from three to ten letters from readers of that Boston publication and some of the letters are what Mulvaney would call "terrible testy conversation," and the major portion directed in opposition to the prohibition law.

.

Many prominent men and some not so well known are writing about dry laws, and it is a foregone conclusion that editors are not printing that material unless it is interesting to their readers. It seems to be the kind of matter they devote time and attention to. To make good on the claim, here is an article from the Washington Times of March 12, 1922, by G. K. Chesterton, the celebrated English writer and critic. In telling how to prepare poor man for ban on beer in England, noted publicist says: "Provide a dog collar and leash for his employer to use.

"I said something the other day to the effect that any man who says that workingmen want to abolish beer is a lunatic. I am prepared to qualify and soften this statement by adding that he may be a liar.

"There are many forms in which these subtle truths can be expressed; and it might again be adequate to say that he will probably be a politician. If he were frankly an aristocratic politician, saying that the people must be given what was good for them, I should respect him much more.

"But these political changes are effected by corruption, by intrigue, by governments elected on sham issues and breaking their word even about those issues.

"I am not interested in that process nor, indeed, in the drink question as such. The only question I will consent to discuss is the primary question of what are the rights and liberties of a workingman, if, indeed, he has any left.

"The key of the whole matter is in the following sincere and simple words: 'I am prepared,' says Bernard Shaw, 'to make it as easy for a poor man to be sober, if he wants to, as it is for his dog.'

"Now there is no doubt that it would be quite easy, in one sense, to carry out this reform. Let the poor man be given nothing but water; and let the water be put in some sort of tin saucer or bowl, where he can lap it up, possibly alongside of any dog-biscuits or other sustenance considered suitable for him.

"Let the poor man be provided with a dog collar, clearly marked, so that he may be rapidly returned to his owner, or employer, if he strays. Let the poor man be taken out on a lead, so that he can be tugged past any public house he may show a desire to enter.

"Mr. Shaw is altogether above pretending that prohibition is not directed at the poor man, and practically at the poor man alone. If anybody imagines that it is really meant to apply equally to all citizens, if anybody talks about the great American democracy, the example of our cousins across the seas, the idealism that has purified a whole people of the plague of drink, the great spiritual renunciation, and all the rest of it—to all that I have a very simple answer, which will be sufficient to silence all those of them who understand it. I happen to have been to America.

"Now as to my statement about the mass of workingmen, I do not recognize anyone as dealing with the realities at all if he really maintains that the average workingman is longing to surrender his glass of beer and have it replaced by a glass of lemonade.

"Another highly intelligent Puritan complains of my wanting longer hours in the tap-room; and to him I am content to reply that in one sense I certainly do.

"I want longer hours at the Tabbard, where travelers may be debauched and degraded by the conversation of Chaucer. I want longer hours at the Mermaid, that the young may be corrupted by the depravity of Ben Jonson and Shakespeare.

"In short, I want the survival of a living national tradition which no free man ever dreamed of denying until our diseased time; and if that tradition suffers now from evil conditions, it has occurred to me that it would be better to abolish the new evils rather than the old and normal good."

Ah, but you say, that is about England. True, but probably before we have finished this journey we may offer one from quite as prominent a man who writes about America—one as prominent as Hiram Maxim, whose article we printed in the March number of THE MIXER AND SERVER. Probably for the time being you may be satisfied to peruse the headlines of an article which acting Mayor Robert B. Hesketh, of Seattle, sent us. The article was rather lengthy, but the headlines will give you the meat, and that is all a busy man desires now:

REGULATION OF HOOCH RUNNING WILL BE RIGID.

Increase of $10 a case in Scotch and American whiskeys in sales to Seattle bootleggers.

Formation of a liquor runners and wholesale dealers' amalgamation whereby the set price will be maintained.

Agreement to give Victoria a proportionate share with Vancouver, B. C., in the liquor trade to Seattle.

Resolution to legislate for decreased liquor prices in British Columbia, on the basis that Canadian dealers are working on twice the margin effective on the American side.

Agreement of Victoria and Vancouver wholesale dealers to back the rum runners in their action in raising prices by refusing to sell the smugglers attempting to fight the amalgamation.

Declaration that if individual liquor runners do cut the price, the powers in Seattle "have a way" to put them out of business.

Resolution to boycott narcotic smugglers and to aid federal, state and city authorities in their apprehension.

Such are the salient results of a three-session international convention of liquor runners and representatives of Canadian wholesale liquor houses just closed in Seattle, attended by 100 smugglers, directors and envoys.

That choice bit of information was clipped from the Seattle Post-Intelligencer of March 8, 1922. And while you are thinking about the matter, does it dawn upon you that the so-called bootlegger and his aids are going to prove quite a formidable aggregation in the matter of getting a modification of the Volstead law?

.

By the way, did you ever wise up in your search for facts that at one time a bottle of hooch passed current for spending change? Where do we get that noise? Peruse the following, which was printed in the Times-Star of this city, March 2, 1922:

WHISKEY LEGAL TENDER IN EARLY DAYS OF COUNTRY.

Des Moines, Ia.—Once upon a time rye whiskey was a legal tender in this country. This fact may have a melancholy interest for the Americans of this arid prohibition era. In those happy days a citizen of the State of Franklin could buy a good homespun shirt for a jug of rye.

Few today, perhaps, ever heard of the State of Franklin, that was once a candidate for admission to the union of American commonwealths.

In 1784, after the American Revolution, settlers in East Tennessee met at Jonesborough and organized the State of Franklin. Rye whiskey, beaver skins and side bacon were declared the legal tender or money of the new commonwealth.

Congress, however, refused to recognize the State and the territory eventually reverted to North Carolina.

"In those good old days" a pint bottle of inspiration could be had for a York State shilling, and now—what do the hooch peddlers get for it in your neck of the woods? At that it would not astonish us a bit to hear President Harding blamed for the steady rise in price of Haig & Haig or Johnny Walker. Away back yonder in our veal cutlet days, we used to hear the spellbinders blame the party in office for everything, from chicken-pox to blind staggers; in fact, in the rhubarbs, as Al Hassel would say, they still do that sort of thing. Office holders must stand the gaff, being one of them thar things ouselves, we know.

Talk about opportune arrivals, Joe Smith, member at large, enclosed the following with a hint that its reproduction would be appreciated:

PSALM OF HARDING.

The Psalm of Harding, from the Lyon County (Ill.) Herald:

Harding is my shepherd; and I am in want.

He maketh me to lie down on the park benches; he leadeth me aside the free soup houses.

He restoreth my doubt in the Republican party; he leadeth me in the paths of destruction, for his party's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of starvation, I do fear no evil, for thou art against me; thy politics and the profiteers they frighten me.

Thou preparest a reduction in wages before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my income with taxes; my expense runneth over my income.

Surely poverty and unemployment will follow me all the days of this normalcy administration, and I will dwell in a rented house forever.

"That ain't no psalm," we can hear Frank Hoffman say, "that's a slam." And it comes dangerous close to being such.

.

Florence J. Sullivan, one of the city fathers of Elmira, N. Y., and well-known to quite a number of our boys and girls, having represented Elmira at several conventions created a furore at a recent meeting of the city council, when he introduced a resolution which urged the city council to petition Congress to amend the Volstead law, and allow the use of light wine and beer. Alderman Sullivan, who is well posted on the subject of fanatical legislation, literally tore the insides out of the prohibition enforcement law and caustically referred to the long-haired reformers who were doing more harm to America than had been accomplished by all its enemies since Columbus set foot on its shores. Florence is up against a tough opposition in that section of the Empire State, but that does not deter him from wading into the fanatics when opportunity offers.

.

Some of that boot-leggers' stuff must be as Hooligan would say, "Sumfin' fierce." The following clipped from the World-Herald, Omaha, March 7, 1921, offers a reason for the conclusion: "If you drink a glass of your own 'hooch,' I'll turn you free."

This was the proposition Judge Wappich made in police court yesterday to Filadelfo Catidi, 318 Poppleton Avenue, charged with "moonshining."

A jar of the "hooch" reposed on the judge's bench.

Catidi looked at the liquor and then at the judge. Then he shook his head.

"No," he replied. "I'll go to jail." And to jail he went where he must stay until he furnishes a $2,000 bond. He was bound over to district court.

Catidi's house was raided Saturday afternoon by Police Sergeant Williams and Officers Nelson, Kruger and Wade.

Neighbors told the officers the "still" had been operated about three years.

.

From the National Labor Journal, Pittsburgh, Pa., we scissor the following:

"OPEN" SHOP IS FAKE.

Chicago, Mar. 2.—"The 'open' shop is a fake—there is no such thing," writes Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, to John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of labor.

"During our investigation I proved I think conclusively; that in the case of the steel company and the national erectors' association that it is worse than a sham," said the New Yorker.

.

CHAMPIONS TEACHER-SMOKER—WOMAN PHYSICIAN TALKS UP.

Are you in favor of permitting men teachers to smoke?

I put the question to Dr. Helen Babcock in the Crary building.

"What? What's that? The idea—I thought most of them already did"—came a firm, but kindly voice from the other end of the wire.

"You see," I explained, "the Seattle Council of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations have issued the battle cry that 'No teacher who smokes shall be employed in the new Roosevelt high school.'"

"I shall endeavor to answer your question," said the doctor, "by asking another: Since when have we begun to measure the intelligence of men by their personal habits?"

"The wise men who instructed our hardy pioneer lads puffed away in peace. No one would have dared, or even thought, of depriving them of their lowly pipes. Did it follow that we had a crop of inferior men and women because of it?"

"Each decade has produced its wonder men—and women, too, for that matter.

"Our country was a free one then—'For the people, by the people and of the people.' How much longer, I wonder, can we continue to believe that our country is actually a free nation?"—CYNTHIA GREY.

That's from the Seattle Star of recent date, a sort of a reminder that the Antis are trying to push Lady Nicotine off the plank. Our hats off to Dr. Helen Babcock, she must be a regular girl with a slant on life that is worth carrying.

.

One of our friends sends us the following clipping, evidently from one of the newspapers printed in the State of Washington:

WANT TO BE A MAYOR? WELL, JOIN COOKS' UNION.

Seattle and Tacoma both have cooks as mayors these days. Bob Hesketh of the Seattle Cooks' union is acting mayor of Seattle. Roy Harrison, member of the Tacoma Cooks' and Waiters' union, is acting mayor of Tacoma. Other unions should not let the cooks take all the political honors.

As Kin Hubbard would say: "I kin remember the time when the nearest a cook got to the City Hall was when he visited that building to pay taxes on a little slab-sided shack."

.

Coincidences will happen. A few weeks ago one of our girls who had read a little item about a dog; asked if we would not reproduce the tribute paid "To man's best friend," by late Senator George Vest of Missouri. We promised, and a few days later "Mayor Bob" sent us the following clipped from one of Seattle's dailies:

HERE'S FAMOUS COURTROOM TRIBUTE TO DOG'S LOYALTY.

The following tribute to the dog, made by the late Senator Vest of Missouri, in a speech which swayed a jury to fine a man $500 for wantonly killing a neighbor's pet, was repeated by defense attorney James Brennan before jurors trying the Airedale "Dormie" in San Francisco for killing cats. Excerpts are:

"Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground in wintry's winds, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds that come in encounters with the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies. And when the last scene of all comes, there by his graveside will the dog be found, faithful and true even in death."

We printed the Vest eulogy several years ago, it is worthy of repetition.

.

Here is a bit of news that will be cheering to many of our boys and girls who recall the activity of the late editor of the Los Angeles Times.

If there is such a thing as the spirit of the departed keeping in touch with mundane things, one can guess how the old pencil-pusher of the Times will squirm when he peruses the following:

MORE UNION MEN IN LOS ANGELES THAN EVER BEFORE.

Los Angeles.—The most determined fight ever made against organized labor in the United States had little, if any, effect upon the unions in Los Angeles during the year, as facts and figures compiled by the Central Labor Council show that there are now more trade unionists in the City of the Angels than ever before; that the affairs of the central body and the Building Trades Council are very satisfactory; that the Allied Printing Trades Council has won its fight for the 44-hour week; that the Metal Trades Council has rid itself of the so-called "Rank and File" element, which was insidiously boring from within; that the Union Labor Temple Association is in excellent condition and soon will pay off the last dollar on its mortgage through the sale of notes held exclusively by unions and union members, who will receive the 6 per cent interest heretofore paid to a hostile money-lending concern, and that The Citizen, the labor paper of Los Angeles, has just experienced the most prosperous year in its history, its earnings during 1921 being sufficient to enable it to erect a three-story annex to the Labor Temple, work on which will begin within the next sixty days.

All of which is not so bad when the fact is borne in mind that Los Angeles once was known the world over as the home of the union-hater. This phenomenal record is due solely to solidarity on the part of trade unionists themselves.

And if it please the court, allow us to say, in behalf of our clients, Locals 17, 284, 468, 582 and 639, that they each and severally have been on the job helping to put over that excellent record in the City of Angels.

.

Did your favorite afternoon or morning paper print the following news item:

"Huntington, W. Va., Feb. 2 (I. N. S.)—The Coal River's collieries, a $1,000,000 corporation, the stock of which is held by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has opened an office here. The company head, who is Warren S. Stone, chief of the brotherhood, has extensive operations in Boone County, West Virginia, and Prestonsburg, Ky."

.

The experiment in the Minneapolis post-office mail-sorting room, where a phonograph was put on the job for the seeming entertainment of the mail sorters, so pleased these workers that fewer errors occurred and considerable more work was accomplished in a given time. The news article conveying the foregoing information intimates that the phonograph has come to stay in that particular post-office. The experience recalls a somewhat similar one by the compiler of these notes. Some years ago, while in charge of a kitchen in the city of Baltimore, we found it necessary to employ a number of colored men to pat oysters. Anyone who has been lined up with a job requiring bread-ing from one to several hundred dozens of oysters knows that it is one monotonous task. Four men were employed at the task, and as anyone having employed any number of the Sons of Ham knows, if they are given a chance they will break into humming and finally singing. As the singing was of the subdued brand, no one could reasonably find fault. It was observed that when the "patting quartette" swung into "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," the number of oysters breaded would not keep one pan going for many minutes, and as Baltimoreans love their oysters and eat them regularly during the season, the cooks had to be supplied with the material or patrons had to wait. So, without seeming to "butt in," we would stand alongside and quickly change from the "Swing Low Chariot" to "Put Your Foot in the Sand—Take It Out of the Mud," and take our word for it that during the rendition of that very popular negro ditty oysters were piled high and plenty. Music in the dining-room can either delay or speed up the service. If interested, observe where fast music is being played waiters and others move quickly; but let the musicians get to hitting up something about as fast as the Dead March in "Saul," and it's "good night" to speed, and the cash register will show the effect at the end of the day's business.

.

"Objection sustained." We were not reciting anything about "petting;" we were talking about music, mail sorting and oysters. Did not even have a flapper in mind. But now that you remind us, we have an item that we clipped sometime ago when the National Retail Shoe Association held its meeting in Chicago. The item was sent out by the International News Service, and read, in part, as follows:

"Chicago, Ill.—Pink-tinted feminine toes will make their appearance on the main streets of the nation within two years, it was predicted at the National Retail Shoe Association's convention here.

"The fascinating Cleopatra pinked her's—why not next year's flapper, ask forward-looking men in the shoe business, who observe a decided tendency on the part of the stylish young women of today to display 'more and more ankle and dress and less shoe.'

"In less than two years our girls will be almost barefooted—by choice," predicted K. M. Stone, of New York.

"Tinkling bells on goloshes have been accepted without undue discrimination in blase Sioux City. "Girls of tomorrow will pay as much attention to their feet as their face," said Mr. Stone.

"Girls won't wear shoes. They want slippers, low slippers—the lower the better. Skirts high, slippers low, that is the idea. The tendency everywhere is toward sandals and slippers.

"Toes have a subtle charm. You will soon see our girls dabbing their toes with henna and washing their feet as often as they now wash their faces."

"What to do—sell slippers and sandals exclusively, or turn foot manicurists—that seems to be the question for shoe dealers to decide."

.

Here are several interesting items scissored from the Scientific American of recent date:

"HOW FLYING FISHES FLY—Some highly interesting observations on flying fishes have been made by Dr. E. H. Hankin in the Arabian Sea. In still weather the length of a glide was about a meter, with considerably lateral instability; in a light wind this was increased to from 200 to 400 meters. A resemblance between the wing action of soaring vultures and the fin action of the fishes was marked.

"HIGH-ALTITUDE RAILROAD—The British Government has awarded contracts for the construction of a railroad from Naguru to the Uasingisu plateau north of Victoria Nyanza, which will attain the greatest altitude of any railway of the British Empire; its highest point will be more than 9,000 feet above sea level. The road will cost $10,000,000.

"OLD SUITCASE FOR RADIUM—To disguise his precious burden an officer of a Colorado radium company brought nearly $80,000 worth of radium to Philadelphia in an old battered fiber suitcase. The precious substance was deposited in the vaults of a trust company.

"FIGHTING FAMINE WITH SWAMP ROOTS—Samara University hopes, through its discovery of the edible qualities of 'awsan,' a swamp root, to reduce the suffering in Russia by one-half. Awsan contains 70 per cent of starch, considerable albumen, and some fats.

"WHO INVENTED FRICTION MATCH?—A German chemist has made an exhaustive study of this question, and concludes that no one person can be considered to be the inventor of the friction match.

"WEALTH VANISHING IN SMOKE—Every year 33,000 forest fires, involving some 12,500,000 acres of timberland, cost us $20,000,000. Greater vigilance would save much of this appalling waste.

"ON THE TYPHOON'S TRACK—The typhoon season begins in Japan in July and August, and continues during the autumn. These visitations are frequent along the coast and they do terrible damage to the crops besides leaving a wake of death and destruction in other ways. Certain parts of the coast of Japan have the distinction of being considered as being the regular path of the typhoons, and as the natives in these sections are constantly expecting these storms, they are more or less prepared for them. A peculiar disturbance of the sea gives warning of the approach of the typhoon.

"THE ANCIENT GOLD LEAF ART—One of the most ancient of industries is the hammering of gold leaf. It is not known when it originated. The gold made use of for the purpose is almost pure. It is rolled into a ribbon 1,800 of an inch in thickness and small pieces of this are placed between sheets of parchment and beaten and re-beaten and cut up into smaller pieces and again beaten. When finished it takes 400,000 of these sheets placed one on the other to make a pile one inch high."

From flying fish to gold leaf, some jump, eh? Takes a little time to peruse, but it's worth it, for it sort of pulls one away from the usual lines, talking shop, etc.—heavy on the etc.

Speaking of time, have you trained yourself to get along without a Waterbury or an Ingersoll? Here is an item we picked up from one of our exchanges that reads good:

"It may seem strange to many, but there are numerous persons who need never look at a clock—they always know the time. This peculiar power has not yet been explained by science. These 'human clocks' invariably give the time correct almost to a minute. How they are able to do it they can not say themselves.

"About six persons in every thousand have this queer time sense. In another manner almost as puzzling each and every one of us can become a human clock.

"That is to say, we can, on going to bed, decide to wake ourselves at a certain hour. And though we may not do the trick for the first few mornings, the power can be cultivated, and quickly. Thousands of workers don't depend on clocks to rouse them—they can wake at any hour they choose."

Did you ever say to yourself: I must get up at 6 a. m. or the boss will tie a can to me. Saying to your other self, "Get me out in the morning on time," will pull the job more often than not. Try it when on your vacation, when there is no whistle or bell a-calling you.

James M. Allison, writing to the publication that prints his daily New York City items, recently printed the following:

A truthful traveler, just from Germany, solemnly asserts that he gave a New Year's Eve party for twelve in a smart restaurant in Berlin, with an elaborate supper and several wines, having at the finish to pay a check which amounted to nine dollars in American money. We know him and believe him. But what a story he could tell in Berlin if he had given the party over here, at the prevalent twenty dollars a cover, and paid for it with 720,000 German marks!

While it would be possible to give a party supper with "wine to wash it down," the host would have to keep a strict lookout for the long-nosed reformers, as it would be "just their meat" to break in and ditch the wet goods.

Speaking about reformers, Ray Stewart of the Cedar Rapids Tribune shakes a wicked pencil when he writes about reformers. A sample of what Ray does when his thoughts go back to the time when a fellow could rest his foot on the foot-rail and get a couple of fresh ones with a low collar to help assuage one's thirst. Here is how the Tribune man slips it over:

A good reformer is just as good as anybody else who is good. But a bad reformer is just as bad as anybody else who is bad. Reformers have their mission to perform, even as you and I. But when too much professionalism enters the game, then the reformer in turn needs just as much regulation as the professional baseball player or business man. The present wave of reformation appears to be the instigation of professional reformers who make their living in that field. Why should the people's own favorite amusement—the movies—be the butt of reformers' attacks today? Well, don't professionals in any line have to keep busy to earn their shekels? Positively! Since the reformers have been working a little overtime to give our fair land the "blues," the newspaper editors and leading citizens have expressed disapproval of their ways and means. And these opinions have met with the hearty approval of audiences when screened in "Topics of the Day" Films. Just to give you a chance to form your own opinion that too much censorship is dangerous, we scissored these paragraphs for our readers.

VERY TRUE.

Human nature is something to train and refine; it can't be destroyed. Even the fool reformers ought to know that.—Houston Post.

YES, INDEED.

Probably ninety per cent of the men who are trying to reform the world would be more useful citizens if they would go to work.—Boston Shoe and Leather Reporter.

NIGHT STUFF.

With blue law officials taking the sun out of Sunday and police, deputy sheriffs, constabulary and federal agents taking the moon out of the other six days, about all the average citizens sees is the stars.—Denver Times.

DEFINED!

Reformers are people who take your money and give advice. The only thing we need to destroy our civilization is a few more reformers.—Columbia Record.

ONE AFTER ANOTHER.

"First it's the brew law; then it's the blue law."—Buffalo Enquirer.

That last item from a Buffalo (N. Y.) paper reminds us of the fact that the mayor of that city, elected as a liberal, put over a license law with trimmings for beverage dispensing establishments, which to say the least is far from liberal.

The "dry" press has been making quite a howdy-do over the alleged illiberal tendencies of the President of Mexico; he was a man after their own heart and all that sort of shine bunk, but we wonder what will happen when they get the real facts as to President Obregon's attitude on the subject of prohibition. Here is an enlightening editorial, clipped from the Los Angeles (Cal.) Record of March 1, 1922, that gives the real dope:

ONE WISE PRESIDENT.

"Mexico will never force prohibition on its citizens; our work is to educate the children to be temperate and to establish prohibition when the people believe in it." Thus President Obregon of Mexico, in a recent official statement.

Meanwhile this country discovers an increasing weiness; it finds the law enforcement officials utterly powerless in great districts where public sentiment is against the law; graft, scandal and corruption repeatedly appear in official circles, and practically no temperance sentiment appears left in the land.

Five years ago in this country it was considered improper for a business man to appear at the office with even the smell of liquor on him; to-day it is considered clever to invite your business caller to quaff from the bottle of moon, hidden in the bottom drawer of your desk.

All the forces of reform today are either attempting to cram down an unpopular act, or else they are seeking new blue laws to impose on the nation; none of them appears eager to continue the education of the youth as to the evils of liquor.

It would seem that the nation was either not ready for prohibition or else that the enforcement act was so miserably devised that it defeated the purpose of the constitutional amendment.

But it would help a lot if the church, and those reform societies that once did a great work in reclaiming weak men, would return to their task of education and once more make personal sobriety popular.

The average youth of today considers it smart to get a drink when he can; and few of them have any considerable trouble getting it; though what they get will kill 'em in from six minutes to six years.

As a man thinketh, so is he; prohibition will prohibit when it is the faith of the people of this country, when they believe in it rather than laugh at it.

Obregon is one wise hombre.

As we write this comment, folks have finished up the St. Patrick's Day celebration and are now looking forward to milder and more Spring-like weather; others are checking off the days to the first of the month, when, if signs call for a thing, the country is going to face the threatened Miners' Strike. What we said about that expected strike last month need not be withdrawn, for there is evidence enough and to spare, that the Coal Operators believe they have the Mine Workers' Union in the corner pocket and can stand off on the side and whale the stuffing out of that organization. The chance of the Government at Washington stepping in and preventing trouble is not a bit bright, in fact we expect to see several members of the cabinet take advantage of the situation to build up a reputation for being with the Dollar Barons, be the cost what it may. These men tried to kid the voters of the country into the belief that they were "deeply concerned about the welfare of the people," and they are, but they cut the number of "the people" down to a figure which included the muck-a-mucks, the fellows with their hands on the tiller. The following statement is indicative of how the President of the A. F. of L. regards the situation and by the time this survey comes to your hands, no doubt the forces of organized labor will be "chipping in" to make the mine workers' path less strenuous than the mine owners desired:

Washington, D. C., March 16.—President Samuel Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor today issued the following statement in relation to the situation existing in the mining industry:

Come what may, the American Federation of Labor, the American labor movement, is with the mine workers of America in their struggle against the mine owners.

No group of employers in any industrial controversy in this country has ever placed itself in a more indefensible position than that occupied by the mine owners at this time.

Bound by a solemn agreement to confer with the workers upon the terms of a new agreement, they have refused to abide by the terms of their own pledge.

The citizenship of America can draw from this conduct but one conclusion and that is that the mine owners wish it to be understood that the pledge of mine owners is valueless.

The statement of mine owners that the representatives of the mine workers have no power to confer is baseless. The officers and the policy committee of the mine workers have full power to confer, to negotiate and to enter into an agreement and this power was officially and properly conferred upon them by the mine workers' convention.

The mine owners are willing to break their word if, by so doing, they can reduce wages or weaken the union. Profit and power, with the mine owners, come first, and everything else, including the comfort and welfare of the public, of which they talk so much, comes last.

The whole American labor movement is with the miners. The United Mine Workers of America have an honorable record of agreements honorably kept. The industry, for twenty years, has been conducted upon the basis of negotiation and joint agreement. The mine workers have met every demand made in those agreements. In addition, they have never been subject to whim and caprice beyond any other calling or trade. They have had work for from fifty to one hundred fewer days per year than most other trades and occupations. They have been subjected to a fluctuation of work almost unknown in any other trade. What they ask is negotiation and agreement, trusting to these truly American devices to bring improvement as time passes. The thing they want least of all is to be compelled to cease work as a final protest against the dishonor of the employers.

The mine workers are striving to abide by their pledge. They have fulfilled every obligation and wait only the word of the employers to enter into negotiation for the continuance of mining operations.

The cause of the miners is just, and in that just cause they will have the united and unswerving support of the great labor movement of our country and, we are bound to believe, of every man and woman in our country to whom justice means something beyond the empty word.

* * *

The effort of a considerable number of concerns employing large numbers of wage-earners to overcome the effect of genuine trade unions by establishing Company Unions is treated with a fine hand by the president of the Cigar Markers' International Union in a recent number of the Cigar Makers' Official Journal. President Perkins writes, under the head of "Benevolent Autocracies:"

"Among the many big issues confronting labor today is the attempt on the part of many of the larger employers of labor to institute their own hand-made benevolent societies (company unions?) in lieu of the regularly organized protective labor unions in their respective shops and mills. The hope of modern captains of industry is autocratic control of the workers. This they hope to accomplish because natural resources, furnaces, mills and factories, as well as transportation systems, are becoming concentrated into fewer hands. Centralization of ownership, and thereby centralization of power, is becoming more and more a factor in the lives and working conditions of the workers.

"Our task is to organize the workers and inaugurate just and equitable principles of democracy to apply to our industrial relations, to safeguard working conditions to an extent that we shall not become mere chattels or serfs under the increasing centralized autocratic control.

"A nation politically democratic and economically autocratic can not endure. Present 'Benevolent Democracies,' 'Benevolent Autocracies' being the better definition, installed in the management of many of the larger business concerns, are nothing more than relics of feudalism. They carry long hours and low wages, even though in some instances a degree of comfort and safety is granted the workers through the fear of the laws that labor has forced, viz., factory inspection and safety devices.

"An individual workman, dependent on his own resources, can not hope to successfully bargain with organized corporate capital. In his failure to bargain successfully with his employer he becomes little more than a mere serf dependent upon the industrial relations dictated by his employer. The future of America with its traditions and its government predicated on the freedom of its citizenship has no place for serfdom under any guise whatsoever."

.

Heard a would-be smart aleck on the car the other morning recite the alleged fact that bricklayers limited their day's labor to a definite number of brick. Supposing that were true, don't you think they have the same right to limit their services as the retail or wholesale merchants have to set a price per yard on textiles, or the grocer selling a dozen eggs for a stated price. When you enter a store to make a purchase you get what you pay for, and not a thing more. When a building contractor figures on construction work, do you think he makes any allowance for labor that does ten dollars' worth of service for half that amount of money? Not so you could notice it. It will be observed that the owners of mills, factories and the hundreds of establishments which employ labor and who complain about restricted output of their workers, generally are able to live in fine mansions, wear the best of clothes, sport all kinds of costly jewelry, take vacations at Palm Beach, or run over to London for a couple of months and visit Paris as well. Returning to the would-be smart aleck, we made inquiries and found that he was a money lender and only charges all the law will allow him to obtain. His kind are about as profitable to any community as the smallpox; but people who did not happen to know him and the line of graft he was engaged in accepted his little talk as coming from a man who employed layers of brick.

.

Editor Joe Keating, of the Toledo Union Leader, in his issue of March 10, 1922, discussed the "Open Shop" in the following excellent editorial:

THE "OPEN SHOP" TRAGEDY.

The fable of the dog who lost his bone in grasping at its shadow is well exemplified by the foolish attitude of employers who joined in the nation-wide movement of a few schemers to wreck the organized labor movement. These poor dupes now have no bone at all.

The national chamber of commerce and the few big bankers that manipulate it, started the agitation for the so-called open shop in a very insidious way. Emissaries were sent out to spread the false gospel and feel out the sentiment. Great advantages were pictured to employers, business and professional men. These thoughtless elements bit on the bait and were hooked for many a dollar to conduct a ruthless campaign of destruction that has reacted to their own injury.

Now about a year has elapsed since the fight was launched, and behold the destruction and desolation!

Thousands of business concerns are resting peacefully in the archives of the bankrupt court, while many of the remainder are desperately clinging to a slender thread over the yawning chasm of failure and oblivion.

Arbitrary wage cuts were put into effect, and deliberate fights with labor unions were precipitated. The result was the inevitable strife and industrial stagnation. The entire industrial machinery has been disorganized, and there is neither wages nor profits.

The "open shop" fight on organized labor was the complement of the "deflation movement" on the farmer. The same bunch of highbinders are back of both movements; and the ordinary business and professional man, who depends upon the working people for customers have been pulled down in the wreck caused by the suicidal anti-labor policy of these same misguided business men.

Reciprocity among the elements within a nation is essential to the prosperity of all, and strife and antagonism inevitably leads to stagnation and decay. Organized labor recognizes this principle and deplores the stand taken by the anti-labor forces.

.

The publicity bureau of the Farmers' National Council sends out the following quartette of interesting articles that will give the reader an inside view of conditions which the daily press seldom offers:

RAILROADS EARNED LAST YEAR GOOD RETURN ON HONEST VALUATION.

The tentative earnings of the railroads for 1921 are reported with doleful comment by the railroad people on what slim return they are getting. They admit that their net earnings were 3.31 per cent for 1921 upon the capital investment account which is in round figures \$18,900,000,000. These net earnings for 1921 of \$615,000,000 is equivalent, however, to nearly $5\frac{1}{4}$ per cent upon a valuation of \$12,000,000,000, which is a most liberal estimate of the real value of the roads. Very few farmers in America made 5 per cent upon their actual investment last year. Hundreds of thousands of farmers went broke. In addition, it must be remembered that the railroads wasted hundreds of millions of dollars in 1921 through competitive speculative operation, through the interlocking system of directorates, through buying supplies in competition instead of by pooled purchase. As long as the roads oppose unified operation, they have no cause and no justification to complain of their small net earnings. The Congress of the United States, which has control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and which through the Cummins-Esch law instructed the Commission to fix freight and passenger rates which it was estimated would yield the roads $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent to 6 per cent, must take full responsibility for the present condition of the roads. Congress can promptly pass legislation to prevent the worst waste and most flagrant grafting practiced by the railroads.

"SELLING" THE RAILROADS.

The "Railway Age," organ of railroad interests, in a recent article insists that the roads must "sell themselves to the public; in other words, that they must conduct an expensive campaign of advertising to increase confidence in the roads and to provide a better market for railroad securities. This article states that if the railroads paid as much for such sale "as other industries do," that it would amount in their case to $42,000,000, while it makes the statement that the maximum spent by the railroads for advertising in any one year was less than $10,000,000. This article in "Railway Age" shows that the railroads are still trying to run up a blind alley and substitute an appeal to prejudice through advertising and control of editorial policy of newspapers, for efficient and good management. In passing, it should be noted that $42,000,000 for advertising is very nearly 7 per cent of the total net earnings of the roads in 1921, and about one-third of one per cent on $12,000,000,000; $42,000,000 is also about one-third of the total reduction in freight rates granted by the railroads, although wages of railroad employes have been reduced over $600,000,000 a year.

Prices of Wheat: The temporary increase in the price of wheat will not mislead any careful student into believing that farmers are going to get a big price for their farm products. Certainly two-thirds and probably three-quarters of the total wheat crop of the U. S. has gone out of the hands of the farmers before this increase in price of farm products, particularly of wheat, took place. The middlemen and investment bankers and speculators profit very largely by this increase in the price of wheat.

FARM PRODUCTS EXPORTS.

A recent statement by the Department of Commerce reports that the total volume of principal agricultural products for 1921 amounts to over 20,000,000 tons, compared with 16,500,000 tons in 1920, and was the largest total volume of any year in our country's history. In 1921 our exports to Europe amounted to less than $2,000,000,000, as compared with $3,000,000,000 in 1920. The cost of production was practically the same both years. It is clear, therefore, that farmers can not get ahead of the game by exporting more farm products and receiving less pay therefor. The volume of farm products exported was in 1921 a quarter greater than in 1920, and the price received in 1920 was one-half larger than that received in 1921. The most serious factor in the situation, however, is the tremendous reduction in the domestic consumption of farm products. About 90 per cent of our agricultural products are consumed at home. A reduction of 11 per cent in domestic consumption is equivalent to shutting off our entire foreign market. It is perfectly clear, therefore, that while striving to maintain the foreign market for farm products, farmers in self-interest must work to prevent unemployment and to secure fair wages for city labor, and for all others engaged in useful production off the farms.

The fact that the total volume of farm products in 1921 was $5,687,000,000 less for a larger crop than that of 1920, which had a value of $9,054,000,000, carries its own story. The sarcastic and ill-informed editorials in hundreds of newspapers throughout the country asserting that farmers and other workers have no interests in common, are belied by the figures as to the value of farm products in 1920 and 1921. Unquestionably, our domestic consumption of farm products was at least a fifth, in not a quarter less in 1921 than it would have been had all adult men and women been regularly employed at fair wages.

Here is a choice bit clipped from the Seattle Times of February 5, 1922:

MECCA OF BARTENDERS.

Jobs Galore are Awaiting Them in England. London Newspaper Carries Many Advertisements Showing Liquor Trade is Booming.

London, Feb. 4.—Gradually the American problem of the unemployed bartender is being solved; gradually the unemployed bartenders are being reabsorbed into industry and using the training of years to produce better chocolate sodas. Hundreds, however, are without employment.

But if they only knew it, there is a mecca for all this vast army. They can come to England, where beer pumps are still working, and bartenders are very much in demand.

A few days ago an American arrived in London: He was a stranger to the city, and while waiting for the pubs to open at 11:30 a. m., decided to buy a morning paper, and spend a half-hour reading in his hotel lobby.

He selected The London Morning Advertiser, and opening to page two saw three full columns of classified ads all very much of this order:

"Wanted—A smart barman, willing, good references, sleep in. Apply A—, East India Dock Road.

"Wanted—Barman, comfortable home to a good man; references must bear strictest investigation from gentleman still in business. Apply Queen's Head, Whitechapel."

"Wanted—A respectable young lady as barmaid; live and sleep in. Bush Hill Park Hotel."

"Beer houses," private bars, licensed hotel businesses were also offered for sale on this page, and young women inserted advertisements to the effect that they were anxious to learn the barmaid's art.

Turning the pages, the American discovered that a large percentage of the advertisements in the paper were for good English beers and mellow Scotch whiskies. The leading editorial was a discussion on selling whiskey "off the premises." Beyond that, the paper carried the usual run of the day's news.

The London Morning Advertiser occupies a unique place in British journalism. Established in 1794, it is now the organ of the Licensed Victualer's Association, and is active in supporting all measures affecting the liquor trade. Since the advent of prohibition in America the news columns have carried many stories of distressing conditions in the transatlantic drought areas.

In writing to one of our members not long ago, we made reference to the pennies of Sunday School children having been used by the organized fanatics to help put over the dry laws. At the time we made a guess that the number of Sunday School children numbered at least five millions.

In looking over old clippings we find the following—not so very old at that, as it bears date of November, 1921, but the facts it offers may be a revelation to many of our readers:

33,250,870 OF SCHOOL AGE.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The "school population" of the United States is 33,250,870, the Census Bureau announced today. Of this number, comprising citizens 5 to 20 years old, more than 21,370,000 were attending school between September, 1919, and January, 1920, when the census was taken. Utah apparently is the most studious State, 73 per cent of her citizens, eligible by age, being registered in schools. Massachusetts leads in the 7 to 13-year group with 96.1 per cent and Louisiana comes last with 75.9 per cent.

.

You have heard of sharks and sharks, but they are harmless in comparison to the literary shark when he turns on his gas and speeds up a bit. The following, from the Baltimore Sun of March 14, 1922, tells the rest of the tale. It's worth using a moment or two of your time to peruse:

"TO THE EDITOR OF The Evening Sun—Sir: The eminent example set by Sein Heiligtum, Heinrich Ludwig Mencken, in translating the great, fanciful 'Declaration of Independence' into the vulgate, spurs me on to humble emulation. I here render before overawed Americans the most discussed and generally admired portion of one of Shakespeare's masterpieces, done into Americanese, namely, the soliloquy from Hamlet. I implore all other lovers of the Bard to refrain from unkind comment because they dislike my methods of elucidating great William:

"To be or not to be. That is the question. Is a guy a better sport if he worries his head off about the shrapnel and the poison gas his bum luck hands him, or if he ends the whole shootin' match by bumpin' himself off—kickin' the bucket.

"To croak! To snooze. And to say said snooze short-circuits his nervous indigestion and the million pops and soaks and shocks his rubber heels won't save him from while he's livin'. Gosh! No feller can ask for a better let-up than that!

"But if he sleeps he might dream. Oh! There's the nigger in the woodpile. For how can a guy know what he might dream when he slips out of his livin' carcass—when the mask of life comes off him? That makes him hold on a minute. For who in blazes would stand and be blackjacked and haw-hawed by time, to be knocked for a goal by a jack that's bigger'n he is—just because he ain't so strong; to be spit on when he's poor; to be "mashed" on a jane, and she give him the ha-ha; to get mangled by the United Railway and wait seven years, gettin' nothin' for it, 'cause the law should worry; to elect a crooked congressman who pops him on the noodle with prohibition; to eat dirt for a sap what ain't half as good as he is—now, who would stand all dem things when he could cut off the whole business with a little carbolic acid, a gat or a knife?

"Who, I says, would swim in such a mess if he didn't was afraid of comin' too soon to the end of it; go to hell, maybe, and you know the devil, once he gets you, never lets go.

"So we're all a pack of scarecrows. We're so damn afraid of the devil we'd take any number of kicks on the shin while livin' than a chance to have a good time at a fire—maybe not so good.

"And so a lot of things a guy with some real grit would do, we let our nuts and crazy ideas stop us from doing."

"This, Mr. Editor, is mighty poor, indeed, but it might stimulate the latent instincts of translators who could popularize the most famous works and thus add joy and culture to their benighted fellows—in (as some one expressed it too frivolously) these benighted States. RALPH BENJAMIN."

.

Lloyd George manages to fit into the front page every day. If it is not one thing, it's another. The following is from an article by Col. Edward M. House, which, by the way, is a copyrighted article, but we are just slipping a small slice of it off for your information, and do not expect any dire results because of that slipping:

"When Englishmen complain of Lloyd George and his methods as contrary to the customs and teachings of their country, one is tempted to reply that he is not, and does not, claim to be one of them. He is Celtic by both birth and temperament. He is as he is, and must be taken for better or for worse. One constantly hears in Great Britain and elsewhere that he continues in power because there is no one capable of taking his place. That does not seem to be the reason. There are many able men of both parties in Great Britain amply qualified to form and conduct a government. The reason he has been in control for so long goes back to the election of 1918. The present Parliament, in American political parlance, is 'handpicked.' A majority of them are Lloyd George men; and, further, it is probable that in another general election a large part of them could not be returned. This does not mean that Lloyd George can not win in the next election, but merely that in order to win there must a decided change in the personnel of the present Parliament."

.

Still going to school, boys and girls. Every day we try to absorb information that may come in handy in the future. That comment prefaces presentation of an assortment of facts that will prove good reading at any rate. These items, fourteen in number, we clipped from the Cincin Post:

KNOW IT?

"Eastport, Me., is the most easterly city in the United States.

"England leads in the manufacture of needles.

"Human spinal cord is about eighteen inches long.

"Nicaragua is almost exactly the size of New York State.

"Spanish soaproot, the soapberry of Chile and the bark of the Peruvian soap tree form natural soaps.

"New camera, making three exposures at once, is used in making maps from midair.

"Key West Fla., is reached by a railroad on trestle-work over the open sea.

"World's largest salmon canning factory is at South Bellingham, Washington.

"Since 1880 the United States and Canada have constructed 310,000 miles of surfaced roads.

"Rabbits have four toes on each of their hind feet and five on the others.

"Prairie Owls select the deserted burrows of prairie dogs for their nests.

"Depth of water under a vessel can now be ascertained by means of a hydrophone.

"Sale of candy in the United States since the advent of prohibition has doubled in value.

"Twenty-five million workers have defective vision requiring correction."

.

"Old King Cole was a merry old soul." And his successors would be merry too if it were not for the habit of pencil pushers who jot down pertinent facts for future reference. Why all this, you say? Well, you see that a few months ago Mr. J. D. A. Morrow, vice-president of the National Coal Association, testified before the Interstate Commerce Commission that, the average selling price of bituminous coal in the United States in October, 1921, was $10.41 a ton, and that the miners' share for producing that ton was $1.97. That, as you will observe, leaves a nice bit of small change amounting to $8.44, which slips off or sneaks off somewhere between the mine and the consumer, and we would wonder, if our wonder mechanism was not over-taxed, where the thunder that $8.44 hung up its hat. You see, the miner does not get it, and neither does that part of the population classed as the consumer, so it must be that—oh, pshaw, these convulsive problems get our nanny.

.

ARABS FROWN ON WHISTLING.

The Arabs have a proverb that, after whistling, the mouth is not purified for 40 days. They regard it as the most unlucky sign that can emanate from human lips.

We clipped that from the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Tribune, and we rise to ask what does an Arab do when he is passing a cemetery, "when graves yawn and ghosts walk?" Another thing: How does an Arab call his dog, or ain't they no such animals in Arabia?

.

One of the New York papers printed the following several months ago; the clipping came to us without memorandum or letter, the delay in offering due to an effort to locate the sender and secure the completed article:

Burglars are stealing twelve times as much as they were ten years ago, and embezzlers are embezzling four and one-half times as much. The figures showing the increase in crimes during ten years, and particularly during the two prohibition years, are as follows:

	Embezzlement	Burglaries
1910.....	$1,396,087	$886,045
1913.....	2,030,202	1,298,588
1918.....	3,060,348	2,964,790
(Prohibition Years)
1919.....	$4,663,604	$5,660,305
1920.....	5,623,819	10,189,854

(Note that the great increases occur in two years, as compared with the smaller increases in intervals of five years).

Of course the "dear brothers" who gather around the long table at Westerville, Ohio, will frown upon these furious figures. They have a penchant to frown on anything which remotely suggests that the Eighteenth Amendment is "fool's gold." "Mah-jah" Haynes and his busy pencil pushers managed to get the front page in some of the Sahara sheets recently, he boasting that the prohibition enforcement was paying its own way. Editor Frederick Stowe of the Peoria ((Illinois) Transcript, under date of March 20, 1922, slit a hole in the curtain and made it possible for the calculators to get a peep at how some of the "enforcement expenses" are being shifted onto the backs of taxpayers in the several states. The editorial covering that point and a few other phases follows:

LYING ABOUT LAW ENFORCEMENT.

A few months ago, Commissioner of Prohibition Haynes came to Chicago and, after making an "official survey of the situation" announced the Volstead act was being generally enforced and that all statement to the contrary were founded on ignorance or inspired by wet propagandists.

Attorney General Daugherty now asks States Attorney Crowe of Cook County, and states attorneys of other Illinois counties to handle liquor cases. According to his representative, Mr. Crim, the federal courts in the northern Illinois districts are so congested with Volstead cases that they never can be tried. Presumably, the department of justice is preparing to unload on counties in other states. If unloading were merely a matter of sentiment, no objection could be found to the transfer of authority, but the trial of liquor cases in Chicago involves a tremendous expense which Cook County taxpayers will be loath to undertake.

It was inevitable that the process of federalizing everything under the sun would reach the point of precipitation. Industrial, agricultural and social blocs have been making regular runs to Washington for years. Enactment of the Adamson law in September, 1916, was notice to reformers that Washington was the easiest mark in the country and that a cause which was so lame that it could not hope to prevail in a city, county or state, would have no difficulty in engaging the low hurdles at the national capital.

To the extent that the dries constitute a special class, they have suffered more from the foolish optimism of their own leaders than from propaganda of the wets. In 1919, the Chicago referendum on the question, "Shall Chicago become anti-alcohol territory?" gave a vote of 70,165 men and 77,014 women "yes" and 276,817 men and 129,373 women "no."

In that year, the city was wet four to one among the men and two to one among the women. There is no evidence that the ratio of preference has changed since 1919. If violation of the liquor laws were isolated, the situation would at least be tolerable, but open flouting of the liquor laws has led to contempt for all law with the result that Chicago is undergoing a species of terrorism unparalleled in its history.

It was argued against the liquor laws in the early days of prohibition that the poor man would be deprived of his beer while the rich would replenish their cellars at will and be immune from the penalties of the law. This prediction has been fulfilled. Lying about law enforcement may deceive citizens who lead sheltered lives and who are neither too bigoted or disinterested to obtain the facts, but it does not mislead the man in the street.

Much that passes for lawlessness is due, not to contempt for the law, but the bitter resentment against class administration. Putting the lid on beer and taking it off whiskey is bad political psychology when the majority of drinkers crave beer.

The public demands uniformity in all legislation as the condition for compliance, and the sooner champions of law enforcement recognize this principle, the sooner the tide of lawlessness will recede.

.

Just to make the topic stick in your mind for a moment, peruse the bit which follows, clipped from the Portland (Me.) Press-Herald of recent date:

HALE AND HEARTY, GOING STRONG.

Prohibition passed its sixty-eighth birthday in Maine some time ago, but it is still an absorbing topic of discussion among all classes and on all occasions.

What did you say? We have a vision obscured by a barrel? Maybe so. One thing is sure as shooting: When we had license laws in operation and one could polish a foot rail, we had steady employment and a fair amount of pesos in the old sock. Besides that our local unions were not scared stiff every time that the boss called up the secretary, fearing that he wanted to talk about "reducing overhead" via a ruction of employers or a slither from the wages paid. Cheer up, boys and girls, there is more real work being done for the return of good times and good beer than you have any idea of. All you need do is see to it that you are registered, that your vote nails one of the Anti-Saloon League collar wearers, so that he can return to his dear, dear brethren in the back woods and heal his seared soul with several stanzas of Glory Hallelujah.

* *

Speaking about barrels a moment ago. You've often heard about fellows having to go home in a barrel. Well, here is a sure-enough news story of one who did:

THIS MAN REALLY DID WALK HOME IN A BARREL.

(International News Service.)

Akron, O., March 10.—"The humorists may find it a huge joke for a man to walk home in a barrel, but not for me. Never again."

This is the view of C. A. Howiler, basket ball player. When taking part in a game last night, Howiler left his "good togs" in the ballroom and donned his athletic suit. When he came back his store clothes were gone. Search failed to reveal the garments. Friends found a rain barrel, knocked out the bottom and Howiler walked home in it.

* *

Before Will Hays surrendered his keys to his successor and accepted that nice paying proposition by the movie interests, he turned the following bit of information loose for the benefit of those who regard the post office from a two cent stamp point of view:

THE BIG POSTAL BUSINESS.

Postmaster Hays says that the United States Post-office department is the largest distinctive business in the world, with 326,000 employees and 110,000,000 customers. It spends $600,000,000 annually, and last year it delivered more than 12,000,000,000 letters and packages.

Some business institution, eh? Items of that kind are interesting as well as educational, and that is one of the purposes of these monthly surveys—to spread information, to teach to the best of our ability.

* *

Speaking of education, here is a local news item clipped from the Times-Star of March 10, 1922. You who do not value the opportunity of obtaining an education may find something to change your view in the following:

From Douglas School, Walnut Hills comes a striking report on the manner in which public night school pupils are attempting to cover the cost of textbooks. The school was very quiet after the teacher had explained about the $3 as-essment. Finally one old mother, with furrowed face, hobbled up to the desk and put her shabby pocketbook in the teacher's hand and said: "This is all the money I have, but I have learned how to write home to my folks, and it is worth it." The teacher turned to the next scholar, the most faithful of her younger pupils. He asked for a week or two to get his money, as he only had work two days a week and it was hard to keep his sick wife and young baby from want. One after another the pupils expressed their desire to "keep faith" and their willingness to pay as soon as possible.

A young woman in the Eighth grade was asked if she was prepared to pay her deposit of $3 as a pledge of good faith for regular attendance. She answered: "I am very tired tonight. I worked as a shirt finisher. I have finished 225 shirts today. I must finish 800 shirts each week to earn a livelihood. Yes, I am willing to deposit the money and forget the day's work, in order to accomplish my aim."

In another case a woman past three-score and five, when informed that all night school pupils would be required to make a deposit of $3, said: "I don't know whether I can come any more. I must first ask my son. You see, he supports me, and with all his other responsibilities, I'm not sure if he'll be able to pay for me."

The next evening she returned with beaming face and happy. Her son would pay! He had found a way.

And to think that the United States Congress appropriates millions of dollars to keep a lot of soft-handed pulpsters on the pay roll for the purpose of keeping good decent wage earning men from having a real glass of good beer, and these poor people, working all day, going to night school trying to be a credit to themselves and their chosen country. Say it, say it! For you can't make it any stronger than the little guy that is writing this stuff. But asbestos paper is not good for printers ink stunts.

* *

Readers who have perused their MIXER AND SERVER for years will recall an article we printed from the Oregon Labor Press a few years ago, in which "Billy" Sunday was given several severe wallops. The writer of that article left no reason to doubt that he believed "Billy" Sunday was a ballyhoo man for the House of Coin. A few months previously, we had directed attention to the fact that "Billy" Sunday managed his visits to such good purpose that he was in a town just before, during a strike or, shortly after one had been called. "You all," as they say over in West Virginia, know that the miners have been having more than their share of trouble in the State that made the stogie famous. Well, "Billy" Sunday was in Charleston, W. Va., and so the press made report goes, was invited to address the United Mine Workers of the Kanawha district. "Bully Billy" took advantage of the situation to try and dissuade the organized miners to "get away from the demand for a six-hour day and a five-day week." Every man and woman who has had a chance to read the newspapers is aware of the fact that the United Mine Workers are backing the six-hour day and the five-day week for the very definite purpose of making it possible for the miners to get steady employment. Yet "Bully Billy," with the remnants of a left fielder's glove to think with, could not seem to make good for the Coal Barons, if he did not push something over which would be read by the average mental light weight, and forthwith they would arrive at the conclusion that the mine workers were endeavoring to pull something that they should leave alone.

Three days after, the newspapers carried the following item about "Billy" Sunday and what he said to the miners. Peruse it with care and see if you can see where the hunk of green cheese was clipped from the moon:

"BILLY" SUNDAY TO HIT MOUNTAIN TRAIL MONDAY.

(International News Service.)

Huntington, W. Va., March 24.—Billy Sunday will hit the mountain trail Monday. E. L. Bock, general superintendent of the Chesapeake & Ohio, said use of free train, consisting of President Harahan's private car and other equipment, had been tendered gratis to Billy Sunday, appearing in Charleston, for a flying trip through Summers, Greenbrier and Fayette Counties, Monday. Bock said Monday's trip will be the second time in rail history that a railroad corporation joined in a religious crusade. The Louisville & Nashville road extended Sunday use of a train for a run through the Cumberland mountains.

Say, you fellows way back in the nickel seats, did you ever hear of a railroad company tendering a special train to any one without knowing beforehand that they would "get theirs" somewhere along the route? Will the brothers and sisters turn to page 13 and sing that beautiful song, entitled "There's a sucker born every minute in your town, but none in ours"?

First class in antecedents will wrassle with the question: "What's doin' on the C. & O. and the L. & N.?"

On the same page with a cartoon which depicted the law-making chamber at Washington, one of the "peoples' voice" doing an acrobatic speaking stunt, others of his associates perusing that very popular booklet known as "How to Make Your Own Home Brew," and beneath the whole, three smaller views of Congressman So and So's cellar, Senator So and So's cellar, and Governor So and Co's cellar, we find the following editorial as a companion piece. Oh, yes, scissored from the Seattle Star of March 20, 1922:

FOREIGNERS CALL US HYPOCRITES.

What do you think is the upstanding impression of a foreigner visiting this country nowadays for the first time?

Is it one of wonder at our splendid, ultra-modernity? No. Is it amazement at our tall buildings? No. Is it bewilderment at the pace we set in everything we do? No. Is it admiration for our governmental institutions, our theaters, our literature, our art? It is none of these.

It is one shock over what they call our hypocrisy—of not practicing what we preach. It is stupefaction that a "dry" country could possibly be so "wet."

The charge of hypocrisy is not wholly without foundation.

"Prohibition doesn't prohibit," is one of the trite sayings of the day. Another is: "The whole thing's a joke—everybody makes a farce of it."

And these bromides are true.

"Oh, well," many exclaim, "the country doesn't want prohibition so there's no use trying to enforce such a law."

Leaving entirely aside the assumption that the country does not want the law, such reasoning is fundamentally wrong.

All law should be enforced. If good law, enforcement proves it up; if bad law, enforcement kills it more quickly than anything else. Public sentiment does the work.

Winking at the violation of any law is vicious and poisons respect for all law on the part of the public.

So we need not expect to get very far with this prohibition business so long as many of our law-makers and enforcers pay lip-service to the Volstead law in public and to the bootlegger's jug everywhere else.

How to overcome hypocritical leanings. That's the big question of the hour. The following from a recent number of Forbes makes a dent which may attract the attention of those who need the lesson:

"What one thing does the world need most today—apart, that is, from that all-inclusive thing we call righteousness? Aren't you inclined to agree with the poet that what this old world needs is 'just the art of being kind?' Every time I visit a factory or any other large business concern, I find myself trying to diagnose whether the atmosphere is one of kindness or the reverse. And somehow, if there is palpably lacking there a spirit of kindness, I can not help feeling that the owners, or the executives, have fallen short of achieving twenty-four-karat success no matter how imposing the financial balance sheet may be. Don't these lines sum up, briefly yet comprehensively, what the world needs today?

A little more kindness and a little less creed;
A little more giving and a little less greed;
A little more smile and a little less frown;
A little less kicking a man when he's down;
A little more "we" and a little less "I";
A little more laugh and a little less cry;
A little more flowers on the pathway of life;
And fewer on graves at the end of the strife."

The following, though a little late, contains food for reflection; in fact, the conditions referred to as affecting the hotel chambermaid, describes in part the surroundings of the women workers in the dining rooms of the small town hotels. The editorial is from the New York Globe, of February 18, 1922:

THE LOT OF THE CHAMBERMAID.

What a hotel chambermaid thinks about is revealed in an article by a follower of that occupation, writing in the February issue of the World To-Morrow. Her thoughts are not notably pleasant.

She works eight hours a day, seven days a week, and six hours at night every third day—all for $25 a month and room and board. Her regular eight hours include cleaning sixteen rooms and sixteen baths every day. The women guests, if they notice her at all, give her cast-off clothing, withered bouquets, empty candy boxes, and occasional tips. The male of the species is given to improper proposals, which, since "the guest is always right," may not be reported to the management. Worst of all, this chambermaid says, is the isolation which comes from the system of "living in". The girls find it difficult to make friendships outside the hotel, usually have no place to receive callers, and enjoy practically no social life whatever. Being unable to put roots down into the soil anywhere, these women drift readily from city to city.

The picture drawn here is so gloomy that the casual reader will find it difficult to accept it in toto. During the war and for some time thereafter there was such a shortage of domestic workers that it is hard to believe the hotels could have kept their staffs even partly full if conditions were characterized by such unrelieved gloom as is suggested. Moreover, there is no indication that the situation outlined is typical of all hotels today. There is hardly an occupation at the present time which is not marked by the presence of at least a few enlightened employers who get a grim pleasure from showing their fellows that a square deal for the workers is not incompatible with a prosperous "going concern." Nevertheless, the existence of such conditions as are described in this article, even in part of the country's hotels, is a serious and sorry enough business. In a long run America doesn't want prosperity in the hotel or any other business which is paid for by girl employees.

The cure for all the ills which workers are afflicted with is organization. Hotel maids have been organized in several of the live cities of America and they are obtaining results which count for something.

The following we clip from the Cleveland Citizen of March 25, 1922:

The first union of Chinese workers is announced from Oakland, Cal., where those who are employed as butchers organized and affiliated with the Rank and File Federation, an independent organization that is attempting to obtain foothold on the coast.

Churchmen who investigate, who study results of organization, generally arrive at a similar conclusion, as expressed by Archbishop Michael J. Curley in the following press item from Baltimore of recent date:

UNIONISM BENEFITS SOCIETY; UNORGANIZED DO NOTHING.

Baltimore.—Organized labor is "altogether responsible" for better work conditions and unorganized labor has done "absolutely nothing" declared Archbishop Michael J. Curley in an address before the convention of the Maryland State and District of Columbia Federation of Labor in this city.

The clergyman plainly indicated where he stood on the question of union labor, which he insisted was responsible for gains made by the workers. He also indicated that he had little regard for workers who enjoyed these benefits, but did not assist in maintaining them.

"Union labor," he said, "is absolutely responsible for the better conditions under which work is being done today. Union labor has brought down the reforms in regard to child labor and woman labor. Unions are true friends of humanity and no menace, as they have been called. They have rendered splendid and effective service for the betterment of mankind.

"What has unorganized labor done? Absolutely nothing.

"Speaking for myself, I believe that labor has the right to share in the profits of an enterprise when the profits are large enough to justify it, and I believe that in some cases, although it is a delicate matter to adjust, labor ought to be permitted to take part in the regulation of enterprise. By labor I mean union labor."

If perchance you have been unable to convert that non-union worker whose application you have been seeking for several weeks, perhaps you may jar him a bit by reading to him the following, clipped from the San Diego (Cal.) Labor Leader:

ORGANIZED WORKERS ALONE RAISE WAGES.

"Why should I join a union," he asked. "Don't I get the same wages you do? Don't I get the same hours? What is your union doing for you in return for the dues you pay?"

"My dear sir," replied the unionist, "do you realize how and from where you derive the opportunity to work under the conditions you refer to? Do you imagine wages are generally increased and working days made shorter willingly by the employer? Do you believe the workers would ever have come out of slavery and serfdom through the generosity of the man who employed them? You certainly know better than that. You know very well that you owe your present wages, your more reasonable hours of toil, your very position in the world today to those who in the past have organized and paid dues; to those who have withstood the discouragements and hardships of strikes, lockouts and the combined attacks of employing interests.

"With all due respect to any feelings you may have, you are a coward to continue benefiting by the battles which the members of organized labor have fought unless you personally and by your means assist in the fight that is constantly necessary not only to gain still better conditions but to preserve the conditions already gained."

Well, here is a little bit that we respectfully call to the attention of a few members who persist in assuring us that the word "Jew" was used in a derisive sense. Nothing to it, fellers. Here is a brief item which says we were right. The man referred to in the following is one of the best known Jewish scholars in America. The item was printed January 5, 1922, in the Times-Star:

"JEW" PROPER DESIGNATION.

Neither Hebrew nor Israelite, but Jew, is the proper designation for followers of Judaism, declared Dr. David Phillipson in an address at the Rockdale Center Temple Wednesday night. Dr. Phillipson explained in interesting fashion the origin of the three terms. He related that Abram's descendants were called Hebrews; that the term Israelite is distinctly a national designation, and that the word Jew, coming from Judaism, is all comprehensive in that it includes all members of the faith.

Evidently the Chamber of Commerce of the United States is hearing from some of its units who are not quite satisfied with the Anti-Union crusade, who, in fact, are beginning to realize that it was well paid organized workmen and working women that purchased the goods that they had for sale, that the non-union worker is a poor customer and still poorer prospect. Inspired articles attempting to show the Chamber of Commerce did not attempt an anti-union campaign when they propelled the alleged American Plan into the ring. Denials from the higher ups and laying the blame on the alleged busybodies of the Chamber of Commerce is indicative of what these bullyraggers are trying to do. The American Federation of Labor does not propose to let them get away with the goods. It is going to peg all of them and is asking the co-operation of all trades unionists, via the following questionnaire, which bares date of March 21, 1922:

To National and International Unions, State Federations of Labor and City Central Bodies.

Greetings: Under instruction of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor, the undersigned has been directed to gather all possible information relating to Chambers of Commerce and their attitude toward organized labor.

It will be of material assistance if you will at the earliest possible moment furnish replies to the following questions:

1. Have you any evidence to show that the Chamber of Commerce in your city attempts to determine the attitude of its members toward organized labor?

2. Have you evidence to show that the Chamber of Commerce in your city is connected with any national or local movement for the so-called American plan or the so-called open shop?

3. Has the Chamber of Commerce in your city supported employers in cases of lock-out or strike?

4. Have you evidence that the Chamber of Commerce in your city has furnished funds in any campaign against organized labor?

5. Have you any evidence that the Chamber of Commerce has interfered with, influenced or prevented employers from entering into agreements with the trade and labor unions?

6. Has the Chamber of Commerce in your city inspired or participated in or encouraged public meetings the purpose of which was hostile to labor?

7. Can you give names of members of the Chamber of Commerce in your city.

8. If you can not give the complete membership of the Chamber of Commerce, will you give the names and business connections of the president and others officers, including the directors or other executive officers?

9. Has the Chamber of Commerce influenced banking and other financial institutions to refuse credit to employers because they had agreements with labor organizations?

It will be greatly helpful if you will give the information requested in this letter on separate sheets of paper, each dealing with the information asked upon each subject.

It is important that this information be forwarded as completely as possible and as quickly as possible.

The information secured in reply to the above questions will be in turn furnished to you and to the entire labor movement. In addition, the widest possible publicity will be given to the material gathered and it is earnestly urged that you in your own locality use every possible effort to give local publicity to all authentic material in your possession, bearing upon this whole subject. If possible and if it appears advisable in your locality public meetings should be held for the discussion of this general subject.

Fraternally yours,

SAMUEL GOMPERS,

President, American Federation of Labor.

If your Central Labor Union or Trades Council has not given heed to the request of President Gompers as outlined in the foregoing, it is your move. Have your delegates instructed and furnish the information as soon as possible. We are betting a union made cigar that when the returns are all in the survey supplied by President Gompers will be decidedly interesting.

"Adam had one advantage. The first robin didn't fool him into taking 'em off," says the Buffalo Evening News. And by the same token, boys and girls, don't quit that good job just because the sun has been shining for a few days. But if you must let the Spring Fever have its way, by all means see to it that a member in good standing is eased into the place that you are leaving. If all of us would keep that idea in mind, seeing to it that a member is called upon to fill vacancies, the new jobs that come up can be cared for without a great deal of effort. Here's hoping that you are feeling "just fine" after the frigid period—feeling good enough to test your powers of persuasion on a few non-affiliated catering industry workers, and that during the base ball season you will at every opportunity regard each home run of your favorite stickler as a call to you to get a new member for your local union. Here is where I transfer. See you next month. Thank you for your presence during the trip.

JAY-ELL-Ess.

80-8-18-7--83-8-88-13-8-18

THE DITCH.

By HARWOOD SMEETH.

There was once a man who wished a ditch dug. The ditch would lead water to a barren field and enable the man to grow food, which would have Value. The man, inasmuch as he was in the market for work, was a Customer.

There was another man who dug ditches for a livelihood. He was strong and robust, and he was a Laborer. The Laborer was a good ditch-digger, but he could not lay out a straight line.

There was a third man who was possessed of that unique faculty of being able to lay out a straight line and figure such metaphysical things as slopes and angles. He could plan things in the future; so he was an Executive. Being an Executive, he could not do manual labor himself; so he was an Employer.

These three men got together.

Said the Executive, "Give me the contract to put through your ditch, and I'll be responsible the work is done right."

Said the Laborer, "I'll work for this man," indicating the Executive, "but I must be paid every night."

Said the Customer, "That's for you and your Employer to settle. I'll give you the contract," to the Executive, "and you must take responsibility for the work and for your Laborer's pay."

"Very well," replied the Executive, "I must have 25 per cent of the contract price before I start and 25 per cent in advance for each quarter as the work progresses."

"That's impossible," said the Customer, "because until my fields produce I shall have no money, and my fields cannot produce until the ditch is dug."

The Executive scratched his head. "This is awkward," he murmured. "What with the Hard Times brought on by Inflated Currency and Over-extended Credit I can't afford to pay our friend here until I get my money from you."

"I guess I'd better be looking for another job," said the Laborer. "My family insists on eating."

"It seems strange," remarked the Customer absently. "Here we are, we three. Between us we combine all the essential elements for the production of Wealth. I shall work my field when my ditch is dug; you are willing to execute my commission with your ability to superintend the direction and the slope of my ditch; and you are only too willing to work with your strong arms. Yet, with all these elements, we cannot produce any Wealth."

From this discourse it will be observed that the Customer was a Philosopher, which is a long word with an un-American derivation meaning what Business Men mean when they say "Impractical Theorist," "Crazy Idealist," or the simpler "Blank Fool."

As the Customer mused along and the Executive moodily watched the Laborer preparing to seek work elsewhere, a fourth figure appeared on the scene. He was a portly man, very dignified of carriage, dressed with meticulous care. He carried himself as one accustomed to rule the world. From all this it is quite obvious he was a Banker.

"Good morning," he said cheerfully.

The Executive nodded gloomily but said nothing.

"We're considering an interesting problem," said the Customer pleasantly. "I want a ditch dug. These two men are willing to undertake the contract, but we are hampered by lack of Funds. We have all the essential elements to produce Wealth, but we cannot get started."

"Ah, my friend," said the Banker genially. "You err. You have all the essential elements but one. You lack Capital."

"You mean," inquired the Customer, in what threatened to become his Philosopher's tone, "that it takes Capital to produce Wealth?"

"You have a sly sense of humor," chuckled the Banker. He enjoyed this joke. "As if everybody didn't know that!" He laughed aloud; and, as the joke grew on him, he slapped the Customer on the back. "You sly dog," he cried, the tears running down his cheeks, "you are a funny one!"

"But," said the Laborer, "what about me? I dig the ditch."

"And me?" put in the Executive.

"You both come in, certainly," said the Banker with an airy wave of the hand. "But without me the world would stand still. You see it in your case. It is a generous act on my part to allow this ditch to be dug, for that is what I contemplate doing. All because of that laugh you treated me to," he added, turning to the Customer.

"You mean that you will help us out?" asked the Executive eagerly. He wanted the work badly.

"Yes," said the Banker, throwing out his chest and assuming an attitude of benevolent magnificence, "I'll let you have the money to finance this project, for I am convinced that yonder field will produce much Wealth—with my help."

"That is kind of you!" exclaimed the Executive.

He did not ask where the Banker procured the money, nor did the Banker mention the fact that it was the money of thousands of Laborers, Executives, and Customers, just like the men in this tale, that he was going to divert to the unselfish and laudably patriotic service of rendering fertile the barren field of the Customer.

"It is my Duty to Society," said the Banker modestly.

"Then," cried the Customer, elated, "let us get started at once. Roll up your sleeves," to the Laborer, "and you get out your instruments. Let us waste no more time."

"One moment," said the Banker softly. "There is a little detail. We call it Interest; it is really Compensation for Risk."

"Compensation for Risk?" asked the Laborer, his sleeves half rolled up.

"Certainly," said the Banker blandly. "Am I not risking my Capital? If it weren't for me, you could not go ahead."

"There's truth in that," muttered the Laborer, doubtful, only half satisfied. He scowled thoughtfully at the Banker.

"What's the matter?" demanded the Banker. He was becoming excited. "Are you a Russian? Do you know this man?" excitedly turning to the Executive.

"I've employed him many times during the last ten years," said the Executive. "I have always found him a faithful and dependable worker."

"I suspect him," said the Banker, shaking his head. "Where's my Grand Jury?" He looked about him, but no one was in sight.

"I'm sure my friend the Laborer is all right," said the Executive. "You were saying, sir—"

The last word had a visible effect on the Banker. He quickly regained his former suavity.

"Ah, yes. I was speaking of Interest. A mere trifling matter of, say 6, 7, or 8 per cent. And of course I would have to be protected—remember the Risk to my Capital—" with a dark look at the Laborer, who was puzzling something in his head. "You would have to put up Security, say, your house and lot, your instruments, any tools you may have—and what else have you?"

"All that?" asked the Executive, somewhat surprised. "What is this Security for?"

"I must be protected. The State laws demand it. Of course I'd like to lend it to you unsecured, but we are limited—surely you understand."

"Then," said the Executive, turning to the Customer, "I must have more money for my work. It seems I must endanger my house and all my worldly possessions in order to dig this ditch you want dug. I must also Compensate our friend the Banker for his Risk, and what I had figured as my Compensation for doing this work barely covers the Interest I must pay him, and takes no account of the Risk I run of losing all my worldly possessions should there be some accident."

"In that case," said the Customer, "I must charge more for the produce from my field."

"Then I'll have to pay more for my food," said the Laborer. "You must pay me more money," to the Executive.

"In that case, I must increase my charge to you again," said the Executive to the Customer.

"And that will add to my—"

"One moment," said the Banker. His voice was not so pleasant as it had been. "You can't increase your wages. You Laborers are getting too much already."

"But we can't live on what we're getting," grumbled the Laborer. "We have to pay the same Big Prices for everything. For several months my principal item of diet was words, and the toughest was 'Deflation'."

"Now you're talking about things you don't know anything about," said the Banker irritably. "The long and short of the matter is this: What I say goes. If you don't want to do this job on my terms, say so. I can find plenty of other places to put my money. But if I put it into this job, because of my warm personal relations with the Executive here, I put it in with the understanding that there is no raise in wages. Come to think of it, I don't think you'd better raise your price to the Customer," he said to the Executive. "We must Liquidate all Costs. We can't afford to have the Customer raising the price of food any more."

"But my Profit—" began the Executive.

"There is plenty of room for your Profit between the 6 per cent I shall charge you and what you get over the Laborer's wages."

"And my Risk," said the Executive.

"I don't see how you figure that," said the Banker coldly. "It's my Capital you're using. I don't see that you have a worry in the world. Come to the Bank tomorrow and I'll have the papers ready."

The hoot of a klaxon was heard down by the road. The Banker said goodbye cordially, and hurried to his expensive foreign touring car. The other men walked slowly home.—The Nation, March 22, 1922.

80-8-18.-7.-83-8-83-13-8-15

THE UNKNOWN.

By MRS. T. H. HASSEY.

A SKETCH IN TWO SCENES.

Place—Portland, Ore.

Time—New Year's Eve, 1921.

The action takes place in the Journal office, where a bevy of sparkling girls remain behind the counter to take in the "ads." The last girl from the entrance is Ivy Robbins. She is twenty, very fair, beautiful to the eye and gentle to the ear. It is 4:00 p. m.; all the girls are busy writing out the "ads" for persons who stream in all day. Ivy alone is now standing with nothing to do. Alfred Burch, the city reporter, comes through the main entrance. He is holding the door open so his friend, Leland Willard, may fall in line with him. Alfred leads, going direct to Ivy's station.

Al—"Hello, Peaches-and-Cream!"

Ivy—"Hello your own good self. Have ye kissed the Blarney stone lately?"

Al—"Miss Robbins, shake hands with Mr. Willard."

Le—"Very pleased, indeed."

Ivy—"Related to the big Jess Willard?"

Le—"No; not a famous one in the family."

Ivy—"Mr. Burch, here is your chance to become press agent."

Al—"Not a chance in the world! The Big Chief just told me to go out and get a story or get fired on the spot. By Joe, I have it! Ivy, you can help me get a story. My, to think how easily I might have lost this chance—chance of a lifetime."

Le—"Now, that is interesting."

Ivy—"Please tell us, Alfred; we are just dying to hear about it."

Al (to Willard)—"You remember me mentioning that McGee expects to win the fight tonight and on the strength of it to carry off our little Peaches-and-Cream, Ivy Robbins, right here before our very eyes."

Ivy—"That's the way I have been putting him off for several weeks. I told him I would wait until after his fight with the Unknown. That unknown has been having its effects on me."

Al—"Here is what I ask you to do for me, Ivy. I want you to tell me you will marry the man who wins the fight. That will be some story; and how do we know but what you will? Mr. Willard knows the Unknown as well as any man. Wonder what you think he thinks about it?"

Le—"He would jump right in, win the fight and claim the prize."

Ivy—"Suppose he liked some other girl better than he did me?"

Le—"Impossible. He knows the real thing when he sees it."

Al—"You don't want me to get fired, Ivy?"

Ivy (beginning to yield)—"Tell me, what is he like?"

Le—"He is an instructor; and is the absolute winner of the fight. He has ideals, too. He doesn't like to punish, and he never enjoys striking a blow. He loves music, fine pictures, clean minds in clean wholesome bodies. His main reason for this match is because there have been complaints coming into the athletic clubs about McGee. And he has been sent to see whether he fights fair or otherwise."

Ivy—"What does he look like?"

Al (studying Willard's face)—"Well, I should call him handsome."

Le (laughing)—"I bar the personal description."

Al—"He has teeth like pearls; is tall, and it's his laugh that wins one. You can imagine the sound of twenty large golden hoops running into each other. They would make a golden, molten tone. Well, that is it. [Willard turns his back to Al.] But he sometimes needs a lesson in good manners." (Willard turns back laughing.)

Ivy—"Really, Alfred, I'm beginning to be far more interested in your friend Mr. Willard than either the Unknown or McGee." (After this bold statement she blushes becomingly and one makes a mental note of how very nearly she resembles a Royal Ann cherry.)

Le—"Can it be that I have come three thousand miles to be favored by the gods? But that would be taking an unfair advantage of two men in the ring at ten o'clock this evening."

Al—"Come, Ivy, say the word, please."

Ivy—"Very well, you may say it; but then, just the same, I'm going to marry for love." (Al begins his story. Willard and Ivy now edge up nearer the entrance.)

Le—"Love, ah, ha ha! Love, and silent friends in the form of books. I've spent oodles of time wishing for such things. Do you believe in wishing?"

Ivy—"Yes, indeed! You and I have been wishing for the same thing. Down in her subconscious self every woman wishes to have a home; and to love the one man and to be beloved of him."

Al—"I have changed my mind about the story. I have a hunch. I seem to see two of my friends—one a Mr. Willard and the other Miss Robbins—in love and happily married."

Ivy—"A very beautiful dream, I'm sure."

Le (shaking hands with her)—"Here is hoping it comes to pass."

Al—"See here, Ivy, I'll tell the Missus that you are coming there after you're off duty. And at eleven o'clock we are going to dine at the Hazelwood. McGee, the Unknown and other interested friends will be there to watch the old year out."

Ivy—"That's lovely of you! Whatever would I do without two such dear, good friends as the Burch's?"

Le—"We will meet you and greet you, and hail in the New Year. And we'll tell you that the Unknown has won the fight."

Al (leading the way out)—"Come, Leland. Bye-bye, Ivy."

Le (putting on his gloves with lingering determination)—"You would not fail me now? I'll be thinking of you until we meet after the fight to-night."

Ivy (looking into his eyes, searching his face)—"I know you; I have known you for ages and ages it seems. Alfred is waiting. Go. I'll be thinking of you, too." (Willard smiles and follows Alfred out.)

SECOND SCENE.

The same evening, Hazelwood Restaurant. The place is filled with guests. Mrs. Burch and Ivy are seated at a table in a secluded corner. Mrs. Burch is a quiet little woman. She has large eyes, is thoughtful and hesitates before replying. She is twenty-eight years old.

Ivy—"It is nearly eleven. I hope they will be here soon. Do you think I look as well in this dress as the blue one?"

Mrs. B.—"You are just as pretty as a peach. Alfred always calls you Peaches. That's because you are unusually pretty. My Alfred knows what he is talking about."

Ivy—"Do you think he will like me more and more as time passes?"

Mrs. B.—"How can he help it? [Looking toward the door] "Here they come, now."

Ivy—"Let us rise so they will know where we are. [They both stand.] Le, I mean Mr. Willard, has seen us. We can sit down again." (They sit.)

Le (Le leads and is followed by McGee and Alfred)—"Ladies, here we are. Mr. McGee, please introduce the Unknown to the ladies."

McG.—"I refuse. They know you are the Unknown."

Ivy—"Honestly, I did not know. Still I felt uncertain about it."

Le—"Mr. McGee, let me introduce you to my future bride."

McG. (good-naturedly)—"I'm a loser all around. But I wish you luck. I'm out of the fight game. I'm disqualified."

Ivy—"Honestly?"

Le—"We are not going to mention a word about it. His disadvantage seems to be my advantage. And, I am willing to take his word that he is not going to fight again. If it had not been for him I would not have been in Portland tonight. And I would have crept on all fours to meet the future Mrs. Willard."

Mrs. B.—"I have ordered a good supper. Take off your coats, gentlemen."

McG.—"If you don't mind, I'd rather go home. I was badly punished by you, Mr. Willard."

Le—"I hate that sort of thing. I'm going to quit, too. I'm going to go into the newspaper game. If you feel that way, we are all willing to let you go. [McGee rises to go. Ivy hangs her head and his dejected appearance puts a damp blanket over the supper. He goes out. The waiter brings water. As soon as he has gone interest is restored.] He has a fine body. What in the world makes a man a fraud when he is equipped with the real punch? He didn't believe in himself. All the time fooling himself. Are you satisfied, Ivy?"

Ivy—"If you are."

Al—"The end of a perfect day and the beginning of a New Tremendous Year."

Mrs. B.—"All is well that ends well. Ivy, now you are an engaged girl. You must never break hearts any more."

Le—"Only mine, Ivy, dear. Here is the supper; I'm hungry as a bear."

[END]

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

OLD-TIME DISHWASHER IS GONE FROM S. F.; MODERN HELPER MAN OF MEANS WHO ENJOYS HIS LIFE.

The dishwasher has become extinct in San Francisco.

Phoenixlike, however, he arises from the dead ashes of his past to a resplendent new life as a cook's helper.

What's in a name?

Ask Price, secretary of the Cooks' Helpers' Union, with headquarters in Kearny street, who, when I asked for the dishwashers' union, as I had been directed so to do, gently chided me like some undertaker laying out the man of the house upon whom, unwittingly, I had called for speech.

Ask Bowns, business agent, whose life is aflame to the end that the name of dishwasher shall be expunged forever from labor records, and with it, forever, the opprobrium attached to the name.

The name of dishwasher became officially buried in labor circles of San Francisco, January 23, 1903.

On that day, under title of Cooks' Helpers' Union, the dishwasher received a separate charter, granting to him for the first time in his existence a voice in the management of his own affairs, and an equal representation in the American Federation of Labor, in local councils and in State and national conventions.

Under title of Cooks' Helpers' Union, the dishwashers of San Francisco became unique throughout the world. Later they acquired still more distinction when they added to the union kitchen help of all kinds—busboys, vegetable peelers, porters and the like.

CHARTER VERITABLE MAGNA CHARTA TO UNION.

The charter of January 23, 1903, is to the dishwashers a veritable Magna Charta.

However faithful in the discharge of his duties and steady to his job, the dishwasher was looked upon, from the chef to the most recently hired waiter, as a degraded being.

To the boss, he was little better than a feudal serf.

He worked at the will of the boss, seven days a week, twelve, fourteen, fifteen hours a stretch.

He was paid at the will of the boss—a dollar a day, a dollar and a half, at the utmost a dollar six bits.

But he ate—and ate his fill. Oh, happy thought! It was usually "Help yourself and if you don't like the way the cook prepared the food, prepare it yourself."

It was his only happy thought. It was the single lure to "the banner."

"The banner," in the vernacular, is a display sign in a window calling for the services of a dishwasher—usually indicating urgent need.

As Price puts it, and his case was typical of those days:

"I arrived in the city, hungry, out of funds, friends and a job. I saw a sign in the window of a restaurant, calling for a dishwasher. But the boss was in no greater hurry to get me than I was to get the dollar."

NECESSITY DROVE MEN TO TAKE UP DUTIES.

Not choice, but necessity, drove men of those days to seeking the work as dishwashers—life's wreckage, it flotsam and jetsam, its driftwood and derelicts—men through drink, drugs, extravagances; the rolling stone, such as Price had been; the too-independent man who, brooking no opposition, finally finds himself without opposition to brook; the men through no fault of their own, old men, sick men, idealists, college-bred men, misfits in the prevailing economic system.

The wreckage of every grade and walk of life, every trade, profession and business has had at some time or another some representation in dishwashing.

Out of it a few arose—the president of the largest commissary outfitting doing railroad work in this country; a noted labor leader and poet; a well-known labor writer; a world-famous cartoonist whose early efforts were expended upon the walls of a cheap restaurant in between "pearl-diving."

* * *

"Pearl diving" is the vernacular for the old hand washing of dishes. The dishes are scraped, and then submerged in a deep sink, filled with hot water and soap.

The expert does not look at the dishes. He must know when they are cleaned without looking. He cleans beneath the surface of the water, sorting the dishes into rows, washing them with a wave-like motion through the water, and bringing them with a single dextrous scoop of the hands, into huge piles upon the drain board.

TASK BECAME KNOWN AS "PEARL DIVING."

This diving down beneath the water and bringing up clean dishes, ironically became known as "pearl diving." And the expert "pearl diver" manipulated thousands of dishes a day in this fashion—and in the rush hours—with lightning-like rapidity.

The kitchens for the most part were badly ventilated and had wooden floors, the home of numerous rats.

Here all day long, as one man put it to me:

"With nothing for the head, and all for the hands, you stood all day long, with your head over the sink, think, think, thinking of the degradation that had befallen you, of the missteps that had led you here, of the ways and means of escape."

"The worst of it was," explained Price, "if you had any thoughts above your position, you finally began to lose confidence in yourself to step out into other lines, through it being drilled into you that you were a degraded being."

"From the moment you entered the kitchen, it was drilled into you that you were a degraded being, the chef, the waiter, every one who entered. The more careful and refined the upbringing, the more sensitive the man was. He soon lost confidence, even to graduate to the cook's range, although in slack hours, the cook off duty, part of the dishwasher's duty was to prepare the short orders.

SUCH WORK INVITES ONLY A FEW WOMEN.

Thus the mass of the men—the work being heavy invites few women—remained economic and social outcasts.

Only those who were married had any social life whatsoever.

The majority were unmarried men, who, exhausted after their day's work, reeking of kitchen odors, crawled into bed in some ill-ventilated room in a cheap lodging house, to arise before the dawn to the burden of his Augean stable of rats, dirty dishes, ill-ventilation, steaming soap suds, garbage cans and abuse.

Within their own ranks the rescue came—not those few who rose out into better things—but men like Price and Bowns who "came to themselves" as "The Drain Man" in "The Servant in the House."

Covered with muck, the "Drain Man" comes up from beneath the church where he has fixed the drain which has threatened the life of the community. He strikes his chest manfully, exclaiming "I'm sum't, I am." Upon his skill and knowledge alone has rested the lives of both high and low.

Price and Bowns told it to me in unison:

You wouldn't be safe, none of us, eating in any restaurant in the world, if it were not for the dishwasher. It is he who saves you from pneumonia, flue and worse disease. Ten minutes after a man carrying death and disease in his wake, has eaten, upon that same plate you, perhaps, eat. No restaurant in the world can afford to possess the thousands of dishes necessary to rush hours to furnish necessary service to each person.

So it was his calling was not only honorable and honest, but constructive, instinct with order and cleanliness, and high social service.

TO RANK ALONGSIDE MECHANIC WITH SKILL.

Moreover he was to be ranked with the mechanic. It requires skill in picking up dishes quickly yet with ability to get them clean without looking at each one, as he must. It requires unusual skill and alertness during the rush hours not to become swamped with the dirty dishes being brought to the sink from the out-going patron, and return at the same time a constant stream of clean dishes to the dining room, so as not to retard the service to the incoming patron.

The dishwasher, in very fact, was now working in the status of the mechanic—eight hours out of nine, and eating. This made him better off than the mechanic and even the cook.

The cook worked now eight hours straight without eating.

The mechanic must eat out of his wage, which was no mean item those days.

The dishwasher was getting $21, $24, $28, and in some instances $30 a week for eight hours labor in nine—and eating. The one hour off for eating was his time to be distributed as he saw fit.

These hard times, many a machinist, chauffeur, miner and the like had affiliated with the Cooks' Helpers' Union, maintaining their union cards, so in time of strike or stress, or grown tired of their own jobs, they could have profitable change. During the strike, it was a lucky thing for many of the mechanics that the Cooks' Helpers were unionized, so as to enable many of them to work as dishwashers and withstand the prolonged period of stress through their enforced idleness.

MEN OF ALL SIZES AND AGES IN OUTER OFFICE.

"Look outside," exclaimed Price. I was seated within the secretary's office. Through the small high window which separated the office from the main room could be seen men of all ages and sizes, young and old, stout and lean, all with a characteristic paleness, due I am told, to the constant indoor—seated about, some reading, others smoking, others conversing.

"Some of those men have $250 in the bank," said Price, "and that means they can pick and choose where they shall work. If conditions in the kitchen are not to their way of thinking, or the boss cranky, and hard to deal with, they can wait. It's no more the old hurry to get the dollar, which places you at the mercy of the boss."

Nor do they tramp the streets searching windows for a display of "the banner." The boss telephones his wants to the union headquarters, where, in turn, they are posted on a bulletin for all men out of work to come and read.

"It's the best laboring job today," summed up Bowns. "Not only does the dishwasher today command respect; he has the average skilled mechanic 'skinned' a mile, for he receives both wage and food—and the important item today is food."

EVEN TODAY NO ONE TAKES JOB FROM CHOICE.

"Yet for all that," stoutly maintained Price, "no man becomes even today a dishwasher from choice. Necessity still drives him to it. And he tends to remain and get in a rut through lack of confidence to work into anything else."

Here Bowns and Price were no more as one.

Bowns, with some acerbity, begged to differ from the secretary.

Every walk of life, declared Bowns—and he appealed to me to bear him out—had persons who tended to ruts and through lack of confidence never to work out into positions of advancement for which, often, they were more eminently fitted than the ones holding the positions.

The union recognized this weakness of men to get into ruts and were back of them whenever the least wish was manifest to get into something else. The union had so encouraged many a dishwasher to take the cook's range.

And he would show me men in numbers—and as fine an upstanding lot of men as could be seen anywhere—who were dishwashers from choice, if I would but make the rounds of the kitchens with him. He would show me chauffeurs, automobile repairers, one of whom possesses two automobiles; a song writer with song upon the market, who were dishwashers from choice.

Rounds of kitchens I made—kitchens with electric dishwashing machines, like electric bake ovens, from which the dishes emerged clean and sterilized like from the oven of an operating room.

KITCHENS HAVE CEMENT FLOORS AND ARE CLEAN.

The kitchens all have cement floors, a health ordinance, which has ruled out the old wooden floor because of the menace to the community from rats.

During the rush hour in another large kitchen, bus boys, waiters, dishwashers commingled as one. Five dishwashers, cleaning and scraping, intent upon their work, with not a lift of the eyebrow, so intense was the work, to return the dishes to the dining room, which kept pouring into them like lava from a volcano. The head dishwasher was particularly fine of bearing, intellectual, clean cut of face, with a note of authority which made him distinguishable from the chef, only by the white cap and apron of the chef.

"From choice," smiled Bowns, pleased at my delight in the bearing of the dishwasher, "and married"—fine family.

Bowns' supreme triumph, however, lay in a "pearl diver"—John, we will call him, for the reason it is not his name—who washes dishes in the kitchen of a coffee parlor on the water front.

John washes dishes from choice.

OFFERS BEST SOLUTION OF ECONOMIC PROBLEM.

Dishwashing today, he declares, offers the best solution to the economic problem for the gentleman and the scholar, whose energies are consumed in mere bread-getting, leaving nothing for proper rest and cultivation of the mind.

To such, he says, come and dishwash. Under union schedule, the hours are not exhausting, the pay excellent, with no worry on the food question, while the gentle monotony of the work soothes the nerves, and leaves the brain free after work to take up the cultivation of whatever the heart desires.

John is a graduate of an English university, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. He is an all-round newspaper man, versed in every department, editorial, advertising, type-setting, proof-reading. He owned and edited a journal in one of the mining towns of this State. As scholar and type-setter he was employed by the University of Stanford in getting out a botanical work and in instructing the students in proof-reading and correct English.

For many years he worked on the morning journals of this city, to which work he returns when he feels dish-washing has served his purposes for rest and study.

Last winter, under the beneficent reign of dishwashing, John pursued the study of Chinese together with four other courses in the University Extension. Likewise, he found time for the cultivation of his roses, and to bring to the state of perfection in fragrance a violet upon which he had long been experimenting.

"I have finally achieved a six days' fragrance," he said, "which no other violet has. I've had them tried out in the offices of several doctors and dentists I know, and they tell me all the patients remark upon the fragrance."

REACHES FOR ROSEBUD IN CUP OVER SINK.

He reached over the sink to the shelf, upon which stood a heavy china coffee cup, such as is used in the front of the house.

Out of it he took a rosebud, delicate in form and color. He held it up to the light, the better to admire it, before presenting it to me.

"It is from my garden," he said. "Last summer I realized $21.75 from the sale of my roses in and about the neighborhood."

John lives with his mother in Marin county, where he owns his own place, valued at $10,000.

To the average man only one drawback is to be found in dishwashing—that of social ostracism.

But to the scholar and the gentleman the ostracism is merely amusing. And John told with much amusement how he was sought after for his fine clothes and fine house until it was discovered he was dish-washing. Instantly he became a social pariah.

But had the coffee parlor a hand electric washer, such as I had seen in the waffle kitchen, then dish-washing to him would indeed be Nirvana.

HE LOVED MACHINERY, BUT ALSO HIS HOME.

He loved machinery, but the hours of the coffee parlor were more to his liking and the location nearer his home.

The waiters, in the meanwhile, had been rushing back and forth through the swinging doors, piling up dirty dishes.

"Type-setting is a great aid to dish-washing," John declared as he filled his sink with soapy water and began reaching for the dishes in the next sink.

"In type-setting," he explained, "your mind is not on what you have in hand, but what the other hand is reaching for. And the same kind of skill is required in dish-washing."

Shut off from all sound of the outer world, with its cares and worries, enclosed within a little world of chef, waiter and bus boy to the ever-recurrent clatter and clank of dishes, had certainly a decided soporific effect upon a tired brain.

John must have noticed a certain let-down of my high tension on entering, for it was close to midnight.

"Dish-washing is most excellent as a vocation, I assure you." He eyed me critically, and his manner was that of a physician giving a prescription to a patient.

It was midnight. To a tired brain—to dishwash, ah!—ad infinitum. —PAULINE JACOBSON, in The Bulletin, San Francisco, Calif.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

RAPID GROWTH OF THE LABOR BUREAU, Inc.

The Labor Bureau, Inc., an independent organization established in New York in May, 1920, to render research, statistical and other services to labor unions, increased its activities four-fold during the year 1921 and opened offices in four other cities: Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco, according to the annual report of the Bureau for last year just made public. The Bureau has, furthermore, added to its facilities an accounting and an engineering department. Over sixty labor organizations including international and national as well as local unions, central bodies and district councils, availed themselves of the Bureau's services during the year.

"The rapid growth of the Bureau," the directors state, "proves conclusively that organized labor in America is awake to the need for facts and figures. There is an increasing demand among labor unions for accurate information about wages, cost of living, and business conditions, as well as about the organization and management of specific industries and improved methods of keeping their own records and books. In other words, organized labor is increasingly using the same weapons in its struggle to better the condition of the masses of workers which the employers have long used to entrench themselves in prosperity and power."

The foreword to the report, which is printed in pamphlet form, states that:

"Labor has need to know as much about industry and the circumstances under which it operates as employers, and labor has as much need as employers to get its own interpretation of these facts before the public, before arbitration boards and other interested bodies. Agencies which serve employers are disqualified for many reasons from serving labor, and labor union officials and their assistants are too much occupied with organization matters to do their technical work themselves. There is an increasing demand for an organization of technicians who devote their entire energy to the service of organized labor.

"The rapid growth of the Labor Bureau in the first twenty months of its existence is a practical demonstration of this demand and of how it can be met.

"The Bureau is absolutely free from the obligations imposed by subsidies or contributions, nor has it committed itself in any way to the support of any party, group or faction. It accepts as clients, however, only labor organizations or those working in the interests of labor.

"The Bureau is neither a charitable institution nor a profit-making corporation. Charges to clients are based upon actual costs. It is, furthermore, the policy of the Bureau to allow its clients free access to its books and financial records."

The report contains a brief description of the Bureau's activities during 1921. During the eight months of 1920, the report states, the activities of the Bureau were confined to New York City. During the year 1921 the Bureau began to operate on a national scale. Offices were opened in Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and San Francisco, and a representative was appointed in Washington. During the first eight months of its existence the Bureau rendered professional services to 14 labor organizations in New York. These services included 27 investigations or reports on wages, 12 on cost of living, and 15 on economic conditions, and the preparation of briefs for unions in five wage arbitration cases. During the following year the Bureau served 64 labor organizations located in 16 cities in widely separated sections of the country. The services rendered included 113 reports on economic conditions, 102 on wages, 52 on the cost of living, and the preparation of briefs in 16 arbitration cases.

During the year 1921, according to the report, the Bureau met a rapidly increasing demand for extensive special investigations and reports not directly connected with pending wage disputes between unions and employers. During the last eight months of 1920 the Bureau was called upon for six studies of this kind. In 1921 it carried on eighteen such investigations. Most important among these was a survey and report on the general problem of wage determination made for District Lodge No. 44, of the International Association of Machinists. This lodge includes all local machinists' unions in government arsenals and navy yards. At the close of the year the Bureau was engaged in a thorough investigation of the uses to which arsenals and navy yards could be put in the event of armament reductions, and the advantages of such uses to the public. This study was made for the International Association of Machinists.

The Bureau, it is stated, was also engaged in a study of the financial condition, the efficiency of operation, and other aspects of the business of the Baltimore Gas and Electric Company. The Baltimore Federation of Labor retained the Bureau to supply it with data and expert testimony to resist a rate increase which this company had petitioned the Public Service Commission to allow. Other investigations made by the Bureau during the year included a survey of "shop committee" and "employee representation" plans; fire and burglary hazards, and amount of property protected by fire and police departments in leading American cities; bibliographies on health and sanitation; and the distribution and success of public abattoirs in the United States.

The report states that there has been a specially great demand for the services of the Bureau's accounting department. This shows, it is said, that "labor organizations are more than ever alive to the value of accurate financial records. Well-kept books are an asset not only to the membership at large, but to the union treasurer or financial secretary who is responsible for the funds. Regular audits are, of course, the established practice of all well-organized unions. The value of having the audits made by a professional accountant, however, rather than an inexperienced committee of union members, is becoming increasingly evident in labor circles."

The services of the Bureau's engineering department are also reviewed in the report. The Bureau's engineer, it is stated, has been in constant demand in connection with wage disputes.

"Basic questions of industrial management," it is asserted, "are rapidly becoming part and parcel of wage negotiations and union policies. Employers in some industries are attempting to relate wages to the productivity of the workers. Whether or not a union approves of production standards it is often called upon to formulate and carry out certain policies in this connection. Unions themselves, in many instances, are demanding the elimination of wastes and inefficiencies of management as a substitute for wage reductions. Employers and workers are in some instances co-operating in studies of industrial management. All these activities call for technical engineering skill."

The directors of the Labor Bureau during 1921 were Alfred L. Bernheim, Evans Clark, David J. Saposs and George Soule. The directors are all college trained men with technical knowledge of economic and experience in labor research. The Bureau's engineer is Otto S. Beyer, Jr., M. E., and its accountant, Stuart Chase, C. P. A.

The following are the offices established and maintained in 1921: New York, 1 Union Square; Chicago, 14 West Washington Street; Philadelphia, 1700 Arch Street; San Francisco, Underwood Building; and Boston, 310 Congress Street.

The New York office is in charge of Messrs. Bernheim, Clark and Soule, while Mr. Saposs is in charge at Chicago. E. L. Oliver, Henry P. Melnikow and Edwin Newdick are in charge of the Philadelphia, San Francisco and Boston offices respectively.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE DISRUPTER'S POLICY.

"I welcome the open-shop drive that is now being conducted in the two countries (United States and Canada) and hope it will be a success."

The above statement was recently made at a meeting in Winnipeg by Jack Clancy, representing the O. B. U. movement, of which the so-called Rank and File movement is an offspring, or more likely an associate part.

We have always contended that the I. W. W., O. B. U., the Rank and File, and other dual and independent movements were promoted by large employing interests, and we have no reason to change our opinion. Each day our belief is strengthened that dual and radical movements are encouraged and supported by capitalistic interests for the purpose of keeping the workers divided and diminishing their economic power. Employers know that a well-managed, responsible labor organization is respected and will receive the support of the average citizen. Employers also know such support and respect can only be lost by labor doing things that are unreasonable and contrary to the general good and realize that labor organizations understand the advantages of avoiding policies that will bring discredit to them, or be contrary to the best interests of the great mass of people.

Therefore, it is the part of good strategy for employers to create situations that reflect discredit upon labor organizations, and they were not slow to learn that institutions carrying title like Industrial Workers of the World, One Big Union, the Rank and File, etc., would be looked upon by a great many people as labor organizations and that the irresponsible methods of such to wean from bona fide labor organizations the support they ordinarily received from the public.

Consequently, employers and corporate interests take much interest in promoting and encouraging such movements. To do so it is necessary to use spies and detectives to go about among the unions creating dissension and endeavor to influence, where possible, legitimate labor unions to join with such organizations, that are posing as class-conscious institutions; but which are really, in so far as efforts and results go, weapons of corporate interests and employers. In recruiting spies and detectives, efforts are usually made to obtain the services of individuals who are influential members of labor organizations, who may be willing to sell out their associates. Where such recruits are not available, the method is to arrange for the detectives to join the unions, obtain the confidence of the membership, and where possible be elected to responsible offices, thus greatly facilitating the work of disruption. Often such individuals become influential enough to mold and control the policy of the organization and in such cases the usefulness of the organization is rapidly destroyed.

When the spy or detective is unable to obtain control, he then assumes the role of fault-finder; criticises everything or anything the local or International officers may do or attempt to do. He does his work cleverly, all the time appearing to hold a sincere interest in the workers' welfare. He elaborates upon the many sacrifices he has contributed to the cause of unionism. He details with disgust the mistakes made by those in authority, at the same time emphasizing his own virtues, and keeps up a constant nagging against all laws and regulations; opposes all constructive propositions, classes them as reactionary; encourages racial and religious prejudices; does anything and everything that will cause unrest, breed dissension and bring about disruption—all the time covering his true purposes with a cloak of deceit.

Invariably those promoting such movements as the O. B. U., Rank and File, I. W. W., independent and employers' unions are employed to do so. If records were available, ninety-nine per cent of these unscrupulous parasites would be found on the payrolls of detective agencies or employers.

It is the duty of every trade unionist to be on guard against these imposters. Watch carefully the chronic fault-finder. Make those who criticise show a better way. A constructive critic will always do so. The spy, sneak, and self-seeker doesn't and can't. He relies upon inference, indirect charges, and asking questions for which he has no answer, realizing that such methods work effectively upon the imagination of his listeners.

When such methods are used by an individual, withhold your trust, carefully analyze the situation, and remember that no man or group of men, having the welfare of the workers at heart, will advocate division of forces, nor advise separation from the legitimate trade union movement. Spies, detectives, self-seekers and employers' agents always do. That is what they are paid for, and not infrequently disappointed office-seekers, nursing a personal grievance, have no scruples about destroying what they can't control.

Constancy to trade-union principles, loyalty to your fellow-workers is what they seek to destroy. Promoting the employers' interests is what they endeavor to accomplish.

Be on your guard. They are usually present everywhere. Few local unions are free from their activities. They may be the very ones to whom you have given your confidence. Be cautious—it will pay you.—The Journal of Electrical Workers and Operators.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

MAKING READY FOR THE FUTURE.

Several of our local unions advise that they are putting the organization campaign suggested in a general letter to all locals recently, into operation and are reaping fair to good results and expect better returns as soon as trade conditions begin to pick up. From information printed in the publications which presume to voice the conclusions of big business, the peak of the bad times has been reached and we are gradually, but surely getting back to where the outlook is more encouraging. "Business Betterment is Under Way," is the top line information carried by Forbes Magazine, for March 18, 1922. That publication does not try to tell its readers what they cannot sense from close contact. Business is on the upgrade, making slow but steady advances and unemployment is lessening.

All of which means that the business clouds are disappearing and good times may be looked for from now on.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

ENCOURAGE YOUR APPRENTICES TO BECOME INQUISITIVE.

We would not give two whoops on a desert island for a young man or young woman either, who is working as an apprentice at the trade, who were satisfied to be told what to do and how to do it, without ever asking the why and wherefor or whereof. Dining room, kitchen and beverage counter workers function as a rule without making many false moves, but the boys and girls who are acting as your assistants cannot help but make occasional blunders and when they do, take them in hand, not to scold, but to show and teach them why so and so is the case and the reason for doing a thing in a certain and standard way. It is no compliment to a journeyman to turn out an apprentice whose lack of knowing how would fill a book. Be proud of being a teacher; be rewarded by seeing those whom you taught show skill and adaptness at their chosen trade. Your assistant is entitled to know the why and the how. It's up to you to show them.

DON'T QUIT.

When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high,
And you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit,
Rest, if you must—but don't you quit.

Life is queer with its twists and turns,
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up, though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with another blow.

Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man.
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.

Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt.
And you never can tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
And you never can tell how close you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you mustn't quit.—National Labor Journal.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

IN PRAISE OF CARROTS.

Researches of the Lister Institute in London assign a high place to the carrot as a producer of vitamins. It was Funk in a German book, "Die Vitamine," who coined the word in 1914 to name the salubrious food element found in the outer envelope (pericarp) of the rice grain. If a population feeds on rice grains from which the pericarp has been stripped by polishing, the infectious, neuritic and progressively paralytic disease known as berberi flourishes. In Newfoundland and Labrador, where berberi is rather common. Dr. Grenfell insistently recommends the use of bread made with the whole wheat grain. Vitamines must be present in our diet if the proper chemical changes (metabolism) are to follow the assimilation of our food. The horse had no Lister Institute to tell him, but "horse sense" led him to eat carrots; and every horseman knows that carrots are to horses what fish is to cats. We have still a lot to learn about vitamins, but we are assured on good authority that we can not go far wrong if we follow the example of the horse in eating carrots as we already have done in the case of oats.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

HOME BREW.

Secretary John F. Englebrecht, Jr., of Local 637, Manitowoc, Wis., send us the following. He says, in his letter of recent date: "I am sending you a copy of 'How to Make Home Brew':"

"Chase a bullfrog 3 miles and gather up the hops. Add 10 gallons of tan-bark, ½ pint of shellac and a bar of home-made soap. Boil 36 hours, strain through an I. W. W. hat to keep it from working; then add a live grasshopper to each pint to give it a kick."

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

THE SPRING INVASION.

The spring poets are with us again. They have been with us for some weeks. They enter unannounced with the postman and leave in the ready waste basket, crushed and cruelly wrinkled. It is too bad, of course, but it can not be helped. There being no law for the suppression of bad pre-vernal verse, the deduction is that society permits us to wreak our vengeance without check. We have done so.

But now and then the spring muse lights upon some tender young mind which thrills with the first glimpse of the pussy willow and the crocus. We have no will to crush adolescent enthusiasms. Poets at twelve, rebuked, may not rise again, and in this mood—and while it lasts—let us introduce little Louise Dennis, of just a dozen years, an otherwise unknown contributor who begs us plairitively to "please tell her whether we think it good enough to print." Yes, Louise, it is plenty good enough. So here we go, word for word, comma for comma, sub-head for sub-head, with an injunction to Louise to keep it up:

WHO IS SPRINGTIME?

Who is Springtime? Tell me this!
Is she a dainty little miss
Who dwells among the flowers and trees?
Who dwells among the birds and bees?

Tell me who is Springtime?

2d Verse

Is Springtime a fairy queen,
Captured by a giant mean,
And locked in his castle in winter?

3d Verse

Is Springtime a flower gay
In the winter snatched away?
Tell me, who is Springtime?

4th Verse

Now I know the answer true!
Little lady, it is you!
Springtime and childhood
Mean one thing!
Springtime is childhood;
Childhood is Spring!

—Times-Star.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE RETORT COURTEOUS.

In answer to one of our members who was anxious to increase the membership of his local union, we wrote a suggestion which contemplated the use of a pledge reading as follows:

"I hereby promise to secure one new member for our local union on or before January 1, and shall do my utmost to obtain two or more if conditions are favorable."

The idea was to distribute the pledges at the meetings, obtain signatures of the members to same, then await results. The brother wrote us a few days later saying, "Your idea is a good one, no doubt in many of our locals it would be the means of waking the membership up and securing material additions to their rosters. But brother secretary, what we need in this local union and need quick, is something, pledge or whatever you care to call it, that will induce the members now on the roster to keep in good standing."

A few weeks later an election of officers was held in that local union, and the brother who had been writing us became financial secretary, found conditions rather discouraging, but made up his mind that he was going to do something desperate. He did, and the idea worked nicely. He began with the members whose indebtedness was heaviest and each day placed on the bulletin board at the headquarters notices which read: "Members of this union acquainted with Antonio Andrea Anderson, are requested to advise that 'brother' that he stands suspended for non-payment of dues, and that he is invited to have a conference with the financial secretary at the very earliest possible opportunity." Before the financial secretary had exhausted the "A's" there was a scurrying of suspended members and inside of six weeks there was less than a half dozen on the roster in arrears. It was bitter medicine, and the secretary became unpopular, but the method turned the trick.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

GETTING READY FOR BIG GAME.

The railway managers, failing to hang around the neck of the railroad brotherhoods the charge and make it stick, that they are wholly responsible for the high cost of transportation, are now engaged in cutting the ground from under the brotherhoods by a method that, if carried to a finish, will hit the brotherhoods as hard as it has hit the shop crafts.

Little is being offered the readers of the daily press about the "farming-out" program tried on several of the transportation systems. Shop employes are facing the "farming-out" scheme with anything but pleasure, and are trying to interest the Railway Labor Board to interfere.

Where the railways in the past have done all of their own repair and some of their new work, that work is now let out by contract to concerns who make it evident that they are going to secure labor for the least possible figure. In a recent case the workers in one of the contract shops of the Erie Railroad, located at Jersey City, N. J., showed that the largest wage paid to any of the workers in those shops was $51 for two weeks' work. It was also alleged by the workers in that shop that the contractor was taking a percentage off each workers' hourly wage for his own use.

The object in putting the "farming-out" scheme into operation is to avoid operation of the provisions of the Transportation Act of 1920, to cut wages to bed rock and finally destroy the shop organizations.

If the "farming-out" scheme manages to get by without governmental interference, it would be but a question of time when the firing of engines or the driving of engines could be made a contract proposition. If it is within the power of the railways to evade agreements by letting all of their engine and car repair work out on contract, it will also be within the power of the same schemers to let out contracts for every activity of railroad work from wiping engines to throwing switches.

The railway brotherhoods will be isolated if the managers' scheme can be put in operation generally. And once these workers are deprived of the co-operation of the shop crafts, they would have mighty little chance to enforce improved working conditions or continue to receive wages equal to what has been paid them in the past several years.

An illustration of the "farming-out" scheme as it applies to the hotel industry is offered in many of the large hotels, where the check-room concession is held by outsiders in no way financially interested in the conduct of the hotel proper. In fact, there are hotels where the handling of baggage and the services of bellhops is "farmed out" at so much per annum.

Organized money is going to weaken organized labor when and wherever it is possible to do so. The several schemes being used by the transportation corporations is but a drop in the bucket of what may follow unless labor rises up and becomes so well organized that the House of Dollars will fear the results of insisting upon its crusade. As in the past, the unorganized workers in the railroad field were the first victims of greed.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

FORT M'HENRY.

The recent activity on the part of lawmakers and others to secure an appropriation to maintain Fort McHenry makes the following item, which appeared a few years ago, rather appropriate reading:

JOKE TO MODERN ENGINEERS

Old Fort McHenry Would Have Lasted About Two Minutes Exposed to Gunfire of Today.

"Back in 1814 there was a bit of unpleasantness between Great Britain and the United States, and for a couple of years there had been quite constant interchange of courtesies in the form of solid cannon balls. The British fleet had sailed up to Alexandria, Va., and had exacted tribute from that city. Redcoats had marched down "F" Street in Washington and set fire to the White House.

"The most famous landmark of that clash between two people of the same blood is old Fort McHenry in Baltimore. One can tramp about this ancient fortification today and ruminate upon the development in fort building in a hundred years. For Fort McHenry is nothing more than a small area of earthen breastworks enclosing some ancient buildings, where powder was kept dry. There is a complete absence of steel and concrete, and the biggest guns of its defense were as simple as a muzzle-loading shotgun.

"The roadstead to Baltimore Harbor runs alongside Fort McHenry, and it was here that the British fleet drew up and maintained its fire 'through the perilous night,' which inspired the writing of 'The Star-Spangled Banner.' The fleet was but 200 yards away, was of wooden ships, and yet this, one of America's greatest land defenses, was unable to harm it. Nor could the gunboats produce much effect on this old fort, which one modern shell, thrown from over the horizon, would completely obliterate.

"Such has been the development in warfare since our ancestors of a century ago played so amateurishly at it."

CENTENNIAL OF BIRTH OF GRANT INSPIRES MUSE.

The plans for the centennial celebration of the birth of General U. S. Grant at Point Pleasant has inspired a poem by Charles J. North, of Buffalo, N. Y., vice-president of the Grant Family Association. He sent a copy of the poem to Mayor George P. Carrel, with a notation that he may use it in any manner he sees fit in connection with the celebration. Here is the poem:

THE PLAIDS O' GRANT STAND FAST.

Ben Lomond's crags are stirring,
The pipes skirl out alarms,
The Plaids o' Grant are climbing
Where dark glens spread their arms,
Dinna ye hear them—hear them
Skirl out their fiercest blast?
The Plaids o' Grant are hearing—
Stand fast—stand fast—stand fast.

The ashes o' their hearthstones
Lie scattered through the door.
The wives and bairns are hiding
Beyond Loch Lomond's shore.
The mist breaks clear above them,
The light comes spinning down.
Dinna ye see the spinning
Above Ben Lomond's crown?

They stand, the wild MacGreegors,
The fiercest o' the clans.
They fight for homes and hearthstones;
Aye, call them caterans.
The spinning mist above them,
The claymores in their hand,
They hear the skirling summons,
And daring all, they stand.

'Tis many a year since then, mon,
And many a mile between.
And many a Grant-MacGregor
The spinning mist has seen.
In many a far-off country
They've heard the skirling strains
That carry down from Lomond,
And stir through all their veins.

The GRANT o' GRANTS lies sleeping
Far from Loch Lomond's shore;
Where Plaids o' Grant were climbing,
Three hundred years before.
Did he na feel the spinning
That weaves down through the past?
And didna he hear the piping,
And daring all, stand fast?

—CHARLES J. NORTH, Times-Star, April 22, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

SHALL WE REPEAT AND MAKE GOOD THIS TIME?

From January 1, 1918, to April 30, 1921, the local unions figuring in the Soldiers and Sailors of Freedom Membership Drive initiated ninety-one thousand eight hundred and forty-one members. Needless to say that we failed to retain that number, for had we been able to do so, our International Union would be wav up yonder edging the leaders to one side and saying to 'em: "Make room fellows, for a real bunch of sure enough hustlers." If we had taken the time to educate all those new members, what a difference it would have made in our great big task of organizing the catering industry employes of America. Sure thing, we can repeat, all we need do is take on a similar determination as we put on display during that drive. But this time let us try to keep 'em put.

MAYBE SO AND PERHAPS.

First Maybe-So and then Perhaps
Take turns in setting cunning traps
To catch me when I think I can "Get by" with some partic'lar plan.
No matter what it is, I find
The path to reach it simply lined,
Like pantry-shelf where mice cavort,
With traps of words of every sort.

"Say, brother, can't you get away
Somehow from work in time today
To see the game? It won't be slow!"
Of course he answers, "Maybe so."
"Hey, sister, if you want to see
A jolly time, just come with me!
Now can't you leave the sums and maps
A little while?" She sighs "Perhaps."

"Oh, mother, don't you think tonight—
'Twill never rain, the weather's bright—
That to the movies we might go?"
Now listen! Hear it? "Maybe so."
"And if you can, and have the change
(You will, or 'twould be mighty strange).
Let's get two sodas with those caps
Of creamy foam—what say?" "Perhaps."

Oh, my, I wish some one would speak
In good plain English for a week!
Why can't they answer yes or no.
Instead of that old Maybe-So?
Why, even Dad won't talk right out,
But leaves a chap in awful doubt.
I'd rather get a dozen raps
Most any time than that "Perhaps!"

—Cincinnati Commercial-Tribune.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHEN WRITING TO YOUR FRIENDS.

If you have a friend working in an unorganized town, you can put in an interesting paragraph or two telling him about the union. If he is interested, mail him one of the copies of THE MIXER AND SERVER and mark an article or two for his perusal. It's easy to acquire the habit of boosting your union, and nothing more effective can be devised than a letter telling about its achievements. Try it and see.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHEESE BROTHERS.

Brick—"I'm chilled to the bone."

Swiss—"What you need is a fur hat."

Brick—"Do you know what a lemon is?"

Swiss—"Betcha; I oughta, seeing how many slipped my way."

Brick—"I see by the papers that a man in Kentucky has a home-grown lemon that measures fourteen inches in circumference."

Swiss—"And he thinks that's a big one, eh?"

Brick—"Sure thing, and it is a big one; you never seen a larger."

Swiss—"Where do you get that noise? I never seen a larger!"

Brick—"Well, have you? I'm from Sedalia."

Swiss—"Say, pal, I can show you a whole flock of lemons that's got that Kentucky citron lashed to the mast."

Brick—"Did I ever tell you that Sedalia is in Missouri—show me."

Swiss—"Just like finding money to me. Come on, we are now going to the Eclipse Cafe, where there are at least half-a-dozen lemons that run all the way from 34 to 44 inches in circumference and stand from 4 foot 9 inches to 5 foot 10 inches in height."

Brick—"Cut the comedy; whaddye mean, 34 to 44 inches in circumference?"

Swiss—"I said lemons, didn't I? Well, that's what I'm going to show you, and if you don't believe they are lemons just ask the secretary of Cooks' and Waiters' Union, Local 999, and he will testify to the fact that the business agent of No. 999 worked a whole week to get that bunch into the union, another week to secure for them an increase in wages and a shorter work-day, and after they obtained all of the things I just recited they refrained from paying dues to the union."

Brick—"And that is what you call a lemon, eh? Swiss, old top, you've got the wrong signboard on them birds. Now, I call them kind of gimleheads just yaller quitters, for I have too much respect for a fruit, even if its coat is yellow, to call 'em lemons."—NAVILLUS.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHAT'S THE ANSWER?

Who in the name of Sam Hill started the idea that all a fellow had to do was walk up to the financial secretary of the local union once a month, dig up the required mazuma for a month's dues, obtain a properly cancelled stamp attached to one's membership book and all would be weil and happy, and the union would just go forward like the streak one observes from a sky rocket shooting through the air?

Pretty picture, eh? But who started painting it, that's what we want to know. A dues-paying member who never attends the meetings of a local union, who expects the officers and representatives of the union to tote the whole burden, do all the work, care for the problems that arise and endeavor to solve them to the best of their ability—just wait a moment until we turn off the offensive invective faucet, for we might be tempted to use some mean language. But on the level, and just between you and I, what the Sam Hill use is such a member to any local union that is making an effort to move forward and advance the best interest of the membership composing that union? We are wondering where those fellows get that stuff from; for it takes one thing or the other—real yard-wide nerve or absence of brain. Take your pick.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THEN THE ALARM CLOCK WENT OFF.

"Mr. Chairman and fellow members: It is my proud privilege to hand to our hard-working and extremely courteous secretary, the applications for ten catering industry employes and the required amount covering initiation fees. As you will observe, this makes a total of forty-four new members which I have induced to become affiliated with our grand and glorious local union since the first day of January, 1922, and I am living in hopes that the example I have set will be followed by every member of the union."—Br-r, ting a ling, brhh b-r-r-hh. Gee, that was some dream, but I'm going to make part of it come true, see if I don't. I won't say a word to anyone, but duck around and meet some of the new arrivals. On the level that did feel good though, to dream of bringing 'em in in bunches. Oh hum, it's time I was on my way, got to be on the floor at 7:20 sharp or the main screw may lift me from that nice job.

"CANADA PROFITS BY RUM RUNNING."Lawyer Says Dominion Makes Money Out of Whisky Trade.

(Times-Star Special Dispatch.)

Hamilton, Ont., March 24.—"Why should we take any account of the laws in the United States? The trouble is that in Canada we pass laws and try to enforce them, while in the United States they pass laws and then pigeon-hole them."

These views were expressed by James Haver-son, attorney for Roy Mitchell and William Hughes, charged with having kept liquor for bar-ter and sale.

"How much does the Dominion get out of the transfer of Canadian whisky into the United States?" the court asked.

"Thirteen dollars and a half a case," Haver-son replied. "Even the government is making money out of it. It's American money and we gain in our taxes."

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

"TOMMY" WEST'S LATEST SONG.

Thomas H. West, of Kansas City, Mo., author of several well-known trade union songs, among which we recall "Our Grand Old Man," "Stick to Your Union," sent us his latest entitled. "Don't Forget the Union Label."

The song is dedicated to the Women's International Union Label League and has won favor among musicians and singers generally.

If your local music dealers have not received a supply, send 25 cents to Thomas H. West, 410 Admiral Boulevard, Kansas City, Mo., and a copy will be on its way to you as fast as the mails can carry it.

Reference to Kansas City reminds us of the fact that the Local Joint Executive Board of that city is putting a lot of old time pep into an organizing campaign and unless some of the other cities that have boasted of numerical superiority, get a move on soon, K. C. will move out in front and make somebody take their dust. When you come to size up the bunch of real go-getters in that city, you can bet a small bit of change that before the warm days of summer begin to make themselves felt, the city on the Kaw will have a line-up that will be hard to match. Watch 'em, boys and girls, but better still, imitate 'em and get going forward too.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE MAN HIGHER UP.

Old Mrs. Practical—"My dear, it's about time for you to choose a mate."

Young Miss Nautical—"Mate nothing! I have my eye on a captain."—From Judge.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

NOTHING LIKE TRYING TO PLEASE.

One of our inquisitive members wrote us asking if the spelling we use on the word "booze" is the correct one, that he has seen it spelled "boose."

The office dictionary offers the first spelling, and while authorities occasionally differ, we have not observed any of them using the spelling as intimated by our aforesaid inquisitive member. The inquiry offers us a chance to use an old clipping, not so very old at that, January 2, 1922, the article is by James M. Allison, the New York correspondent of the Times-Star of this city. It is fairly interesting as you will find:

"It is always a pleasure to acknowledge a communication that evinces an intelligent attention to what one may have written, even though it compel the admission of error. One can only accept as a compliment the effort of superior knowledge to set one right, since it per se attributes public importance to one's original utterance. Therefore, with a sense of appreciation which approaches open gratitude I hasten to admit that a distinguished and erudite etymological amateur—who unfortunately remains anonymous—has shown me that I am all wrong about the history of the word booze."

"With that careless and cursory thought which frequently pertains in the rush of daily journalism, I recently accepted and promulgated a statement that traced the origin of the word to a Mr. E. C. Booz, who designed and manufactured a certain container of liquids, about 1840. Many persons, like myself, might thoughtlessly accept this statement as authentic, thus remaining for the rest of their lives under an important etymological misapprehension, but the danger is removed, in so far as it is possible to erase the consequences of error, by the communication which I now have the privilege of transmitting to our readers:

"Dear Sir: Will you allow me to point out that you have been let into error regarding the history of the word 'booze'? It is in no sense an appropriation of a surname to the use of the vernacular. It is, in fact, one of the good old English words which are as positive in definition as they are obscure in derivation. In a play, by Massinger, first produced some time before 1626, the first line is spoken by a penniless prodigal who has been turned away from an ale house, and what he says is: 'No house? Nor no tobacco?'

"The slight alteration in spelling, shown in the word as used in the present day, has, of course, not the slightest etymological significance since words such as this were variously spelled by various writers, even in the same period."

"Of course this is entirely conclusive. The error of the first attribution is obvious. There remains but the regret that the correspondent who does us this service evades our personal acknowledgments by electing himself to obscurity. Thus, simply and impersonally, he concludes his letter:

"Booze is dead. Let his epitaph be errorless. 'A Friend of the Family.'"

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PROTECTION FOR ROQUEFORT CHEESE.

The manufacture of Roquefort cheese has been considered one of the exclusive prerogatives of the French nation for nearly a thousand years, but it has become so generally imitated in France as well as other countries that the French are endeavoring to arrive at some means of protecting the original and genuine article from these inferior imitations. Roquefort is the product of goat's milk and in order to be properly made it must be ripened in caves and those of the district of Aveyron have a peculiar property for this purpose. Cheese is now being made from cow's milk and the ripening is done in various other ways without resorting to the caves. The French legislature has been called upon to afford the real product some protection.—Times-Star.

IF YOU HAVE TWO EYES, KEEP 'EM BOTH WORKING.

One of our more or less discouraged brothers writes us saying that "things are not coming our way." Therefore he assumes that, because of that fact there is nothing to do but sit back in the old rocking chair and bewail the fates that are. Supposing that the fielders on your local baseball team stood stock still when a two or three bagger is knocked into their supposed territory, how long would they last as members of that team?

If things don't come your way you may feel aggrieved, but there is a better method of treatment. Suppose that you put a pay day move on yourself and get out and hustle and make things come your way.

Selling the organization to the non-members is no child's play, and yet it is the pleasantest kind of play to the hustler who loves to take a worker in hand and convert him from what some call a hard boiled proposition to a sure enough convert. Habitual boosting is one of the big things in organization. Get the habit of speaking well of your union, of your officers, of your fellow members, and finally don't forget yourself. The quickest way to kill an organization is to give it a wallop every time reference is made to it. And if your union is worthy of your boost, another job is yours. Make it worthy.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-18

TEACHING HISTORY BY SONG.

A Harvard professor, according to the news, is introducing songs as an aid to the teaching of history. The idea is sure to be immensely popular with student bodies; many a collegian who isn't much on history is a whale of a boy when it comes to loose and unrestrained warbling.

"Oliver," says the professor, "what was the date of the battle of Bull Run?"

"You've got me stuck on that," admits the student, clearing his throat, "but I'll sing any jazz number you name."

When the whole history class takes to replying to questions in song the classroom will take on some of the atmosphere formerly familiar in college life only to frequenters of the old Heidelberg grill and the College Inn Bar.

Song Aids.

However, always eager to co-operate in any new movement, we suggest the following Song Aids to History:

Landing of Columbus—"They Wouldn't Believe Me."

Purchase of Land from the Indians—"Every Little Bit Added to What You've Got Makes Just a Little Bit More."

Settling of New England States—"In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree."

Paul Revere's Ride—"The Old Gray Mare, She Ain't What She Used to Be."

Battle of Bunker Hill—"Throw 'Em Down, McClusky."

The Boston Tea Party—"Polly Put the Kettle On."

The Revolutionary War—"A Hot Time in the Old Town."

Washington Crossing the Delaware—"And Then He'd Row, Row, Row."

Valley Forge—"The Anvil Chorus."

Surrender of Cornwallis—"You Made Me What I Am Today, I Hope You're Satisfied."

Adoption of Betsy Ross's American Flag—Medley of George Cohan Airs.

Treachery of Benedict Arnold—"Don't Bite the Hand That's Feeding You."

Capture of Maj. Andre—"Put On You're Slippers; You're in for the Night."

The Slavery Discussion—"Old Black Joe."

Election of Lincoln—"Kindling Wood."

Outbreak of Civil War—"It May Be Four Years and It May Be Forever."

Sherman's March to the Sea—"Splash Me."

Grant's Campaign—"Coming Through the Rye."

Lee's Surrender—"Carry Me Back to Ole Virginia."

Spanish-American War—"Those Cubanola Blues."

Rush to the Klondike—"Take Back Your Gold."

Outbreak of Boer War—"Those Dutch They Say They Ain't Got No Style."

Kaiser Plans Conquest of World—"I'm Always Chasing Rainbows."

Kaiser Declares War; Predicts Victory in Three Weeks—"Oh, Didn't He Ramble?"

Defeat at the Marne—"Waltz Me Around Again, Willie."

Disarmament Conference—"The Love Nest."

National Prohibition—"Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

Miscellaneous Events.

Execution of the Queen of Scots—"Oh, What a Pal Was Mary."

Cleopatra Vamps Julius Caesar—"Oh, How She Could Yacki, Hacki, Wicky, Wacky, Woo."

Napoleon at Waterloo—"Where Did You Get That Hat?"

H. I. Phillips in Times-Star.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-18

THE WIND IN THE CHIMNEY.

When nights are snowy and cold and dark

The wind in the chimney talks to me

Of the happy hours I used to know

And the places where I would like to be.

It calls to mind as I sit alone

How bright are the lights along Broadway

On furs and jewels and violets,

And taxis rolling toward the play.

It softly croons of the starlit sea,

Where the giant liners come and go,

And the Northwoods fast in winter's grip

With cabins buried in drifts of snow,

And rock rimmed lakes of the Engadine,

And Paris lovely in lilac time,

And London gay in its gala dress

When bells for the royal wedding chime.

In a low and confidential tone

It whispers too of the intimate

And precious memories hidden deep—

A dusty road and a broken gate,

An old, old dwelling with ivied eaves,

And a new moon shining white and thin

On a dark head bent to a singing bow

And the polished wood of a violin.

When the little houses round about

Are wrapped in the down of sleep and night,

As snow flakes dash at the window pane

Like white moths drawn by the shaded light,

And I huddle over the dying coals,

My book forgotten upon my knee,

With brooding shadows my only guests,

The wind in the chimney talks to me.—MINNA IRVING, in the New York Herald.

"'T WAS A DARK AND STORMY NIGHT."

A young man returning from the Continent to England upon a crowded steamer was asked to give up his berth to a little girl. He did so and spent the night, horribly ill, on deck. A few hours later his wife received a telegram from him which he had dispatched from Dover: "Expect me home immediately. Bad passage; awfully sick. Gave birth to a little girl on leaving Calais."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-18

WHASSA MATTER FELLOWS, PUNCTURE OR BLOWOUT?

Sitting before the "mill" upon which we grind out these more or less interesting items, memory takes a hop, skip and a jump and lands in the Rainbow Room at the Winton Hotel in the city of Cleveland. Before us are the delegates to the number of one hundred and fifty; up for discussion at the time was a situation in one section that interested all in attendance.

A delegate arises and after addressing the convention, concluded with a promise, which memory recalls as about as follows:

"We are going to organize our city whether you help us or not, we know that you have expended large sums of money in employing organizers and we tender proper appreciation for that consideration. We have a wide field, none better nor with greater prospects, and if you will keep your eye on us, we are going to show all of you Missourians that we know how to organize and how to keep in line those whom we do convert to our banner."

Fine looking fellow who made that talk, looks like ready money all the time. No better groomed man in the organization, no man more determined to move forward, providing he secures the right kind of encouragement from his constituents. Looking at the records we find that when that brother put up that gingery talk his local had a membership of 496 (August, 1921), and the report for the month of January, 1922, lays before us as we write and it calls for a membership of 494. A loss of two members in five months. At that, the showing is good, all things considered, for unemployment has affected the city where that local is situated quite as much as it has other eastern cities. We feel quite confident that the fellow the hat fits reads every line in the MIXER AND SERVER, and if a reminder is needed, he will promptly get out the old flivver, give her plenty of water, gas and oil, rub a little hoss liniment on the fenders and—make room boys, for that old boat and its driver are going out to make good.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-18

A FAUX PAS.

At southern railway stations it is the custom of darkies to sell chicken patties and other delicacies to passengers. A passenger who had enjoyed a patty and was leaning out of the window to buy another, asked of the dusky salesman:

"Where do you get your chickens?"

The darky rolled his eyes. "You-all f'om de No'th, ain't you, sah?" he queried.

"Yes," was the reply. "But why do you ask that?"

"'Case, sah! No gem'l'm'n f'om de South eber asks a nigger whar he gits his chicken."—The Argonaut (San Francisco).

GETTING AN EARLY START.

Right now when the old coal heater is becoming less and less useful, and is gaining fewer recruits, the subject of getting out and lining up the members who fell by the wayside during the cold weather, is a topic that wins more approval than you imagine. Several of our live secretaries impart the information, that "we are making a steady but quiet campaign, reaching the members who slipped away during the frigid period and encouraging them to renew their monthly trips to the financial secretary. We are having more success than we expected, for several examples of the results of disorganization have come to us with the usual hard-luck tales, and we do not intend to sample that sort of crow if activity will aid us." Spring is here, the summer season is not so far distant and with the catering industry worker in greater demand, it behoves all hands to make a move in the direction of strengthening their unions. Weak unions know from experience that employers are giving them a shade the worst of conditions, they know further that all the talk about employment is not exclusively a catering industry situation and times are improving a little bit in spite of the wet-blanket-tossers who are gleaning excess coin via the reduced wages channel. Times are not so bad that people have refrained from eating and drinking, and that is where we fit in. Get hold of your organization now, be ready to meet the employers who are foxy enough to try and take advantage of a slack in other trades and who want to profit at your expense. You have not observed any of them cutting the prices on their Bills-of-Fare, have you? No, and what's more they are not going to do any reducing which will curtail their income.

Don't wait until the sun shines on both sides of the street. Get going now and reap some of the fruits which a revived trade warrants.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-18

NOW IS THE TIME.

Tell me not in mournful numbers
That our lodge is on the bum,
Rouse up from your peaceful slumbers
And come and help us make things hum.

If we go to work in earnest
We can make things hit on high.
"Dust thou art, to dust returneth,"
Is a song of bye and bye.

Now's the time to do the boosting,
Do not wait tomorrow's dawn:
You may in the grave be roasting,
And your chance of boosting gone.

Lay aside your little hammer
Grab a horn and toot a few;
Squelch the knocker's dabburned yammer
With a joyful blast or two.

Our old lodge is sure a pippin,
And we ought to boost it big;
When we hear some growler yippin'
We should biff him on the wig.

Those who do not like our order
Ought to straightway hit the grit;
Boost for Moosedom—that's my ditty
Or arise and straightway "git."

—Kalamazoo Moose Journal.

THE OLD TIMER.

The expression is frequently heard that so and so is an Old Timer.

Sometimes we wonder what the phrase means, because we have noted that some of the workers so classed have not passed their thirty-fifth year on earth, therefore could hardly be regarded as having spent so very many years as workers in the catering industry. The Old Timer who does not have to put his memory to a test to recall the days when he worked from fourteen to sixteen hours and every day in the month, and at the end of the month was able to fondle seldom more than $18 for his services, could if pressed real hard, recite a story that would make some of the younger generation in the catering industry perk up and admit that there has been improvement in the industry since the institution of our International Union.

How many old timers are there in your local union who recall the days when the "men on the floor," white cloth men at that, thought they were doing "just fine" when a weekly pay day was inaugurated and the sum total of their gleanings for labor for that week was a "five spot." Did these workers receive greater remuneration before our International Union was instituted? Let your eyes scan the following excerpt from the annual report made to the Ninth General Convention, held in the city of St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A., May 14-18, 1901. The meetings were held at Walla Walla Hall, located at Tenth and Franklin Avenue.

"During the month of March I sent out to all affiliated locals, blanks with numerous important questions pertaining to the general welfare of the local union, requesting a return of the blanks filled out as correctly as possible. The results were not very complete, a decided percentage either ignoring the request or allowing the matter to lay over until it was too late; however, enough unions returned their reports to compile a partial resume, etc., etc.

"Total gains in wages per member per week (average), $1.00.

"Total gains in reduction of hours, from 1 to 5 hours per day.

"Wages run from $15 per month to $75 per month and board. Wages without board run from $7 per week to $25 per week."

Observe that the report advises that total gain in wages per member per week (averaged) $1.00.

You who peruse these excerpts cannot very well class yourself as an Old Timer if you did not enjoy (?) the benefits of labor long and hard for the figures quoted. These wages were obtained by activity of the local unions, therefore you can imagine what the non-union workers at the trade were drawing down as compensation.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

LAST GASP OF THE HOT STOVE LEAGUE
BEFORE ADJOURNMENT.

Just south of this bit of comment we reproduce two articles, the first by Tad, the second by the editor of the Times-Star. March 11, 1922, both interesting to fans who have been for the last few weeks eating up the dope from the Training Camps:

POLO GROUNDS HAS SHORTEST FENCES.

Time and time again we've heard arguments regarding the fields of the different ball lots. Very often it has been said that the Philadelphia National league grounds presented the shortest right-field fence. Then again there have been bets that the Brooklyn grounds was the shortest. All that is ended right here, for we have the real measurements and the Polo Grounds wins all the medals. It has the shortest fields, both in right and left. The measurements, in feet, follow:

	Left Field Fence	Right Field Fence
*New York, National league.....	288.8	256.3
Cincinnati, National league.....	320	384
Boston, American league.....	321	313.6
Philadelphia, National league.....	335	272
*St. Louis, American league.....	340	315
Chicago, National league.....	343	299
Detroit, American league.....	345	370
Pittsburgh, National league.....	356.6	276.6
Chicago, American league.....	362	362
Cleveland, American league.....	375	290
Philadelphia, American league.....	380	380
Boston, National league.....	404.5	365
Brooklyn, National league.....	418.9	296.2
Washington, American league.....	424	326

*Field used also by team from this city in other league.

AS IF BUILT FOR THE BABE.

Far be it from us to belittle Babe Ruth's prowess. It can't be done. He is a superman, if there is any such animal. His performance at Redland Field last summer, when he knocked a ball over the center-field fence, the first time it had been done, and into the right-field bleachers on the fly, also the first time it had been done, estops us. And what all the other fellows had been trying to do for ten years, he accomplished in one afternoon!

But the statistics as to the dimensions of the different ball parks do take something from Babe's record. The Polo Grounds have the shortest right-field fence of any in either league. In other words, the beyond yawns for Ruth's great looping flies, that in many instances would be outs on other fields built for the game, rather than for the swatter. And the Polo Ground's left-field fence is the shortest in the two leagues, a fact that gives that heavy right-handed hitter, Kelly of the Giants, something to shoot at.

What would be Ruth's record if he had a spacious park such as Redland Field to swing in throughout a season? It wouldn't be fifty-seven home runs.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WILL WIN, EVEN DEAD.

A merchant and a parson played golf together, and the parson, nearly always beaten, was growing gloomy.

"Never mind, father," comforted the merchant, "one of these days you'll be preaching my funeral sermon and then you can take your revenge."

"And at that it will be your hole!" came the retort morose.—Wayside Tales.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

THE ARMIES OF NIGHT.

With rattle and crack of the katydid.

With piping of whip-poor-will,

With flare and flash of fireflies' light

They cover the vale and hill.

With whirling planes of the silent bats,

The trenches where furred things lie,

And look-out nests where watch is kept.

The Armies of Night go by.—PAUL BLISS.

FATHER TIME BECKONED AGAIN.

Miss Edna Prichard, daughter of Brother A. M. J. Prichard, of Local 721, Salt Lake City, Utah, writing under date of March 1, 1922, imparts the information that "the old war horse," as papa calls him, Mr. Joseph Lane, passed away February 28, 1922, at 7:00 a. m., of influenza-pneumonia. His wife is not expected to live. The funeral has been postponed on that account."

Few members of our organization in the middle west were better and more favorably known than "the old war horse," for he was entitled to that endearing term, as Joe Lane was an exceptional official, a real sticker for the things that he believed in and knew were right, and there is little doubt but what in addition to the thousands of friends and acquaintances that Joe Lane listed, the membership of Local 721 will feel his loss now and in the days to come. Joe Lane, early in life identified himself with the labor movement in Salt Lake City, and in the State of Utah. He was a tireless advocate and always responded to whatever call was made upon him by his own union as well as the other labor unions in his City and State.

Brother Joe Lane represented Local 721 in several of our general conventions and due to that fact, as well as being host to hundreds of members who passed through Salt Lake City, he had friends in every section of America. Brother Lane left the world a better place to live in than when he arrived to play his part in the game of life.

Sincere condolences are hereby tendered to relatives and friends of Brother Joe Lane; may his memory encourage them to as useful a life.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

THE NEXT CONVENTION CITY.

That old bromide which many of our local unions have peddled for quite a number of years—"we really did not know when the convention was to be held, or our local union would have made arrangements to be represented," may be used again, but the user will have to be one thing or the other, blind as a bat or dumb as an oyster, for we propose—kind Providence permitting—to occupy a little space about every so often, reciting that there is to be a convention in the year 1923, that it will be held during the month of August, that the opening date is Monday morning, August 13, and that it is to be held in the second largest city in America—the City of Chicago in the State of Illinois. If any of you fellows are hard of hearing because of the fact that you wear woolen socks, you cannot very well use that excuse for being unable to read this and other items that we expect to pester you with. The last convention was a pretty nifty gathering. No brighter aggregation ever gathered in that Rainbow Room of the Winton Hotel. But in numbers it was beat by several conventions which were not so favorably situated. The Twenty-Second General Convention of our International Union ought to consist of at least twice as many delegates as responded to Roll Call in the City of Cleveland, Monday morning, August 8, 1920.

As a rule we do not advocate the cutting up our publication, but in this instance we suggest that this item be scissored out and pasted on the Bulletin Board in your local union headquarters. It may remind some of our members that despite the fact that their locals have been chartered for many years, no one has had the privilege of saying "Welcome to our City" to a delegate attending from the referred to absentee locals.

Get this—The Twenty-Second General Convention of our International Union will take place in the City of Chicago, in the State of Illinois, beginning Monday morning, August 13, 1923. All set, Okeh.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

AN ABERRATION.

I long for the swish of a silken strand,
For the wave-washed shore of foam and sand,
And I think and think as the clouds go by
Of summertime and a bright blue sky.

And my heart cords tighten on a sportsman's wish,
As I feel the tug of a fighting fish,
The steel rod's bend and the reel's shrill song
That says the fight will be hard and long.

The struggle is on and the line holds true
To the surging smash through the waters blue;
And the foam rises up and floats away
Where he makes the turn and stands at bay.

Down comes my thumb on the spool of the reel
And my mind slips away to a good "square meal."
I stiffen my back and survey the stream,
And awake to the fact—'twas a fisherman's dream.

T. C. DARLING.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-13-8-15

YOUR INVESTMENT IN THE UNION.

There are Savings Banks which pay four per cent interest on deposits. There are more, however, that pay three per cent. We will take the larger figure—four per cent—for the purpose of this bit of conversation.

We will assume that you paid $5.00 as an entrance fee to your local union and that you have been paying two dollars a month dues. Your first year deposit therefore reads: initiation fee, $5.00; monthly dues, $24.00, or a total of $29.00 for the year. We shall assume further that your local union held an entertainment or smoker and taxed each member, for one ticket, at a dollar a smash, as the saying goes. There you are, $30.00 invested for the year. Before you became a member of the union, your wages were two dollars a week less than they are now; in other words, you have worked 52 weeks for the agreed wage scale and as a return for being a member of the union you drew down twice fifty-two dollars, being as intimated, two dollars up and above the amount you formerly drew down. That figures out exactly $104.00 for the year. Your gross income for the year was $104.00 more than when you were "paddling your own canoe." To discover how much profit, or perhaps we should say, to discover your net gains on account of that investment and gain in wages, you simply deduct your deposit of $30.00 from the $104.00 and you have the tidy sum of $74.00. Is that frenzied finance or is it investment worth while? If you had stuck that $30.00 in bank and drew down the usual rate of interest, you would have—figure it out and see, and then ask yourself if your investment in the union is a revenue producer.

And yet, you have heard some of these would-be "Moses in the Bullrushes" waste a lot of good breath asking foolish question number 98765432—"What good is the union, anyhow?"

PERTINENT STATISTICS.

From time to time we have had occasion to refer to the figures offered by the Census Bureau, and at other times, when the Census Bureau failed to supply the figures, we have made a "guess" coming fairly close to approximate facts. The following is taken from the April, 1922, number of the Scientific American, and based upon official returns from the Census of 1920:

(Females engaged in gainful occupations.)

Agriculture	1,084,000	12.7%
Manufacturing	1,931,000	22.6%
Transportation	214,000	2.5%
Trade	670,000	7.8%
Professional	1,016,000	11.9%
Domestic and Personal	2,184,000	25.5%
Clerical	1,424,000	16.7%

How our female workers are distributed over the several broad classifications into which the Census Bureau groups them. The 0.3 per cent unaccounted for are engaged in mining and public service, but in such small numbers that they cannot be satisfactorily shown on the same scale with groups above represented. The "Domestic and Personal" group includes only hired workers, and not home-keeping wives and mothers, who are officially listed as without occupation.

Males engaged in gainful occupations.)

Agriculture	9,867,000	29.9%
Mining	1,087,000	3.3%
Manufacture	10,882,000	32.9%
Transportation	2,852,000	8.6%
Trade	3,574,000	10.8%
Professional	1,136,000	3.4%
Domestic and Personal	1,216,000	3.7%
Clerical	1,696,000	5.1%

The way in which the male workers are distributed over the same groups. The public service workers, 2.3 per cent of the total, are again not represented. As might have been expected, the men and women are allocated in entirely different proportions to most of the groups. The most significant feature of the showing here made is the size of the "Manufacture" group, and the fact that less than one-third of the male workers are able to produce food for all of us.

From the foregoing the reader may be able to approximate the field of our International Union, adding the two "Domestic and Personal" groups, give a total of 3,400,000 workers. Members with a penchant for figuring have here ample material for several hours work.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

THE ONUS OF THE BONUS.

A serious ragged hobo on an old park bench,
Thinking of the days in an Argonne trench,
When home seemed ever smiling, waiting for the boys,
With welcomings and wages and the homeland joys.

What a rude awakening comes these days,
Neither work nor welcome, naught but windy praise.

He made it nice and easy for the patriot-profiteer
And the gratitude reserved for him fills nothing but the ear.

JIM BISHOP, Cooks' Union No. 44.

KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH OLD FRIENDS.

We had a visitor at headquarters a week or two ago; one who had traveled much in his younger days, but who picked out a good town, married, settled down and has a home already paid for.

We had known this brother for years and knew that when he lit out of a town his old pal, Dave, was right along. Therefore, when we asked what became of Dave and received in response a shrug of the shoulders and admission that Dave had never written him since he settled down, we looked and wondered whether our visitor was kidding us. But no, the answer was on the level. Tom had not heard from Dave in several years, and knew less about his present location than any one. Did you ever write to Dave? Yes, several times; but outside of sending me a picture postcard of the hotel he was then working in, no word ever came to me in the last eight or ten years.

Why is it that workers in the catering industry get out of the habit of writing to their old time friends and acquaintances? Is friendship such a common thing that it is not valued any more?

There is less writing between members of this organization and more to write about and interesting subjects, too, than of any organization on the map.

During the war several of our members wrote us, making complaint that their old time buddies did not keep in touch with them and expressed surprise over their failure. We kept up a run of letters to many of our overseas vets, quite a number of them written at home when we might have been engaged in recreation and resting up. Some of these members we never met before they went overseas, and many of them we have not met yet, but we felt that "a letter from home" was what they wanted and that is what they got, too, as a number of them will willingly testify. Why not keep in touch with men whom you have known for years, traveling members, who might be induced to write an occasional response. An exchange of letters is a great aid to friendly feeling. It is a real advantage, for it means retaining friends, no matter where one may travel. When the writer was secretary of a local union, he made it a practice to write sister locals at least once a month, advising them of conditions under our jurisdiction. The responses were given careful attention by the members at meetings. That was before we had the MIXER AND SERVER. But the practice is worth while today, in fact, no better method can be devised to keep locals in the same zone in touch with one another and keeping posted on happenings in the nearby cities.

To some the task of writing a letter is about the hardest that can be assigned to them, and if they but realized how easy it is to write an interesting letter and how well pleased the recipients are, there would be more of our boys and girls "take pen in hand" and perform the correspondence stunt. You cannot start earlier than today. Suppose you do write to that old buddy of yours and see what he has to say for himself. Eh, what?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

Gertrude—Well, anyway, George dresses like a gentleman.

Clare—Indeed! I never saw him dressing.—
Life.

THE KNOCKERS.

The dreamer blazes out a path to lands remote and dim,
Far heights men never trod, until the vision beckoned him.

And ere the jungle closes round where first he struggled through,
The builder comes upon his heels to make the dream come true.

Dreamer and builder, hand in hand, across the earth they go;
The trails they make, the towers they build, the wondering world may know
And when their temples stand complete, challenging heaven's crown,
The knockers gather round, and start to talk the structure down.

For this was builded in a way that breaks all proper rules;
And that design is incorrect, according to the schools;
And this offends most shockingly some fundamental law;
And that—like this, and all the rest—displays some hopeless flaw.

And so the critics saunter home, confiding each to each,
How mightier than spade or sword is man's great weapon, speech;
And each congratulating each, that by their words alone
The dreamer's dream, the builder's work, are wholly overthrown.

And while the critic fellows sleep, the builders come again,
And recreate from dust the dream the knockers would have slain;
Not perfect quite—proclaiming still the crudeness
of the clod—
But wrought the stalwart service in the toil of man and God.

And while the knocker folk deplore, and strive to fix the blame
Dreamer and worker, hand in hand, toil onward
just the same;
Content to build as best they know—as every builder may—
And caring not one single damn for what the critics say.

TED OLSEN, in Forbes Magazine.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

WHAT'S THE MATTER WITH KANSAS?

No doubt you have perused the newspaper article about the amount required by a girl to dress respectably for one year, and the tempest in a teapot that article raised. Well, here is the item in all of its pristine beauty. Read it and then you will understand why all the turbulent talk. We clipped the item from the Times-Star of March 1, 1922:

"Emporia, Kan.—A working girl can dress comfortably and neatly on $90 a year, according to testimony introduced by Emporia merchants at a hearing conducted by the Kansas Court of Industrial Relations in Emporia.

"To prove this claim H. W. Glass, manager of a chain store in Emporia, exhibited a year's wardrobe which can be purchased for between $85 and $90.
Principal items in the $90 wardrobe are:

One wool dress (to wear four seasons)	$13.90
One cotton dress	3.98
One gingham apron73
One coat (to wear three years)	22.50
One coat suit (to wear three seasons)	14.75
One outing nightgown79
One muslin gown98
One kimono	1.49
One pair high shoes	3.98
One pair of oxfords	2.98
Two hats, each	4.00
One Georgette blouse	3.98
Two cotton blouses
Two cotton dresses
Cotton stockings23
Four vests15
Underwear49
Corset98
Teddies58

"Gloves, handkerchiefs and other incidentals should be paid for with the remainder.

"Henry Nichols, a cafe owner, testified a woman could live on 60 cents a day for meals. He allowed doughnuts and coffee for breakfast, a hot sandwich and coffee for lunch, and meat, potatoes and vegetables for dinner.

"Emporia club women who attended the hearing declared the $90 budget and 60-cent meal allowance are inadequate."

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

A COMPLICATED CASE.

"And what is the doctor suffering from?"

"Mrs. Brown's rheumatism, Mr. Smith's chronic dyspepsia, Miss Green's nervous depression and Mrs. Jones' weak heart."—Life.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

TELL IT TO YOUR SECRETARY.

Members in good standing in our International Union are entitled to a copy of the MIXER AND SERVER. But unless you furnish the Secretary with your home or rooming-house address, there is no chance for you to obtain it, as it is against the rules of the post office department to send bundle mail to one address. Secretaries may tell you that they sent your name in on their reports. That is probably true, but they did not have your address, and consequently you are not getting what you are paying for and entitled to receive. A good way to overcome being left out of the mailing list is to walk up to the Secretary and write down, plain enough for anyone to read, your name and address and on the top of the card you use, write the words "For the Mailing List of the MIXER AND SERVER." If that doesn't do the trick tell it to the Secretary again at the meeting of your local. A postal card, asking us to place you on the Mail
List of your local, if offering a street address and Okeyed by your Secretary will be given attention.

Make up your mind that you are going to get what's coming to you, for you are paying for the MIXER AND SERVER and it will be your fault if you do not get it regularly.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

SAID AND DONE.

The speedometer said sixty miles an hour
The constable said it was ninety,
The natives said it was a crime,
He said it was the life.
His friends said it
With flowers.

—Wayside Tales.

CORRESPONDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Once more I take this means of letting our brother and sister locals know that Local 307 is still on the map: yes, very much so.

As everybody throughout the country must know by this time, the State is all tied up with a textile strike, and there can be but one end, the workers' victory. The entire labor movement is behind the textile workers, perhaps as much so because of the fairness of the cause as for the type of men managing the strike, who are the cleanest-cut, straightforward men ever connected with any labor trouble in this State.

The Grand Old Man, Samuel Gompers, paid our city a visit Sunday, March 12, and was greeted by the mayor, governor and a packed house at Emery Theater. He assured the textile workers of the support of the A. F. of L., both financially and morally.

At our meeting on March 6 it was voted that a check for $50 be sent to the textile workers with our best wishes.

The new Biltmore Hotel has announced its opening for May 15, but as yet we are uncertain as to the benefits we may derive. However, our business agent is on the job and will meet Mr. Dailey, the manager, during the week of March 27 to see how things look for our boys. Also, during the same week, he will start his usual summer campaign, which has been very effective in the past. John is on the job, and has forgotten all about the contest he went through for the office of business agent.

We feel that the services of a female organizer in our city very soon would be of great benefit to our craft, as the girls are on many good jobs. If it is possible to have one come, please send her as soon as possible.

Our present home is to be remodeled as soon as bids are let for the work. At the present time Sherriff has the low bid, and it don't look as if any of the boys will beat Phil's bid.

Business is not very brisk here at present, but we are getting on better, perhaps, than many towns we hear of. Traveling-card men coming our way had better have a paid-up card, or it will be cold for them in Providence, as Jack Ford likes to see a clean slate.

Bonds have been filed for our officers and the books are being checked up so all will be in good, healthy condition when this is read. We are greatly interested in campaign of education of the workers of our city by holding mass meetings and having best speakers that can be secured to address the same, and teaching the worker how best he can keep his pay envelope healthy.

The result of the visit of our General President to our local can be seen at every meeting since, and we are thankful to him for his visit and interest.

Fraternally yours,

GEO. K. MCKENNA,
Publicity Secretary, Local 307.

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—At the present time of writing Local 329 has been involved in a little mixup in the district court of this city.

This trouble started over the carrying of an advertising card advertising our local and the union house card in front of a small lunch-room, the proprietor of which has refused to sign up with our organization.

At the beginning we had excellent support from the Heel Workers' Union, also from the Teamsters' Union. They were also brought into court, and let me say right now that they haven't put it over on us and every union represented in court has so far come out on the top of the "pile."

A short time ago among our members we had a man named Herman Wolson, who, finding the need of a watch and chain, took it upon himself to appropriate that of another brother. The watch which is of considerable value has been recovered in a local pawnshop, but not so with Herman, as he immediately disappeared and has not been seen or heard from since. This man claims to have come to Lynn from Philadelphia, and if at any time he should seek admission into any of the local unions of that city, why they can use their own judgment in regards to him.

There seems to be some delay in receiving the MIXER AND SERVER each month. Many of the members have remarked that they have not received theirs until nearly three weeks after date of publication as a matter of fact on the 28th of February I received mine dated the 15th.

Our worthy president, Brother Elwyn A. Burns, Sr., and myself have received many inquiries as to what Brother Al. Perry is doing.

I wish to say on his behalf, that he is still on the job at Wyman's Restaurant, 95 Oxford Street, and would like to hear from any of our brothers and sisters who are out of town, especially Brother "Skip" Coen, who I believe is in Los Angeles at the present time. Although not holding office at present, Brother Perry is still active on several committees, he being chairman of two of our most important committees, on which he has served faithfully since he tendered his resignation as "perpetual" secretary-treasurer on January 1 last.

Has anyone found a pair of shoes? Brother Al seems to have a little trouble at times in locating his "kicks," and if anyone has a few pair of extras not in use I think they would be welcomed by our former secretary-treasurer. As to who is the cause of the disappearance it is unknown, but Brother Al has his suspicions and isn't saying much. But of course unlike the rest of us, Al has two pair of shoes and he living on the same street as the restaurant can reach home safely in his old ones, providing it isn't raining.

Yours fraternally,

EARLE M. TERRILL,
Press Secretary, Local 329.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—To prevent many of the members of the International Union concluding that Local 167 has ceased to exist, this contribution is offered. We are very much alive despite the fact that trade conditions are far from excellent, and notwithstanding the activity of the fanatics who put prohibition over on us, we may be found at the old stand, and hustling for what we believe to be our rights. We are now preparing for an organization wave, one that will put members of our union at work in the smaller restaurants before the 1922 agreement goes into effect, therefore we suggest that traveling members who have this city on their list for a visit will refrain from making the visit until a latter period. Work is scarce, in fact we are having more than ordinary difficulty in placing members on occasional or extra work.

We have made fair progress with our Americanization classes, many of our members having secured their first papers and others making final preparation for examination before the proper authorities. We feel exceedingly pleased with results secured so far, the attendance at the Americanization classes being beyond expectations and the interest shown proves that our efforts are appreciated. If everything goes well, we will have not less than two-thirds of our members registered voters before the next election, every one of whom can be depended upon to vote for liberalization of existing dry laws. Light wine and good beer is a wonderful incentive. You would be astonished how many of our fellow workers need no other argument than to be told that when they are citizens they can vote the fanatics out of office and stand a chance of getting more liberal laws.

Cooks' union, Local 167, gave a ball and culinary exhibition, February 4, in the ball room at the Winton Hotel. The affair was a gratifying success, putting in the shade all our previous efforts during the twenty-one years of our existence. The Winton ball room is one of the largest in Ohio, yet was hardly large enough to accommodate our friends, well-wishers and members with their families. You get an idea of how strong a drawing card our entertainment was when the fact is noted that we had approximately fifteen hundred people visit the exhibition and attend the dance. Many people attended from near-by towns; they were determined to see the cooks at their best and were not disappointed. Local 167 is grateful to the artists who contributed their handiwork, their skill being a revelation to many who never see the men in the kitchen nor appreciate the fact that in addition to being skilled food preparers, they also have an artistic touch which surprised the unknowing. The exhibits were attractively placed and more than one lingering glance said as plainly as words could express it—If they would only let me partake of some of that good stuff to eat I would be satisfied.

All who aided us in making artistic pieces, promise to repeat next year; without their splendid work the ball would hardly have been the big success it proved to be. As an indication of some of the work done by our artists, the accompanying picture of a sewing machine is offered. Brother Christian Koch, chef at the White Sewing Machine plant, is the artist. It may be well to say that if the machine constructed by Brother Koch were put in an oven for a few moments, it would melt. This comment is made so that the reader will get over the idea that the exhibit was nothing but a machine decorated with icing or tallow.

Once more we wish to tender to the artists who generously made exhibits for our culinary exhibition, our sincerest thanks and appreciation. I am, with greetings to all members and in behalf of Local 167,

Yours fraternally,

J. LIEBERMAN.

Recording Secretary, Local 167.

CHRISTIAN KOCH
Member of Cooks' Union, Local 167, Chef of the White Sewing Machine Cafe, Cleveland, Ohio.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—After passing two months of the present year, with the month of January featuring as about the worst January so far as the hotel and restaurant business is concerned since 1896, for, if my memory serves me correctly, it was around towards the close of President Cleveland's term in office. At that time I was merely what might be termed an apprentice; to be precise, my official position was that of dummy-boy at Boothby's Chestnut Street house. Was a pretty tough job at that for a kid and many of these rushes so common in that particular place had my curly locks standing at attention. However, I can still recall the abundance of soup kitchens which the hard time prevalent then made a necessity. The commencement of the present year appeared to me as if business had struck a toboggan, the foot of which had got lost in the shuffle. February came along and was away below normal, with the worst, as we thought, yet to come. There, staring us in the face, was our March calendar, the first day appearing in flaming figures of red, indicating we were confronted with the Lenten season; business as bad as it could be, and if precedent was to be considered, then it seemed time to ring down the curtain. But such was not to be, as on March 4—somewhat of a red-letter day in national events—came a merry little tinkle on our telephone bell, a brief conversation, business of too important a matter at this stage to discuss at length over the wire, a hurried slip into an overcoat, a request to a brother for company, for obvious reasons, a car ride, and we were then ushered into the sanctum sanctorum of the most prominent and the busiest caterer in town. He was not slow in getting down to business, first producing figures of past, present and future bookings, which I might say were abnormal. Frankly I can state that only for the figures in front of me I could never have believed it, as everyone else hereabouts seemed to be afflicted with a spell of coma. He stated that he could afford to pay for certain work which seemed to me, with a little figuring, would be agreeable to all concerned. Therefore, we did that same figuring and after suggesting a system differing to the one he had been using and illustrating it would be productive of the same results, he was convinced that a trial would not be amiss. Therefore, we were able to depart with a memorandum in the inside pocket containing the order for two days hence which amounted to about one hundred and eighty-five dollars for extra work. Some of the succeeding days were much larger, in fact, prior to typing this letter, am booking nine separate jobs for the same caterer. Not so bad, and this is Lent.

The best part of all this is my ability to state that the boys have all seemed to make a determined and united effort to deliver the goods in a cheerful and business-like manner. Here is the opportunity for Local 279 to convince employers that their "emporium" is the one at which to deal.

Keep up the good work, boys, and you need doff your hat to no local in the matter of efficiency and the numerical strength will soon show for itself. All it requires is a little perseverance, appearance and quality of service. You know our locals state with pride that they are able to furnish qualified craftsmen; then let us show the world we can back up our statement. Slackers may kindly prolong their vacation.

Was chatting a couple of weeks ago with a few of the boys of the "round table"—no, not one with an emerald top—and the conversation drifted into the way some of them embarked in the business. It was quite interesting and served to recall my own adventure. I remember well how an old oyster-opener working in the same shack as I, said, "Kid, don't you know that anyone getting into this here damned business never gets out of it?" I think he sympathized with me, but strangely enough, his words contained quite a lot of truth. I meet him occasionally and he is still hammering on the old block. I have heard often of people lying to get out of something but I confess I lied in order to get into the business. So I was thereby able to put in my story at the table. Just a wee messenger boy, No. 41 of the A. D. T., walking leisurely with my messages—or rather other people's messages—didn't smoke cigarettes yet. Got a call from a restaurant; was sent to the office of the Public Ledger with an ad for a cashier; read it, and wondered why I should walk around in the cold—and it was cold—week before Christmas by the way. Came back after reasonable time had expired and informed the owner of the restaurant that the newspaper office was closed. Thought he was going to annihilate me. Then asked him how he would like to give me the job. He was so astounded that I suppose he figured the drinks were on him. He asked me a few questions in mental arithmetic, which was the least of my worries, as I knew I could qualify under that examination. Then he asked me to write something. I was not a good writer, in fact, the worst in the school—and then some. So I said it was hardly fair to judge my writing, as it was so cold, and my hands were nearly frozen. How I did bless that cold spell, for that saved me, as I sure would have been called "out." Anyway, he said he would make inquiries. His sister then appeared on the scene. She had no kids of her own; perhaps she thought I would be worthy of adoption. Be that as it may, she put in a good word. Inquiries were made next day and I think my boss must have fabricated too, or he wanted to get rid of me, for he told the prospective boss of mine that I was the best boy in the place. That settled it, and that is the way your humble servant lied himself into the business.

Yes, without question, the oyster-opener was right in my case.

The story related above was only one of the stories in the school of scandal, though some of the others were of sufficient interest to get into print.

Had the pleasure of hearing an address by Mrs. Raymond Robbins during the month, in which she gave some interesting stories of her trip through European countries, relating the conditions as she found them in various parts. The other speaker, Mr. Moffitt, conciliator of the Department of Labor, also delighted the audience with his ever-interesting stories. Prior to the address, Mrs. Robbins and Mr. Moffitt were guests at a banquet engineered by Pauline Newman and Frieda S. Miller of the Trades Women's Union League of this city. Miss Miller took especial pains to insure same being held in a union restaurant, although any one acquainted with this charming young miss needs no reminder of her efforts to further the interests of the working class.

Fraternally yours,

GEO. F. ANDERSON,

Local 279.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It is quite sometime since I wrote my last article, but now I want to write an open appeal to all members of the International, particularly to the brothers of Locals 1 and 2:

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS—As a man who is watching very closely the labor conditions throughout the country I can see that the catering industry is not let out of it, but in our city of Brooklyn I must say, to the benefit of our Local 2, and to the credit of the officers, particularly to the business agents, that so far we haven't lost one inch of the conditions we had until now, and we hope to continue the same in the future.

But brothers and worthy sisters, let me tell you that in order to keep up good conditions, it is up to the members to stand by their officers and support them in every move they make, as this means our benefit and, like good soldiers, are heroes, because what they win it is for the faith they have in their generals. So let us have all good faith in our leaders and we will sure be the heroes in our future struggles with the bosses.

Now, brothers, I wish to inform you that very soon the season in Coney Island begins, and this year no new places are opening up, and whereas Local 2, of Brooklyn, has elected Brother Jack Brav to take charge of all places in Coney Island, I therefore plead to all members of Locals 1 and 2 not to come out by themselves looking for a job, as this means that the boss can handle them individually and so they work under no union conditions, as the case was last summer. Go to Brother Brav and he will place you to work in right time and under good union conditions as they prevail by us in the city of Brooklyn, and I have no doubt that you all know that we have the best conditions and best wages of any local of the International.

I close with fraternal love and sincere wishes for a good summer season. With greetings to all.

MORRIS STEIN,

Member, Local 2.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

QUEBEC, CANADA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from Local 492, of the Old Rock City, and as this is my initial effort, I plead in advance kindly consideration of the readers of our magazine, the MIXER AND SERVER.

The big event of the year occurred on February 24, 1922, when our union gave its third annual dance, and it was the success which all members hoped for. We had union music, which is something new in this section, and it made a deserved hit. All in attendance were pleased and as we lead in matters of entertainment, those who desire success must employ union musicians or else be satisfied with poor results. We had disposed of about 200 tickets at one dollar each, and had reason to expect good attendance, in fact we did have. Supper followed in which all participated, and when we advise you that we had twenty-five dozen quarts of the kind of beer most cooks enjoy, the kind that carries a ten per cent authority—you know that when we say kick, that is what the beverage contained. While we enjoyed that beverage, many of us, myself included, were wishing that we had as guests some of our brothers from the Great North American Sahara, who seldom enjoy anything stouter in the beer line than one-half of one per cent, and everybody knows that the beverage has no moral or legal right to be called beer.

Early in the dance our boys got steam up and you should see them go, you never saw such speed in and about a kitchen as was exhibited at our dance. Even our Grand Old Man Breton, never missed a dance and as far as that ten per cent stuff—well the old boy is no cripple nor minus a thirst. Brother Charles Tavignot disclosed that as a dancer he was right there, in fact one of the ladies asserted he was a scream. Brother Rish turned loose and proved to the satisfaction of all, that he shakes a wicked foot. Brother Holmes did not attend; says he does not like bottled beer, and it occurred to me that, perhaps he could have secured a substitute in the States that would have been pleased to imbibe his share. Don't all speak at once, boys.

Possibly Brother Holmes likes his in a can, it is more homelike to hit it that way, at least many of our boys think so. But oh you bottled beer, eh?

Brother Doyle had a wonderful time. Mrs. Doyle says Billy tried to show that living on St. Patrick Street has a real influence. He tried a few fancy Irish steps that astonished his wife.

Brother Alexander Chéry was floor-manager and astonished many of us who had never seen him dolled up in action before; he knows how to keep the ball a-rolling.

Brother Petroni arrived with a couple of fair ladies and saw to it that they had an enjoyable time. One of the old-time members said Brother Petroni was a bear, as if being a bear meant that you had to have two ladies escort you to an entertainment. Who wouldn't want to be a bear under such enjoyable conditions? Some of the ladies showed that even if they did put in several hours daily "peeling spuds" that they were right on the job when it came to tripping the light fantastic toe. Oh you heart-breakers.

Brothers Baltera, Enocco and Roebbling were the busy boys of the evening, they were here and there and everywhere aiding in helping our many guests have a good time, and they were successful, if the rewards in the form of smiles is taken into consideration.

Brother Soetens was chief mixologist of the evening, fearing that the girls and boys would not have enough of the good beer ready, he opened so many quarts that rather than see the beer go flat, the undersigned generously volunteered to reduce the quantity and neither of us regarded the task as an impossible one. Every one of our members interested themselves in making the dance a genuine success; of course some of them did not get to the hall until a late hour, but despite that fact they did their share to make our guests comfortable and saw to it that all had a good time.

We have a splendid bunch of loyal good fellows, they are deeply interested in their organization and can be relied upon to co-operate with the officers.

Local 492 will never be a numerically big union, but it will always be one of the best in the Dominion, because the members really work for the promotion of the union and the interest of their fellow members.

In a few words, we are a happy family and expect to remain that way for years to come. With cordial greetings to all locals and members, I am

Fraternally yours,

JACK MALLIN,
Financial Secretary, Local 492.

WILMINGTON, DELAWARE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well here are a few lines for the MIXER AND SERVER and I hope you will get it all in because it was a hard battle won and a lot of sore heads left out. My but what hard luck for the drys, but what it takes to do this kind of work we have it here in Wilmington, Delaware

City Council of Wilmington, Delaware, adopted a resolution by a vote of 7 to 5, for beer and light wine. There was a burst of applause from 50 or more spectators in the room and some of the councilmen who had supported the measure. The resolution read as follows:

The enactment and passage of the Federal Prohibition act has failed to meet with the approval of the general public throughout the country, while most comprehensive, drastic and summary in its character and scope, efforts to enforce same at vast public expense, have utterly failed to obtain and secure for it due and proper respect and obedience on the part of the people, abundant statistics of unimpeachable nature fully and conclusively demonstrate the fact that the general public is opposed to existing prohibition laws which deprive people of the natural and customary use and consumption of stimulating beverage. A general survey of conditions throughout the country suggest a reasonable and liberal modification of prohibition laws which will permit the manufacture, sale and distribution of wholesome beer and light wine. Be it therefore,

Resolved, That it is the sense of the City Council of the City of Wilmington, in meeting assembled, that the Congress of the United States of America and the State of Delaware, amend and modify existing prohibition laws under their proper powers which will permit the manufacture, sale and distribution of wholesome beer and light wine, and that all governmental revenue derived from such permission be set aside as a separate fund for the payment of bonuses to ex-service men; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to each of the following named officials by the city clerk of the City of Wilmington:

To the President of the United States and Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Governor of the State of Delaware.

That in the event the Governor of the State of Delaware will call an extraordinary session of the General Assembly he shall include and make a part of such call the subject matter expressed in and by the resolution.

Bartenders' Union, Local 466, is looking forward to the next election, when we shall look up every one who voted against the beer and light wine in Council and believe me we are going to get after those dry boys hot. The writer attended all four of these meetings and some hot words were spoken. So whenever a thing like this comes up in a town where there is B. I. L. local, boys go after it and do all you can to win the fight; that is how to show your colors.

Now just a little word to every brother and sister of our International Union:

Go to your union meetings. Don't say your are too tired; the weather is too bad, or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest you.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Hoping that we will all attend a little better in the future and work harder for the boy in white apron and coat, and behind it all, never lay down on the job.

With best wishes from the members and officers of Bartenders' Union, Local 466, of Wilmington, Delaware, I am

Yours fraternally,

JOHN J. DOWELL,
Secretary, Local 466.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-18

ALBANY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—It is with pleasure that I report added progress in the building up of Local 471. Delinquent brothers are coming back into the fold, thereby showing themselves to be regular fellows. Nevertheless, they had to be shown that what we had to offer was to their advantage to share with us.

On March 24 we were called upon to bury Bro. Charles Clarkson, who had been in harness for over twenty-five years, the last four of which were spent in Albany. He had worked in nearly every large city from the eastern to the western coast, and many old-timers may recall him. Although many efforts have been made to locate relatives of the deceased brother, our efforts have been unavailing. If any member of the International knows anything about his family, Business Agent Matz would appreciate any information that can be given. It is believed that his home was in either Boston or Chicago.

We are now approaching our quiet season. The legislature has adjourned after a rather turbulent session, with a corresponding dropping off in the patronage of the hotels and restaurants. During the last week of the session we were honored with a visit by our General President, who was in Albany in the interest of bills affecting our crafts.

Our last big banquet was the Legislative Correspondent's Dinner, which is similar to the famous Gridiron Dinner, a yearly event in the National Capitol. Our old war horse, Samuel Gompers, sat at the table with the governor of the State, Nathan Miller, and other high State officials, and heartily enjoyed the fun as the newspaper boys kidded the State official family for its acts of omission and commission during the session just closed.

Now to wait for the summer season and the fine-weather boys to drop around.

Fraternally yours,

CHARLES OLIVER,
Press and Rec. Sec., Local 471.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-18

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Since we have been told by some members that they look forward to the coming of THE MIXER AND SERVER monthly; that they seek out the correspondence pages in anticipation of a letter from Local 196, and since you allow us space for our efforts, we feel constrained to send in some kind of a contribution to please these members as well as to keep the membership at large in touch with us, whether we are interesting or not.

We were lacking inspiration and were at a loss to think of something to write about, when Dame Nature came in and helped us in our dilemma. We were taken sick two weeks ago and were forced to comply with the laws of nature and stay in bed for ten days. During this interim, besides being visited by quite a few of the brothers, we had a heart-to-heart talk with two M. D.'s, as well as a thorough overhauling. We were told that our nerves were not made of iron; that nature demanded a let-up on the strain. We can not for the life of us see where we have any chance to follow the advice and orders of the learned medicos. "Don't worry," they tell us, just like that, as if a conscientious business agent could stop worrying in these trying times, when one has to buck up against everyone from the Chamber of Commerce, the proprietors, the managers, etc., down to the busboy. A sample of some of the troubles a business agent faces is well depicted in the following:

IFS ABOUT THE BUSINESS AGENT.

If he writes a letter, it is too long.
 If he sends a postal, it is too short.
 If he edits a pamphlet, he's a spendthrift.
 If he goes to a committee meeting, he's butting in.
 If he stays away, he's shirking.
 If the meeting is small, he should have called the members up.
 If he calls them up, he's a pest.
 If he duns a member for his dues, he's insulting.
 If he does not collect them, he's crazy.
 If a meeting is a howling success, JOHN HENRY is praised.
 If it is a failure, the business agent is to blame.
 If he asks for suggestions, he's incompetent.
 If he doesn't he's bull-headed.
 Ashes to ashes,
 Dust to dust,
 If the others won't do it,

THE BUSINESS AGENT MUST.

While we were home sick, the tales that were told us about the comments of some of the members regarding our absence, were so brutal and nonsensical that they became ludicrous and comical, giving us a vivid example of the inconsistency of some of our supposed to be loyal, good fellow members. Nevertheless, after a day or two back on the job we find them smiling at us with expressions of such innocence and suavity trying to make us believe that they were our life-long bosom friends.

With all these handicaps, we were pleased to learn from President Flore himself, who stopped in for an hour's visit, that 196 is in as good, and in many instances, in better shape than any local in the country, hence you will readily see that it behooves us to keep up courage and not lose heart in face of the many obstacles and reverses confronting us, and throw the knocks, insinuations and slurs of these dissatisfied members in the waste basket.

We anticipate some changes in the hotels here, in the near future; changes that will benefit our members to a certain extent. The nature of these changes we cannot divulge at this time, but next month we hope to be in a position to give you more details.

We are looking forward to spring and the re-opening of the summer places and employment for some of our out-of-work members, and we hope that by that time some of our worries will be alleviated.

Again extending to you and the membership our sincere greetings and best wishes, we remain as ever,

Faternally yours,

ED. A. LALANNE,

Business Agent, Financial and Press Secretary,
 Local 196.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Could it be possible and would it be too much to ask if you could add the following to my contribution of the 17th inst. I just received the MIXER AND SERVER for March and would like to say this:

P. S.—Brother George Anderson, of Philadelphia, batting for Brother Banas, in the March issue of the MIXER AND SERVER, certainly hit for a home run. His article should be read and memorized by every member of the International.

Faternally yours,

ED. A. LALANNE,

Business Agent and Financial Secretary, Local 196.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Received my MIXER AND SERVER today and, having an evening to myself for a wonder, went through it from cover to cover. Enjoyed a "Regular Fellow" on the inside of the front cover; kept reading on and finished with the back cover. Then I remembered that I am honored by being press secretary of Local 33 and ought to be penalized for not performing.

Well, we have had some busy times around here for the past five months, and it ain't over yet; 'taint going to be over until we clean up. Our locals in Seattle have worked for over twenty years to get living conditions—an eight-hour day, a six-day week and reasonable pay. I said worked, and I meant it. Many of the veterans (some have gone on, God bless 'em) can remember, the battles we went through during that long period; but we made the grade.

About five months ago the "open shoppers" posted notices in their places informing their employees that on the following morning a cut in wages would prevail and the place be run as an "open shop." All our locals were involved. Within forty-eight hours we had some three hundred members on the street. The second week of the trouble, the members working, all of 'em, cooks, helpers, waiters, waitresses and beverage dispensers, assessed themselves a day's pay, and for twelve weeks thereafter $1.25 a week for cooks and $1 a week for other crafts. They came through like regular folks, as they are. This was in addition to their regular dues, which, in Local 33, was $2.50 a month. Local 33 still has an assessment on of 75 cents a week, and the other locals are coming along. One firm mixed up in the trouble had seven places at the start; now they are off the map. Yes; we have had some time. We had over $3,000 in a bank that busted just before the trouble; but, luckily we had several thousand dollars' worth of Liberty Bonds in a safety vault, and still have most of 'em. Just to show that we are still in the game, our local invested another thousand dollars in our daily labor paper last month and is contributing monthly to the miners who are locked out in our State.

The "open shoppers" started a dual organization. Yes; fixed up a place for 'em. They have moved once already to smaller quarters, and they have one more move coming—you know.

We got mussed up a little bit of course; woke us up. We have put a lot of coin in circulation, but the boys and girls dug it up and not a nickel went astray, all accounted for and nobody went shy. And now the sun is beginning to shine and the grass getting a little longer. Say, Boss, do you think we are ever going to let loose of that eight-hour day and six-day week? Oh, no! Don't you think we are going to be ready for next winter?

Oh, yes; and the fellows that are left who disturbed the good relations we have had here for years are going to know we are around during that time. We helped to build the city and we are going to stay; that's how well we like it.

"SEATTLE, U. S. A."

On your rolling hills, in silent splendor,
You grace the shores of the murmuring sea;
And something about your wondrous beauty
Holds deep in the heart of one's memory.
Snow-capped mountains all about you;
Rivers and lakes, and tall green trees,
Inspire the souls of a million lovers,
With you in the heart of all of these!
Kissed by the sun at the tip of the morning;
Soothed by a breeze as the shadows fall—
Glorious guardian of western wonders!
Seattle, we love you best of all!
—HELEN HARDY, in Union Record, Mar. 21, 1922.
Yes, we are still on the map, and, what is more,
we are going to remain.

Yours fraternally,
BOB HESKETH,
Press Secretary Local 33.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARLESTON, S. C.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The cooks' local of Charleston is rapidly progressing in a business way. Although the struggle has been hard, we will hold out until the end.

Recently the Hametic Corporation of this city purchased a lot and built a large hotel, known as the Hametic Hotel, which has been leased to Cooks' Local 539 for one year and was opened on February 18, 1922, and we are making good. All members of the International Union who travel south and come to our city should bear in mind that we have a hotel managed and operated by union men. We want all traveling men to patronize us while in our city, and assure them the utmost courtesy and fair treatment.

Yours fraternally,
A. F. ALLEN,
Financial Secretary, Local 539.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ASTORIA, OREGON.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Thought it about time the readers of the MIXER AND SERVER were reading a few lines from this neck of the woods, better known as the New York of the Pacific, where rail, water and ocean meet. This is the oldest town in the great Northwest, but did not ever actually start to move ahead until the culinary workers organized and affiliated with the International and woke up this town.

Culinary Alliance, Local 311, received its charter June, 1916, but never got actually started until the spring of 1918, and we sure started to go ahead for at present we have a hundred per cent organized town, and one of the most active labor unions in the city, also the largest membership of any labor union here.

President Homer B. Adkins, of our local, also president of the Astoria Central Labor Council, has been very active in the labor movement in this city and is one of the best assets we have in this local, in all matters he is a very level-headed man and can look at both sides of a case and will not make any decision without first thoroughly investigating same.

Chaplain Pat Pargeon, also vice-president of the Astoria Central Labor Council, is the real Sky-pilot for a labor body, and sees that we take the straight and narrow path, though he says he will take a smile any time he is apt to run into the kind they made before the Volstead act went into effect. Brother Pargeon is one of the most sincere and conservative workers we have in the Central Labor Union and that is saying quite a bit, as Otto Hartwig, president of the Oregon Federation of Labor stated in the morning Astorian. March the 3d, that the Astoria Central Council was the most conservative Central Labor Council in the State—thanks to Brother Hartwig.

The loss of Brother James Wilson, who passed away March 1, is deeply felt by the members and his many friends, as the brother was an ardent worker in the interest of Local 311. Brother Wilson was buried under the auspices of this local, and the Memorial Services from our ritual were put on by the officers of this local, and as stated by the many who attended the ceremonies were very impressive and appropriate for such an occasion.

This is the first time I have written to the MIXER AND SERVER since holding down this position, which has been over a year and a half, but now that I've got started I will write a little oftener and let the members of the International know that there is something doing here besides fishing.

With the best of wishes, I am

Fraternally yours,
OSCAR GUSTAFSON,
Secretary and Business Agent, Local 311.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CLEVELAND, O.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Pursuant to plans for building up the membership of Local 106, the local decided to keep the business representative outside the office soliciting new applicants and reinstatement of former members. After lowering the initiation and reinstatement fees to $5 we are expecting good results from our efforts.

We also had to provide for some one to look after the books, members' dues and the booking of extra work at the office, so on Friday, March 17, Bro. Geo. N. Fitzpatrick was elected to that position after a spirited contest with two other entries. He assumed office immediately, with the title of financial secretary-treasurer. We are confident "Fitz" will make good in the new job.

It is very edifying to hear and read of the cause of the present business depression as expressed by "big business." They claim it is impossible to get back to normalcy as long as production costs are high, and propose as remedies for this condition the reducing of wages and the cutting down of the number of persons employed. Result has been that the few who have been employed on small wages could not purchase anything but the barest necessities and, together with those entirely out of employment, fear to spend any of their savings except when they are absolutely compelled to. Business has become stagnant and everybody suffers, including "big business" itself, for they can not move their products on the high-profit basis they have been accustomed to.

A much better plan, in my opinion, would be to pay fair wages, take a reasonable profit and get the big volume of business, which would bring prosperity to all, as evidenced by the methods used by a certain successful automobile manufacturer.

And while we are contending for a minimum wage for the worker, why not a maximum profit within the bounds of reason for the investor, so that the worker might be able to show a little profit on his investment—his whole lifetime spent in toil.

We are fondly hoping that, with the close of the Lenten season, work in our industry will be more plentiful, and if our expectations are realized we will have nothing to complain of, for after all is said, the world wants the opportunity to work at a fair compensation.

Extending to the general membership best wishes for the future and the admonition to tighten up the lines and go and get 'em, I remain

Fraternally, EDW. A. WHISMORE,
Press Secretary, Local 106.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines from the bartenders, waiters and cooks of Toledo. Everything in fair shape with prosperous days ahead. We have just drafted a wage scale for the bartenders' branch. The Labor Temple Club, employing two of our members, already has signed. The agreement calls for six days a week, eight hours a day, wages, $28 a week. We soon will have the waiters and cooks' contracts ready for distribution, and expect success with both.

With greetings to all unions of the International and the Executive Board.

Fraternally yours,
TONY ADAMS,
Recording Secretary, Local 216.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We are still running along fine though our membership is small. All members are taking a great interest in the local and are working hard to put it on top.

Brother Wm. H. Brandt, our president, was a delegate from the central labor council to Albany, in regard to the Miller bill.

Brother Albert Roy is still working hard collecting dues and is doing some great work. More power to you, Al.

The club is running along fine. A restaurant has been installed where you can get anything to eat your heart desires. Brothers Brandt and Spence, our stewards, do all they can to make things pleasant for the members, and if some of the stay-away brothers will give us a call we will try to make it pleasant for them.

Edward Guilfoyle with running mate, James McCauley, are back of the bar at our club. James Kelley and Jerry Dwyer are at Rich's place, South Division Street and Michigan Avenue. Give them a call, brothers. Hank Fredricks is at Tom Eley's cafe, Swan and Michigan Avenue. J. P. Dewes can be found at 120 Ferry Street. G. J. Morsey and Oscar Geyer can be found at Massey's cafe (Long's old place), Eagle and Michigan Avenue. Frank Kohler can be found at the Anger Bon Restaurant, 1438 Fillmore Avenue. Edward Miller, ex-president of Local 175, can be found at 301 Broadway; give him a call, brothers. Gerald Sullivan and Daniel Rogers are at 46 Georgia Street. Brother Miller is at 1261 Fillmore Avenue. Jack Murtha and Ernie Hutchen are at Ed O'Brien's cafe, Swan and Michigan Avenue. Geo. E. Wolper and Chas. Winter are proprietors of Gayety Inn, a theatrical headquarters, 42 W. Huron Street.

Yours fraternally,
FRANK BROWN,
Vice-President and Press Sec'y, Local 175.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Culinary Alliance, Local 815, is still in the field holding its own against all comers. We have the old worn-out Citizens' Alliance, Associated Industries, American Plan and the Open Shop, who have run their usefulness to an end by almost making paupers out of the business men. I am not able to say what the next name will be. It may be American Prohibition, prohibiting the American who labors from asking for bread. It would be a safer investment for them to go into the bootlegging business, for they could make more headway and better profits at less cost. The great Open Shop had cut the wages of mechanics, forced them to work longer hours, and added to the price of commodities just to help the commercial world along. At the present time there are but few capitalists, the business man being only an agent of the money power, thus doing its bidding or facing ruination. The propaganda of the so-called American Plan has become so rotten that it smells like a rotten-egg dump in the spring of the year.

The so-called men (scabs) have made their usual appearance in the city since the warm spell. I have not seen them, but the scent is still with them wherever they go. If it gets much warmer they will have to move on or take chances with the Board of Health. If they can't stay in hell they can't stand Salt Lake, as the climate will be the warmest of the two. Mr. Noprinciple (scab), take warning and don't come this way.

The Salt Lake City Federation of Labor is making good gains. Many organizations have been reinstated and are again in line. The street car men have been out for a long time, but have come back into the fold of the federation, giving their full strength of ten delegates to help the good cause along. A few more lifts like that will make the Chamber of Commerce take notice that they are not the only lights of the city.

They say that the income tax is exceedingly heavy for 1922. We are unable to say where it all comes from, unless the honest workingman has become a George Washington or the so-called business man has made a mistake and put down his losses instead of profits. They have made so many mistakes that it is almost impossible to tell who is who.

We are sorry to hear that the secretary of Local 581, Ogden, Utah, has gone wrong (not dead, but hiding). We sincerely hope that No. 581 will not suffer from this incident but learn a lesson and elect efficient officers and bond them, thus protecting their organization.

Work is still scarce at present, but all seem to be living. I would ask that all visitors call at the headquarters of the local instead of going out to look for a job and getting into a real unfair (scab) house, then making the excuse that they didn't know. Come to the business agent and get informed. Our headquarters are at 137 E. First Street, opposite the police and fire stations.

There are rumors that the copper mines will open soon, and also the steel works. We are looking for a boom in the building and other industries, but can't say when it will be. However, it will move Salt Lake up another notch this summer. Don't go by what you read in the papers but watch THE MIXER AND SERVER and get the correct news.

The meetings of Local 815 are held every Wednesday at 8:15 p. m., except second, 2:00 p. m. at the clubrooms of the local.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN MULLINS,
Pres. and Press Sec., Local 815.

DALLAS, TEX.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—We have had a great deal of trouble lately reinstating members from other locals who come to Dallas to work. As there is an assessment of from 25 cents to $2 in nearly every local I have had any correspondence with, it causes me to write from two to three letters in order to get each of these members transferred to our local. It is just as easy for a waiter or waitress to straighten up with the local where he is working before he leaves and deposit his traveling card before it expires, thus saving the secretary all this trouble.

The majority of tourists who make Dallas have either been suspended or are back with their dues, and censure the business agent if he refuses to allow them to work from four to six weeks while they are straightening up with their former local. No sooner are they straightened out and receive a card and up-to-date book than they are ready to hit the pike for pastures new.

Waiters, waitresses and cooks coming this way should see to it that their traveling cards have not expired and that their dues are paid up to date, or else give Dallas a wide birth, as we don't aspire to the suspended brothers and sisters, commonly called tourists.

Business is quiet at present and work is not so plentiful, still Local 659 is holding its own. We have had a very moderate winter, and the weather is beautiful at present.

Hoping those who read this communication will heed the warning, with best regard,

Fraternally yours,

CHARLES A. SIMPSON,
Secretary Local 659.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

YODER, WYO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—As spring always makes me feel like doing something, I have decided to help the editor fill up our journal. I feel as though something big was going to take place this coming summer, as some of the old timers have got a little stale on the job the past year and have let the hard-earned conditions they fought for so many years slip a little. But we have been talking the matter over while sitting around the hot stove this winter, so you can look for a spring membership drive from those who know what Mr. Boss wants and what God meant for us to enjoy.

I am enclosing a little verse in memory of my old friend, R. B. Gibbons, of Local 266, Kansas City, Mo., which follows:

In the graveyard softly sleeping
Where flowers gently wave,
Lies the friend I loved so dearly
In his silent grave.
Peaceful be your sleep, dear friend,
It is sweet to breathe your name.
In life I loved you dearly—
In death I do the same.
One year has passed but still I miss you.
Friends may think the wound is healed;
But little do they know the sorrow
That lies within my heart concealed.
You shall never be forgotten,
Never from my memory fade;
My loving heart will always linger
Round the grave where you are laid.

Fraternally,

JACK RICHARDS.

QUEBEC, QUE., CANADA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to let the general membership know that Local 492 is going better than ever before. The boys seem to be taking a pride in making our meetings as interesting as possible as an inducement to make all members attend.

At our first meeting this month we were forced to accept the resignation of our worthy financial secretary, Bro. M. Roebeling, with many regrets. He has been a real live wire, always doing his best in the interests of our local. We were fortunate, however, in securing the services of Bro. J. Mallin for that important office, and we installed him at our last meeting.

On February 24 we held a euchre and dance, which was a huge success in every way, due mainly to the perfect organization of our amusement committee, but also to our individual members for the boost they gave it.

We intend to hold a smoking concert in the near future, as we find that these social events tend to create more interest in our local.

Fraternally yours,

F. KRAMPE,
Vice-President, Local 492.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

ST. LOUIS, MO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Perhaps the following article will put a little pep into some of our members as they read our monthly journal:

HERE'S CAUSE OF TIRED FEELING.

One of the most pitiful pleas—pitiful because it indicated how supinely helpless some men are—was heard a few days ago when an alleged union man said: "The proprietor is going to break up our union."

This fellow had been working right along, but had not paid dues for two months, yet was whining that "the proprietor" was going to break his union.

No proprietor can break a union. The members alone can do that.

Of course, the union will be busted if the members are lacking in the spirit of manhood and independence—won't pay their dues and are eternally criticising their officers.

A union made up of such men really has no right to exist.

Fraternally yours,

GEO. C. WIESEMANN,
Secretary-Treasurer, Local 51.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

WHAT DOES HE LOOK LIKE?

Oftener than you can imagine, we have visitors to the general office, who are on their way to a sister local and they quite frequently ask us if we know the Secretary of the Local in the city where they are headed for. The best we can offer is that we know the secretary through correspondence only, and are unable to inform our questioner whether the secretary is long, short, fat or lean. "Wonder why those fellows don't send in a picture and let you print it in the MIXER AND SERVER?" So do we wonder, but that is all the good it does. Probably the price of half-tone union-made cut is what stops them from giving us a chance to size up their possession of pulchritude. If you have a good half-tone cut of your officers, preferable single pictures, for group pictures take up more space than we can afford to give, send them along. We promise to take good care of them and return after using.

When, Where and How

LOCAL unions seldom pass many years existence without coming in contact with the chesty individual, who, with or without provocation, struts to the middle of the meeting hall, beats himself on the breast a few times, and, in voice which he imagines carries a goodly percentage of dramatic weight, proceeds to regale the unwilling victims in attendance that: If it had not been for his timely and opportune appearance in the early days of the local union, his exceptional ability and incessant activity, there would have been nothing but a vacuum where a live union now exists. That he was not seeking credit, but he did not desire the membership to overlook the fact that he was the Big Noise when that sort of thing was the one thing needful.

The chief reason for his affliction is the knowledge which the booster possesses, that the majority of the membership are what might be called transients, few of them having had continuous membership in that local for more than a few months, and the limited number of home guards, being of the forbearing kind, just let the "spot light" seeker rave on.

The "in-by-traveling-card" members reluctantly listen to the spial and let the gabby guy get away with his stunt, probably concluding that he may be entitled to a fair measure of credit at that, and as he is not doing any one a serious injury, they say to one another: "Let him shoot, it's his play."

There is, however, another side to an event of the kind briefly set forth in the foregoing, and it is with that side that we are mainly concerned:

Every local union has a history, and what they need is a historian to collect the facts and transcribe them for the benefit of the present and future membership. That such history should be written is evident from an experience of fairly recent date.

In the course of a communication emanating from general headquarters, the attention of the secretary and members of a local union was directed to the approaching twentieth anniversary of the local union. The suggestion was made to the local union that it would be very appropriate for the president of that local union to appoint a committee with instructions that they consider ways and means of celebrating the important event. The suggestion was accepted and a committee of ten members appointed. At the first meeting of the committee the question arose as to the name of the man entitled to credit for organizing the local union. Four members of the committee advanced the information that they knew, and as each offered the name of the presumed organizer of the local it was evident that some one was in error. Result was that headquarters received a communication seeking official data on the subject. When the letter from general headquarters was placed before the committee, it was discovered that none of the four originally mentioned as being the "daddy" of the local union had been identified with its early history; in fact, had not, despite their respective claims, been within a hundred miles of the cradle when the lusty infant made its first yell for recognition. The man who had circulated among the workers at the trade, induced them to meet him and aid in the formation of that local union, was still a resident of the city, but, like many more of the hard workers in the labor movement, was content with the knowledge that he had started something, and that something had kept going on for twenty years, helping men to understand their duty toward one another, teaching them the meaning of brotherhood and fraternalism.

Every local union, no matter how old or how young, has a history which the membership should insist be made a matter of official record.

Several of our veteran unions offer to their membership, about once a year, a brief synopsis of what the union has accomplished during the preceding year, and several print a brief but very acceptable review, which goes back to the inception of the union, showing WHEN, WHERE AND HOW that local was organized and including in the history a roster of the officers from the beginning of the union to the date when the referred-to synopsis was printed. Another local that we recall emphasizes the amount of money it has collected and the benefits paid to its membership, closing the record with a complete roster of "those who have joined the silent majority."

Anniversary meetings and social sessions in commemoration thereof are good things; there is a spirit created which is beneficial to the members and doubly so to the union. At such sessions no more effective nor appropriate gesture can be made than a recital of "What Our Union Has Accomplished Since Its Inception."

By all means start writing the history of your local union; be able to offer to whomever may be interested exact facts as to WHEN, WHERE AND HOW YOUR UNION MADE ITS INITIAL BOW AS A UNIT OF OUR INTERNATIONAL UNION.

NAMED SHOES ARE FREQUENTLY MADE IN NON-UNION FACTORIES

Do Not Buy Any Shoe

no matter what its name, unless it bears a plain and readable impression of this UNION STAMP.

All shoes without the UNION STAMP are always Non-Union. Do not accept any excuse for absence of the UNION STAMP.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' UNION

246 Summer Street, BOSTON, MASS.

COLLIS LOVELY, General President

CHARLES L. BAINE, General Secretary-Treasurer

Your Library

Is incomplete without
the bound volumes of
The Mixer and Server.
A limited number may be secured at Two Dollars each.

Remit to—

Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan
at Cincinnati, Ohio

Show Your Colors

—WEAR THE—
BUTTON
OF YOUR CRAFT

Order one through your Secretary.

Solid Gold Button
$1.00

All our Buttons are Union Made

JERE L. SULLIVAN

Secretary-Treasurer

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE BLDG.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

This Label

Is always used by us in filling your orders for Local By-Laws, Tickets,
Invitations, Programs and everything in the line of Printing. We do neat, clean, accurate work. If you like to see the label on your printing, and your local printer does not supply it, send us your orders.

Roessler Bros.

PRINTERS

528 WALNUT ST., CINCINNATI, O.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

This is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance
and
Bartenders International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 5.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, MAY 15, 1922

Press of
Roessler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio

WARNING OR PROPHECY?

WHAT did the famous writer, H. G. Wells, have in mind several months ago when he was on his way to the Armament Conference at Washington, when he said:

"When one looks at New York, its assurance is amazing, when we reflect, we realize its tremendous peril. With the possible exception of London, the position of New York seems to me the most perilous of that of any city in the world.

"In a little while, within my lifetime, New York City may stand even more gaunt, ruinous, empty, and haunted than that stricken and terrible ruin, Petersburg (Petrograd).

"The ship of civilization is not going to sink in five years' time or in fifty years' time—IT IS SINKING NOW!"

What did H. G. Wells, the world-famous Englishman, see which prompted him to express himself in the manner quoted?

Mr. H. G. Wells visited St. Petersburg in the days of Czar Nicholas; he enjoyed opportunities of studying Russia at first hand under the old order and can refer to his writings to refresh his memory, if that were needed.

Mr. H. G. Wells visited St. Petersburg, known as Petrograd to many who have perused newspaper and magazine articles about Russia, since the overthrow of the Czar, since Trotsky and Lenine assumed control of that section of the world.

What did he see in and about New York, in and about America, which suggested the terrible picture offered in his few but solemn words? Has he been reading the appeals of the several hundred thousand former war veterans, the appeals of the men who made "the world safe for democracy," who now plead, aye, beg for employment that they may obtain food to sustain life, to secure clothing to cover their starving bodies? Has he been reading reports of unbiased investigators, who inform the people that where formerly the millionaires were counted by the hundreds, they can now be counted by the thousands, and that where poverty and distress was but incidental before the war, its appearance is conceded now to be quite general?

Has the famous Englishman, Wells, been looking for the books which contain the reports of the Industrial Relations Commission, the Commission which devoted months and months to an investigation, of which the public knows so little and of which it should know all?

Has H. G. Wells been reading the newspapers which printed reports of the ruthless war carried on in the State of West Virginia; the efforts of the Governor of Kansas to impose slavery through a device called an Industrial Court?

Probably H. G. Wells has been investigating the transportation situation in America; he may have read the findings of the Court established under the provisions of the Transportation Act of 1920.

Possibly he has been studying the fuel problem, keeping close watch on the coal miners and their activities.

Mayhap he has read the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Traux-Corrigan case, discovering that there is a law for the wealthy and one for the poorer citizens of the community.

It is just possible that Mr. H. G. Wells read the newspaper and magazine articles which recited that a most wonderful discovery has been made by chemists—the discovery of a poison gas, that "a small vial of it turned loose in the Congress of the U. S. would destroy every mortal in both upper and lower houses—a gas so destructive that a bomb filled with this terrible destructive agent, dropped on the city of New York, would destroy every human being in that most populous city of America, within a few moments after the bomb had exploded?"

What was Mr. H. G. Wells' purpose in making the quoted statement? Did he make a prophecy, or tender warning to the House of Dollars?

Vol. XXXI

CINCINNATI, MAY 15, 1922.

No. 5

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 19, 1918.

Printed by
Roessler Brothers,
Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
Building,
Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor
Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE.....President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH.....First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN.....Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY.....Third Vice-President
500 Youngman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY.....Fourth Vice-President
183 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL.....Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO.....Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY.....Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG.....Eighth Vice-President
106 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN.....General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Compers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

There is little to be gained and much to be lost by our members who habitually make promises on behalf of their local unions, which under the most encouraging auspices imaginable cannot be achieved inside of a decade of unceasing and unequalled activity. Prospects who absorb such promises show resentment when the union fails to deliver as promised, and to that attitude may be attributed many suspensions.

Our organization is not a miracle worker, none of its officers or members have any sensible reason to pretend or promise achievement within a stated period. There is in the platform of our organization a promise, but it is couched in words that permit of but one interpretation.

The prospective member is advised by that declaration of principles that "To enable him to secure his full rights he must unite with his fellow workers so as to accomplish by united action what is impossible by individual effort."

The printed and official statement relative to objects of our organization remain as they were when our organization was instituted; it is the height of folly for members to attempt to insinuate into the printed platform their own ideas of what the organization intends to convey.

Our Book of Laws informs whomsoever may be interested in the subject that "The object of this International Union shall be to organize all persons working in the allied trades; to better their condition morally, socially and financially." The Book of Laws further emphasizes the fact that "It"—the International Union—"shall be composed of locals which acknowledge the jurisdiction and are subject to the laws and usages of the International Union."

We promise to every capable worker at the catering industry "to unite with them" for the purposes set forth—to improve our moral, social and financial conditions. We do not promise achievement first, nor do we say that we have something to offer which they can enjoy without personal effort.

That we could promise advantages which the non-members do not enjoy, is admitted, but what we may offer of a tangible nature, is achievement produced by united effort of our members, and we say quite plainly—or should—that further advancement depends upon the acquisition of added membership of the workers at the catering industry.

We say to all men and women employed in the catering industry: If you are a capable worker at any of our allied crafts and of good moral character, there is a place for you inside of our International Union. By affiliating with us, we can the better guard our collective interests and promote our future well-being. Our organization is not an experiment, it has been in existence for a score of years and more, it has, through its membership exercised a beneficial influence on the industry, it has made working conditions in the industry better and has made fair headway in obtaining for the workers better compensation and working conditions.

We do not say that our International Union expects to revolutionize working and wage conditions within a given period, and whosoever makes declaration to that effect, is speaking without authority and surely minus good common sense. Boost and boast are excellent in their way, but both may be overdone when thoughtless men make promises for their local unions, promises which in reality are hopes for the future.

Talk about your organization, tell about its good work, boast of its accomplishments within reason, but refrain from promising that which only time and a united allied crafts can produce in years of energetic effort.

The record made by our organization is excellent, confine yourself to that history and its hopes for the future and you will conserve energy and promote more stable membership.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

Why They Quit Keeping Step.

You remember the old story about the head-waiter who was accustomed to giving drill about once a day. He would hide his little shots with a thin veil, as the following example will show: "Boys, you have done very nicely so far this week, but I do not want to mention names, yet the man on the salts had better be a bit more careful or he may find himself making the acquaintance of the cashier before the usual time." So with us, we do not care to mention names, but the local unions who pay about fifty dollars a year into the Defense Fund, have an iron-bound crust to write us and inform us that unless the General Executive Board supplies them with not less than ten times the amount they are credited with paying into the Defense Fund they will surrender their charter and let the union go kersmash.

Members who have even casually perused the offerings of the various contributors to the pages of the MIXER AND SERVER, as well as the pencilings of the editor, will recall that we have on numerous occasions gone out of our way to impart the information that we get out of the funds, out of the organization, what we put in. We may carry the impression that every dollar paid to the general office is coin to be used in defense of local unions, but we might as well divest ourselves of that viewpoint now as later, because it is excess baggage and don't mean anything.

Before the last General Convention took the matter in hand, the Defense Fund received just three cents a month a member. In other words it would take one hundred members in a local union to remit three dollars to the Defense Fund, if the numerical strength of the local union was not in excess of that number, the local union paid into the Defense Fund exactly three dollars a month, or thirty-six dollars a year. Since the law was amended, the amount remitted being same, but the allotment is different, one cent was taken from the Death Benefit Fund and allotted to the Defense Fund. To make that quite plain, the per capita tax was 20 cents and is now 20 cents a member a month, but the allotment or division of that tax has been changed, so that instead of the Death Benefit Fund being allotted seven cents a member a month as formerly it receives under the amended law six cents a member a month, whereas the Defense Fund which had to get along with three cents a member a month, is now getting four cents a member a month.

Local unions may demand support from the Defense Fund, they have a legal and moral right to expect as much from the Defense Fund as they paid in, but when they make demands for more than they paid in, they are pressing the limit beyond what is legal and right. They have no more right to demand appropriations from that fund in excess of what they have paid in than they have of demanding of affiliated local unions that they shall remit part of their funds which they may have use for themselves. It is all well enough to assume that inasmuch as the money has been paid in for defensive purposes, that any local in trouble has both moral and legal rights to expect aid from that fund, but, and stick a pin right here, there are local unions who have had no trouble, nor contention whatsoever, who have been paying their little mite into the Defense Fund and who have not only a legal but a moral right as well, to expect the managers of the business of the organization to see to it that there shall be something in the Defense Fund for emergencies, for the time when the supporting unions, those which have never asked for or drawn down a dollar from that fund, may become involved in contention with employers to be able to obtain some aid from that fund when such contention arises.

There has been no special effort made to surround the Defense Fund with similar laws as do protect the Death Benefit Fund, but in spite of the absence of such regulations, it has been generally understood and agreed to that the Defense Fund is intended to be helpful to the unions which maintain the fund. If a local or locals have paid generous allotments to the Defense Fund, it is no more than right that they should obtain from that fund equal appropriations as they have remitted in its support, but the seriousness of the situation is apparent when local unions—and there are a number—make demands upon the General Executive Board for appropriations from the Defense Fund wholly beyond any amount these locals have ever paid into that Fund. We have a number of local unions who make demands upon their employers every year; these demands may be reasonable and they may be the contrary, the Board members have no means of knowing which is which. Said locals make up a wage schedule and when they get ready to submit the schedule and agreement for consideration of the General Executive Board they invariably accompany the wage scale with a request for financial assistance in the event of a strike or lockout. These locals have been told time and time again that they have overdrawn their account in the Defense Fund, but that does not prevent the officer communicating with the general office from intimating that if we get in trouble and the International Union does not come to our assistance, what is the good of being connected with the International Union? These locals know full well that they have not paid into the organization for all funds the amounts they set forth as being needed for their assistance. Call it plain nerve or what you will, it is habitual with some of our unions to make demands annually and expect the organization to carry them irrespective of conditions. Not long ago a local union which had enjoyed more than its legal allotment, informed us that we were guilty of neglect because we did not forthwith remit several hundred dollars on being informed that they were on strike in several of their houses. "Why," wrote the secretary, "we informed you two weeks ago that we expected trouble and it was your duty to submit that information to the members of the General Executive Board, so that they could make necessary provisions for laying aside enough money to help us conduct our strike."

And that local union had been permitted to obtain from the Defense Fund several hundreds of dollars in excess of what it had ever paid in support of the Defense Fund. "Where do we get the money from to maintain the Defense Fund?" we inquired of the secretary of the petitioning union. "Money, where do you get it? Why from the unions, where did you suppose I thought you got it from? From the unions, and every one of them—if they knew—would be on your neck, on the necks of your fellow members of the Board if they knew you were such a cheap guy." Later we sat down and wrote that "dear brother" that we were not paid to carry on personal controversies, that the organization elected myself and co-members of the General Executive Board with the understanding that all of us would give to the organization the best of brain and hand to the end of promoting and protecting the interests of the men and women who paid the freight. That each local union contributed its monthly tax for the benefit of themselves and their co-workers in the industry, but so far as we could discern the organization did not expect, nor would it long tolerate a condition, which permitted one or several affiliated unions to use all of the Defense Fund for their special advantage. That local unions whose money was remitted to the general office for tax, did not acquiesce in the idea that we could use the entire Defense Fund for a few selfish unions and be unable to help other locals when they became involved in trouble.

That any local union which had taken down several hundred dollars in excess of what it had paid into the general funds of the organization and which demanded further appropriations from that fund was, if anything, guilty of wilfully abusing its privileges and imposing upon the good nature of men and women who showed a willingness to be on the level with the world and not seeking to secure a shade the best of the affiliated contributors.

We dug up several communications from the referred to "dear brother" in each of which he had complained bitterly about traveling members coming to his city looking for employment. "We have," wrote the referred to secretary, "worked late and early to create conditions in this town, we have gone to some expense in establishing a nice headquarters, and we do not look with any degree of favor on the tourists who drop off in our town, hang around our headquarters looking for an opening that rightfully belong to our own members, we would ask that you print a 'Stay Away Notice' in the official publication, so as to warn these travelers to keep on going when they hit the boundaries of our city." And that fellow presumed to speak for himself and associate members of his local. He was unwilling to give a traveling member a chance, but more than willing that the tourists' proportion of the Defense Fund be allotted to his local and used for himself and colleagues. It may interest the reader to know that that "dear brother" is no longer an officer of that local, he slipped out between two suns with the bank-roll—not much of a roll, but enough to attract Johnny Graball. Yeh, he is still missing and the local, after being down and out for months, was revived and of course the membership lay all of their troubles, including the authorship of the sassy communications to headquarters on the departed crook.

Getting back to the Defense Fund, and if you please it is a big topic that should invite your attention, even if your local has never asked for a penny from that fund. It stands to reason that with the laws as they are and the revenue to the fund as small as now provided, there is little chance for that fund to ever become overloaded with excess coin. Even if our membership was one hundred thousand—how we do wish it was that big—it is easy to calculate the amount of money that would be allotted to the Defense Fund from the per capita tax. Forty-eight thousand dollars a year sounds big, but if you will take time and sit down to do a little figuring, you will uncover facts relative to sustaining workers while on strike that will prove interesting if not absorbing. In the report of the secretary-treasurer to the Nineteenth General Convention held at St. Louis, Mo., June 11-15, 1917, pages 38, 39, 40 and 41, will be found data, based upon the cost of living at that period. The figures given cover cost of a strike involving 500 members and the amount shown as being positively required for such strike was in excess of $4,000.00 the week. If your local union library holds the bound volume for the year 1917, or if you are one of those who keep their monthly numbers on file at home, dig up that report and read it with care, it is worth ten minutes of your time.

Yes, we have a Defense Fund, and it also true that we have no rules, except those made by the General Executive Board governing the distribution of that fund, but the time is approaching when rules must be made to govern the Fund in order that local unions shall be deprived of the chance of making demands for consideration in excess of what they are legally and morally entitled to. Rules that will forever stop the seekers for advantage, who would spend all of your money, but who begrudge you the chance of making a dollar under the jurisdiction of their union. In the last few years we have lost several selfish graball locals. In this composition will be found the real reason why they quit keeping step; they'd be with us yet, if we paid them to remain loyal, but we've gotten over that habit and the news to that effect starts on its way now.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

HOW THEY STAND.

California	32
Texas	28
New York	28
Illinois	25
Pennsylvania	24
Washington	19
Massachusetts	15
Ohio	15
New Jersey	14
Missouri	12
Canada	11
Oregon	11
Wyoming	9
Wisconsin	9
Oklahoma	9
Minnesota	8
Connecticut	8
Montana	7
Colorado	7
Kentucky	6
Indiana	5
Arizona	5
Idaho	4
Louisiana	4
Michigan	4
Utah	4
Iowa	3
Maryland	3
West Virginia	3
Nebraska	3
Kansas	3
Tennessee	3
North Dakota	3
Arkansas	2
Rhode Island	2
District of Columbia	2
Virginia	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
South Carolina	1
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR MONTH OF APRIL, 1922.

Local 279—Geo. R. Long.
Local 815—Oscar J. Taylor.
Local 865—Joe Pelarski.
Member-at-large—Joe Smith.

CHARTERS ISSUED, APRIL, 1922.

475 M, Lawton, Oklahoma.....Joe C. Howard
615 M, Paris, TexasMyrtle Berry

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INFORMATION WANTED.

The above picture represents Edward Teller Coumbs, who, it seems, is a catering industry employee, having worked as a cook as well as at other work in and about hotels, restaurants and cafes. His mother, Mrs. L. Coumbs, resides in the city of Leadville, Colorado. Address 318 East Fourth Street. She is very anxious to locate her son. Any effort on the part of our members to bring mother and son together will be appreciated.

DEATHS DURING APRIL, 1922.

Local 7:—Chas. Grant, Alex. Irwin, Chas. H. Newman, Frank L. Johnson, Harry B. Edwards.
 Local 17:—Jacob Beumer.
 Local 30:—Harry Collins, Anton M. Cerletti.
 Local 33:—Eugene Willett.
 Local 66:—Peter Verdier.
 Local 115:—Aug. Curry, Edw. McAndrew.
 Local 188:—Walter Schylla.
 Local 237:—Anthony Borgna.
 Local 254:—Wm. Hughes.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

TUCSON, ARIZ.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Please publish the following in the MIXER AND SERVER:

To whom it may concern. Henry A. Zimmer, former secretary of Local 413, Tucson, Arizona, was charged with embezzling the funds of Local 413. He admitted before the local body that he was short in his accounts.

He failed to appear before the Local Board for trial. He was then fined the sum of $25.00 and suspended until balance of shortage and fine are paid. He has since left for parts unknown. Local 413 is responsible for this publication.

B. P. CARPENTER, President,
 EDWARD WYNNE, Secretary,
 Local 413.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

A TIP TO THE "OH, SHUSH" GUARDS.

"Don't believe half of what you hear and none of what you read," is about the way the old maxim has been revised by the "Oh Shushers." Be that as it may, we are tendering a bit of feed-box information, as they say out at Bowie, and you can suit yourself whether to absorb it or not.

Knowing looks were the only indication that some of our wise boys put up when the series of spy stories was run in the MIXER AND SERVER last year; while they did not say it loud enough to be heard, a shrug of shoulders and the very ready, "O, shush" was noted. Jere L. had been getting an extra shot in the arm or was smoking seconds. To the doubting Thomases we now suggest that if they have a friend connected with the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, they approach that friend and borrow his official journal for the month of March, 1922, and as soon as possible after obtaining loan of the referred-to publication, get set somewhere that guarantees solitary comfort and begin reading the story under the caption, "Corporation Espionage."

Make a memorandum of the foregoing recommendation, obtain a chance to peruse the story mentioned, and before you have been engaged in reading thirty seconds, you will agree that there are human skunks, two-legged rats, who, if chance offered the opportunity, would sell the virtue of a member of their own family for a price which would not permit them to purchase a pair of Kentucky jeans.

In that same publication (page 169) will be found another bit of interesting information. Read it, too, and see if you think that we have been peddling that stuff commonly known as "bushwa."

GET ACQUAINTEDWith Your Fellow Workers, They May Be Good Scouts.

Wage-workers carry so much excess baggage that one wonders how they manage to make any progress whatsoever. Moreover, the man who has the temerity to stand up and advise them to discard the useless junk usually gets batted in the optic or slammed in the slats.

Did you ever study human nature in and about the headquarters of a local union? If not, you've an interesting experience coming to you, for you will admit that there are more workers in the catering industry who studiously pull the side-stepping stunt than can be found in any other line of endeavor.

"Who was that guy you were just talking to, Slim?"

"Oh, one of those boomers from the southwest; forgot his name. He was asking me if I knew where he could butt in and work for a few days. Seems to think I keep cases on the jobs in this burg. Even if I knew I wouldn't tell him; let him get out and rustle his jobs the same as I do."

Does that brief conversation remind you of similar exchange of talk that you've heard often?

That's one of the big stones hung around the neck of the catering industry workers: They do not know one another, and show reluctance in getting acquainted. One would imagine, if he did not know better, that every other man you met in the industry was a second-story worker or high-jacker.

Why is it? Are we going to make the grade with that sort of mental attitude? Never in a thousand years. We are as good as we think the other fellow is. Is that too confusing for you to grab off? Take a moment and give your think works a chance to function. If the workers at the industry are such a no-account, worthless lot of stiffs as to prompt you to evade them, whose fault is it? The men and women working at the catering industry are not angels, but they will match the workers in any other trade. It's the men and women of the industry that create the reputation for themselves and those working at the trade. If it is raised, all hands benefit; if it is lowered, all workers in the industry are injured. Make the acquaintance of the girls and boys working with you—with those who are members of your union—and it's sinkers to spareribs that you will find ninety-nine out of every hundred pretty good scouts to know. Quit knowing the things that are not so about your own associates in the trade. Do a little boasting, and you'll be surprised what a lot of girls and boys will join with you in that sort of good work.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

THE CONCLUSION OF HIS ACT.

Movie Star—"But, look here, if he's going to throw me into the rapids, how am I going to get out?"

Director—"That's all right. You don't appear again."—Life.

80-8-18.....7....83-8-83-13-8-15

A BIT O' SCOTCH.

They stood amid the bracken braes,

A lad and lassie fair to see.

"I prithee for a kiss, fair maid."

Said Roderick Dhu on bended knee.

The maiden blushed a rosy hue.

Her downcast eyes she shyly hid

And softly cried, "Why Roderick Dhu!"

And Roderick did.

—G. W. BLUME.

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Here we are, entering the month of flowers and what have we done towards making that drive for new members a success? More important than that possibly—what have we done to keep the present membership in line and winning back to the fold the strayed sheep? New life and blood is essential to the advancement of civilization and so too with organization. We have learned that some of our local unions have treated the suggestion of a low initiation and reinstatement fee with indifference and contempt, assuming the arrogant attitude that if non-members working at the craft desire membership, let them pay a full pound of flesh or remain on the outside; we can get along without them; they only are taking the place of our unemployed members, etc. That is a selfish and untenable position to assume and no local union with that conception of organization is going to be a success—they are writing their own funeral march and are too narrow in their understanding of the future to realize it.

There is a large unorganized field of workers in the catering industry before us and until we can bring them within the fold of our International Union and be real leaders, we are not going to be able to give to our membership one hundred cents on the dollar return for their investment. To keep the unorganized workers in the catering industry out of your organization because you have some members out of employment, is one of the most ungrateful acts that a labor union can practice. It is well to care for the unemployed and they are worthy of every consideration that can be given to them, but because of their unemployment it would not justify a local union in closing their doors to other craftsmen or women.

We must look to the future: Life and all its problems, aspirations, aims and ambitions deal with the future. Present plans must be changed according to conditions that arise as time passes.

We are soon to be called to register our choice at the primaries for the man or woman who is to voice our sentiments, desires and wishes, in the next Congress of the United States. We know what the paramount issue before the American people is—a modification of the Volstead Act which will permit the sale, for beverage purposes, of light wines and beer. What are you doing to crystallize a sentiment among your friends and neighbors for this cause? What is your local union doing towards that end? Nothing! Why? That is the answer we expect. It is a regrettable condition. Why it should exist we are unable to understand, it may be charged to indifference, but more apt to a condition of lethargy that we have permitted ourselves to get into. Whichever it may be, now is the time to pull ourselves out, brush up and get into the harness. There never was a better time to do the missionary work that is required, than today; do not put it off until tomorrow, work from now until the primaries and then with renewed energy enter into the election campaign. It means work, lots of it, but the goal that we seek is worth every ounce of our labor, let us give it with a free will.

United States Senator Wadsworth, of New York, in an address delivered a few days ago, said as follows:

"Conditions arising from the enactment of the Volstead Law are a disgrace to the country. The wave of hypocrisy which has swept over the country as a result of that enactment is a menace. Not only are the people living lives of hypocrisy, but so are public officials of high and low degree. I believe there will be modification—very material modification—of the Volstead Act soon. The popular feeling will demand it. I think that the modification will permit people to get malt and vinous beverages of greater alcoholic contents than is now permissible. And those beverages need not even then be intoxicating."

What more nobler sentiments do you want to put pep back of your work. When men of that standing will come out in the open with a declaration of that kind, it surely means something. Now then, let us all get into the coming Congressional campaign, primaries as well as the election, and when the votes are counted, we can look for our reward.

In our February letter we made mention of our efforts to adjust the existing differences with the National Surety Company. We have had their proposal before us for several weeks and have concluded that under our laws we were unable to fully and honestly meet the conditions that they exacted and we have therefore requested them to deal direct with our local unions, which they are now doing through their local agencies, at a premium similar to that formerly charged through the American Federation of Labor. If there is no agency in your city through which you can secure a bond, you may address the National Surety Company, 2 Albany Street, New York.

During the month I visited New York, Brooklyn and Newark, and in addition to aiding in the adjustment of several matters affecting our local unions in Greater New York, I had the honor and pleasure of attending a testimonial dinner given in honor of Brother Leopold Pollak, business representative of Local 219. Words and space will not permit of expressing the splendor of the occasion. It was a wonderful demonstration of the love and affection in which Brother Pollak is held by his membership, and we felt honored in being able to lend our presence to such a noble and auspicious affair.

My expense account for the month is as follows:

March 29—New York and sleeper.....	$19 57
April 6—Buffalo and sleeper.....	19 57
Postcards and printing.....	7 25
Office supplies	80
Telegrams and phone messages.....	1 10
Postage	6 00
Traveling expenses	56 00

Total$110 29

Respectfully submitted,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,144.

March 27, 1922.

MR. HUGO ERNST, Secretary, L. J. E. B., 828 Mission Street, San Francisco, Cal.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 22nd, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Is a passive member subject to the working rules and regulations as laid down by a local union?"

"Can a local union force a passive member to abide by their working rules and regulations?"

"Has the local joint executive board authority to remove a house card if the proprietor (passive member) refuses to comply with the working rules of the union?"

"Can a passive member (working proprietor) take out a withdrawal card and retain the house card if he employs members of the union?"

"If a member out on withdrawal card opens a restaurant and employs members of the union, can the local joint executive board force her to deposit her withdrawal card if she engages actively as a waitress in her own establishment, before they issue her a house card?"

Decision 756 will advise that the hours of labor of a passive member in his own place of business cannot be regulated by a local union.

Passive members are not subject to the working rules and regulations of a local union, hence a local union cannot discipline them for not working in accordance therewith.

The local joint executive board has jurisdiction over the issuing of house cards and can decline to issue same to proprietors who hold passive membership, if in the judgment of the board the issuing of the same is going to prove detrimental to the best interest of the membership as a whole. If a house card has been issued to a passive member and there are no violations of the rules and regulations under which the same was issued, except the alleged acts of the said passive member in connection with his own activities, the local joint executive board would not be justified in removing the said card.

A passive member (a working proprietor) employing members of our allied unions and working himself, is entitled to a withdrawal card if his dues are paid for the current month and no charges are standing against him, and he can retain the house card if he does not violate any of the conditions under which the same was issued.

A withdrawal card member who opens a restaurant and employs members of the allied unions while working herself, cannot be forced to deposit her withdrawal card as a condition under which she may be issued a house card.

A local union or the local joint executive board has a right to exact evidence of bona fide ownership or partnership, before giving recognition to the same. A member holding stock or shares in an establishment is not considered an employer, unless the holder thereof assumes full responsibilities of ownership or partial ownership.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,145.

March 28, 1922.

MISS MAUDE KING, Secretary, Local 791, Box 59, Aberdeen, Wash.:

DEAR MISS AND SISTER—I am in receipt of a communication from a member of Local 791 properly certified, asking for a decision on the following:

"Can the president of the local discharge a committee because said committee does not agree with his views?"

"Can the president preside at a meeting while under the influence of intoxicants?"

"Can a local assess its members on the basis of a percentage of their earnings in order to support the local, providing that the members vote such an assessment when the treasury is depleted?"

In the absence of any definite declaration in the by-laws on the right of the president to discharge a committee, the union would have to govern themselves in accordance with parliamentary law. Under parliamentary usages a committee can only be discharged by a vote of the assembly. If the committee was appointed by directions of the union or in accordance with the constitution or by-laws, it would require a majority vote of the union to discharge such a committee.

No officer should be permitted to occupy his office or station, if his physical condition does not permit him to exercise his mental faculties in a normal manner.

A union has a right to levy an assessment on their members for the purpose of meeting a deficit in its operating costs or some special condition that may arise, however, the permanent levying of an assessment, whether it be a pro-rata share of the earnings or a set sum, in order to meet the normal expenses of a local union is not advisable; the dues of a local union should be fixed at a rate sufficiently high to care for the general expenses and the application of assessments should only be resorted to, to meet emergency costs or expenses.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,146.

March 29, 1922.

MR. GEORGE C. WIESEMANN, Secretary, Local 51, 3204 Lucas Avenue, St. Louis, Mo.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 27th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"Has the Executive Board of the local a right to initiate a candidate before he has been elected to membership by the local union?"

"Can we accept into membership an applicant who works as an insurance agent and follows bartending as a side line?"

Section 6 of the constitution provides the form in which an applicant for membership must be ected, which must be a majority vote at a regular meeting, no secret ballot allowed. You cannot initiate an applicant until he has been elected. The union can authorize the Executive Board or its officers to initiate applicants after they have been elected, if said applicants cannot present themselves at a regular meeting, or for any other reason deemed sufficient by the local union.

Decision 113 will advise, that if an applicant for membership is not working at the allied trades, you cannot elect him to membership.

Decision 227 will advise, that a member cannot divide his time between two or more trades, except in violation of the constitution.

Section 3 of the constitution provides the scope covered by the charter of our International Union and men or women engaged in any other craft or industry are not eligible to membership.

So long as the constitution provides that it is unlawful for a member to follow or work at any of our allied crafts while engaged in a steady position in some other trade or calling, then it must logically follow, that it would be unlawful for the local union to accept into membership, an applicant who would be disqualified to hold membership, unless the said applicant would cease to continue holding said steady position at another trade or calling.

We are not in line with the thought that a man working as an insurance agent during the day, should be privileged to work as a bartender at night, that in our judgment, would be a violation of Section 10 of the constitution.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,147.

April 17, 1922.

MR. CLAUDE J. PAULK, Secretary, Local 168, 500 Jackson Street, Amarillo, Texas:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 12th, wherein you ask for a decision on the following:

"An expelled member of Local 168 is the proprietor of a restaurant in Amarillo and employs members of Local 168. Can we give him a house card?"

An expelled member is not entitled to the use of our label or card.

If the proprietor in question desires the use of our house card, he must first make application to the local union for reinstatement to membership and if accepted, automatically becomes a passive member, he can then retain that passive membership or take out a withdrawal card. As a passive or withdrawal card member, he is entitled to the use of our house card provided he complies with all of the conditions under which said card is issued.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,148.

April 19, 1922.

MR. JULIUS SELMA, Secretary, Local 44, 83 Sixth Street, San Francisco, Cal.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have your communication of the 14th, asking for a decision on the following:

"Mr. Lekas made application for membership and paid $5.00 as part payment on initiation fee. Before his application was accepted and he initiated to membership, a strike was called on the house where he was employed and he remained on the job; charges were preferred against him and he was fined $25.00 which must be paid along with fee when he applies for membership and fee already paid has been declared forfeited. Was that action legal?"

Mr. Lekas not having been elected and initiated to membership in Local 44, was not subject to their laws, therefore they held no jurisdiction over him and no legal right existed which justified them in preferring charges against him and fining him in the sum of $25. As to the forfeiture of the fee paid to the local union, if he failed to present himself for membership in accordance with the provisions of the by-laws, the said fee would stand forfeited to the local union.

Our conclusion therefore is, that the action of Local 44 in placing a penalty of $25.00 against a person not a member of their local union, for an infraction of their laws, has no legal status and therefore is null and void.

With greetings,

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,149.

April 20, 1922.

MR. ISAAC HIRSCHHORN, 6 St. Mark Place, New York:

DEAR SIR—You are hereby adjudged guilty of the charges filed against you by International Vice-President A. J. Cozzolino and expelled from membership in this International Union.

Your truly,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,150.

April 20, 1922.

MR. JOSEPH ELSTER, 70 E. 115th Street, New York:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—You are hereby adjudged guilty of the charge of aiding and abetting in the distribution of circulars set out and referred to in the charges filed against you by International Vice-President A. J. Cozzolino and suspended from membership in this International Union.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1,151.

April 20, 1922.

MR. PHILIP HABERMANN, 1307 Washington Avenue, New York:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—You are hereby adjudged guilty of the charge of aiding and abetting in the distribution of circulars set out and referred to in the charges filed against you by International Vice-President A. J. Cozzolino and suspended from membership in this International Union.

Fraternally yours,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR APRIL, 1922

Local No.		Local No.		Local No.
1 W. New York, N. Y.	Mar., 1922	190 B. Bethlehem, Pa.	Jan., 1922	387 M. Ft. Dodge, Ia.	Mar., 1922
2 W. Brooklyn, N. Y.	Mar.	195 M. Kingman, Ariz.	Mar.	389 B. Carnegie, Pa.	Jan.
3 B. New York, N. Y.	Mar.	196 W. Buffalo, N. Y.	Feb.	391 M. LeGrande, Ore.	Mar.
4 B. Hoboken, N. J.	Mar.	197 B. Hamilton, Ont., Can.	Mar.	392 MC. Mobile, Ala.	Apr.
5 W. New York, N. Y.	Mar.	199 B. Jamestown, N. Y.	Apr.	394 M. South Chicago, Ill.	Aug., 1921
7 W. Chicago, Ill.	Mar.	200 B. Hartford, Conn.	Mar.	395 M. White Plains, N. Y.	Jan., 1922
8 B. Denver, Colo.	Apr.	201 M. Haverhill, Mass.	Mar.	397 M. Parsons, Kan.	Feb.
10 W. Hoboken, N. J.	Mar.	203 C. St. Louis, Mo.	Mar.	398 M. Manchester, N. H.	Mar.
11 W. New York City	Apr.	207 C. Portland, Ore.	Mar.	399 M. Ranger, Tex.	Mar.
12 M. San Antonio, Tex.	Mar.	208 RRM. St. Louis, Mo.	Mar.	400 M. Spokane, Wash.	Mar.
14 W. Denver, Colo.	Mar.	210 M. Abilene, Tex.	Mar.	402 M. San Diego, Cal.	Mar.
17 W. Los Angeles, Cal.	Feb.	213 M. Herrin, Ill.	Mar.	403 M. Breckenridge, Tex.	Mar.
18 C. Denver, Colo.	Mar.	215 M. Bristow, Okla.	Feb.	405 M. Bonham, Tex.	Apr.
19 W. Kansas City, Mo.	Mar.	216 M. Toledo, O.	Mar.	407 M. Manchester, N. H.	Feb.
20 W. St. Louis, Mo.	Mar.	217 B. New Haven, Conn.	Apr.	413 M. Tucson, Ariz.	Mar.
22 M. Butte, Mont.	Mar.	219 W. New York, N. Y.	Mar.	420 B. Kansas City, Mo.	Mar.
23 C. Omaha, Neb.	Mar.	220 M. Eureka, Cal.	Mar.	424 M. Klamath Falls, Ore.	Mar.
25 M. Hot Springs, Ark.	Mar.	222 B. Dayton, O.	Mar.	425 M. Sherman, Tex.	Apr.
28 M. Vancouver, B. C.	Mar.	223 M. Des Moines, Ia.	Jan.	426 M. Wallace, Idaho	Mar.
29 B. New York, N. Y.	Mar.	224 B. Erie, Pa.	Apr.	427 C. Missoula, Mont.	Mar.
30 W. San Francisco, Cal.	Mar.	226 M. Lincoln, Neb.	Mar.	429 B. Portsmouth, O.	Mar.
31 M. Oakland, Cal.	Mar.	228 B. Albany, N. Y.	Mar.	436 M. Chico, Cal.	Mar.
32 M. St. Joseph, Mo.	Mar.	230 M. South Bend, Tex.	Feb.	437 M. Indianapolis, Ind.	Feb.
33 C. Seattle, Wash.	Mar.	234 C. Detroit, Mich.	Mar.	438 B. Poughkeepsie, N. Y.	Mar.
34 M. Boston, Mass.	Mar.	236 M. Goose Creek, Tex.	Jan.	440 M. Montreal, Que., Can.	Mar.
39 M. Pittsburg, Kan.	Mar.	237 M. Pittsburgh, Pa.	Mar.
41 B. San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.	239 W. Seattle, Wash.	Mar.	442 M. Raton, N. M.	Jan.
43 M. Pueblo, Colo.	Mar.	240 WS. Seattle, Wash.	Mar.	449 B. Altoona, Pa.	Mar.
44 C. San Francisco, Cal.	Mar.	242 M. Charleston, W. Va.	Mar.	451 M. Everett, Wash.	Feb.
45 M. Reno, Nev.	Mar.	246 M. Oklahoma City, Okla.	Mar.	457 MS. Butte, Mont.	Mar.
48 WS. San Francisco, Cal.	Mar.			458 C. Minneapolis, Minn.	Mar.
		249 WS. St. Louis, Mo.	Mar.	459 M. Victoria, B. C. Can.	Mar.
50 M. Fairmont, W. Va.	Apr.	251 M. Dickinson, N. D.	Feb.	466 B. Wilmington, Del.	Apr.
51 B. St. Louis, Mo.	Mar.	253 B. Alliance, O.	Apr.	468 C. Los Angeles, Cal.	Mar.
58 W. New Orleans, La.	Mar.	254 W. Waterbury, Conn.	Mar.	470 W. Schenectady, N. Y.	Mar.
59 M. Milwaukee, Wis.	Mar.	258 RRM. New York, N. Y.	Jan.	471 M. Albany, N. Y.	Mar.
61 M. Tacoma, Wash.	Mar.	259 B. Edwardsville, Ill.	Feb.	472 M. El Reno, Okla.	Feb.
62 M. Fresno, Cal.	Mar.	261 WC. Louisville, Ky.	Feb.	474 M. Edmondton, Alta., Canada	Mar.
64 B. Milwaukee, Wis.	Apr.	262 B. Newcastle, Pa.	Mar.
66 C. Buffalo, N. Y.	Mar.	264 M. Lake Charles, La.	Mar.	475 M. Lawton, Okla.	Mar.
68 B. Cincinnati, O.	Mar.	266 C. Kansas City, Mo.	Mar.	476 M. Marshall, Ore.	Feb.
69 M. Galveston, Tex.	Mar.	268 SCP. Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921	479 B. LaCrosse, Wis.	Mar.
70 B. Brooklyn, N. Y.	Mar.	269 B. South Norwalk, Conn.	Mar.	480 DSM. Ft. Worth, Tex.	Jan.
72 W. Cincinnati, O.	Mar.			482 B. Butler, Pa.	Mar.
74 M. Aurora, Ill.	Feb.	271 M. Petaluma, Cal.	Mar.	484 WS. Chicago, Ill.	Mar.
76 B. Syracuse, N. Y.	Mar.	273 M. Springfield, Mass.	Feb.	485 RRP. Memphis, Tenn.	Feb.
77 B. Boston, Mass.	Mar.	279 W. Philadelphia, Pa.	Mar.	487 SDD. Seattle, Wash.	Mar.
78 B. Uniontown, Pa.	Apr.	284 B. Los Angeles, Cal.	Mar.	488 B. Jersey City, N. J.	Mar.
79 B. Louisville, Ky.	Mar.	285 B. Providence, R. I.	Mar.	489 M. Galesburg, Ill.	Mar.
81 B. Holyoke, Mass.	Mar.	286 B. Peoria, Ill.	Mar.	490 M. Tucumcari, N. M.	Mar.
83 B. Lowell, Mass.	Mar.	290 M. Salem, Mass.	Feb.	491 M. Atlantic City, N. J.	Mar.
89 B. Chicago, Ill.	Apr.	294 M. Yakima, Wash.	Mar.	492 M. Quebec, Que., Can.	Mar.
92 B. Marlboro, Mass.	Feb.	295 M. Wheeling, W. Va.	Mar.	496 SDD. Portland, Ore.	Mar.
93 B. Haverhill, Mass.	Mar.	298 M. Wenatchee, Wash.	Mar.	503 WS. Kansas City, Mo.	Mar.
100 B. New Bedford, Mass.	Mar.	299 M. Burkburnett, Tex.	Mar.	508 M. Atlantic City, N. J.	Mar.
101 M. Great Falls, Mont.	Feb.	300 W. Toronto, Ont., Can.	Mar.	509 M. Chickasha, Okla.	Mar.
102 B. Granite City, Ill.	Mar.	303 M. Electra, Tex.	Feb.	510 M. Pocatello, Idaho	Feb.
106 M. Cleveland, O.	Mar.	304 M. Hartford, Conn.	Mar.	511 M. Orange, Tex.	Jan.
107 WS. Cleveland, O.	Mar.	305 WS. Portland, Ore.	Mar.	512 CM. Bonham, Tex.	Apr.
109 M. Newark, N. J.	Mar.	306 M. Williston, N. D.	Mar.	513 M. Baird, Tex.	Mar.
110 M. San Francisco, Cal.	Feb.	307 M. Providence, R. I.	Mar.	516 B. Chillicothe, O.	Mar.
111 M. Oatman, Ariz.	Jan.	308 M. Portland, Me.	Mar.	521 M. Mandau, N. D.	Feb.
112 WS. Boston, Mass.	Mar.	310 M. Portland, Ore.	Mar.	523 B. Kenosha, Wis.	Mar.
115 B. Philadelphia, Pa.	Mar.	311 M. Astoria, Ore.	Feb.	524 M. Miles City, Mont.	Feb.
117 B. Belleville, Ill.	Mar.	312 B. Chattanooga, Tenn.	June	528 MF. Seattle, Wash.	Apr.
118 M. Akron, O.	Mar.	315 W. Montreal, Que., Can.	Mar.	529 M. Bellingham, Wash.	Feb.
119 M. Silverton, Colo.	Mar.			531 M. Jefferson City, Mo.	Apr.
120 B. Utica, N. Y.	Jan.	316 M. Centralia, Wash.	Apr.	532 B. Baltimore, Md.	Mar.
124 B. Trenton, N. J.	Feb.	318 B. Putnam, Conn.	Apr.	536 M. Minneapolis, Minn.	Mar.
126 B. Oneonta, N. Y.	Apr.	319 M. Sioux City, Ia.	Jan.	538 RRM. Seattle, Wash.	Feb.
128 M. Superior, Wis.	Mar.	322 B. Racine, Wis.	Feb.	539 CC. Charleston, S. C.	Mar.
131 B. Newark, N. J.	Mar.	323 M. Palestine, Tex.	Jan.	542 M. Modesto, Cal.	Apr.
134 B. Scranton, Pa.	Mar.	325 M. Duncan, Okla.	Mar.	544 M. Douglas, Wyo.	Mar.
135 M. Tulsa, Okla.	Mar.	326 C. Pittsburgh, Pa.	Mar.	548 M. St. Paul, Minn.	Apr.
141 M. Visalia, Cal.	Mar.	327 W. Peoria, Ill.	Mar.	550 M. Bakersfield, Cal.	Feb.
142 M. Eldorado, Ark.	Mar.	329 M. Lynn, Mass.	Feb.	552 CC. Richmond, Va.	Mar.
143 M. Omaha, Neb.	Mar.	330 M. Twin Falls, Idaho	Feb.	556 C. St. Paul, Minn.	Mar.
149 B. Newport, Ky.	Mar.	331 M. Greenville, Tex.	Feb.	557 M. Greybull, Wyo.	Apr.
150 W. Syracuse, N. Y.	Feb.	332 M. East St. Louis, Ill.	Feb.	560 M. Vallejo, Cal.	Feb.
152 B. Minneapolis, Minn.	Mar.	335 WE. Toledo, O.	Nov., 1921	561 M. Sacramento, Cal.	Mar.
154 M. Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Mar.	337 M. Cheyenne, Okla.	Mar., 1922	567 M. Olympia, Wash.	Feb.
156 B. Paducah, Ky.	Feb.	338 M. Knoxville, Tenn.	Mar.	568 RRM. Portland, Ore.	Mar.
158 W. Wichita Falls, Tex.	Mar.	347 WS. Buffalo, N. Y.	Mar.	569 B. Harrisburg, Pa.	Feb.
159 B. Meridan, Conn.	Mar.	349 M. Auburn, Wash.	Mar.	571 M. Idaho Falls, Idaho	Mar.
161 M. Brockton, Mass.	Feb.	353 WC. St. Louis, Mo.	Feb.	572 M. Stockton, Cal.	Mar.
167 C. Cleveland, O.	Mar.	356 B. New London, Conn.	May.	575 W. Jersey City, N. J.	Mar.
168 M. Amarillo, Tex.	Mar.	357 WS. Rochester, N. Y.	Mar.	577 M. Mexia, Tex.	Feb.
171 B. Rochester, N. Y.	Mar.	361 B. Allentown, Pa.	Mar.	579 M. Dayton, O.	Mar.
172 M. Henryetta, Okla.	Mar.	364 M. Pendleton, Ore.	Mar.	581 M. Ogden, Utah	Feb.
175 B. Buffalo, N. Y.	Mar.	365 M. Sapulpa, Okla.	Mar.	582 SCP. Los Angeles, Cal.	Jan.
177 C. Cincinnati, O.	Mar.	376 B. South Chicago, Ill.	Mar.	583 RRM. Chicago, Ill.	Dec., 1921
180 M. San Jose, Cal.	Mar.	378 B. Bakersfield, Cal.	Apr.	584 M. Topeka, Kan.	Feb.
181 B. Easton, Pa.	Mar.	380 M. Bisbee, Ariz.	Feb.	586 M. Coalinga, Cal.	Feb.
183 W. Bicknell, Ind.	Jan.	381 C. Brooklyn, N. Y.	Mar.	588 M. Shreveport, La.	Mar.
188 B. Pittsburg, Pa.	Mar.	382 RRM. Louisville, Ky.	Mar.	589 M. Bloomington, Ill.	Apr.
189 W. Portland, Ore.	Mar.	384 SCP. Oakland, Cal.	Feb.	590 B. Fond du Lac, Wis.	Jan.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Local No.	Date Local		Date Local
592 M, Winnipeg, Man., Canada	3 22 Feb.	25 40	8 361 Mar.	26 80
595 M, La Junta, Colo., Feb.	3 45 Stamps	20 00	8 680 Mar.	22 20
597 M, Calgary, Alta, Can., Mar.	3 77 Mar., bound M. & S.	38 40	8 475 Supplies	11 75
600 C, Duluth, Minn., Mar.	3 81 Mar.	11 80	8 Frank Cummins, M. A.
604 MC, Orange, Tex., Feb.	3 93 Feb.	2 80	8 216 Mar.	3 00
605 MC, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan.	3 109 Feb.	58 00	10 25 Mar.	11 00
611 MC, Williamsport, Pa., Mar.	3 143 Feb., supplies	27 75	10 41 Feb., error Dec. report	29 20
612 M, Helena, Mont., Mar.	3 180 Feb.	35 80	10 106 Mar.	143 20
615 M, Paris, Tex., Apr.	3 196 Feb.	51 20	10 167 Mar.	77 00
616 HM, Sacramento, Cal., Mar.	3 254 Feb.	5 60	10 175 Mar.	23 00
618 M, Anacortes, Wash., Mar.	3 266 Feb., supplies, buttons.	63 80	10 185 Feb., Mar.	3 00
626 M, Walla Walla, Wash., Dec. 1921	3 285 Feb., bound M. & S.	15 40	10 203 Bound M. & S., supplies	5 25
627 B, Cairo, Ill., Feb. 1922	3 294 Supplies	1 00	10 210 Mar.	4 60
630 WS, St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 1921	3 316 Dues Frank Meloy	1 25	10 240 Mar.	122 00
634 ML, Minneapolis, Minn., Nov.	3 322 Feb.	4 00	10 284 Supplies	50
637 B, Manitowac, Wis., Mar. 1922	3 397 Feb.	10 00	10 304 Mar.	12 40
638 M, Haynesville, La., Feb.	3 402 Buttons	1 00	10 310 Feb., supplies	33 10
639 WS, Los Angeles, Cal., Mar.	3 451 Feb., rein. of local.	40 60	10 316 Mar.	31 80
659 M, Dallas, Tex., Mar.	3 485 Bound M. & S.	2 00	10 365 Mar., supplies	3 80
670 M, West Frankfort, Ill., Mar.	3 521 Feb., bound M. & S.	8 10	10 380 Feb.	1 80
673 M, San Bernardino, Cal., Mar.	3 567 Feb., supplies	19 30	10 413 Mar.	14 00
676 SDD, Vancouver, B. C., Mar.	3 568 Stamps	3 60	10 424 Mar.	18 60
680 M, Miami, Ariz., Mar.	3 584 Feb., supplies	12 50	10 595 Feb.	10 60
681 M, Long Beach, Cal., Mar.	3 627 Feb.	2 80	10 611 Mar.	4 00
683 RRM, Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 1921	3 638 Supplies	2 00	10 659 Mar.	62 60
685 B, Eau Claire, Wis., Mar. 1922	3 639 Feb.	49 20	10 777 Mar.	11 60
690 B, Owensboro, Ky., Jan.	3 709 Feb., Mar.	8 06	10 808 Feb., bound M. & S.
692 M, Virden, Ill., Mar.	3 728 Feb., supplies	49 10	bal. due supplies.	48 35
703 M, Anaheim, Cal., Jan.	3 788 Oct., Nov., Dec., Jan.		10 842 Mar.	56 80
705 W, Detroit, Mich., Jan.	Feb.	25 00	10 61 Mar., supplies	81 10
709 M, Mt. Clemens, Mich., Mar.	3 239 Bound M. & S.	6 00	10 488 Mar.	1 80
714 B, Joliet, Ill., Apr.	3 32 Mar., supplies	13 90	10 259 Feb.	3 40
717 W, Baltimore, Md., Mar.	3 44 Supplies	25 00	10 612 Mar.	13 80
719 C, New York City, Mar.	3 809 Mar.	11 00	11 45 Mar.	48 20
720 M, Hammond, Ind., Dec. 1921	3 Peter McKinstry, M. A.		11 119 Mar., bound M. & S.	4 00
721 B, Salt Lake City, Utah, Mar. 1922	L.	3 00	11 158 Buttons	1 00
726 WC, Washington, D. C., Nov. 1921	4 17 Feb.	122 60	11 177 Mar., bound M. & S.,
728 WS, Detroit, Mich., Mar. 1922	4 78 Apr.	5 60	supplies	60 00
730 M, Bremerton, Wash., Mar.	4 79 Mar.	18 80	11 403 Mar.	16 40
737 B, York, Pa., Apr.	4 89 Mar.	20 00	11 457 Supplies	6 80
739 B, Brownsville, Pa., Feb.	4 142 Buttons, supplies	4 00	11 490 Mar.	8 60
742 D, Southbridge, Mass., Apr.	4 188 Mar.	99 60	11 492 Mar.	20 00
748 W, Ft. Worth, Tex., Jan.	4 222 Mar.	32 40	11 561 Buttons, supplies	8 20
753 M, Desdemona, Tex., Jan.	4 253 Apr.	6 20	11 338 Mar., buttons, supplies.	4 15
754 M, San Pedro, Cal., Feb.	4 261 Feb.	6 20	Rein. A. McNulty, Lo-
762 B, Harrison and Kearney,	4 457 Mar.	69 20	cal 788	8 75
N. J., Feb.	4 532 Mar.	4 00	12 217 Apr.	13 20
763 W, Rochester, N. Y., Mar.	4 845 Feb., Mar.	7 20	12 290 Bound M. & S., supplies	12 69
771 M, Taft, Cal., Mar.	4 76 Mar.	7 00	12 516 Mar.	5 40
777 M, Beaumont, Tex., Mar.	4 102 Mar.	6 20	12 685 Feb., Mar., supplies,
781 W, Washington, D. C., Mar.	Rein. Wm. Young, Lo-		bound M. & S.	7 10
788 M, Springfield, Ill., Mar.	cal 5	13 25	12 705 Supplies	50
791 M, Aberdeen, Wash., Mar.	4 479 Mar.	6 00	12 Gus Green, M. A. L.	3 00
792 M, Denver, Colo., Mar.	4 5 Feb.	68 30	12 J. W. Allison, M. A. L.	2 00
794 M, Linton, Ind., Mar.	4 199 Apr.	5 60	12 142 Mar.	16 00
797 B, Cristobal, Canal Zone	4 150 Feb.	21 10	12 207 Mar., supplies, buttons	116 70
801 M, Joliet, Ill., Apr.	5 172 Feb., supplies	15 20	12 279 Mar.	79 20
802 MC, Richmond, Va., Oct. 1921	5 181 Mar., bound M. & S.	10 00	12 775 Return of funds.	3 12
808 M, Houston, Tex., Apr. 1922	5 237 Mar., supplies	110 90	12 Jim Devore, M. A. L.	2 00
809 M, Lewiston, Mont., Apr.	5 440 Feb., bound M. & S.	11 10	12 842 Supplies, cash	5 00
810 WS, Atlantic City, N. J., Feb.	5 503 Feb.	33 80	12 249 Mar.	59 00
811 M, Altoona, Pa., Mar.	5 531 Apr., bound M. & S.	5 10	12 200 Return of funds.	3 00
815 M, Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb.	5 538 Feb., supplies	6 90	13 Lee Beckham, M. A. L.	2 00
826 MC, Atlantic City, N. J., Feb.	5 550 Feb.	74 20	13 Ben T. Searcy, M. A. L.	2 00
828 SCP, Salt Lake City, Utah	5 714 Apr.	5 00	13 80 Mar.	387 20
831 MC, Asbury Park, N. J., Feb. 1922	5 490 Protested check	10 60	13 115 Mar., stamps, bound M.
836 WC, Baltimore, Md., Mar.	5 490 Jan., Feb., bal. due sup-		& S.	115 60
842 M, Casper, Wyo., Mar.	cash	14 80	13 168 Mar.	11 00
844 B, Saunton, Ill., June	5 189 Mar., supplies	67 80	13 310 Mar.	24 00
845 B, New Kensington, Pa., Mar.	5 126 Mar., Apr., supplies.	4 40	13 771 Mar.	29 00
846 M, Sheridan, Wyo., Apr.	6 273 Feb., supplies, buttons.	18 70	13 788 Mar., supplies	17 20
848 M, El Paso, Tex., Mar.	6 468 Supplies, bound M. & S.	10 00	13 848 Mar., buttons, supplies	34 40
852 B, Tiffin, O., Mar.	6 513 Jan., Feb., Mar.	1 60	13 876 Mar., buttons	6 20
853 WWC, Boston, Mass., Mar.	6 524 Feb.	17 80	13 51 Mar.	78 60
854 B, Jeanette, Pa., Apr.	6 552 Feb., Mar.	15 60	13 331 Feb.	4 60
857 B, Laramie, Wyo., Mar.	6 788 Acct. Dec., Jan., Feb.		13 509 Supplies, stamps	6 00
861 M, Billings, Mont., Mar.	reports, bound M.		13 561 Mar.	123 40
862 M, Rawlins, Wyo., Feb.	S. rein. of local.	30 79	13 781 Mar., supplies	86 00
865 C, Chicago, Ill., Mar.	6 43 Mar.	11 70	13 101 Feb.	19 20
876 M, Laramie, Wyo., Mar.	6 213 Stamps	15 00	13 242 Mar.	20 60
	7 1 Mar., buttons	395 80	13 801 Feb.	13 20
	7 12 Mar., supplies	44 00	13 66 Buttons	1 00
	7 Rein. J. E. DeGruchy,		13 357 Mar.	10 60
	Local 63.	13 25	13 721 Feb., Mar.	18 40
	7 242 Feb.	11 60	14 74 Feb.	4 00
	7 262 Feb., Mar.	3 20	14 141 Mar.	1 80
	7 59 Supplies	2 00	14 226 Feb., Mar., buttons,
	7 349 Mar.	4 00	supplies	40 80
	7 489 Mar., supplies	15 20	14 356 May	3 80
	8 39 Supplies	1 00	14 399 Mar.	8 20
	8 58 Mar.	58 10	14 407 Supplies	4 50
	8 128 Mar., supplies	15 50	14 438 Mar., bound M. & S.	6 80
	8 197 Mar.	3 40	14 476 Feb.	6 80
	8 290 Mar.	11 00	14 510 Feb.	17 80
	8 315 Mar., buttons	27 20

RECEIPTS FOR APRIL, 1922.

Date Local
1 28 Feb.	$60 40
1 117 Mar., bound M. & S.	6 20
1 196 Supplies	1 00
1 425 Mar., stamps	6 40
1 670 Stamps	3 60
1 294 Feb., supplies	23 20
8 D. H. Cole, M. A. L.	3 00

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date Local			Date Local			Date Local
14 544 Nov., Dec., Jan., Feb., Mar., bound M. & S., supplies, rein. of local	10 60		22 Rein. Jack C. Mason, Local 295	7 50		29 18 Mar.	41 60
14 597 Mar., supplies	18 60		22 20 Mar.	51 40		29 420 Mar.	3 00
14 748 Mar.	53 60		22 792 Mar., supplies	13 80		29 2 Mar.	95 80
14 201 Mar.	45 00		22 487 Mar.	34 40		29 59 Mar.	40 00
14 224 Apr., bound M. & S.	16 80		24 31 Mar.	178 80		29 62 Mar.	129 60
14 298 Mar.	27 80		24 62 Supplies	14 25		29 68 Mar.	38 40
14 300 Supplies, cash	1 00		24 70 Mar.	32 00		29 69 Mar.	34 00
14 810 Jan., Feb., buttons, supplies	17 10		24 239 Mar.	47 40		29 180 Mar.	33 20
14 512 Mar., Apr.	5 40		24 306 Mar.	2 80		29 271 Supplies	50 50
14 806 Mar., Apr.	51 00		24 392 Apr.	13 40		29 279 Supplies	2 50
14 846 Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., return of funds.	13 50		24 496 Mar.	26 80		29 327 Mar.	23 20
15 31 Supplies	10 00		24 509 Bal. due Mar. report	1 40		29 330 Jan., Feb.	10 00
15 172 Mar., buttons	16 20		24 588 Mar.	15 60		29 337 Stamps	10 00
15 329 Feb.	31 80		24 589 Apr., supplies	45 80		29 381 Mar.	9 40
15 Jos. Eckmann, M. A. L.	2 00		24 615 Apr., supplies	12 75		29 536 Mar.	10 60
15 298 Acct. dues Charles McLaughlin	2 75		24 705 Mar.	61 00		29 556 Mar.	34 80
17 3 Mar.	37 80		24 857 Feb., Mar.	4 00		29 575 Mar.	6 20
17 5 Supplies	2 00		24 801 Mar.	11 40		29 Rein. H. E. Lockard, Local 502	13 25
17 12 Buttons, supplies, bound M. & S.	10 00		24 149 Mar.	25 00		29 639 Mar.	56 00
17 43 Bal. due Mar. report	90		24 284 Mar., bound M. & S.	9 00		29 728 Mar.	53 00
17 134 Mar., bound M. & S.	31 60		24 474 Mar.	34 00		29 742 Mar., Apr.	3 60
17 234 Mar.	48 40		25 528 Apr.	2 00		29 801 Apr.	12 80
17 382 Jan., Feb., Mar.	13 20		25 64 Apr.	4 00		29 Interest	181 75
17 427 Mar.	32 00		25 Rein. Walter E. Courtney, Local 339	3 25		Total	$11,576 63
17 468 Supplies	1 00		25 271 Dec., Jan., Feb., Mar.	12 50		EXPENDITURES FOR APRIL, 1922.
17 542 Mar.	11 35		25 468 Supplies	7 00		Date
17 618 Mar.	10 00		25 208 Feb., Mar.	32 40		1 Clerks	$ 72 00
17 637 Mar., supplies	2 50		25 347 Protested check	6 60		1 Rent	206 00
17 670 Mar.	3 60		25 Joe Smith, M. A. L.	1 00		3 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 135	20 00
17 673 Mar.	23 60		25 730 Mar., supplies, bound M. & S.	36 70		3 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
17 788 Stamps	15 00		25 254 Mar.	5 00		3 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
Rein. Alfred Triheart, Local 753	13 25		25 269 Mar., Apr.	1 60		3 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
17 771 Mar.	35 00		26 106 Supplies	10 00		3 Chas. Heyl, L. S. O., Local 177	20 00
17 794 Mar.	9 00		26 11 Mar., Apr., bound M. & S.	8 40		4 Myrtle Berry, Org.'s fee, Local 615	10 00
17 286 Feb., Mar.	19 20		26 19 Mar.	37 80		4 Protested check, Local 490.	10 60
17 557 Stamps, supplies	22 50		26 23 Mar.	24 00		5 Supplies	447 74
18 219 Mar.	40 40		26 29 Mar.	5 00		5 Seals	3 75
18 853 Jan., Feb., Mar.	6 00		26 84 Mar., buttons	239 80		5 Guy Genscke, defense, Local 490	20 00
18 39 Mar., bound M. & S.	26 20		26 111 Supplies	1 50		6 Acct. portrait Sam'l Gompers	25 00
18 294 Mar., supplies	16 25		26 118 Mar.	11 50		8 Clerks	72 00
18 471 Mar., supplies	23 40		26 264 Jan., Feb., Mar., supplies, bound M. & S.	8 75		10 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 365	20 00
18 Interest	683 18		26 364 Mar., buttons	12 80		10 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
18 1 Protested check	397 10		26 378 Mar., Apr., bound M. & S.	10 20		10 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
18 28 Mar., bound M. & S., supplies, buttons	72 80		26 387 Jan., Feb., Mar.	9 50		10 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00
19 Rein. Robt. Meyers, Local 349	7 25		26 Ida Fay Pittman, M. A. L.	1 25		10 Peter T. Barling, L. S. O., Local 41	40 00
19 48 Mar.	181 20		26 20 Error Mar. report	80		13 A. F. of L. March tax	397 10
19 152 Mar.	31 00		26 171 Mar.	15 80		13 Trades Label Dept. tax	100 00
19 220 Mar., supplies, buttons.	42 70		26 737 Mar., Apr.	25 20		15 Clerks	72 00
19 398 Mar.	5 00		26 72 Mar.	50 40		15 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	150 00
19 400 Mar., supplies	71 75		26 107 Mar., supplies	74 20		15 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
19 449 Mar.	12 20		26 228 Mar., bound M. & S.	12 00		15 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00
19 44 Mar.	285 40		26 376 Mar.	9 00		15 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
19 402 Mar.	83 60		26 391 Mar., cash	10 00		15 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
19 509 Mar., supplies, stamps.	3 60		26 425 Apr.	6 60		15 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150 00
19 437 Supplies	1 00		26 560 Feb.	31 00		15 Jerry Hall, Death Claim No. 11423, Local 539.	50 00
20 50 Apr.	8 40		26 659 Supplies	5 00		15 Andrew Dickey, Death Claim No. 11432, Local 115.	50 00
20 118 Buttons, supplies, cash.	8 00		27 844 Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr., May, June	2 40		15 Emil Seidlch, Death Claim No. 11433, Local 532.	50 00
20 135 Mar.	90 80		27 19 Supplies	2 50		15 Mathew Dengel, Death Claim No. 11434, Local 70.	50 00
20 326 Mar.	13 00		27 7 Mar.	220 20		15 Henry Heuman, Death Claim No. 11435, Local 1.	50 00
20 572 Apr.	13 00		27 Rein. Mary Larson, Local 52.	2 00		15 Louis Hoffman, Death Claim No. 11436, Local 7.	50 00
20 572 Mar., buttons, supplies.	57 15		27 841 Cash	5 00		15 Wm. P. Corney, Death Claim No. 11437, Local 115.	50 00
20 600 Dec., Mar.	6 80		27 466 Apr.	8 40		17 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 659	20 00
20 450 Supplies	9 70		27 539 Mar.	8 80		17 Ben F. Parker, L. S. O., Local 7	40 00
20 797 Mar., supplies	171 80		27 33 Mar., supplies, bound M. & S.	113 05		17 Fred Peabody, L. S. O., Local 865	40 00
20 468 Mar.	32 65		28 45 Supplies	5 00
20 861 Mar., supplies	4 80		28 470 Feb., Mar.	9 60
21 111 Stamps	11 60		28 577 Feb., buttons, supplies.	57 80
21 203 Mar.	6 60		28 717 Mar.	21 00
21 405 Apr.	6 00		28 F. S. Williams, M. A. L.	3 00
21 424 Buttons, supplies	41 70		28 92 Mar., Apr., supplies, bound M. & S.	11 45
21 491 Feb., Mar., supplies	8 80		28 709 Acct. stamps	26 00
21 523 Mar.	86 20		28 22 Mar.	1 00
21 865 Mar., bound M. & S.	9 60		28 25 Supplies	40 50
21 571 Mar.	15 60		28 66 Mar., supplies, buttons.	26 80
21 426 Mar.	13 80		28 122 Mar.	12 40
21 681 Mar.	37 60		28 459 Mar.	16 40
22 154 Mar., buttons	23 05		29 10 Mar.	122 60
22 207 Supplies	88 50		29 14 Mar., supplies	19 80
22 305 Mar., supplies	58 20		29 131 Mar.	33 00
22 306 Mar., supplies, cash.	2 00		29 307 Mar.	1 50
22 318 Apr.	11 00		29 480 Supplies	98 60
22 440 Mar.	5 20		29 484 Mar.	38 20
22 676 Mar., bound M. & S.	3 00		29 503 Mar.	8 60
22 681 Buttons	50		29 4 Mar., bound M. & S.	2 00
22 788 Supplies	1 00		29 John Myers, M. A. L.	13 50
22 842 Buttons			29 219 Supplies

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date		Date		In Defense Fund Apr. 1, 1922
17 John Taylor, L. S. O., Local 68	20 00	29 Geo. Nippert, Death Claim No. 11441, Local 20	50 00	Appropriated to Defense Fund, April, 1922	$60 28
17 P. T. Barling, L. S. O., Local 41	20 00	29 Chas. Grassman, Death Claim No. 11443, M. A. L.	50 00		1,394 52
20 Printing and mailing M. & S.	2,236 13	29 Jere L. Sullivan, Sec.-Treas.	400 00	Total	$1,454 80
22 Clerks	72 00	29 Janitor	15 00	Drawn from Defense Fund, April, 1922	1,290 93
24 Local 149, Newport, Ky., defense	25 00	Towel supply	1 15
24 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 650	20 00	Stamps	43 85	In Defense Fund May 1, 1922	$163 87
24 P. T. Barling, L. S. O., Local 41	20 00	American Railway Express	10 93
29 Clerks	72 00	Total	$8,377 76	In Con. Assmt. Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$1,204 10
29 Supplies	167 20	Cash on hand Apr. 1, 1922	$41,677 09	Appropriated to Con. Assmt. Fund, April, 1922
29 Edw. Flore, Gen. Pres.	459 98	Liberty Loan Bonds	95,490 07	Total	$1,204 10
29 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org.	158 41	Canadian Bonds	4,975 00	Drawn from Con. Assmt. Fund, April, 1922
29 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	154 78	Receipts for April, 1922	11,576 63
29 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00	Total	$153,688 79	In Con. Assmt. Fund May 1, 1922	$1,204 10
29 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org.	161 17	Expenditures for April, 1922	8,377 76	In General Fund May 1, 1922	$4,130 89
29 A. E. Martel, Intl. Org.	150 75	On hand May 1, 1922	$145,311 03	In Death Fund May 1, 1922	139,812 67
29 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	156 18	In Death Fund Apr. 1, 1922	$138,345 89	In Defense Fund May 1, 1922	163 87
29 Malcolm Room, Death Claim No. 11428, Local 110	50 00	Appropriated to Death Fund, April, 1922	2,166 78	In Con. Assmt. Fund May 1, 1922	1,204 10
29 Chas. C. Brown, Death Claim No. 11429, Local 110	50 00	Total	$140,512 67
29 Jacob A. Beumers, Death Claim No. 11430, Local 17	50 00	Drawn from Death Fund, April, 1922	700 00	Total	$145,311 03
29 Louis Kalazich, Death Claim No. 11438, Local 34	50 00	In Death Fund May 1, 1922	$139,812 67
29 Sam'l Schwartz, Death Claim No. 11439, Local 34	50 00

PERHAPS THIS WILL HELP YOU REMEMBER.

When the subject matter of presenting the constitutional prohibition amendment to the various state legislatures for ratification was before the Senate and House, the following senators of Arkansas voted for the dry measure: Senators Joseph T. Robinson and William F. Kirby. In the House the following Congressmen voted for the dry measure: Thad. H. Caraway, Wm. A. Oldfield, John N. Tillman, Otis Wingo, H. M. Jacoway and Samuel M. Taylor. Congressman Wm. S. Goodwin not voting.

The vote on the National Prohibition Act (the Volstead law) passed over President Wilson's veto, found the Arkansas Senators voting with the dries.

In the House all the Arkansas Congressmen voted with the dries, Samuel M. Taylor not voting, but is known as a dry. The Senators as well as the Congressmen from Arkansas were known as Democrats.

The vote on the Willis-Campbell Anti-Beer bill follows:

In the Senate, November 18, 1921, Thad. Caraway, who succeeded Kirby and Robinson, voted "yes."

In the House, on June 27, 1921, Congressmen from Arkansas voted "yes," the list following shows their home town:

W. J. Driver, Osceola, District No. 1.

H. M. Jacoway, Dardanelle, District No. 5.

William Oldfield, Batesville, District No. 2.

T. B. Parks, Hope, District No. 7.

Samuel M. Taylor, Pine Bluff, District No. 6.

John N. Tillman, Fayette, District No. 3.

Otis Wingo, De-Quenn, District No. 4.

The complete vote in the Senate was 56 for, to 22 against; and in the House the ayes polled 251 votes to the liberals' vote of 92; the number of Congressmen not voting was eighty-eight (88).

Arkansas had one opportunity to vote on the subject matter of prohibition—that was September 9, 1912, and they rejected prohibition by a vote of 85,358 to 69,390, a majority in opposition to dry laws of 15,968.

Is there a primary in your district? Are you registered?

DOUBTING THOMASES.

One of the wag writers of the times recently said that "some persons will doubt a dictionary." Evidently he must have had occasion to try out his persuasive powers on a fellow man—probably trying to get the other man to join a lodge, or maybe a local union of news writers.

Members of our organization do not have to look far for the Doubters, the catering industry is well punctured with them; and when they are informed that whatever of improvement—lessening of hours and increased remuneration—is now enjoyed by the catering industry workers, that such advance was due to the activity of a union or unions, they put on full speed and turn the faucet of dissent, wallowing in alleged facts which they grab out of a poorly-stored noodle at best. Our boys and girls have challenged them on innumerable occasions to show one instance in which the employers cut down the working time or increased the wages without pressure of one kind or another, and they just he-haw and utter a lot of banal conversation and get away from there the first chance that is offered. Members of our organization are not aggressive enough. They should not allow these milk-sops to get away with their unfounded assertions. Pin these non-members down and make them offer something besides generalities. Make them show you where the unorganized workers have advanced the cause of economic freedom, or have aided in securing shorter hours or working improvements. Give them a chance to expound their non-union faith, and watch them convict themselves as plain, every-day protection cadgers. Heckle these fellows; make them extend themselves and prove to you that they do not know a thing about the industry, except that they are getting double the wages their tribe obtained a score of years ago.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

IN BERLIN.

"That's Herr Glantzmueller. Made a colossal fortune in marks this year."

"Ach so! Speculation?"

"No; he controls the paper trust."—Life.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., April 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—My report for the month follows:

March 27—Arrived at Richmond, Va. from Washington, D. C., looked up the officers of our two colored locals, 552 Cooks, and 802 Female Workers. Finding both secretaries at work, I finally located President Louis Harris, of 552. This is our oldest colored local, it having been in existence for twenty years. Too much praise cannot be given the president and members of this local for the hard and persistent work done to get their people to organize and the same can be said of the intelligent, active and courageous work of the president of Local 802.

The only white workers in the hotels and restaurants in Richmond I found to number about thirty, who were working in Greek restaurants of the usual class. These I tried to interest in organizing without success. In fact, Richmond is a very poor city for the workers in the culinary line.

April 3—Arrived at Roanoke, Va., a small, rather busy railroad junction town. Two hotels with dining rooms, colored workers and a number of Greek restaurants. Very little business there for our people. Few employes in any one place. Canvassed the town thoroughly and left.

April 6—Arrived at Knoxville, Tenn., got in touch with President Jim Vingard and Secretary Lynn Hall, of Local 338. The members of this union went on strike over a year ago and are reduced to three union restaurants and twelve members. My work was to put the union back in the running. I called on all restaurant proprietors and in but few cases, received a cold turn down. The bosses are imbued with the open shop spirit and in many cases presented the usual guff about closing up and throwing away the key, before they will ever recognize the union, etc. Perhaps some of them will get this chance very soon. Most of the places are dependent, to a large extent, on union men's patronage. So accompanied by the ever faithful Bro. Lynn Hall, I addressed one or more union meetings a night, soliciting support for the boys and giving my experiences with the bosses of the various restaurants. The Central Labor Union, at my request, also has instructed its organization committee to inform the non-union bosses that unless our union card is displayed, their places will receive the usual unfavorable attention, which carries with it in this strong union city the refusal of union mechanics to make repairs on their places. The unions I addressed were the Central Labor Union, Building Trades Council, Railroad Carmen, Textile Workers, Stage Employes, Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers, Brotherhood Railroad Firemen and Enginemen, Brotherhood Railroad Trainmen, Boiler Makers, Painters, Plumbers and Carpenters, being cordially received and promised the support of all of them.

Local 338 has the distinction of having sent a larger percentage of its members to the war than perhaps any of our unions. It had a membership of 53 males when war was declared by this nation, and 35 of this number gave their service, most of them being in the 30th "Old Hickory" Division that assisted in breaking the Hindenburg line, its president and secretary being of this number. The boys came home and asked for what every worker ought to have without question, a six day work week. The patriotic(?) bosses locked them out and they are still out. Nearly all of its present membership are war veterans and are stickers. They are coming back stronger than ever. I also canvassed the few bars here and expect favorable action from three of them. The cooks are all colored and their organization, like the soft drink workers, disbanded almost as quickly as it organized. There seems no disposition of these workers to organize. One white organization is about all this growing city will support at this time and all white workers should be in the one union.

April 19—Arrived at Chattanooga, and at once got in touch with Secretary Wm. Bork, of one of our best and most efficient bartenders' unions, Local 312. I at once took up the subject of organizing the culinary workers and received cordial and hearty support from these good old union men. The question of opening and extending the charter of Local 312 or applying for a separate charter I left entirely to the judgment of these members. They have decided for sentimental reasons, to keep their charter and sanction the granting of another charter, and, after canvassing the city, I have called a meeting for tomorrow night, April 27, when I hope to get an organization of these workers.

I want to thank the members of Local 312 for the fine treatment given me. Bro. Bill Bork, who is now Superintendent of the County Hospital, has taken me in his Studebaker all over the historic battlefields of Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain and many other points of great interest and all have done their best to assist me in my work and to make my stay here successful and pleasant.

My expenses are:

March 27—Washington to Richmond.....	$4.20
April 3—To Roanoke	7.17
April 6—To Knoxville	10.16
April 19—To Chattanooga	4.00
Postage73
Total	$26.26

Fraternally submitted,
R. E. CROSKY,
International Organizer.

HAVERHILL, MASS., April 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

My last report left me working in the interests of Local 304, Hartford, Conn.

March 26 to April 10—Canvassed the city with the assistant secretary, Emery Mayoros. Called on the proprietors of the Cranton Restaurant. Three applications, promise of two others. Ward's two restaurants promised to sign up in a few days. Nutmeg Restaurant, promise. Eagle and Eureka Cafes, same old story, "Call next week." Jackson Lunch, one application; promise of three others. Center Lunch and Crown Restaurant signed up.

Called on Dooley Coffee House and Marble Pillar Cafe. Found former members of Local 200 working there. Promised they would see Secretary Madden and get reinstated.

April 5—Addressed a meeting at the Hartford Central Labor Union in the interest of our craft. Following evenings addressed meetings of the various organizations not already covered, requesting their co-operation and demanding our labels and buttons.

April 10—As per instructions, left for Springfield, Mass., to take up work on our membership campaign. From the 10th to the 22nd, visited the various hotels and restaurants, as well as addressed meetings of the local organizations in the interest of our labels and buttons.

April 14—Special meeting of Local 273.

April 16—Meeting of Local 304.

April 21—A meeting of Local 273.

April 23—As per instructions, left for Haverhill, Mass., where our members are out on strike. Proprietors refuse to sign up 1922 agreement and declare for the open shop. On my arrival, held a conference with the officers of Local 201, went over the local situation and mapped out a plan of campaign. Just at this writing, am unable to say how things are coming out. Both sides are determined. We hope to be successful, and there will be no doubt a successful conclusion if we receive the co-operation and support of the local trades unions.

The following is my expense account:

April—
10—Springfield	$1 19
16—Hartford and return.....	2 38
23—Haverhill	5 20

Total	$8 77
-------------	--------

Yours fraternally,
THOS. J. DURNIN,
International Organizer.

80-8-18-7--83-8-83-13-8-15

COLUMBUS, OHIO, April 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

March 27 and 28—At Akron, O., canvassed restaurants and soft drink places, and nearly every cook and waiter I met were suspended from our Local 118. None of them seemed to want to come back.

March 29 to 31—Assisted the Trades Council Organizing Committee, holding meetings in the hotels with the rubber workers.

April 1—Called on Buehrle & Smith's. Mr. Smith was willing but we must take it up with

Mr. Buehrle, who was out of town for a few days. Also visited the Marne Hotel Cafeteria; no objection to his help belonging to the union. One of our members was taking charge of the kitchen, so I am sure the balance will be easy.

April 2 to 5—Attended our local meeting, and selected another business agent. Addressed special meetings of the Carpenters and Building Trades Council. Bro. Joe Vinez assisted me, arranging meeting of the colored culinary workers.

April 6—Canvassed Leatherman's five restaurants. The managers of these places are hard to get along with, especially Mr. Fink, a union hater, formerly of Springfield, Ill. I wonder why he left Illinois?

April 7 and 8—Accompanied a committee from the Building Trades and was successful in signing up the Bond Hotel from top to bottom. Also called on Mr. Buehrle, and he said if the men wanted to join they could do so, but the men could not see what became of three dollars they had put into the union two years ago.

April 9—The organizing activity worried the city officials, who are controlled by the rubber trust, so the hotel where the organizers stopped was raided at 2 a. m. Organizer Woodbury of the Carpenters, was compelled to let them visit his room the second time. Organizer Bobbie Byron of the Sheet Metal Workers, was subjected to the third degree. They told me they were looking for a man, so they looked for him in my suitcase.

April 10—Local 118 held an open meeting and served refreshments, but one of the worst rain storms I ever saw started just as the meeting began. Bro. Sam Nueman of the Machinists and Organizer Woodbury of the Carpenters addressed the meeting. The members who worked hard to make it a success were President Joe Vinez, Brothers Emanuel, Cox, Menotti, Faup and Prewic. Bro. John Stryker sang a few selections from Robin Hood.

April 12—Meeting of the colored culinary workers was another failure, only two showing up. Addressed Railway Carmen, Machinists, and Local 2500, Carpenters.

April 13 to 30—Canvassed East Akron. Nothing doing, all Greeks. Made another call on Buehrle & Smith, but the employes don't want to hurt the boss by going back into the union. I visited places where our members are employed, trying to get them to increase the membership, but outside of the few I mentioned on April 10, the balance are just satisfied to pay dues. Left for Columbus, Ohio.

April 21—Called on secretary of the State Federation of Labor, Thos. J. Donnelly, and also President John Sullivan of the Trades Council. Both promised to assist me during my stay.

April 22—Got in touch with a former business agent, Forrest J. Cox. Also met several old members and I may be able to reorganize them in a few days.

April 23—Attended special meeting of the Eagles and had the pleasure of meeting several proprietors, who enjoyed my address dealing with the Greeks.

April 24 to 26—Accompanied Brother Cox and received eight applications. Trying to locate the old charters of the Bartenders and Waiters.

The following is my expense account:

April 20—Akron to Columbus.....	$4 74
---------------------------------	--------

ROBT. LYONS,
International Organizer.

BLOOMINGTON, ILL., April 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

March 27 to April 3—Canvassed all of the culinary workers in Springfield, Ill. I could find on the job in twenty-one restaurants. Five applications; seven reinstatements.

April 3—Held conference with the proprietors in four of the places. Attended meeting of Local 788. Three initiated; seven reinstated.

April 4 to 9—Again canvassed the employes in nineteen of the places. Three applications; seven reinstatements. Collected back dues from 33 of the members on the delinquent list.

April 10—Canvassed culinary workers at the St. Nicholas Hotel; and cooks at the Loland Hotel. Attended meeting of Local 788. Four initiated; seven reinstated.

April 11 to 15—Made another general canvass of all of the places. Straightened out about twenty of the delinquent members. Two applications; two reinstatements. Addressed meeting the Central Labor Union and meetings of eleven of the other organizations on behalf of the culinary workers.

April 16—Went to Bloomington, Ill., in the interest of Local 589.

April 17—Visited the officers and members of Local 589 and several of the places. Held a conference with a committee of fourteen of the officers of the Bloomington Central Labor Union in the interest of our members. Attended meeting of Local 589. President, vice-president, recording secretary and business agent and chaplain were elected and installed to fill the unexpired terms. Nine ex-members reinstated. Held a conference with the proprietor of the Quality Restaurant.

April 18—Springfield. Held conference with the proprietors in five of the places. See them again. Attended meeting of Local 788. Three initiated; four resinstated.

April 19—In company with Brother Chas. Smith, Secretary of Local 788, held a conference with Mr. Ballard, one of the proprietors of eight restaurants in Springfield, and about twenty eating places in other cities. Arranged for another conference with him. We also held conference with the employers in five of the other places. Came to agreements with two of them. Call-backs on the other three places.

April 20, 21 and 22—Canvassed culinary workers at the Island and St. Nicholas Hotels, and in twelve of the restaurants. Four applications; five reinstatements. Held conferences with the employers in three of the places.

April 24—Visited the business representatives of four of the organizations in the interest of our members. Attended meeting of Local 788. Three initiated; five reinstated.

April 25—In company with Brother John H. Walker, President Illinois State Federation of Labor and Brother Smith of Local 788, held conference with Mr. Ballard of the Ballard and Johnson Restaurant Co., and with the proprietor of the Illinois Cafe. Arranged for another meeting with Mr. Ballard. We came to a closed agreement with the proprietor of the Illinois Cafe, who employs 11 culinary workers. All of these agreed to join Local 788. Held a conference with the proprietor of Strand's Restaurant. Our committee is to see him again.

April 26—Went to Bloomington, Ill., in the interests of Local 589. Held a conference with Sister Hardy, Secretary of the local. Visited the members in four of the places.

It is astonishing to meet so many culinary workers working seven days per week, 12 to 14 hours a day (of supposed intelligence), who will tell you that they will join the union if the boss signs up to give them union conditions, and they will pay their dues as long as they work that job, if the union sends a collector around. But they don't want to mix with that bunch that goes to union meetings. It is indeed deplorable that the brave loyal men and women members of a trade union who ever stand like rocks in the face of all adversity, have to make conditions, shorten the hours of labor, and increase the wages for spineless creatures such as these. It reminds one of the stories of the Master and the Lash in the old slavery days. A large percentage of these would probably crawl the earth on all fours if the boss commanded them to do so. The Creator gave them brains, and the great American trade union movement gives them an opportunity to make their lives worth living, and the job worth working, but they persist in keeping on and on, using only their feet instead of their brains and actually imagine they are getting away with something on the union, assuming that the things that are said in Holy Writ are true, "only the blasts from Gabriel's horn" will perhaps finally awaken them.

My expenses for the month were as follows:

April 16—To Bloomington and return.....	$4.36
April 26—To Bloomington	2.19
Postage for the month.....	.56

Total$7.11

With best wishes,

Fraternally yours,

E. W. PARLEE,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ALBANY, N. Y., April 27, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of April:

March 26—Had a meeting with the trustees of Local 201, Haverhill, Mass. All the accounts were audited and found correct.

March 27—Worked on itemized shortage of former secretary, William Kiley, as required by the attorney.

March 28—With Vice-President J. Conley and the trustees had a conference with our lawyer.

March 29, 30 and 31—With Mr. Conley working on books and shortage.

April 1—Secretary C. Flanagan, Business Agent Emery, Vice-President Conley and I visited the officers of the Central Labor Union.

April 3, 4 and 5—Finished up my business in Haverhill, and proceeded to Boston.

April 7—As per instructions left for Albany, N. Y.

April 8—Met Bro. William Matz, business agent of Local 471, and Brothers Hoffman and Kearny, of Local 228. Local 471 was practically on the rocks when the present officers took charge of it last January, 46 members and $158.00 in unpaid bills; now the local has 109 members, all waiters, there being no cooks organized here. Brother Hoffman is holding his bartenders and has several reinstatements.

April 10—Attended the meeting of Local 471 and explained that I was sent here to organize all the workers in our industry.

April 11—I decided that in order to get acquainted quicker, and to find out what their attitude was, I would try to land a job, so I could work side by side with them. With this plan in view I visited the following places: The Ten Eyck, Keelers (Broadway), Keelers (State St.), The Hampton, The New Kenmore, The Albany Club, The Grand Palace, The Boulevard, The Farnmout, Jacks, The Globe, Union Station, Fort Orange, Browns, Fort Orange Club. The chef of the Ten Eyck recognized me, having met me in Detroit, so I had to tell him of my intentions. He said I would have a hard time getting his bunch, as the ones who stick to the job are tangled up by property bought on the suggestion of the boss, and the others are not steady, they don't stay long enough to get acquainted. The other chefs took my address, saying they would call me up if they needed any one.

April 13—With Brother Hoffman visited as many saloons as we could; the response of the barboys was invariably, "if I stick to this job, I'll come back," and of course we had to accept it for what it was worth. There are many waiters out of the organization here, mostly former members who left because they were disgusted with the way business was done, but with Brothers Matz, Landau and President Walters as leaders I think we will be able to get them back, especially if we can get the cooks. There are very few waitresses here, which was a surprise to me.

April 17—Out with Brother Hoffman.

April 19—Addressed the Central Labor Union meeting, where I met General Organizer Chas. W. Cullen, of the Hatters.

April 20—Out with Brother Hoffman.

April 21—Canvassed more lunch rooms and in the evening Brother Cullen and I addressed the meeting of Local 696, Electrical Workers.

April 22 and 24—Pulled a stunt upon which I may report later. Saw such good results in sight that I have continued the plan and believe I can unionize an old establishment which has been rather antagonistic in the past.

My expenses are:

April—
5—Haverhill to Boston	$ 1 19
7—Boston to Albany	8 83
Postage	85
Baggage	1 00
Total	$11 87

Fraternally submitted,
A. MARTEL,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SEATTLE MAN IS EXPOSED.

Love Flier Costs Scab Cafe Owner, $18,000 and His Family.

By JOHN W. NELSON.

How many dimes a day will A. J. Meves have to shave off the wages of his girl employes at Meves' cafeteria to pay him back for his losses on the "love market"?

This is a question the unprotected employes are asking themselves these days, since the news spread that Mrs. Madge A. Meves was awarded a divorce from the cafeteria man, and granted the beautiful Meves residence, 1127 Thirty-fifth Avenue S. and $18,000 in cash. Not to mention the minor matter of $30 per month which Meves must pay for the support of their 5-year-old son, John Russell Meves.

And all because of a pair of bewitching black eyes and some honey words and perhaps kisses. Yes, assuredly kisses at least, since modest girls do not confess their love in letters unless this perfunctory introduction to the sub-rosa, sanguine paths of the little love god has formed a milestone of the flowery path.

Only $18,000, a wife, a beautiful residence, a son and $30 a month. That is all Meves' flier in love has cost him to date. Skeptical persons will say this is merely the first chapter in a book that has many dreary pages before the word "finis" is scrawled across the bottom by those writers of tragedy, "Wreck and Ruin."

In his "findings of fact and conclusion of law," Presiding Judge Calvin S. Hall said that Meves has "disregarded his marriage vows and treated his wife cruelly and heaped personal indignities upon her." He adds that Meves is "of a domineering nature and an overbearing disposition and is addicted to the excessive use of intoxicating liquors and that in such a home it is inimical to the best interests of his 5-year-old son" to remain.

The girl in the case, pretty Miss Bertha Semones, Meves' employe, paints another picture of Meves, in her letter to him, which was introduced as evidence in the case. Miss Semones' letter squelched opposition to the divorce of Mrs. Meves, when it was introduced as plaintiff's exhibit A. It follows:

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 9, 1921.

"My Dear Sweetheart:

"I received all of your dear letters and cards and they made me very happy. I have been so miserable since you left me. I really don't think I can let you go away again unless you take me with you. I am counting the days now until my dear A. J. will be with me again. I dreamed, sweetheart, before I got your last letter that you were coming home to me alone and I am happy to think that maybe—(?) that dream will come true. In this case I would love to meet you part of the way and ride back with you. I can come as far as Spokane. Please let me know if you want me to do this. If not, I will be content to meet you at the station.

"I have been exceptionally good since you left. Rose and I have seen two shows. We always come right home every night. I haven't had the heart to go anywhere. I have been invited to several parties, but I don't care about parties.

"A. J., Dear, this will be the last letter I will write, so don't look for any more. As soon as you get this I want you to hop right on a train and fly back to God's country.

"I am happier now than I have been for a long time. Every night when I turn the date up on the check machine I think, 'Just one day nearer my A. J.' I sure have been counting the days and I also know what it means to be lonesome for someone you love.

"Love and kisses,

"FROM YOUR BOTCH."

"P. S.—Received both the telegrams and am happy you are on your way back. B."

—Seattle Record, April 4, 1922.

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

All aboard for the Knowledge Express, stopping at Knowit, Getwise, Information City, Enlightenmentville, Intelligenceburg, and way stations.

Hello, girls and boys; take a seat in the observation car so that you may profit by this little trip. I wonder if you ever give it a thought that there are many thousands in the world who do not, for one reason or another, enjoy similar privileges as you do each month. Have you ever caught yourself giving more than ordinary heed to the well-read individual, the man or woman, either who recites incidents of travel and make it worth listening to? Not so many of those kindly folks as you'd imagine, but there are some, and they never lack attentive listeners. That is what we aim at every month—to engage your attention, to direct your notice to news items which aid you in acquiring information about what is transpiring in this busy world. And what do we get? Pleasure out of the task; satisfaction of knowing that the MIXER AND SERVER offers something just a bit different than the ordinary trade publications. Yes, we get paid, too, but aside from that we get something else—a chance to win the esteem of our associates—meaning you who peruse these interesting bits from the news purveyors of the world.

* * *

ESTEEM—Did you ever look up the definition of that word? Supposing that you do. If you are not the fortunate possessor of a dictionary, we shall offer a few items that will elucidate:

There died in Cincinnati the other day a physician by the name of Dr. C. C. Agin, who was noted for his skill and generosity. Physicians have died in this city before, but few of them left so many warm admirers—men of his own profession, who love to make the fact known that they knew the doctor and counted themselves as one of his friends. Professional men winning the esteem and respect of their co-workers in a profession is not exceptional, but it is infrequent to see so many physicians genuinely sorry for the old doctor's passing.

Doctor Agin was a noted story teller; he had the happy knack of reciting a story appropriate to every case he handled, and many a visit from his patients were benefited by his good humor as much as from the medicine he prescribed. One of the stories told of the old doctor by one of his admirers runs as follows:

"Into Dr. Agin's office, one day, came a dapper young man of about 22 years. When the doctor asked, 'What can I do for you, sir?' he smiled and said, 'Doctor, have you forgotten me? My name is —'"

"The young man explained that he had been married about fifteen months and that the stork was expected at his home.

"'Couldn't you come and be with us?' he asked. Dr. Agin's eyes twinkled as he told his reply. It was: 'Listen, son, I don't know whether you know it or not, but your father and mother never paid my fee for bringing you into the world. However, I'll come.'

"'I'll tell you, doctor,' the young man proposed, 'I'll pay my own fee first, then I'll pay my baby's fee. Make out your bill. I don't want to feel that I'm seeing a big show like Life without a paid admission ticket.'"

Said one of the best known medical practitioners of this city:

"Dr. Agin was poor in this world's goods, but he was rich in affection and he had the meekness of the Saviour himself."

What a tribute! How well put and what a world of meaning! That is what we mean by "esteem"—to have those who knew you, sincerely regret your passing, to honor your memory with kind and generous thought.

Another illustration, right from some of our own members. The item we reproduce is from the Seattle (Wash.) Union Record of March 25, 1922.

REGRET DEPARTURE OF ABLE UNIONIST.

A striking feature of the meeting of Cooks and Assistants' Local 33 Friday night was the reception given one of their charter members, William Wilkening, who is about to leave the city to embark in business in Detroit.

Wilkening for years has been a prominent member of the organization and is one of the best known chefs on the Pacific coast, having done much to advance conditions for the culinary crafts.

A beautifully engraved gold-mounted memento was presented to Wilkening as a token of esteem from Local 33 for services rendered in behalf of the organization. Several members eulogized Wilkening's work here and expressed regret at his leaving the jurisdiction. He leaves next Tuesday.

When you leave that old town of yours—when you take a traveling card and decide to locate elsewhere, will your old-time local union members get up at meeting and say: "Bud, old scout, we are doggoned sorry that you are going to leave us, but we want you to know that we love every hair in your head and every bone in your body, and we wish you more than your share of health, happiness and prosperity."

Or will they, as too often proves the case, wait until you are packed ready to go and salute you with: "Well, you thimble-head nutt, we're glad you are shaking the dust of this town from your kidney feet; we don't wish you any bad luck, but if the limited splits a switch we will arise with a smile on our face at the meeting following and say, 'Pay the death claim; give the undertaker a vote of thanks for putting under the sod as worthless an old stiff as was ever permitted to be foul the air."

Whisper—did you look up the definition of the word "esteem," or is the word picture sufficient?

It ain't all over in the State of California by a jug full; peruse this little item which will be warning to the A.-S. L. of that State to "begin their jitney picking stunt" to oppose the awful wets.

TO VOTE ON PROHIBITION.

San Francisco, Tuesday, March 21.—The board of supervisors last night decided to submit to the people at the coming November election the question of whether they desire the board to petition Congress for a modification of the Volstead act.

The vote on the decision was nine to eight. Some of the supervisors said after the meeting they were willing to vote "right now" on memorializing Congress to modify the liquor act.

That was captured by a pair of shears from the Seattle Times of March 21, 1922.

Get this little one for a cent clipped from the Washington Post:

"A Cleveland man says water will again flood the earth 300 years hence. Somebody's always flattering the prohibitionists."

We feel like saying, go to it Doc, hammer out another, you are on the right track, after reading the following item clipped from the Times-Star of March 21, 1922:

"UNFIT SHOULD BE PREVENTED FROM MARRYING."

The "melting pot" as exemplified in the United States, is a fallacy, and should be corrected through a more rigid enforcement of immigration laws, is the assertion made by Dr. Charles L. Bonifield, in a paper which will be read at an open meeting of the Cincinnati Obstetrical Society, Thursday, April 13. The intermingling of races, as in the United States, he declares, prevents the achievement of that which is most desired, the creation of a "blue-blooded" citizenry.

"In order to create a splendid race of humanity it is necessary to follow the same rules that are employed in the breeding of pedigreed animals, such as horses or dogs," declared Dr. Bonifield. "A man with a pedigree dog would not consent to breeding it with an ordinary animal, and it is no more than natural that a real American should not marry an Oriental or Occidental. Matters would be helped greatly if the unfit were prevented from marrying. Crossing of different races cannot produce a super race, which must be built up through a single state of people. This country would do well to establish a more rigid censorship of immigration and select only the best of the foreign countries."

About the one question that comes to mind after reading the next news item is: How would you like to be employed on that "wet ship?"

FRENCH WINE SHIP TO CALL AT SOUTH AMERICAN PORTS.

(Associated Press Cable)

Paris, March 21.—Premier Poincare will give official sanction for an "exposition wine ship," which is scheduled to leave France in July for a six months' advertising trip in South America. The ship will visit both the Western and Eastern South American seaboard for the purpose of advertising French wines, as well as French silks, tapestries, velvet and paintings.

Minister of Merchant Marine Rior is outfitting a 10,000-ton ship, a former army three-decker transport, while the committee is making elaborate changes in the boat. Wine bars on each deck are being arranged where prospective South American buyers, or mere visitors on the ship will be welcomed to sample wines, ranging from the plebeian "pinard" and light clarets to the finest vintages of champagnes, burgundies, brandies and liquors.

Just wondering if William "Chinnings" Bryan, the new resident of Florida would regard being forced to remain on board that wet ship during its proposed visits to South American ports as a penalty or a premium. Popular politicians must be scarce among Florida's population; Bill is running for the Senate.

Speaking about population, here we have data about our Canadian Provinces and Territories that will enable our readers to observe that the Dominion is being populated with greater speed than many imagined:

POPULATION OF CANADA JUMPS 22 PER CENT.

(Associated Press Dispatch.)

Ottawa, Ont., March 22.—An increase of 1,562,846, or nearly 22 per cent, in the population of Canada in the last decade is shown by the final figures announced by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The complete census returns show the population of the country to be 8,769,489, as against 7,206,643 in 1911.

The following is the population by provinces, compared with the figures of the 1911 census:

Province	Census 1921	Census 1911
Nova Scotia	523,837	492,338
New Brunswick	387,839	351,889
P. E. I.	88,615	93,728
Quebec	2,349,067	2,003,232
Ontario	2,929,054	2,523,274
Manitoba	613,008	455,614
Saskatchewan	761,390	492,432
Alberta	581,995	374,663
British Columbia	523,353	392,480
Yukon	4,162	8,512
N. W. T.	6,684	18,841
Canadian Navy	485
Total	8,769,489	7,206,643

The Dominion sent overseas more than 500,000 fighting men. Sixty thousand of these were killed and 125,000 were wounded. In addition more than 100,000 men in the Canadian army were engaged in military occupations on this side of the ocean. During the war period, marriage and the establishment of homes was far below normal.

We are betting a Washington red apple that, long before the next census, the Province of Quebec will be out in front with British Columbia running a close second. Reasons? Many, the principal one being that Quebec has shown how to be liberal and keep within the bounds of decency too. Who wants to stay in a province with nothing better than buttermilk to quench one's thirst, when they can move into a province where Haig & Haig and Johnny Walker beverages can be obtained for the asking and reasonable in price too.

Here is a little item that made several of the pale-faced pulpit pounders on the pay roll of the Anti-Saloon League attempt a bit of high and lofty word juggling, much of which consisted of: "The very impudence of the fellow"; It can't be done, for we shall see to it that the laws are amended to prevent it." But the Captain does not seem to worry, for when interviewed in New York recently, he said: "We are proceeding with the job and expect to make the floating cabaret a reality." The item reads:

"Capt. James V. Martin, who recently announced that he will build a great floating cabaret, which he will anchor outside the three-mile limit, says he expects to spend $10,000,000 on this project. There will be singing and dancing aboard—and drinking."

Get that? "And drinking." Just watch the "Majah" at Washington get busy and "see what can be done." Leave it to him, he will amend the three-mile marine law limit—maybe. Possibly the W. C. T. U. will leave their anti-tobacco campaign alone long enough to help the "Majah" worry the department officers into promising to bring the matter to the attention of the Senate and House. Give the drys credit, they are mussy and on the job 23 out of the 24 hours.

Speaking about the W. C. T. U. campaign reminds us of the hullabaloo that is being made about women smoking—the press does not call 'em women, they say flappers. First thing you know the hotel and cafe owners will be getting another easy bump, many of them permitting women to smoke in their establishments. They were warned a couple of years ago when this so-called "fad" was getting a foothold, that the day would come when they'd be sorry for showing anything resembling approval of the habit or practice.

And the movie game is due to get a couple of good, hard smashes in the region of the money belt, too. Some of the "cinema ladies" just love to pull on the end of a "fag" and the bull necked directors let 'em get away with it and are probably wondering why picture censors use the pruning knife on so-called super-pictures.

Here is one clipped a few months ago, but no opportunity to offer, but it is appropriate while discussing the subject of smokes for women, for according to Dr. Wm. E. Barton, the author of the article, there are more females than males in the well-populated sections, where the fag habit prevails.

"The impression is that America is short of potential husbands. There are in fact 104 men to every 100 women. Every census from the beginning of America has shown an excess of men over women. More male children than female are born. More men than women emigrate from other countries to America.

But men do not hold their advantage. They die in childhood more easily than girls. They weaken their hearts by the excessive use of tobacco. They are more subject to accidents. They are more exposed to fatalities in war.

In the times of Isaiah a situation was described in which seven women would lay hold on one man and offer to support themselves if he would marry them all. This merely means that after war has killed off large numbers of men there is great shortage of husbands and an abnormal social condition.

In the United States there are still more men than women, but this is due largely to foreign immigration.

Native-born young women have not any more than an even chance of getting a husband. In Nevada there are far more men than women, notwithstanding the number of women who go there to be divorced.

But in Massachusetts a woman has only 96 chances out of 100 of being married, and would have less but for the immigration which comes into that state and remains there.

In the older states, the ratio of men to women is usually less than in the newer ones. A woman in the west has a better chance, arithmetically, of marrying than in the east.

Most school teachers marry, and that is well. The school officials do not like it, but the marriage of teachers deserves to be encouraged. The average school teacher is likely to be a good wife and mother.

A majority of stenographers marry, and that is well. They ought to marry. The training of children in the schoolroom is in general better preparation for matrimony than office work; but on the other hand, a majority of stenographers live at home and have some domestic responsibility.

America is not depleted of its manhood. An enormous majority of our girls who grow up will have husbands. That is an encouraging fact for the girls, and not less so for the men whom they are to marry."

Thanks to Brother Geo. F. Anderson, Secretary of Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa., who, by the way, has supplied us with several very interesting letters from the City of Brotherly Love, which we have printed and no doubt you have read, sends the following clipped from the Philadelphia Evening Ledger of March 7, 1922, which, in view of the fact that we belong to the sawed-off, hammered down aggregation and filling the job of secretary, and the further fact that we never could pass muster as a blonde, and—and—well, we just wanted to print the item anyway, so here it is and you can snicker as much as you care to later on, but keep your eye on the little guy who is doing the secretarizing for your union, for some of those little fellows are regular Tar-tars when peevied:

SECRETARIES BORN, NOT MADE, SAYS DEFENDER OF CLASS.

Are you a secretary?

Perhaps you are without ever having known it. Or perhaps—like some girl stenographers—you are, spiritually, something widely different; a faith healer or an opera singer or a writer of polyphonic prose.

Anyway, this much is certain; either you are or you aren't, like being Irish or fond of lobster. For Arthur L. Church, of this city, has after infinite research crystallized secretaries into a hard and fast temperamental category. A born secretary himself, secretary of a baseball club at the age of ten, secretary of his college class a few years later and now secretary of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, he stands out as the protagonist of secretaries all over the world.

What is a Secretary?

"A secretary," says Mr. Church, "is one with an instinct for taking burdens that properly belong to others. He is a son of Martha, who does the work while the sons of Mary stand around and wait in dramatic attitudes trying to impress the popular imagination. He is the eternal George to whom the troubles of the rest of the world are persistently relegated.

"Rarely indeed does the secretary get the credit that is due to him. We hear the name of Aaron mentioned about one-hundredth as frequently as the name of Moses, yet I suspect that Aaron had a clearer idea of Moses' purpose and as much to do with its accomplishment as Moses himself. Again, every one has heard of Charlemagne, but relatively few of his paladin, the good Turpin, Archbishop of Rheims, an ideal secretary if ever was.

"Greatness is a relative thing, and perhaps there are kinds of greatness to which the secretarial instinct is unnecessary or incompatible. Anyway Lincoln Danton, John Brown, Richard II, and Al Jolson were not in any sense secretaries. On the other hand, Alexander Hamilton, John Hay and Machiavelli were secretaries of the finest order.

SHAKESPEARE TOO CARELESS.

"If you press me I must say that Shakespeare was no secretary. What secretary would be so careless of loose ends as to have a man whose father's ghost appeared to him in the first part of a play, speak later on in the same play of—"That undiscovered country from whose bourne No traveler returns—"

"Big men—men over five feet eleven—cannot hope to become secretaries; neither can decidedly blonde men. The secretarial type is of middle height, and dark complexioned rather than fair. Babe Ruth, I am afraid, would not do very well, nor G. K. Chesterton.

"The worst secretary—and the most unsecretarial person I ever knew—was a large blonde man.

"Either you've got it in you to be a secretary, in which case you will sooner or later; or you have not, in which case you will not no matter how many business schools you go to or how many office contrivances you learn to manipulate."

Several years ago a minister of St. Louis, Mo., accused the leaders and managers of the Anti-Saloon League with being in collusion with a band of law flouters, in fact made intimations substantially in effect that, the soft-handed aggregation had accumulated callouses on their paws from counting their ill-gotten gains. The aforesaid minister, Robinson by name, heckled the Anti-Saloon League officials, who in turn tried to make it appear as though the Mound City preacher was a no-account son-of-a-gun anyway, and pooh poohed the idea which Robinson tried to put on them. But here is another phase of the same subject, clipped from the Springfield (Mass.) Union, January 10, 1922:

MOONSHINE MONOPOLY.

To the Editor of The Union:

Sir—So much has been said about prohibition and what the "wicked reformers" are doing, let us get down to some real or imaginary possibilities of the case. Oftentimes a legislative measure is put through by selfish interests under the guise of reform. The reformers get all the kicks, if anything goes wrong, and the chief instigators can sit back and wink.

We are suffering from the effects of an expensive war. Prices went sky-high and profiteering became popular. A lot of money in circulation, with Federal needs running high, necessarily meant higher taxes, resulting in many attempts to evade the taxes. Our Department of Justice was kept busy looking after enemy spies, draft dodgers, profiteers, Bolsheviks, I. W. W.'s, etc., so could not observe how carefully all the laws were being enforced.

All of a sudden there was talk of prohibition, and a constitutional amendment was passed very quickly and ratified by an almost unanimous vote of the States.

Let us get at the question from a new angle, which may startle the American public. Before the war, a band of so-called "moonshiners" had existed in this country for years, successfully cheating the Government out of millions of dollars in internal revenue. Competing with these moonshiners were the licensed saloons, thereby keeping moonshine prices at a minimum for the risk involved. If that competition were destroyed, the moonshine product would have a monopoly, and the public could be compelled to pay any price asked. As the public always kicks and talks over high prices, it was a wise plan to have the law so constructed that the public couldn't make any complaints without getting itself in wrong.

The outcome was the present prohibition law, passed by a generous Congress, using the poor reformers as a catspaw for the invisible moonshine interests. Since then the term "bootleggers" has come into use, and just as long as the bootleggers exist, it looks as if the prohibition amendment will stand secure against any repeal.

The bootleggers have killed the saloons and all other competitors; have constructed the laws so neatly they can work in secret with perfect ease; have eliminated all necessity for bothersome internal revenue and income tax reports and by possessing a monopoly, do not have to manufacture according to any definite standard of quality. Nor do they have to fear prosecution for profiteering under the Lever act.

Leave it to the power of the bootleggers to forever block the repeal of the prohibition amendment, to say nothing of what power the few reformers in sympathy may possess. B. M. W.

Springfield, January 9, 1922.

After reading that very pointed view, is it pressing hard on one's credulity to ask them if it might not be possible that the elements mentioned in the letter accepted the slush fund offered by the illicit liquor distillers, and that such acceptance precluded the chance of the A.-S. L. leaguers and managers ever making an itemized report of its income—except by bundling the entire proceeds and classing it as income?

Of course the Anti-Saloon Leaguers would indignantly arise and make protest, but coming right down to brass tacks, where did they get the long green from? Until such time as they make that fact plain to the public, the public can keep on thinking whatever it pleases, but that won't worry the sky-pilots a bit, for they care as much about what the public thinks as Judge Gary's steel trust does and that, according to Dan Shea, is not a damned thing. Will some of the "Blue Song" writers of Tin-Pan Alley be kind enough to turn one loose entitled, "When the Mule in Moonshine Turns to Gold." And while they do it will the audience arise and salute the flag?

Speaking of the flag, here is a bit we clipped several weeks ago that may interest the reader:

March lesson on National Emblem, by Cincinnati Chapter, D. A. R.:

There can scarcely be any doubt that the earliest use of the new flag in battle was at Fort Schuyler, built on the site now occupied by the city of Rome, New York.

The fort was without a flag or banner of any sort, and was invested by the British on the second of August, 1777. The event suggested to Commandant Peter Gansevoort and his brave officers and men that they needed the inspiring force of an unfurled flag.

They had heard that six weeks before Congress had created a new flag, and being determined to fight with American colors flying, shirts were cut up to form the white stripes, pieces of scarlet cloth were joined for the red, and the blue ground for the stars was made of a cloth cloak belonging to Captain Swartwout of Dutchess county, who was then in the fort.

Before the sun went down on that day a unique flag—the genuine Stars and Stripes—was waving over Fort Schuyler. The courageous band of six hundred Americans pluckily resisted the siege for twenty days, when the flag, so curiously wrought, waved in triumph over the fort.

Efforts of the open shoppers to put the rollers under the International Typographical Union, has proven about as successful as Williard's and Rea's management of railroad property during the war—and they do say that McAdoo hung the can on both the Baltimorean and Pennsy man.

When the I. T. U. began its campaign in 1921, there was in the General Fund of that organization $800,000; that was of date May 1, 1921. At the outset the printers assessed themselves 10 per cent of their weekly earnings to create a strike fund. On January 1, 1922, the assessment was reduced to 7 per cent and since March 4, 1922, the assessment has been 5 per cent. During the seven months of the strike, May to December, 1921, inclusive, the receipts for the strike fund were $7,106,362.73, and the expenditures on account of the strike were for the same period, $6,224,860.56, leaving at January 1, 1922, an unexpended balance in the strike fund of $1,113,804.10. If the "teapot" calls that getting the best of the I. T. U., all we have to say, is that we hope the other non-union agencies will be as successful, for by the time they have won a few such victories the wage earners of America will be strong enough to tell somebody where to head in and get off. The printers during the seventy years of the existence of their organization, have never lost a national strike.

The printers learned the lesson early in the game that, if you want a real fighting organization, you have to do several things, one of which is to furnish the spondulix to carry on the battle, the other is to be a fighting son-of-a-gun, willing to go to the mat and stick till the cows come home—and the printermen do both and consequently win.

Prominence was given to the subject-matter of immigration, and hope was expressed that Congress would do something to prevent the expected flood from overseas countries. There seemed to be prevalent an idea that the United States was the only section affected, that Canada was immune from the infliction. Wrong view point, Canada is as deeply interested as the rest of America as the following editorial will illustrate, which editorial we clipped from the Times-Star of recent date:

CANADA ALSO AWAKE TO THE ALIEN MENACE.

Canada's experience with undesirable emigrants is running parallel with our own. While we have temporarily, at least, stopped the flood, our northern neighbor is calling loudly for wholesale deportation of those aliens who are dangerous to the welfare of the nation. Our own action—so far as it has gone—and Canada's cry for action result from the same cause, namely, that a certain class of foreigners which already has arrived or which clamors for admission, is impossible of proper assimilation, and is not the material from which good citizens are made.

The Toronto Mail and Empire, referring to an ever growing list of crimes throughout the Dominion, attributes most of these outrages to unnaturalized aliens of a vicious class. "They are not Canadians," declares this journal, "and they never will become Canadians. They are liabilities, not assets. * * * There are thousands of unnaturalized aliens who reveal in their offenses that they are not fit to become Canadians, and it would be a public service to rid the country of them."

We have the same problem on this side of the border, only in far more intensified form. What the undesirable and unnaturalized alien is costing the American people in taxes for prisons, hospitals, asylums, police protection and so on, in property and still more important, in the lowering of ideals and respect for law, is impossible of calculation. When Canada, with a small population scattered thinly throughout a vast empire, already is beginning to find the undesirable alien a serious menace, it is time for Americans to find a permanent solution of a similar but more sinister problem on our side of the border.

You've heard the bloated bond holder on several occasions make effort with hand, waving things aside as it were, and with voice quivering with suppressed emotion assert that "I am not opposed to unions, providing they are good unions and managed as they should be." The New York Call offers an editorial in a recent number which touches upon the subject of unionism, good and bad, and hits several nails on the head, and hard too.

The editorial follows:

We are very anxious to get this matter of organization of workers straight. So much has been said regarding such organizations being "un-American," that it penalizes thrift, that it means slavery for the workman, that his freedom is pawned and his initiative throttled, that it is necessary to consider all these contentions.

Lawyers have an excellent organization. In fact, it is about the best thing in the line of a closed shop that we know of. Suggestions are now being made that the conditions for joining the lawyers' union be made more strict. The union fixes certain standards of craftsmanship and its utmost to become a 100 per cent closed shop.

Is there any suggestion of the open shop for the lawyers or a reduction of their incomes? None whatever. Then there are the engineers, the doctors, the dentists and other professionals who are organized. Are they to disband or to declare an open shop or to reduce the charges they make for their services? It is foolish to ask the question.

There remain two types of unions to consider. There are the unions of workers and the unions of the owners of capital. They are the most conspicuous. The unions of capital are the most powerful in the country. They also have their alliances and understandings. Through directorates and stockholdings many of their members are members of a number of the big unions of capital. They have their rules and regulations, which constitute a union philosophy all their own.

Shall the unions of big capital and finance be abandoned? Do these unions penalize thrift, or mean slavery for their members, or throttle their initiative? How utterly foolish to ask such questions! The big journals of capitalism assure us that this also is a unionism that must be discouraged. Many of these unions of capital and finance are practically 100 per cent organized, as in the case of the packers, the steel masters and the railroad owners.

After a process of elimination we reach the conclusion that the lawyers and engineers, the doctors and dentists and other professionals, the bankers and packers, the steel masters and transportation owners, the coal barons and the textile kings, and other masters of finance and capital, are to have their big unions and have them practically on a closed shop basis.

There is only one exception. The workers are not to have their unions, or if they have them are to be on the open shop basis and subject to laws that strip them of power. The only unionism that is suspected and that is to be destroyed is the unionism of the workers in industry. Each one of the millions of workers is expected to face each powerful union of capital. This pitting of the individual workman against the giant organization of capital, we are told, is "Americanism."

It is a swindle. What the masters of finance and industry desire is, through their own organized effort, to deprive the workers of the nation of organization. The individual worker is expected to face an organized world without any organization of his own. In all the annals of history there has never been a more contemptible piece of insolence and shallow logic than this.

The worker who can be budged an inch by these shallow critics from his insistence on absolute freedom of organization is only fit for the sweat-shop and the chain gang.

After perusing the foregoing do you find yourself making a query, even if you do not give it expression? Does it read: When will the interests go after the lawyers' union, the doctors' associations, the dentists' league, and the architects' chapters and force them on the open shop basis?

Are they unions of the good kind, is that the reason?

Seeking the unusual, that's us, and we think we have it in the following from the Brooklyn "Aigle" (Eagle) as Denny Costigan calls it:

AS TO BOARDING WITH YOUR WIFE.

The story of the 75-year-old Jersey man who has just renewed a nine-year signed contract to board with his wife (her age is 45) at a fixed figure, and not to speak to her unless the house is burning down, stirs in old-timers' minds the refrain of a favorite song of Sol Smith Russell:

Oh, O'd loike to know

Who runs this show;

Is it me or Flannigan, the lodger?

But really there isn't any lodger in the Jersey case, nor any "star boarder" but the husband. The children are grown up. Three sons support the mother. If the aged father pays his board he has no further responsibilities. And he has still a good job and is content. Also his wife is content.

Our reasonable guess is that she is a mighty good housekeeper. Nine years with no complaint possible, without contract-breaking, and a renewal at the end of the term, is excellent evidence of that. There are no flies on her coffee and none in it. The steak is broiled and not fried. The bacon and chops are done to a turn. Even the hash must be eatable. Beds are properly aired and carefully made up. The boarder doesn't have to wait half an hour when he wants to take a bath. Hot water is available at all hours. Smoking in your room is permitted, probably encouraged.

Perhaps the habit of speaking to a wife, or having a wife speak to you, has its disadvantages. It often develops acrimony, sometimes alimony. Every sociological experiment, such as the Jersey one, is entitled to be judged on its merits. The human race must live and learn by experimentation.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Answering a communication recently, we advised a member of the organization that as soon as we obtained reliable data on the subject, we would in all likelihood print it in these monthly surveys. The question asked us was: What is the attitude of the Mormon Church on the subject matter of Asiatic exclusion? Here is a bit clipped from a San Francisco paper of January 19, 1922, that answers the question with emphasis:

MORMON HEAD SCORES JAPS.

Sacramento, Jan. 18.—Declaring that from information gained in his tour of the State he is convinced "that not one Japanese in 10,000 comes to the United States with the desire or purpose of becoming Americanized," Dr. Frederick Smith, a grandson of Joseph Smith, founder of Mormonism, announced here today that he is heartily in favor of Japanese exclusion, "and exclusion of all others who cannot be assimilated and made into real Americans."

Smith, who is president of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints with headquarters in Kansas City, Mo., made the following statement relative to the Japanese issue:

"My observations in California fully convince me that not one Japanese in 10,000 comes to the United States with any desire or purpose to become Americanized or to do anything except exploit the country."

I have visited your great State a number of times and I feel I can approach the Japanese question somewhat from your point of view.

Let me say that I regard it a national and not a California problem.

I believe we should not only exclude the Japanese, but all other peoples who cannot be assimilated and made into real Americans.

We have been getting thousands of immigrants from southeastern Europe, who come here only to exploit the country and who have no real love for America or purpose to become Americans worthy of the names.

These should be excluded because the predominating elements of the Caucasian race in the United States cannot assimilate them."

As is pretty well known, natives of Japan are about as welcome as a rattler at a wedding feast, and that attitude is not without reason, which Californians are quite willing to discuss and explain.

Speaking about snakes, here is an item which we picked up several months ago, probably it may be new stuff to you:

FRIED RATTLESNAKE SERVED TO STUDENTS.

(Times-Star Special Dispatch)

Morgantown, W. Va.—Declaring that all meats are alike and that hundreds of thousands of dollars are going to waste every year in the meat that is thrown away, Dr. A. M. Reese of Baltimore, head of the department of zoology, West Virginia University, chloroformed a three-foot West Virginia rattler with three rattles, skinned it, sliced it, par-boiled it, rolled it in flour and fried it in the laboratory. Then he offered it to students to eat. All of the instructors, laboratory assistants and a score of students partook of the fried snake. All assert that it was a delightful flavor, not unlike the white meat of chicken. Dr. Reese came into more or less prominence some years ago when he killed a crocodile in the zoology department and served it to his students in approved style. "In the swampy lands of the South and other places where snakes abound," stated Dr. Reese, "hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of meat go to waste every year because of foolish scruples. All meat is alike. If one is good to eat, so is another."

Doctor Reese may have the right dope, but we are betting a busted tambourine that the average man would take up several notches in his belt before he would knowingly stick his fork into a "tender bit of rattler" and finish the movement by masticating same.

One of our boys writing in from a State where rattlers are fairly numerous, wants to know if it is a fact that one of his old standbys is out of the game. Fortunately we have a clipping which gives the story; it is, it seems, a fact, and yet we have a distinct recollection of some of Tom Healy's boys, pooh poohing the idea that prohibition would have any injurious effect on the better class of houses in New York City:

HEALY'S RESTAURANT CLOSED; "DRY LAW."

(Associated Press Dispatch)

"New York, Dec. 23.—Healy's, for years one of the best known restaurants in New York, soon is to be closed, a victim of prohibition. Thomas J. Healy, the proprietor, has sold the establishment to several Chinese, who will convert it into a chop suey emporium, it is reported. The third floor of the building on Columbus Avenue at Sixty-sixth Street, formerly a ball room, has been leased to a dancing teacher. The second floor, where the gayest of jazz bands played in former days, now hears only the clicking of pool balls."

On another page in this number will be found an interesting survey of the changes which have taken place in the old town on Manhattan Island. The old time white cloth service men, who were wont to say that, it was the beef stew dumps and pumpkin pie peddling shops where changes might take place, but not in the higher priced places, have a chance to amend their conclusions, for while the quick lunch "boats" have changed in appearance, the old get-it-quick-and-get-out system still prevails, whereas—but that's repeating the story printed on another page, so we pass on to the next stop.

Open faced pies are now to be looked upon with suspicion. The leader, or should we say the mate of the leader, custard pie? At any rate the following story was carried by numerous afternoon papers recently:

INNOCENT PUMPKIN NOW USED TO MAKE "HOOTCH."

"Southbridge, Mass.—A Southbridge man has just announced a discovery he claims may revolutionize the fine art of moonshining. Cut a hole in the top of a pumpkin, remove the seeds, fill with brown sugar, replace top and wait 21 days. At the end of that period you will have a very, very powerful pumpkinful of liquor, the discoverer claims."

Probably you will be astonished to hear that the fanatics tried real hard to make the printing of items such as the foregoing a violation of the Volstead enforcement law. Well, they did, in fact the professional pest located at Washington, speaking for so-called reform associations in general wanted Will Hays, when he was Postmaster General to warn publishers that it would be looked upon with disfavor if they printed items "showing how" to make the stuff with a kick, or printing articles which criticised the prohibition law enforcement aggregation.

On another page in this number will be found a long but interesting news article telling about the big mass meeting held at Carnegie Hall on April 6, 1922. The reader's attention is directed to the list of "those present" at that meeting.

We have in our organization members who are not at all interested in the subject of modification or obliteration of the Eighteenth Amendment, these members having as a rule worked in cities which have been dry for years and consequently do not know what happened to thousands of our men and women. Some of these workers in Sahara territory, appear to regard continued discussion of the prohibition movement and laws as so much waste of good time and space, but they are a trifle in error, for there is no topic before the citizens today that attracts more attention or serious discussion. Is the question a dead issue? Maybe so and perhaps, but peruse the following and draw your own conclusions:

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE OF ILLINOIS

F. Scott McBride, State Superintendent
1200 Security Building
Telephone Main 1069
Chicago

March 7, 1922.

Dear Friend—The wets are determined to control Congress and the next Legislature. Those who voted dry have been marked for defeat. The situation is very critical. If we lose two or three at Springfield the wets will control. The next Congress and Legislature will decide the question of BEER AND WINE. This will bring back 93½ per cent of the old traffic. They are asking for 4 per cent beer and 12 per cent wine. The A. F. of L. have served notice that they will fight in every Congressional and Legislative district for the return of beer and wine. This will make our fight harder. Old time liquor leaders are being boosted for Congress and the Legislature. Ed Hull of Peoria, the down state wet leader, who has controlled for the wets the Illinois Legislature for years is now running for Congress.

The coming Legislature will probably reapportion the state. It will sustain or defeat the Illinois Prohibition Act. It will determine amendments. The character of the coming Legislature and the next Congress will be determined on primary day, Wednesday, April 11. This primary day comes, as you will notice, five months sooner than in former campaigns. Because of that we are unprepared.

Our organizations are being builded, but here is the real seriousness of the situation: We have no money with which to reach the voters as to endorsement of candidates as in former campaigns. It will take $20,000 to distribute these over the state. We face defeat unless this is done. We should have more than this amount, but will make this go as far as possible. If the dries are defeated and wet leaders are sent to Congress and the Legislature, there will be years and years of the hardest fighting before us we have ever faced. It will save time and money if we win this fight quick.

To take care of this emergency we are sending this appeal to 2,000 of our selected friends asking $10 each as a contribution for this emergency primary campaign. We must have help from every one or we stand to fail. If more than you can afford, get a friend to join you. We only call when we are in absolute need and, believe me, this is a real urgent call.

We appreciate your loyal co-operation.

Very faithfully yours,

F. SCOTT MCBRIDE,
State Superintendent.

We feel that you will be interested in this case, so we are offering an editorial from the Peoria (Illinois) Transcript of April 14, 1922, which conveys the information that Ed Hull, of Peoria, whipped the stuffing—if the dry candidate had any—out of him on Wednesday, April 11, 1922.

Read what follows with your usual care, and absorb all the facts:

IS THERE A WET REACTION?

"Leaders of the Anti-Saloon League are admittedly shrewd politicians. They kept their promise to make the country dry in 1920. They have successfully parried all attempts to tamper with the Volstead act and have generally scotched wet schemes to launch a beer and light win propaganda. But facts are stubborn things.

"It was openly charged by the Anti-Saloon League of Illinois that Mr. Hull was wet and asserted that Representative Ireland should be renominated because of his support of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act. Mr. Hull refused to be drawn into the controversy, and declared his adhesion to all law, the Volstead act included. However, the league made the issue and the result was a crushing defeat for Mr. Ireland.

"In the eleventh district, Representative Ira C. Copley, a dry, was defeated by an avowed wet rival. Mr. Copley has been a member of Congress nearly twelve years and his renomination was taken for granted. In the thirty-seventh district of New York, where a special election was held Tuesday, Lewis Henry, a Republican dry, was elected by a majority of 2,500 over an avowed wet candidate. In 1920, Alanson B. Houghton, dry Republican, was elected by a majority of 29,750. These are straws which show the direction of the wind.

"Mass meetings are being held in New York for the repeal not of the Volstead act, but of the Eighteenth Amendment, wets in that state having become so bold as to spurn the hypocrisy in tinkering with the Volstead act and to demand repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

"It is not an easy matter to prescribe for a situation in which there are so many complications and contradictions, but it behooves friends of the Volstead act to unite for the enforcement of all law and to support for office men who have other qualifications than a desire to make the country dry. Special pleading is effective only in special circumstances; it fails as exclusive procedure. The cure is homeopathic. The prosperity of the Volstead law can not be maintained in face of general violation of other laws. Uniformity is the genius of law enforcement in a democracy. Good men can not be induced to accept public service on a crank basis. Congressional candidates whose sole or chief qualification is their promise to let the Volstead act alone will not appeal to large blocs of the population who conceive the congressional office to be representative of all classes and the most exalted business post in the nation.

"Moderation is still the better part of prohibition propaganda. The only sacrosanct quality about our constitution is compliance with orderly methods of making and repealing laws. Both constitution and laws are subject to the will of the people expressed through their duly elected representatives. The Volstead act can not stand alone; it is critically dependent upon the general integrity of our whole legislative, judicial and administrative system."

We are indebted to Brother John R. Huber, secretary of Local 286, for the receipt of the foregoing item.

Probably the reader may imagine that the reported contest was an exception. Well, here is evidence that the newspapers do not think so. Brother Koveleski, of Rochester, sent us the following editorial from the Buffalo Courier of April 13, 1922:

TESTING PUBLIC OPINION.

"In 1920 Alanson B. Houghton, Republican, carried the 37th congressional district by 29,750 more votes than his Democratic opponent received. In the same district Tuesday, Lewis Henry, Republican dry candidate, defeated Judge Frank Irvine, Democratic candidate on an anti-Volstead platform, by only 3,087 votes. The total vote Tuesday for the Republican and Democratic candidates was a little more than half what it was in 1920 for the major party candidates, but the majority of Mr. Lewis over Judge Irvine was only a little more than one tenth as great as the Houghton majority.

"How are the Volstead forces going to attempt to explain away those figures? The more one considers them the more stubbornly they appear to oppose repeated assertions by the radical Volsteadites that popular sentiment against drastic prohibition is not increasing as the people come to realize what the restraints are under Volstead regulation. The disparity between the decrease in total vote and the decrease in majority is so great that even the bitter enders among the radical dries must see, if they view the situation fairly and honestly, that it is significant evidence that drastic prohibition is proving to be the worst foe of the temperance cause.

"A few days ago the Ohio State Journal, with respect to the Anti-Saloon League's opposition to making Volsteadism an issue in the Ohio congressional elections next fall, said that the league's attitude was beginning to make the Journal believe that the league feared the outcome of such a test. Doesn't the result in the 37th district help to make plain that the league does fear the testing of popular opinion of the country on modification of the Volstead law?"

Of course the Issue, printed at Westerville, Ohio, will find it convenient to decry the success so far achieved, and while it's admitted that a single swallow does not make a summer, it does not take so very many contests to make a change in the personnel of the House, which numbers 435, one hundred and twenty-eight of whom the drys have not been able to tag and claim possession. Ninety liberals added to that number would make quite a difference. There is hope, so dig in, girls and boys, and help with your effort and votes to bring the good times back.

We know one member of the organization who won't need special urging to oppose the present Volstead enforcement methods, nor to vote right when the time comes. The following article, clipped from the Cincinnati Enquirer of April 12, 1922, tells the story of how Brother Louis P. Mello turned the tables on one of the dry grafters who had probably tossed many a scare into residents less sophisticated than the business agent of Local 177:

DRY AGENT ACCUSED OF BLACKMAIL.

"Accused of having extorted $36, representing the 'costs of court,' from Louis P. Mello, 622 Crown street, business manager for Cooks' Local Union No. 177, on a charge of unlawfully having possessed intoxicating liquors, Frank Rissover, 23 years old, 761 Richmond Street, merchant, a dry enforcement agent, who said he was employed by Squire James E. Meyers, Newtown, Ohio, was arrested by Detectives Alexander Genter and Robert Gernhardt, on a charge of blackmail, yesterday afternoon.

"Rissover, it is charged, visited the home of Mello ten days ago, and, posing as an enforcement agent, searched the home for liquors. At that time, Mello said, he was in Lexington, Ky., and his wife was seriously ill at their home.

"Several quarts of bitters, vermouth and absinthe, which Mello said he had purchased early in 1914, he alleged, were taken by Rissover, who, it is said, informed members of the family that Mello would be arraigned before Squire Meyers on the charge of having possessed intoxicating liquors.

"On Monday, almost ten days after the seizure of the liquors, Mello said, Rissover came to his home and told him that on the payment of $36, which, he said, represented the 'cost of court,' his case would be 'wiped off the slate' in the Newtown Court. Mello said he told Rissover to call at his office yesterday afternoon, and in the meantime informed Detectives Genter and Gernhardt of the alleged attempted extortion.

"The officers secreted themselves in Mello's office on the fourth floor at 802 Main Street, and saw they saw Rissover accept $36 from Mello, which had been marked for further identification.

"Following his arrest, the officers say, Rissover admitted having visited the home and taken the liquor. He did not explain, they say, why, if he confiscated the liquor, he did not have the case placed on the docket in the Newtown Court.

"When he was searched, the officers say, they found two commitment papers, which formerly were used to commit prisoners to the City Workhouse, in Rissover's possession. The officers say these were to have been used by Rissover as a means to threaten Mello with a workhouse sentence in the event he did not pay the money demanded. Rissover told police he purchased the two commitment papers for 5 cents."

Several years ago when the labor organizations in the mining industry were having trouble with the mine owners of Colorado, one of the labor papers printed an item, the head of which read: "Is Colorado in the United States?"

A similar interrogation could be used and with excellent reasons, using the States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia as the political units.

C. C. Lyon, special correspondent of the Scripps-McRae publications, has devoted considerable energy and generalship in securing first-hand data of the situation in the coal field of Pennsylvania. We print one of his reports, which appeared in the Akron (Ohio) Press of April 6, 1922:

Windber, Pa., April 6.—Constitutional rights of free speech and peaceful assemblage have been set aside by the coal barons who own the non-union mines in this part of Pennsylvania.

They are determined to keep their mines going and they are openly violating the constitution in their efforts to prevent representatives of the United Mine Workers from soliciting their non-union employees to join the nation-wide coal strike.

In all parts of the non-union fields, union representatives are being arrested and deported by law officers and public officials who take their orders from these coal barons.

Their only "crimes" are that they are asking the non-union men to join the strike.

The present situation at Windberg, Somerset County, is typical of most mining towns in the non-union fields just now.

Windber, with 9,400 inhabitants, is owned by the Berwind-White Coal Co., said to be the second largest producer of soft coal in America. E. J. Berwind and Harry Berwind, brothers, of Philadelphia, are the controlling factors.

The Berwinds established the town of Windber 25 years ago. They own eight big mines in the immediate vicinity that employ nearly 4,000 men.

The word of the Berwind-White Company is the only law that has any real effect in Windber.

With an overwhelming majority of working men of the town on their payroll, elections are merely ratifications of slates made up in the Berwind-White office.

B. B. Barefoot, mayor of the town, is a company employe and so are most of the members of council.

When I inquired the whereabouts of the chief of police and the town constables, the reply was: "You'll probably find them up at the company's office."

The day before the big strike of union miners was called, three union representatives registered at the Lester Hotel. They were David Cowan, district board member; Irwing Baughman, miner, and Carl F. Gerlisky, miner, motorman. All three live at Portage, Pa., east of Johnstown.

They had lunch at the hotel. When they appeared on the streets about 2 o'clock in the afternoon they were arrested by Constables G. W. Wilkinson and H. C. Norris, and locked up in the town jail.

They were searched, and in their pockets were found a number of cards calling upon non-union miners to join the strike of the union miners. This was the substance of the cards:

"Join our fight. Make it your fight. The union welcomes you, 600,000 miners are out to maintain wages for all miners. Miners united win. Miners divided lose. Don't scab on men who are fighting your fight."

The three men were slated as "suspicious characters," even after they had established their identities as union representatives.

Mayor Barefoot came to lock up at 7 o'clock that evening, and held a hearing. He today repeated for publication what he said to the three union men. It only indicates the true situation in this vicinity.

"I told them," said Barefoot, "that we would not tolerate any soliciting of non-union miners, that I had issued a proclamation declaring it to be a criminal act for any person to interfere in any way with any other person who is at work or to attempt to incite that person.

"I told them if they would leave town we would drop the 'suspicious character' charge against them. If they refused, I said we would bind them over for breach of peace. They chose to leave town and took the next car for Johnstown."

"And these are not the first ones we've locked up," Barefoot said to me. "Not a stranger comes into this town that we don't watch and find out his business. If he can't satisfy us that he isn't trying to work among the miners we lock him up."

Windber is full of Berwind-White spies who keep Barefoot and his police force in touch with movements of strangers.

"Norris," said Barefoot to Constable Norris, "Go ahead and tell Lyon what you've found out about him."

"We picked you up when you got off the car from Johnstown," said Norris. "And we've been on your trail every minute since."

He then proceeded to tell the names of all persons I had talked to, what I said to them and what they had said to me.

"If you told a different story to any two of them we'd have locked you up too," Norris said. "That's our system."

Under Barefoot's proclamation, repression in Windber is carried to the point where citizens are forbidden to loiter or gather on the streets.

"Russia in its darkest days had nothing on the non-union sections of Western Pennsylvania," declared David Cowan.

"My experience in being arrested and thrown into jail at Windber is being duplicated with other union organizers every day in this territory.

"Clarence Donaldson of Huntington County, has been jailed in Somerset and Arthur Taylor, district board member of District No. 2, was jailed in Holsopple, Somerset County.

"In a single day we have counted 44 union organizers arrested and driven out of non-union mining camps in Somerset and Cambria counties by state police and deputies under the control of the coal companies.

"We're going to continue the fight for free speech and peaceful assemblage. We feel federal government should step in and guarantee us our constitutional rights as free Americans."

If that news item had been printed in a labor paper it would have been regarded as the fulminations of an agitator, but Mr. C. C. Lyon is an old newspaper man, and the publications printing his reports go into the homes of several millions of people, who will, for the first time, obtain inside facts about the conditions which really prevail. In many States there has been agitation going along for several years advocating a state constabulary.

The following news item from the same paper, Akron Press, will give the workers an idea of what to look for should their state legislators enact a state police bill. In the Keystone State, they are called Cossacks. They appear to run true to the Russian type—and then some.

TROOPS CHARGE STRIKERS.

Brownsville, Pa., April 6.—The first report of trouble in the nation-wide coal strike was made here today.

Twelve mounted troopers charged into a parade of 8,000 striking miners late Wednesday at Mason-town, 15 miles from here, and dispersed them.

Thirty of the miners were reported to have been injured as the horses swept into their ranks.

* * *

Somehow the impression prevails that the leaders in the Southern States are cheap wage advocates. That may be partially true of the cotton mill owners, but it is not true of the majority of the interests which employ labor. The following editorial from the Journal-Tribune of Knoxville, Tenn., of April 14, 1922, offers a view point that is sound and logical:

"CHEAP" LABOR NOT WANTED.

In the years of the past, some large employers of labor arranged for and employed imported labor. There were sections in some New England towns and some not in New England, in which, if an American stranger had been dropped down, he would have doubted if in fact he really was in an American town. It was then that certain foreign immigrants were arriving at the rate of as many a million a year. This paragraph is copied from an editorial in the Nashville Banner:

"Developments of the last few years have led to the conclusion among many thinking Americans that this country should more properly be known as the dumping ground rather than as the melting pot, and there is no doubt that the nation has in the past fallen a victim to the popular craze for cheap labor that existed a few years ago. Events that are too recent to require mention in a specific way have convinced what is likely a great majority of the public that cheap labor is worth what it costs, which is saying very little for it."

With the coming of the world war, there was a tremendous reduction in the number of arrivals on our shores from foreign lands, but when the war ended there were hundreds of thousands who turned their thoughts in this direction, and but for the restrictions enacted and put in force there would probably have been as many as ten that have come to where there has been one, most likely a larger proportion, and many of those coming by invitation from some employers who have wanted cheaper labor, would have given a plausible excuse, putting it on the ground that the higher cost of labor was the chief cause of the high cost of living.

But such an excuse would be at par with the excuse with that of a physical sufferer who might take deadly poison for the relief of physical pain. If nothing will save the country other than the employment of cheap foreign labor, then national suicide might be preferable to a slower death.

Some attention has been and is being given, to the Americanization of aliens in this country. A bill has been introduced in the lower house of congress on the subject. It provides for an annual tax of $24 to be paid by each alien that comes, up to the time when he becomes naturalized, and that the tax thus paid shall be devoted to the support of schools kept for the purpose to be known as "the citizenship instruction fund." It is further proposed to naturalize no one who is not able to speak the English language.

It is a well known fact that some of those who have come in the past did not care to understand the English, in instances they have demanded a share of the public school fund to be used in schools where instruction is given in their native language.

Many thousands of those who have come in the past have remained and are true, loyal Americans; but not many have sought to have their native language made the language of the public schools.

We have a clipping from some one; no name given nor is the name of the paper offered. The item reads, "It is fortunate that the prohibition law is in operation in the coal States of Pennsylvania and West Virginia; this will be evident before the coal strike is many days older."

The implication is plain, in fact, it is two-edged, probably clipped from the Issue, the Anti-Saloon League paper. So the prohibition law is in operation in the two States mentioned, eh? And of course law and order prevails, eh? Let us see how much L. & O. counts. The following item is clipped from the Wheeling (W. Va.) Register of March 17, 1922:

POPULATION OF PRISON PASSES THE 1,400 MARK.

With quarters in the state prison somewhat congested, and more arriving almost daily, the officials of the institution are facing a real problem.

Four more arrived yesterday from Wood County, bringing the total to 1,403. It was predicted more than six weeks ago that by the middle of March the population would pass the 1,400 mark, and the prediction has been fulfilled.

More than 100 new prisoners have been received at the prison within the past six weeks. State road camps will take a portion of them some time in the near future, but there is not enough work to keep all of them busy even part of the time.

The first three months of 1922 have witnessed the greatest influx of prisoners to the West Virginia state prison in its history, according to the officials.

One woman was given her freedom yesterday, having served her sentence.

The next exhibit is from the Pittsburgh Post of March 29, 1922:

CRIME WORSE, PROSECUTOR'S REPORT SHOWS.

One of the busiest terms of criminal court in the history of the county will close this week with the rising of the court next Saturday morning. Chief Clerk George W. Conner of the district attorney's office stated yesterday, when he announced that 764 criminal cases were disposed of in February and March. The two months are included in the February term of court. Judge J. McF. Carpenter presided at the term, while Judges James B. Drew, Josiah Cohen, and Thomas D. Carnahan also were on duty.

Conner stated that during the term there were 13 murders and manslaughter cases disposed of, including the cases against the Boggs and Buhl bandits. In addition to the murder cases, 47 robberies, 7 burglaries, 50 attempted murders, 125 larcenies, as well as 53 persons charged with sex crimes, were called to trial or pleaded guilty. There were 402 charges of misdemeanor disposed of and 67 charges of entering a building.

"During the first three months of trials this year," Conner said, "there has been a steady mounting of the more serious charges. Robbery, apparently the easiest and quickest crime that can be planned and executed, has advanced in leaps and bounds until we have almost 25 a week to dispose of or five cases a day."

Conner pointed out that crimes of a revolting nature are also making rapid gains. He said that the percentage of increase has doubled during the last few years, and that even greater numbers of informations are being received for action by the grand jury.

The West Virginia news item covers a state institution; the Pittsburgh item a county of the state, and any one who pretends to know a thing about coal will tell you that the two states mentioned are coal states. No crime; no arrests, eh? Everything running along nicely because the two states are dry and prohibition is effective! Guess we will have to refer this case to Sir Arthur Conan Doyle; maybe he can tell us what sort of a shade believes that prohibition is such a good thing.

Speaking about prohibition, here is an item about one wet election!

Beardstown, Ill., April 19.—With contests in five wards, Beardstown voters paddled to the polls in boats today to vote in an Aldermanic election.

Every available boat was commandeered by politicians to transport voters. A far heavier vote than had been forecast was registered.

Beardstown's third "flood baby" was born today, but was forced to leave his home a few hours after his arrival, as the rising water made the house of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Moeller, uninhabitable. Mother and infant were cared for by a more fortunate neighbor.

A small "unknown" house floated into Beardstown today, and, after nearing the railroad dike, collapsed.

We took the above cutting from the Enquirer, April 19, 1922.

Here is where we hesitate long enough to inject an assortment of small items that the reader can soak up for future reference. We cut the items from the Cincin Post:

DID YOU KNOW?

English is the common language on the island of Jamaica.

Bread distributors of Paris are almost exclusively women.

More than a million women voted at recent elections in Canada.

By shaving their heads Basque women of Spain think they render themselves beautiful.

Paris has an excess of 500,000 women over men, according to latest census figures.

Gnat fashions its eggs in the shape of a lifeboat. Borneo is cut midway by the equator.

Twenty-six women hold positions on important state boards in New Mexico.

Syrians regarded mourning for the dead as an effeminate practice.

The only Englishman who ever became pope was Nicholas Breakspear, who was Pope Adrian IV.

New safety razor lathers the face and removes the beard in one operation.

More than 75,000,000 animals were lost in Europe during the war.

Chinese porcelain was produced as early as 200 A. D.

Sun spots first were discovered in 1610.

Natives of New Guinea have fishing nets made of spider's webs.

Deposits of diamonds have been discovered in a Chinese gold mine.

Brazil exports to Cuba a dried and salted beef known as xarque.

Bronx borough of New York City is as big as Baltimore in population.

This country imported 35,000,000,000 pounds of petroleum in 1920.

Latest census figures show Australia has a population of 5,419,702.

Males outnumber females in Australia by about 83,000.

There are nearly 300,000 manufacturing plants in the United States.

Landscape gardening began in Japan 1,200 years ago.

A European has invented a music typewriter called the kromarograph.

Dogfish are held sacred in Mandalay.

Resin gives twice as much heat as wood, weight for weight.

Brazil is as large as the whole of Europe.

Collie dogs are used to herd ostriches in South Africa.

Red is the color of good fortune among Chinese.

A nut which grows in the Orient is filled with a sticky varnish.

Persian women are not permitted to wear hats.

Isinglass is made from air bladders of certain species of fish.

The Black Miaos of China do their courting in public.

The first actual clock was produced about 990 A. D. by a monk.

Macadam roads first were constructed in England in 1819.

Puff balls sometimes grow six inches in diameter in a night.

.

Can't resist the temptation of saying that we know a nut—several in fact—that are filled with something worse than sticky varnish, their names came to us in the backs of local union reports under the very significant words, "suspensions during the month."

.

The following clipping was sent into us by Secretary Hugo Ernst of Local 30; he advised that he clipped it from the San Francisco Examiner of April 7, 1922:

"A lady thought she was marrying a musician, found she had married a waiter, asked the judge for a divorce, on the ground that she had been tricked into marrying an inferior. The wise judge said, 'No, stay married; waiters are as respectable as any man.'"

"They are indeed, and if competent, they are artists, and often, philosophers. All missed a good deal that did not know Eugene, head waiter at Old Delmonico's in Fourteenth Street, New York, later boss of the Grand Hotel at Monte Carlo. Humanity had no secrets from him, and James Gordon Bennett asked his advice.

"They also serve that only stand and wait."

Pity Brisbane did not extend his comment; at that, he said much in little.

.

What a sneaking, cowardly lot the reformers are when they have been denied their usual privilege of begging from the people. James Speyer, one of the biggest figures in finance in the country, a New York banker, was the chairman of the Salvation Army's Annual Campaign Fund Committee. Miss Evangeline Booth urged Mr. Speyer to sever his connection with the Association Opposed to Prohibition. Mr. Speyer very politely advised Miss Booth that he would resign as chairman of the Salvation Army Committee first, and did.

Now come the cooties at Westerville, Ohio, who get out the Issue, the Anti-Saloon League paper, and they are gargling a lot of language in an endeavor to prove that Mr. Speyer has been making a desperate effort to retain the job of begging money for the Salvation Army.

Bird S. Coler, commissioner of public welfare of New York City, now walks into the lime light with a very fine sample of the machinists' or tool makers' art, known as a monkey wrench, which useful article he hurls into the works, as will be evident by reading the following from the New York Times of April 9, 1922.

"I wonder," says Mr. Coler, "how long the people are going to permit the moneys which they contribute to charity organizations to be used not solely for the relief of the poor but also for lobbying purposes to the end that such organizations may get more control of the individual liberties of the people."

The Salvation Army leaders walloped the saloon, even when getting most of their coin from that institution.

Miss Booth and her whole family would have starved to death if it had not been for the generosity of the men who patronized the saloons here and in England. The momentum given to the Army by the so-called booze hounds contributions made it possible for that institution to survive and accumulate funds and property. The Anti-Saloon League cooties had better get busy and show an inclination to be honest with the Government; they will find ample to keep them busy without trying to get mixed up in the Booth-Speyer case. Congressman George Holden Tinkham of Massachusetts, put one over on the A. S. L. on April 4, 1922, when he urged Congress to ask the Department of Justice to bring criminal proceedings against Wayne B. Wheeler and other responsible members of the A. S. L. The article, which contains more extensive comment, will be found on another page of this number of the MIXER AND SERVER.

.

Pessimists better take the following item and peruse it with more than ordinary care. If they are members of local unions and have that "what's the use" method of retarding headway, it may do them some good to peruse the little story of a cat who refused to stay whipped. We scissored this from the Enquirer of April 7, 1922:

LEAVE IT TO "NIG!"

"Niagara Falls, N. Y., April 6.—'Nig,' a pet cat of customs and immigration officials at the American end of the lower steel arch bridge, jumped 150 feet into the gorge last night when chased by a dog, and turned up today a little ruffled of fur, but otherwise little the worse for the adventure.

"After the cat plunged into the gorge, men employed on the bridge saw her crawl about on the rocks below and attempt to climb the steel beams of the arch.

"Efforts to rescue her failed, but today she appeared, dragging herself up the edge of the precipice near the bridge."

Whenever you are faced with the seeming impossible task of keeping that little local union of yours going, recall the story of Nig," the Niagara Falls feline, who followed out the advice contained in the old saw: "He who fights and runs away, may live to fight another day."

.

The editorial writer of the Enquirer had his history lid on straight when he slipped the following bit over in the April 6, 1922, issue of that publication:

"One of our visiting prohibition officers has discovered that in Cuba, ardent spirits are being distilled from sugar molasses and sold to perverted Americans. As this was done in Medford, Mass., some hundreds of years ago, the visitor will get no medals for original discovery."

Medford rum was the drink of the early settlers in the old Bay State, and who dares say that these pioneers were not upstanding and God-fearing Americans?

.

Thanks to Congressman James A. Gallivan of Massachusetts, Roy A. Haynes, national prohibition commissioner, has a new title; Gallivan dubbed him "Admiral Haynes," and Wayne Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, was dubbed "Rear Admiral." "The traditions of the future," said Congressman Gallivan, in his address on April 11, 1922, "will be about the gallantry of 'Admiral Haynes' lashing himself to the mast and giving command to go ahead, and dam the rum runners and their explosive beverage."

Willingness to scrap the navy and substitute a rum running navy under the direction of "Admiral" Haynes gave Congressman Gallivan a chance to hit several targets—two-legged ones by the way. Any time that Jim allows a chance to get by without taking advantage of it! How Wheeler and Haynes love the man from the Twelfth District, and how Jim loves to help the newspaper boys with live copy. Jim pushed a news pencil for several years; he knows the value of news the first two days of the week as well as the remaining five days.

.

"Airy, Fairy, Lillian!" Gee, but it did do us a world of good to hear of Lillian Russell's appointment as special agent of the United States Government; appointed too, by President Harding, to give the problem of immigration a study while she and her husband, Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh, Pa., were in Europe. Did she make good? Yes, and then some; and her recommendation that a "five-year immigration holiday" be declared, woke up the sleeping statesmen and editors to the real situation.

"Our melting pot has been overcrowded," says Mrs. Moore; "it has boiled too quickly and is running over."

That's the stuff; that's the dope: Spilling over and the excess spreading contagion the like of which America nor any other country can stand and survive. The 3 per cent law is not a failure; that is admitted by most writers and some of the bigger brained men of the country. A lot of sob stuff has been written and printed about the immigration methods now employed, interests that would throw the doors wide open show chagrin and spread such discontent as they can; they were anxious for the flood of cheap labor and naturally disgruntled because they could not have their way.

Mrs. Moore lays down a number of excellent suggestions for the administration to put in operation; that one about examining immigrants before they set foot aboard ship, should be put in operation, and if carried into effect the sob writers will be deprived of the subject which has been their mainstay for months.

The following from the Times-Star of April 25, 1922, offers more than the average quantity of informative material. Perusing the editorial may disclose the fact that you are not wholly in accord with the view expressed, but the facts are important nevertheless; moreover they can be depended upon as being from official sources:

THE IMMIGRATION LAW IN ACTION.

Immigration statistics for the eight months between July 1, 1921, and February 28, 1922, give an interesting and reassuring picture of the much discussed 3 per cent law in action.

That law was intended to do two things. Its first and most important duty was to limit immigration and prevent a record-breaking inflow of undesirable aliens. Its second purpose was to encourage—so far as is possible without too obvious discrimination—immigration of that Nordic stock which has been chiefly responsible for the upbuilding of the United States.

In its first purpose the law has been entirely successful. In its second purpose it has been less successful in a surface way, but in fact it has been quite successful even there.

During the eight months under discussion, 171,587 immigrants were admitted to the United States. Of this number more than two-thirds came from Southern and Eastern Europe and less than one-third from Northern and Western Europe.

The actual number of immigrants from Northern and Western Europe was only about one-fourth of the number which could have come under the terms of the 3 per cent law. Great Britain and Ireland, for example, with a quota of 77,206, sent only 23,248 during the eight months' period. Germany sent 11,678 out of a quota of 68,139. Sweden sent 4,026 as against a quota of 19,956. Not one of the countries of Northern and Western Europe reached the quotas allowed under the existing immigration law.

Southern and Eastern Europe, on the other hand, sent nearly as many immigrants as the law allowed. Russia was far under her quota, chiefly because of the difficulty of getting out of that troubled land. Italy and the countries which formerly composed the Austrian Empire were close to the limit, while Poland and Greece actually exceeded it.

The more permanent and desirable character of Nordic immigration is illustrated by the figures for arriving and departing aliens. While 51,981 people from Northern and Western Europe were arriving, 15,930 were going back, leaving a net Nordic gain of 36,051. The immigration from Southern and Eastern Europe was more than twice as great—119,606—but the number of departures for Southern and Eastern Europe amounted to 113,243, leaving a net increase in the population of the United States from this source of only 6,363. In other words, the Nordic peoples are not as quick to move to the United States, but when they get here they have a greater notion of remaining and becoming citizens.

The new immigration law has more than justified the hopes of its friends. It may not be perfect; perhaps when Congress gives the subject the attention it deserves, a more scientific measure can be passed. But the new immigration law is producing results. While it remains in force the country will be safe from that very real menace which hung over it in the years immediately before the war, when we were receiving immigrants, most of them alien to the mass of our people in blood and in political ideals, at the average rate of more than a million a year.

**

"Beating 'Em To It" would be an appropriate heading for the following news item. Can you visualize the makers of patent medicines laying awake nights cudgeling their brains to find ways and means to stop the sale of their products. If your lips are not cracked, smile; it's all right with us. Haw, haw!

PATENT MEDICINES NEXT TO FEEL THE DRY BAN.

"Pittsburgh, April 25.—Advocacy of steps to make intoxicating patent medicines as hard to obtain as medicinal whisky, and to line merchants up with prohibition enforcement agents, are in prospect, at the convention of the United Medicine Manufacturers of America, in session here."

As a sort of running mate to the foregoing, peruse this short quib by the editor of the Springfield (Mass.) Union of recent date:

"Before bringing the liquor laws of Massachusetts into conformity with the Volstead Act, it might first be well to bring the Volstead Act into conformity with common sense and public sentiment."

Back yonder a bit we offered comment with reference to Congressman Tinkham, of Massachusetts. On the other side of the country the editor of the San Francisco (Cal.) Chronicle puts on his kidding clothes and has his little say on the subject of law enforcement:

"Representative Tinkham, of Massachusetts, wants the Department of Justice to prosecute the Anti-Saloon League for alleged violations of the corrupt practices act. He evidently believes the law was meant to be observed by all."

**

Before leaving the Golden Poppy State permit us to unload a bit of news that puts a double-twisted clamp on the stories that the owners of vineyards in California are opposed to a modification of the Volstead law because they are getting good prices for grapes as they come from the vines.

Here is an item, cut from the Bulletin, San Francisco, April 15, 1922, which indicates that some of the dry publicity men are wall-eyed piffle peddlers and porch-climbing prevaricators:

"More than 5,044 landowners of California, representing control of 5,297,821 acres, have signed the petition of the Grain Trade Association of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce for a modification of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer. A letter from the association is on its way to President Harding, advising him of the attitude of the 5,044."

**

Well, boys and girls, the promised revival of business is on the way. It may not stagger any of you off the sidewalk for a few weeks, but the signs are of the kind that mean getting ready to move forward. Can't just explain why we accept the conclusions, but we always did play a hunch, and ours right now is an active son of a gun that refuses to lay down and sleep.

We are not of the stripe of the fellow described in the following bit, which we found in an article quoting Hamlin Garland's definition of a pessimist, printed in the Boston (Mass.) Globe of February 2, 1922:

"Hamlin Garland—The optimist just now is the fellow who thinks things are just as bad as they can get. The pessimist is the fellow who hopes they can be worse.

THE NUT.

"Twixt the optimist and the pessimist

The difference is droll:

The optimist sees the doughnut,

While the pessimist sees the hole."

**

We are getting good news from numerous local unions. All admit that they had hard sledding during the winter months, but now they are carrying on campaigns to make up for lost time. Beacoup members who slipped are coming back, and we look forward to see organization matters hum from now until well along in the winter months.

Thanking you for your company during the trip, expecting you to be with us during May—and say, girls and boys, invite your friends to come along; we'll have a nice time; they will enjoy the voyage. Does your local union meet tonight? So long; see you next month.

JAY-ELL-ESS.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

FALSE DATA FILED BY DRY BODY

On Campaign Expenses, Says House Member —Action By Department of Justice Sought —Wheeler Is Accused By Bay State Lawmaker—Congressmen Elected with League Cash, Tinkham Alleges, Citing Corrupt Practices Act.

Washington, April 4.—Alleging deliberate violations of the Federal corrupt practices act, Congressman George Holden Tinkham, of Massachusetts, Republican, in a speech on the House floor today, called upon the Department of Justice to bring criminal prosecutions against Wayne B. Wheeler and other responsible officials of the Anti-Saloon League of America.

Mr. Tinkham cited reports filed by Mr. Wheeler, as treasurer of the Anti-Saloon League's Campaign Committee in 1920, with the Clerk of the House of Representatives showing expenditures totaling $10,256.

He charged that in ten specific particulars the law had been violated.

The Anti-Saloon League, he said, had used this money in promoting the campaign of dry candidates for Congress in various districts, including the Seventh Minnesota District, now represented by Congressman Andrew J. Volstead, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, which framed the Volstead prohibition enforcement act, and the Fifth District of Ohio, represented by Congressman Charles J. Thompson, of Defiance.

Deriding Mr. Tinkham's charges as being "technical" and "insignificant," dry Congressmen, led by John G. Cooper, of Youngstown, Ohio, Republican, and Alben W. Barkley, of Paducah, Ky., Democrat, came back at Mr. Tinkham, charging that numerous anti-prohibition organizations had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the 1920 campaign to defeat dry candidates, but that not one had filed the statement required by law.

Mr. Wheeler sat in the gallery during the debate.

In opening his speech, Mr. Tinkham called attention to the drastic provisions of the act requiring all organizations expending funds in two or more states to influence the election of members of Congress to file expense statements, emphasizing the penalty of a $1,000 fine and one year of imprisonment for violations of its provisions.

"Nothing can shatter the foundations of society, its respect for law and its belief that laws are to be obeyed than to have a great national organization refuse to obey laws that apply to it," he said.

"No more deadly thrust can be given to law and law enforcement than the claim to immunity from criminal statutes of general application by any one class, interest or association."

Mr. Tinkham based his charge against Mr. Wheeler on the requirement that each statement of expenditures filed with Congress by any person or organization interested in the election of congressional candidates must give the name and address of each person to whom $10 or more was paid.

"Under date of November 4, 1920," he said, "Elizabeth Roberts, bookkeeper and assistant treasurer of the Wisconsin Anti-Saloon League, in the only return made by the league, states under oath under the head of 'expenditures on behalf of candidates,' a strictly political expenditure, according to the returns, that R. P. Hutton, of Milwaukee, had his 'salary paid by the Anti-Saloon League of America, Westerville, Ohio,' but does not state the amount.

"In none of the three returns signed by Wayne B. Wheeler as 'Treasurer, Campaign Committee, Anti-Saloon League of America,' does any such person's name appear, nor is any amount traceable or returned under any possible item in these three returns as being expended by the Anti-Saloon League of America; although they purport to be the entire expenditures of the Anti-Saloon League of America made in connection with the congressional election of 1920, which not only would involve a violation of the act of June 25, 1910, which requires a detailed account of expenditures, name, address and amount paid, but also involves a sworn false return, as the two returns are contradictory."

"Abject Obedience" Is Taunt.

Washington, April 4.—In his demand for prosecution of Wayne B. Wheeler and other Anti-Saloon League officials today, Congressman Tinkham declared it would be "absolutely futile" to expect an investigation by Congress, because of "the complete control of the House by the Anti-Saloon League and its abject obedience to the dictates of the league."

The Massachusetts member said he desired to "draw attention" to a leaflet recently issued by Parker Shields, Superintendent of the Tennessee Anti-Saloon League, asking for contributions, which, the Congressman said, contained this statement:

"A number of Congressmen who hold the balance of power and pile up majorities in Congress come from Southern and Western states, where money for organization and educational purposes is scarce. They always had to have help from the National League."

"This clearly would show," the Massachusetts Representative declared, "that the Anti-Saloon League was financing congressional campaigns systematically and liberally and placing Congressmen of the United States under obligation to vote in Congress in accordance with its dictation."

Mr. Tinkham also read from the Tennessee leaflet that funds from that state also helped to provide for the maintenance of the national organization of the Washington office, "under the very successful management of the Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler, one of the greatest diplomats and attorneys in America."

It also stated that "from this office needed legislation is initiated, a constant watch is kept on the actions of Congress, and, when opposition appears, danger signals are flashed to every state in the Union."

Laying aside the publication, Mr. Tinkham said: "It undoubtedly will be interesting to the country to learn that legislation is initiated in the national office of the Anti-Saloon League of America in Washington, and not in the Congress of the United States."

"Legislation initiated in the national office of the Anti-Saloon League in Washington, and not in the Congress of the United States!

"Think of it! To what degradation, to what debasement has Congress fallen, that its shame can be heralded thus to the world!

"There, verily, is an end of free institutions and free men!

"Cowardice, indeed, has completed their destruction and dishonor!"

In connection with this subject, Mr. Tinkham said, it was worth while noting that Rev. Samuel W. Small, Secretary of the National Reform Association, recently was quoted in a Washington newspaper as having said that the association had a "pledged financial income of more than $2,000,000 annually," and that it proposed to spend it in the next congressional election.

The statements of Representative Tinkham brought on an extended debate and a statement from Mr. Wheeler.

Immediately after Mr. Tinkham concluded his prepared address, Mr. Wheeler issued his statement, declaring:

"Mr. Tinkham's attack on the Anti-Saloon League in Committee and in the House is merely part of the wet propaganda for a beer-and-wine amendment."

He added that most of the state branches of the league had not filed campaign expenditure reports "because the law does not require state organizations interested in the election of Congressmen in but one state to file reports."

Representative Cooper of Ohio, asked Mr. Tinkham whether or not he knew that the National Association Opposed to Prohibition had been spending large sums to bring about modification of the Volstead act and trying to defeat Representatives standing by that law.

"The representative of only the Anti-Saloon League appeared before the committee," said Mr. Tinkham, "and I have no knowledge as to what organizations are operating.

"But all, whether for or against the law, should be required to report their expenditures."

Pointing to Mr. Wheeler in the gallery and calling him by name, Representative John Philip Hill, of Maryland, Republican, asked Mr. Tinkham:

"Do you think it proper for a man who acts as treasurer of the league in its efforts to elect Congressmen also should be its legislative agent in appearing before Congress for favors?"

"It seems to be highly reprehensible," the Massachusetts member replied. — Cincinnati Enquirer, April 5, 1922.

A TIP FOR PROPRIETORS AND WAITERS.

As one of the millions who have survived in spite of Volsteadian servitude, and who is still carrying the Flag of Freedom, I wonder at the lethargy of some waiters, and even managers of restaurants.

I like my glass of beer. There is no beverage that sets so well with a real man's dinner, than an appetizing glass of nature's brew.

The brewers who are still keeping faith—who continue to supply a meritorious product—certainly deserve all the co-operation that we can give them. If they would all lie down and quit now, our country would dry up and get so furrowed that the rest of the world would feel downright sorry for us and invite us to immigrate.

When I go into a cafe—one of those places founded on beer and known as the most wholesome and likeable rendezvous extant—do I hear the waiter tell me that he can serve a wonderful stein? No sir. I order my dinner and there is no suggestion that a foaming beverage may be had.

This beverage, though de-alcoholized, has been perfected by the industry and is today a highly meritorious product. Being without a sugar compound—a hop beverage—it is the most ideal beverage to accompany a repast. Coffee or tea naturally follows the dinner and is an epicurean necessity but with the dinner a hop beverage may still be obtained.

There are three services to be performed by suggesting this beverage to the customer. The profit to the management, the assistance to the maker in maintaining his business until the dawn of a new day, and the genuine service you are doing in giving the customer something to be thankful for. For, it is a fact that he will like the beverage.

The idea of making sport of a hop beverage because it does not contain the former percentage of alcohol should be discouraged. It is not an "imitation" or a worthless article, nor anything to be belittled, but is a healthful product into which the same materials, the same care and cost, enters as of old.

The waiter who boosts this beverage instead of ridiculing it or ignoring it, is boosting his own future and dignifies his calling as a salesman.

I like to hear a waiter boost for a brewery that is producing a good hop beverage. It shows that he has an eye to the future and co-operation is all that we need to take these beverages out of the forbidden class and into the social sphere where they belong.—J. M. A.

86-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-18

GOMPERS URGES MODIFICATION OF DRY ENFORCEMENT STATUTE.

Labor Leader, in Address to Union Delegates, Would Do That Instead of Attempting to Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor attacked "the interests opposed to the unions" in an address at an open forum of a meeting of the Connecticut Federation of Labor at the Hotel Garde here yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Gompers scored Chief Justice William Howard Taft for a recent decision in the United States supreme court which the labor leader said practically nullified the Clayton act. He styled the courts which have been granting injunctions against striking workmen as "courts of iniquity." He said that organized labor would "continue to ask for more."

Instead of trying to repeal the 18th amendment, President Gompers recommended that efforts be made toward modification of the Volstead act.

Every labor organization in the state was represented at the conference, and among the 100 delegates was one woman, Miss Catherine Kennedy, of Willimantic, representing Local 671 of the textile workers' union.

Delegates of the railroad brotherhoods, which are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor asked President Gompers what the attitude of the Federation would be toward the recently organized non-partisan party which the railroad men were fostering. Mr. Gompers said that the Federation would "follow the policy laid down by our conventions of electing our friends and defeating our enemies," and would have no part in any party campaign.

Among those attending the luncheon yesterday was Mayor Fitzgerald. The session was presided over by Patrick F. O'Meara, president of the Connecticut branch of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. O'Meara introduced the mayor, who extended to Mr. Gompers, who was accompanied to this city by his wife, and the delegates the freedom of the city. Attorney Cornelius J. Danaher of Meriden complimented the unions on the progress made.

Mr. Gompers opened his address by pointing to the high aspirations of the labor movement, as union labor ever seeks to improve not only its own welfare, but aims to advance the cause of all humanity. "Labor, naturally, has its enemies," he said, "and the anti-union propaganda has become quite active of late, its champions stooping to low levels in attacking the source which improves the condition of all laboring men and women. Consequently that attack also is directed against our very government."

Continuing, Mr. Gompers said, these attacks are launched by selfish interests, which practice shameless methods. "Labor, as represented by the Federation of Labor, has made good everywhere, made good its pledges, while capital went back on its solemn word and attempts to enslave the working man still further. The efforts of union labor even to lend a helping hand to unorganized labor are commendable. The greatest indictment against commercialism is the taking of women and children from the homes. Commercialism cannot or does not want to see that the better the wages the better the business, and the better for the entire country."

Turning to the lawyers, Mr. Gompers, after excepting a few who are friendly to the workingman, said that the lawyers have commercialized the profession and are doing more harm than good.

"The unions on the contrary," he said, "take women and children out of the shops, put them into the homes and the schools, and give them a place in the sun, and humanity is better for it.

"Laws put through by labor," said Mr. Gompers, "act as a check on the greedy employer. Certainly labor must bear the brunt of this legal fight, because labor is born in hunger and must always hunger for more of the better things, for justice and fair compensation. There are times when labor recedes a step but its ever continuing battle results in not only regaining that step, but in reaching forward two or three steps."

Mr. Gompers warned the union men against going too fast or too far at this time in driving bargains over working conditions or wages, as more can be gained by a conservative policy than from radicalism. In his opinion the over zealous back-to-normalcy drive inaugurated by capital is shaped for the purpose of driving labor still deeper into slavery.

Here Mr. Gompers issued the challenge that the Federation of Labor and all the units it is made up of will not submit to an industrial autocracy in the United States.

In the opinion of Mr. Gompers, the Chambers of Commerce are like Bolshevism trying to destroy our sacred institutions. "Labor is not scared by the antagonism of the Chambers of Commerce nor of capital, labor is not inviting a fight, but if forced to fight it will fight with all its might," he said.

Pointing to sections where organized labor is strongest, Mr. Gompers said there prosperity also is most marked.

Touching up the suggestion that mass meetings be held to discuss labor questions, even inviting the unorganized, Mr. Gompers said such a step is not to be favored at this time because one cannot argue with hungry men.

Turning his attention to Chief Justice Taft, Mr. Gompers said that our distinguished fellow townsman is too ready to curb labor with injunction, and that his recent decision practically nullifies the Clayton act.

The railway labor board, Mr. Gompers stated, has handed down some good decisions and some very bad ones. "But the board is a step in the direction of peaceable adjusting of the labor situation and the efforts to improve this system are being continued by the Federation."

Asked what he thought about prohibition, Mr. Gompers replied that he doubts if the Volstead act can be repealed at present. Efforts in that direction would be a waste of time and energy. But labor should do its best to secure modification of the Volstead act making permissible beer and light wines, he said. "The rich and even the well-to-do have cellars full of booze, while the poor man can't even get a drink of beer."

"Labor was greatly responsible for the election of Woodrow Wilson, and also responsible for the anti-trust prosecutions. The American Federation of Labor must remain in politics to secure more legislation for the working man, must work in a non-partisan spirit for the re-election of men who have shown themselves friendly to organized labor, and defeat those who opposed us.

"If a working man wants to go into business why let him with our best blessings. We don't want the life of a millionaire or of a businessman—what we want is a better life as a working-man."

Paying attention to the farmer, Mr. Gompers said there are two kinds, the financial farmer, and the other fellow with the hoe. The financial farmer's bloc controls because of having a fine organization.

Asked what position the Federation takes as far as the ex-service man, or rather the bonus, is concerned, Mr. Gompers said he favors paying something substantial to the men who came back from the war. "They talk about patriotic business men who stayed at home. It does seem that the fellow who gave up everything, including his job, and coming back found himself jobless, made so by these patriotic business men, is entitled to some consideration."

At this point one delegate said that in Bridgeport ex-service men are being put into jobs by the American Legion at 27 cents an hour, thus undermining organized labor. Mr. Gompers replied that any and all such instances should be reported to him personally as he would see that such abuses were stopped.

Asked for his views on One Big Union and socialism, Mr. Gompers stated that the O. B. U. is so weak as not to merit attention, while socialism is of so many varieties, "like Heinz pickles," as not to be taken seriously. "Socialism is an attempt to divert attention from the present struggle to something sweet in the far distant future. What we want is something definite in the immediate future."

The singing of "Auld Lang Syne" concluded the session.—New Haven (Conn.) Union, April 16, 1922.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

CROWD CHEERS DENUNCIATION OF DRY LAW AS INSULT TO PEOPLE.

How Long Will 110,000,000 Persons Allow 189,000 to Blackmail Them? Is Key-note of Representative Meeting in Madison Square Garden.

There was an organization meeting last evening at Carnegie Hall, of the New York Division of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment at which Park Avenue, Washington Heights and the Bronx rubbed elbows, clapped each other on the back, cheered and booed in unison.

They shouted wildly when Andy Volstead and the "fanatical minority comprising the Anti-Saloon League" were thrown to the gridiron and there peppered and saked and turned and browned to the color of the top of a Maryland biscuit.

REPRESENTATIVE GATHERING.

It was probably one of the most representative gatherings that ever attended a meeting of that kind in any of the large places of assembly in the city.

Stuyvesant Fish was chairman. He said he would have liked to invoke the blessing of God on the meeting. Then he explained why he didn't.

"The scurrilous abuse which the hirelings of certain well meaning but misinformed fanatics have heaped on such of the clergy as have expressed, as citizens, their opinions in respect to the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law," said Mr. Fish, "has induced our committee to refrain from asking any one who has dedicated his life to the service of God and his fellow man to invoke the Divine blessing on this occasion.

"We are unwilling to give these hirelings further opportunities for maligning any of those whom we respect and revere as our spiritual leaders, not a few of whom of every faith, I see before me. We may, however, ask for their silent prayers and those of all others who are well affected toward making this effort, under the Constitution, conformable thereto."

William H. Stayton, national Vice President of the organization, a Baltimore steamship man, formerly of the United States Navy, roused the audience to a tremendous pitch of excitement when he asked how long 110,000,000 persons in the United States were going to submit tamely to the "intellectual blackmail" of 189,000—comprising the Prohibition vote at the last national election.

"Yes," said Mr. Stayton, "let's applaud about it, but let's not forget that the 189,000 are actually ruling the other 110,000,000. The question is, have you and I the stuff in us to resist this tryanny?

"For years we have been governed by a certain sort of threat, of intimidation, by this certain sort of intellectual blackmail. Men have been openly threatened that if they dared to come out for an organization such as this their business would be ruined and their families annoyed."

DRY LAW AN INSULT.

Mr. Stayton emphasized that while the Volstead law is a law it must be obeyed—even if it cannot be respected.

"There used to be," he continued, "a time when the people of the United States, women and men, were looked upon as a pretty fine, upstanding, goodly lot of people; and then the Volstead law comes along and says, 'You haven't control over yourselves'; that we Americans are a wretched lot of people and that we can't be trusted, and so have to be muzzled like a lot of dogs.

"That law is a rotten insult to the American people and it should have been repealed."

Before he finished Mr. Stayton got under the skin of his audience.

"Is there any man or woman here who ever cast a vote for or against the Eighteenth Amendment?" he asked.

The roar in the negative that followed must have shaken to its foundations the home of William H. Anderson in Yonkers.

After that Elisabeth Marbury, Augustus Thomas and Col. Ransome H. Gillett spoke.

AMONG THOSE PRESENT.

The audience, among others, comprised the following:

P. Tecumseh Sherman, Prof. Chas. T. Stout, T. H. Kilduff, Ex-Judge Edgar M. Cullen, Charles A. Moran, Gen. Daniel Appleton, J. Edgar Bull, Horace W. Corey, Dr. Richard Derby, George L. Forrest, James P. Holland, Ex-Justice E. Henry Lacombe, Johnston Livingston, Seth Low, Kermit Roosevelt, Rhinelander Waldo, G. A. Washington, G. J. Houtain, Mrs. Stanwood Menken, Princess Lvoff, Col. Creighton Webb, Mrs. H. L. Griggs, Mrs. J. Van Vechten Olcott.

Mrs. Edward McVicker, Harrison Gray Fiske, M. Edgar Freeman, John T. Pratt, Mrs. John T. Pratt, Bird S. Coler, John P. O'Brien, Archibald Roux, George H. Robinson, Stanley H. Howe, Rev. Lewis Rutherford Morris, Herbert Cillis, C. E. Heydt, James Lowell Putnam, Dana Wallace, F. O. March, W. H. Fish, Harold Hammond, Mark Luescher, J. G. Shaw, Capt. Robert I. Aiken, H. Anderson, E. H. Antes, Francis R. Appleton, R. Ross Appleton.

John Aspegren, Dr. R. T. Bang, James Lenox Banks, Frank B. Baldwin, Mrs. William Allen Bartlett, George De Forest Barton, Capt. O. H. Benkard, Harry S. Black, Clarence W. Bowen, William Byrd, Alex. Cameron, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mrs. H. J. M. Cardoza, Mr. and Mrs. Newcomb Carlton, Mr. and Mrs. B. Ogden Chisholm, Edward S. Park, Harris D. Colt, Harry Content, Robert Grier Cooke, Mrs. John H. Coster, J. Sargent Cram, Col. John F. Daniel, J. Clarence Davies, Justice Vernon M. Davis, the Rev. Whitney Davis, Frederick P. Delafield, Dr. George Draper, John Coleman Drayton, Dr. J. C. Edgar, Dr. Ernest Fahnestock, Prof. Carl W. Fishel, Carl W. Fishel, Charles R. Flint.

W. L. Forest, Austin G. Fox, Kenneth Frazier, Wm. D. Gaillard, G. Horace Gallatin, Frank Scott Gerrish, Dr. J. M. Gibbons, Robert A. Grannis, Bolton Hall, Henry K. Harder, Edward S. Harkness, Col. Wade H. Hayes, Berthold Hochschild, Roland Holt, Richard H. Hunt, Cary T. Hutchinson, Wm. O. D. Iselin, Dr. Geo. W. Jacoby.

Mervin L. Lane, Col. Frank R. Lang, U. S. A.; Adrian D. Larkin, John Burling Lawrence, Wm. Loeb, Jr., J. Hartley Manners, Arthur B. Maurice, Dr. J. D. Meeker, Mr. and Mrs. Dunleavy Milbank, Robert H. McCurdy, Chas. C. Nadal, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Nichols, Herbert Noble, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Col. Wm. Barclay Parsons, Mr. and Mrs. William Joseph Pennell, Cornelius Pugsley, Lawson Purdy, H. S. Rankine, Walter Roberts, Col. Emlen Roosevelt, Arthur C. Rounds, Leon H. Rouse, Chas. Scribner, Thos. A. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Sloan.

Capt. E. B. Smith, Albert Sterner, Major Gerald Stratton, Oscar S. Straus, Mrs. William E. Strong, Gilbert G. Thorne, Charles Hanson Towne, Guy Van Amringe, Killien Van Rensselaer, Douglas Volk, Whitney Warren, J. Watson Webb, Louis Wiley, Herbert Witherspoon, Hunter Wykes, Mrs. Andrew C. Zabriskie, Dr. Henry James, Bradish Johnson, Dr. Gatesby Jones, Frederick W. Kost, G. Grant La Farge, Andre Tridon, Henry Gansevoort Sanford, A. Parker Nevin, Wallace P. Harvey.

William J. Lachner, Robert C. Rand, Wilson B. Price, Dr. Victor M. Berkhold, Dr. M. Allen Starr, Anson B. Moran, J. Snowden Bell, Robert L. Irish, Beale C. Wright, Littleton H. Fitch, William M. Haradon, Dr. E. C. Savidge, E. A. Rushmore, A. L. Sherman, Bernard Downing, William Bartells, Wright Barclay, Major C. V. Hall, Newbold Morris, the Rev. Eugene O'Donnely, H. T. Oxnard, Henry H. Hewitt, Edward Ashforth, T. M. Cleland, E. Wasserman, Max S. Grifenhagen, Mr. and Mrs. H. Sargent Appleton, Capt. and Mrs. Daniel S. Appleton, Capt. and Mrs. John A. Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jenks.

The above article with its formidable list of names, was printed in the New York World of April 7, 1922. Readers of the MIXER AND SERVER, who pretend to keep in touch with the men and women of New York whose names can be found in "Who's Who in America," will find in the roster of those present at the big meeting, an array of celebrities seldom congregated under one roof, indicating as we see it, intense interest in the subject of sumptuary legislation. We have intimated on more than one occasion that, whenever the leaders of thought and finance became aware of what had happened, when their rights were infringed in the least, there would be heard from one end of the land to the other, protest which would be heeded, or those in authority declining to so heed, would find that they had made the big mistake of their young lives.

The outlook is encouraging, the future is in the lap of the gods, but there is this solemn thought to consider: It will take votes to bring about a change, and unless those who are leading this fight recognize that fact, it will take years to overcome the handicap. The law makers at Washington can afford to laugh at the resolution builders, they do smile at the protestors whom they know have not acquired the rights of citizenship, but it's a different face they turn to organized voters whose votes may be cast at elections for opponents who will pledge themselves to not only amend the enforcement laws, but obliterate the Federal clause which was written into the Constitution by the pen of men and women who would destroy the government itself on the altars of their fanatical belief.

Our part in the fight is to educate the Aliens in our ranks, to urge them to become citizens, so that when the time does come to deliver the knock-out blow to the advocates of Blue Laws, they shall have the pleasure of assisting in obliterating every vestige of bigotry and the fanatics who practice that sort of thing. Citizenship and Votes, that is the solution, let us do our share to supply the ammunition.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

SCHEME TO UNDERMINE AMERICAN LABOR UNIONS IS EXPOSED.

(EDITOR'S NOTE—In the following signed article the full significance of the great fight begun by President Samuel Gompers against William Z. Foster, radical labor leader, is revealed for the first time. Foster lead and lost the great steel strike.)

By MATTHEW W. WOLL
(Vice-President of The A. F. of L.)

Washington, April 14.—William Z. Foster has been driven into the daylight with his scheme of working within the trade union movement.

This is the most significant result of the meeting between Foster and Samuel Gompers in Chicago.

Through a so-called amalgamation resolution which Foster first put through the organization committee of the Chicago Federation of Labor, he succeeded in having the plan endorsed by the Chicago Federation.

Immediately there were those who believed the action of the Chicago Federation was the opening of a war on the A. F. of L.

Today, however, William Z. Foster is high and dry. Even Ed Nockles, secretary of the Chicago Federation, did not utter a word of commendation for Foster. Nockles stated he was opposed to Foster's scheme of amalgamation. The Chicago Federation of Labor would take no further action in connection with the resolution.

He declared the Federation would adhere strictly to the policies of the international unions of the A. F. of L.

Driven to desperation, Foster was compelled to admit he was seeking to form minorities in every local and international trade union, thus to undermine the confidence and leadership of the various organizations. He laid particular stress upon the contest for leadership going on within the International Typographical Union, and said he hoped to further such contests in every organization. This he recently conceived after his conference with the highest soviet officials.

Foster's proposal follows his return from Russia and published declarations of Lenine, Soviet chief, that the way to disrupt the American Federation is to get inside and capture the various organizations.

Lenine has declared many times that in order to overthrow the American government, the American Federation of Labor must first be captured or destroyed.

Foster, in building his organization, demands labor affiliation with the "Red" Internationale of Moscow, one of Lenine's personally supervised organizations.

In his New York work carried on through what he has named the Trade Union Educational League, Foster announces he has appointed 1,000 emissaries in 1,000 American communities, these to build around themselves secret organizations of trade union members—a veritable "Soviet Ku Klux Klan."

These secret agents and their local secret groups pay no dues, have no votes and remain hidden as to identity.

To lure on these secret agents, the financial inducement that he holds out is to have local trade unions subscribe to his monthly publication at the rate of 25 cents a copy out of which these agents are to receive 12½ cents per copy.

Members are sworn to secrecy and to disregard the rules of all international unions.

All local and international officers are to be disposed of and Foster's agents put into their place and, at the same time, members of this Soviet Ku Klux Klan are sworn to adhere strictly to all of the orders of the national office.—Akron (Ohio) Press, April 14, 1922.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

ATTITUDE OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR ON PROHIBITION.

(From American Federation of Labor Information and Publicity Service.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 25, 1922.

After a thorough consideration of the question of national prohibition as provided for in the Volstead Act, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor adopted the following declaration which is in conformity with the declaration adopted by the A. F. of L. Convention:

To the American People:

The American Federation of Labor, as the spokesman of the unorganized as well as the organized toilers, having in mind the interest and the welfare of our people, decided by unanimous vote in its convention held in Denver in June, 1921, that the Volstead Enforcement Act must be modified so as to promote the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines.

Before this decision was reached the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. had caused to be made an exhaustive investigation of the effects of the Volstead Act. It was shown by this investigation that there had been:

1. A general disregard of the law among all classes of people including those who made the law.
2. Creation of thousands of moonshiners among both country and city dwellers.
3. The creation of an army of bootleggers.
4. An amazing increase in the traffic in poisonous and deadly concoctions and drugs.
5. An increased rate of insanity, blindness and crimes among the users of these concoctions and drugs.
6. Increase in unemployment due to loss of employment by workers in 45 industries directly or indirectly connected with the manufacture of liquors.
7. Increase in taxes to city, state and national governments amounting to approximately ONE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS per year.

Having in mind these results of the extreme interpretation of the prohibition amendment contained in the Volstead Act, as well as the enormous expense of the attempt to enforce that unenforceable legislation, it is our conclusion that the Act is an improper interpretation of the prohibition amendment, that it is a social and a moral failure, and that it is a dangerous breeder of discontent and of contempt for all law.

Something of the economic effect of the Volstead Law may be seen by considering the fact that in 1918, according to government statistics, $110,000,000 worth of farm products were consumed by breweries, and that the transportation of these products to the manufacturer and thence to the consumer necessitated the use of 133,666 railroad cars.

In addition to this, breweries in operation in 1918 consumed 50,000 carloads of coal. It must be obvious that the total economic effect of the destruction of this industry is tremendous.

The American Federation of Labor always has been the advocate of law and order, and always has endeavored to create conditions which would make possible the highest type of citizenship.

We do not protest against the Eighteenth Amendment to Constitution which is now a part of the fundamental law of the land. We do not protest against the principle established by the Eighteenth Amendment. It is our contention that the Eighteenth Amendment under a reasonable and proper legislative interpretation would be beneficial to our country and would have the support of the great majority of our people.

The Eighteenth Amendment, however, under the present drastic and unreasonable legislative interpretation has a destructive and deteriorating effect and influence in every direction.

We seek no violation of the Eighteenth Amendment but on the contrary, we declare for a reasonable interpretation of that amendment in order that the law may be enforceable and enforced, and in order that the people of our country may not suffer from an unjust and fanatical interpretation of the Constitution.

We urge, therefore, that all citizens in every walk of life demand from their representatives and senators in Washington immediate relief from the unwarranted restriction contained in the Volstead Act; and we likewise suggest to the citizenship of our country the wisdom and advisability of bearing in mind the attitude toward this issue of office-holders and aspirants to office in coming elections in order that there may be restored to the people the lawful use of wholesome beer and light wines, which, under the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, can and should be rightfully declared as non-intoxicating beverages.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR.

HOUSE . . . No. 826

Accompanying the petition of Frank P. Bennett for legislation to make church going compulsory except under certain conditions of health. Education. January 17.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

In the Year One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty-Two.

AN ACT

To make Church Going Compulsory.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

- 1 Every inhabitant of this commonwealth shall on each
- 2 Sunday attend church, unless such attendance is rendered
- 3 inexpedient or impracticable by reason of his physical
- 4 or mental condition. Cities and towns shall, by ordinance
- 5 or by-law, provide for the enforcement of the fore-
- 6 going provision and may fix penalties for the violation
- 7 thereof.

LAYS BLAME ON PROHIBITION.

Crime, Immorality and Gluttony Waves Are Charged To It—Cause of Moral Breakdown As Seen By Psychologist.—The Only Man Not Getting His Share of Liquor, He Says, Is Laborer.

New York.—The crime wave, the murder wave, the immorality wave, the gluttony wave, the return in triumph of absinthe after years in exile, the new fad of drinking eau de cologne as a routine beverage, the smut on the stage and in windows of novelty and tobacco shops, the drunkenness of people who used to be temperate, the carnivals of intoxication at many public dinners where men used to behave, the drinking in homes where liquor was previously unknown, the growing taste of once nice people for unexpurgated Oriental-plus dancing—these are a few of the outward symptoms of a profound national moral breakdown due largely to prohibition, as its effects are seen by Dr. A. A. Brill, the psychologist and specialist in nervous and mental diseases, says The Times.

Dr. Brill asserts that more alcohol is being consumed than ever before, that people are drinking who never used to drink, that moderate drinkers have become heavy ones, that the former consumers of beer and light wines are drinking whiskey, brandy, gin, raw alcohol and other concentrated spirits.

One of his patients, he said, makes a pure alcoholic beverage out of tomatoes. An engineer friend of his makes his own whiskey in his kitchen. Others of his friends and patients make their own gin. Among his patients are several confirmed eau de cologne sots. They resorted to it originally during brief panicky periods when spirits were hard to obtain, and grew quickly to like it, so that they now consume it by preference.

The only man not getting his share of liquor according to Dr. Brill, is the working man. When he does get his share, it is usually in the form of a terrific dose of some fluid only a few degrees milder than knock-out drops.

The men who have taken to crime in the last few years, according to Dr. Brill, are defectives who would be in the main harmless, except to themselves, if they were allowed to drink under different conditions. Prohibition, he says, makes desperate criminals of them in two ways—in some cases the absence of liquor gives free rein to the half-insane tendencies which formerly evaporated in alcoholic dreams and vaporings; in some cases, drugs or the poisonous, maddening intoxicants of a prohibition era inflame the morbid imaginations and send them forth to kill and rob.

One of the deep-seated moral injuries wrought on the nation by prohibition, according to Dr. Brill, is the fact that hundreds of thousands of men and women, who formerly would never have dreamed of violating any law, consciously violate the dry laws in patronizing bootleggers and make a national jest of the subject. Hardly a jury ever sits in judgment on a criminal, he said, without several of the jurors knowing that they themselves have been violating law with regularity. The whole proceeding, he said, gives a nation a bad conscience. The man of integrity who is the backbone of the country has lost something of the former consciousness of rectitude which made him the highest type of citizen.

"Our so-called nice people or best people," he said, "are now breaking the law all the time. I have gone to public dinners where there formerly was a little decent drinking, but no one intoxicated. Now word is whispered around in advance that every one is to bring something with him. There is heavy drinking, and the affair ends in a disgraceful scene.

"Cocktails and hard liquors are served to guests now in private homes, where this custom did not formerly prevail. It has become now the universal practice. The guests expect it. The hosts would feel that they were not as good as their neighbors if they did not serve plenty of liquor. I have seen judges and well-known men drinking openly in public places. The conversation is often a discussion of the merits of this bootlegger as against that one. Now, all this is degrading and demoralizing. It can not just pass off without any effect. It is having a far-reaching bad effect."

Dr. Brill said that there were on every hand signs of an increase of gluttony since prohibition.

"Overeating kills more than overdrinking," he said. "That is not questioned, by anybody who has had any medical experience. The consumption of pastry and candy as a substitute for alcohol has increased enormously. Candy eating is much more harmful than moderate drinking, and it does not give the benefit as an emotional outlet that comes from moderate drinking."

Dr. Brill said that he had always regarded the saloon as a pernicious institution peculiar to America, and that he regarded its destruction as one of the compensations of prohibition.

"But instead of controlling something that would be a benefit to the community and that offers a good outlet psychologically," he said, "we have in absolute prohibition taken a course which puts a premium upon crime."

"Before prohibition came there were only a comparatively few people who gave us a problem. Those habitual drunkards were all defective persons. When you take alcohol from them, they are an ever-greater menace to society. The worst they used to do was to become drunk, get sick and go to a hospital or a prison. But when alcohol is taken from them they always resort to something else which is much worse to society. A defective will always remain a defective. He will never be able to adjust himself to society, and will always do something contra-social. It is just a question of what he will do."

"But prohibition has done great harm to the normal people who used to drink moderately. It has never been shown in any scientific way that this moderate drinking decreased their efficiency. On the contrary, the moderate drinkers have belonged to the higher type of people in the best civilization—as against the non-drinking Turks, Chinese and Africans."

"The average normal individual has never been a problem to the community as a result of indulging in alcoholic beverages, until now that the legal right to do so has been taken away from him."

"Wherever there has been a prohibition of anything, it means that there has been a strong abuse. Now, prohibition started in small provincial communities, where the people were below the standards of cosmopolitan education. In other words, it took hold in places where there were lynchings, camp meetings and heavy drunkenness, even among people of high type. These were not communities in which people had recreations of the better sort or artistic, esthetic and intellectual pleasures. Prohibition started in narrow spheres, where everything primitive still prevailed."

The abuse of alcohol, while excessive in such communities, has been shown by experiences to be a lesser evil than prohibition according to Dr. Brill. Immorality, he said, had been promoted, as well as crimes of violence.

"There is no question at all that all primitive impulses are enhanced as a result of prohibition. When people can not get an outlet through alcohol, which was a very concentrated good outlet for the average normal persons, they have to get it in something else. The extreme forms of dancing which have made their appearance, the inability of reform organizations to control any longer the publishers of indecent pictures, the degradation of some of the theatrical productions, are partly due to the stimulation which prohibition has given to primitive impulses. These evils are also able to manifest themselves because the disgust of the public with reform and restrictive legislation is such that they will have no more of it.

"And all this has been brought about with the object of protecting from alcohol the smallest minority, the type of defectives who furnished the habitual drunkards. They can not be protected. They are killing themselves off now as fast, or perhaps faster, then ever. It is important for the human race that this stock should not be preserved. Misguided sympathy has for years actually protected the unfit to the great detriment of the normal person. As far as prohibition saved them, it would have injured society. But the unbalanced, inferior types are bound to fall in one way or another. Prohibition is possibly hastening their end, but in increasing their addiction to crimes of violence has unfortunately caused the death of many good citizens and a great loss to society.

"Last, but not least, prohibition is destroying the fabric of our society by forcing the highest type of law-abiding people to violate the law. They are not going to give up a life-long habit in which they see no harm because a reformer wants them to do it."—The Journal and Tribune, Knoxville, Tenn., April 14, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-13-8-15

FROM THE PATRON'S VIEWPOINT.

Technical discussion has never been invited by the MIXER AND SERVER, but there are questions arising daily which strike the catering industry employe as ordinary, yet possessing features which deserve more than passing attention. A friend sends us the following clipping from the Chicago Herald-Examiner of April 19, 1922; the author is one of the best known men in America, editor and publisher of Forbes, a fortnightly magazine which is the leader in its special field—speaking to and for business men. Read the article first and see how it strikes you:

A Restaurant Experience—Where Courtesy Pays—A Tip to Waiters.

By B. C. FORBES.

As it was raining, I didn't care to walk as far as the restaurant where I usually have lunch. I ducked into a nearby place. Its prices were about the same and the food was quite as good. But I don't want to go back.

When I entered that restaurant I was a good "prospect." I might have become a regular customer.

Maybe the incident will carry a suggestion for business concerns as well as for employes.

I was in a hurry. I wanted more butter, and I looked around for my waiter. He was not within sight—he had gone to the kitchen to fill another order. I looked pointedly at another waiter who was standing idle and beckoned to him what I wanted. He moved neither muscle nor foot. He simply stared at me with complete indifference. And so I had to wait until my own waiter reappeared and finished setting a course before three diners.

In the restaurant I customarily visit each waiter has been trained to show the utmost courtesy to all guests, no matter which table they may be at. In it I would have been immediately and politely served by any waiter within sight not at the moment busy.

So hereafter, even though it may be raining, I shall go to my regular place—or, at least, I shall most certainly avoid the other place.

I have tried to analyze why such a trivial incident produced such an effect upon my mind. I don't believe the reason is solely that I was offended by the impolite waiter's silent snub. I find that I came away from the place with a feeling that it was poorly run, that its employes haven't been well trained, that they are concerned only about showing attention to those from whom they can expect tips. And this, in turn, makes me feel that perhaps the selection of the food and its preparation have been intrusted to employes who are equally indifferent to the comfort of customers.

On the other hand, the courtesy and efficiency always exhibited by the employes at my own restaurant have inspired me with respect for and confidence in the management and of those in their employ. I have a sense of security, a sense of faith that everything connected with the running of this house is looked after carefully, properly, painstakingly, with an earnest desire to please patrons and cater to them properly in every respect.

Readers of the MIXER AND SERVER need not be advised that there are two sides to the problem offered, nor need much space be employed to recite the fact that, in many establishments waiters and waitresses are given "stations" to hold, and it is not permissible for the man or woman holding the station next to them to attempt to care for the wants of patrons of any station but their own. A composite cross cut from the book of experience recalls an incident where a waiter heeded the request of a patron on another station, and was severely reprimanded for leaving his station. In fact, he was informed, and with emphasis that left no room for doubt, that the system employed called for waiters to care for their own station and pay no attention whatsoever to patrons on any other station in the establishment.

Is that system exclusive or is the method employed in other lines of endeavor? Supposing that you visit a department store and observe the salespeople. Do the salesmen selling collars for example, pay any attention to the waiting patron on the counter where underwear is displayed and sold? Does the saleslady on the glove counter begin to worry because the counter where handkerchiefs are sold is lined up with patrons anxious to be served? Supposing that the waiter on a front station, passing several stations on his way to the kitchen paid heed to the wants of patrons on stations other than his own, tried to care for those wants, and patrons of his own station were forced to wait longer than usual for service, what would be the results? What would happen to that obliging waiter?

The foregoing is barely touching the problem. There are unlimited phases of it which the public knows little about. Do you feel inclined to discuss the subject? Tell it to us; we may find space for your views and we may send marked copies to the author of the quoted article. No doubt Mr. Forbes as well as other men would change their view and place the blame where it belongs, and that is not on the waiters who are under instructions to refrain from doing the thing which Mr. Forbes believes should be done.

No doubt many of you who peruse this article have had experiences—may, in fact, be at this moment employed in catering establishments where similar incidents occur. Why not tell us about it for publication? J. L. S.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

EVOLUTION OF CATERING IN NEW YORK.

The eating habits of New York appear to be in a process of evolution which is definitely alarming to a considerable class of people who have money invested in eating places that can no longer be maintained at a profit. The hotel men themselves will not disagree with the statement that the restaurants in their establishments are now obligations which entail inevitable and serious losses. This is not due to the elimination of the profits from the sale of drinks; it is a result of the fact that not enough people eat in the restaurants nowadays to make them profitable, even though menu charges are vastly higher than they used to be. With regard to this latter fact, a controversy has arisen among the men who run hotels, a natural outgrowth of a situation which requires a remedy, but obviously hasn't the proper one. A certain minority of the hotel men contend that the way to save the hotel restaurants is to reduce prices instead of raising them. Their view does not prevail. Majority judgment rules, and prices in the hotel restaurants are now higher than they ever were, even in war times. There have been efforts to disguise this condition by reducing the cost on some items and putting it back where it wouldn't be noticed, on others, but that expedient accomplishes nothing. A decent, plain dinner can not be purchased in any first-class hotel restaurant for less than from $3 to $4 a person, and that is twice as much as the same dinner used to cost five years ago.

However, this matter of cost is merely incidental to the main question. The point is that restaurants of all sorts of all scales of prices which used to be well patronized are now losing money or closing up. It is no exaggeration to say that the prospect is that cheap hasheries will soon be about the only eating places in that part of town which visitors frequent. First-class places dependent upon transient patronage, can not live.

A little observation explains the situation in a considerable measure. For instance, dining out is no longer a function in New York, and going to a public restaurant to supper after the theater is something which one person does now where a hundred used to. What remains of this semi-festive patronage falls to the myriad of small restaurants and obscure supper clubs which have sprung up in the last year or two, each advertised by a word of mouth and run for its own peculiar clientele. Good restaurants have to have more than casual patronage. They can not make money feeding merely the people who come to eat because they are hungry. And nowadays that's all the people they get.

The great change in the city's habits has brought unexpected prosperity in some quarters, but this is largely of a cheap or questionable sort. For instance, there are hundreds of delicatessen shops uptown which are crowded from 11 to 12 o'clock with people buying sandwiches and salads and other eatables to be carried away. A few years ago the business which places of this sort did at night was negligible. Now the people who used to maintain the handsome and well-conducted restaurants downtown buy their suppers over a counter and carry them home.

Within two square blocks, in the Fifties, there are now 11 eating places which didn't exist two years ago, and you have to be known to get into seven of them. In all of these, drinks are sold, of course. Each runs on its own plan and for its own people. One is established in what was once the stable of a rich man who owned show horses. The interior has been changed very little. You eat at tables standing in the stalls, and guests go in and out through the small door which the stablemen used to use. There is a dancing floor in the space which carriages used to occupy. The place has become popular and is crowded every night. Another place nearby exemplifies the latest development of the semi-private restaurant. It is on the second floor, over a garage, and is reached by a narrow stair, never intended for the accommodation of crowds. On the street there is a doorman, to whom patrons must identify themselves. If he doesn't know you he'll simply say that the restaurant is filled and will refuse to open the door. This place has a large dancing floor and a small but excellent orchestra. Sandwiches and a limited list of other supper specialties—of excellent quality—are served at most reasonable prices. Two "hostesses" in smart evening frocks move about and encourage an atmosphere of agreeableness. And about the second thing they mention to you is that you may have anything you want to drink and that all drinks are a dollar each. A cocktail, a bottle of real beer, a Scotch high-ball, an old-fashioned toddy of American whiskey, a liqueur—you can have any of them and there is but one price. The hostess assures you that the house guarantees the drinks to be of the best quality. This place has sprung up so quickly into great popularity that there will undoubtedly be a dozen like it as soon as they can be got ready to open.

Even the patronage of business men at luncheon time is dropping away from the hotels and big public restaurants. The little side-street restaurants are getting that to a surprising extent. It is principally, of course, because of the nominally surreptitious cocktail or glass of wine. The big places dare not serve liquor at all; the little places serve it without a pretense at secrecy. There is one little Franche restaurant famous for years for its table d'hôte dinner which now has an established luncheon patronage, composed of business men whose offices are blocks away. They arrive in taxicabs, spend an hour at luncheon and taxi back to business. The place has been running thirty years and no one ever thought of going there to lunch until recently. Now there are 15 or 20 men, well known on Broadway, to be found there every day, lunching.—JAS. M. ALLISON, in Cincinnati Times-Star.

SCABBING ON THE "DICKS."

Much has been said about the "Dick" who worms his way into the confidence of the workers, pretending to be the very best kind of a union man, only to betray them at any and every opportunity. The experienced union man is well acquainted with the tactics used by these Judases, who make a living by selling their souls, their honor and their decency.

The "Dick" is hired to sabotage the unions. If he gets an office he does his best to gum up the work of that office; if he attains a position of responsibility he does his best to steer the organization on the rocks; if the membership have confidence in him he does his best to destroy their confidence in all their other officers and in each other. He drops a knock here and there, and in a smooth way finds fault with everything that is done; he is the starting point for all kinds of false stories and rumors; he takes a little of the truth, twists it out of shape, adds a lot of falsehood to it, and then passes it out as fact and gospel.

After a strike is ended, he is the one that throws out the hint that "someone must have received a nice bunch of money," or that so-and-so "lives in a swell house on the boulevard and has several servants," and that the money to live that way must come from somewhere. The man he is talking about may live in a common flat and have several hundred dollars less, as a result of the strike, but a little thing like that makes no difference to a good liar.

The only good thing that can be said about the "Dick" is that he keeps his dues paid at least part of the time.

Now the "Dick" is following a trade or vocation. He earns his living that way. He gets paid for the miserable work he does.

He knows that he is low and mean and beneath contempt and that he is not only despised by those he betrays, but also by those he is working for.

If he had to come out in his true colors he would not last a minute, but he hides under the cloak of the honest union man who is active and energetic in the cause of the workers.

The "Dick" is not the worst evil the unions have to contend with, for there is the individual who does the same kind of work for NOTHING. "Scabbing on the Dick" is even more contemptible than being a "Dick."

This kind of work is usually done by some worker who is ignorant, jealous, or spiteful. For some reason or another he imagines that he has a grievance against one or more of the officers of the union, and in his ignorance he tries to injure the whole union in order to get even with those whom he dislikes.

This breed usually pretends to be twenty-four karat union men and they are always telling others how much better union men they are than all of the active members and officers put together. They are always telling others how this and that should have been done and how stupid the officers are, but every time these wise men are given a chance to tell how something should be done, in advance, they fall down hard. They are gifted with wonderful hindsight.

They go from shop to shop and from town to town, always whining, crying and bellyaching; always knocking, spreading lies and falsehoods, and always talking about some officer who is not there to defend himself.

They are never in good standing; they never come to a meeting to speak their piece and be ANSWERED, for they are poor sports and hard losers.

They are cowards who stab their victims in the back and have never a word to say when they come face to face with those they squawk about the most.

They are not hurting the officers of the union at all. If they had a teaspoonful of brains they would know this, but they are a menace to every union and an enemy to every real union man.

It is high time that union men wake up and call for a show-down whenever one of these amateur union busters commences to hand out his line of talk.

Make them PROVE EVERYTHING they say. Ask them to show their union card or book, and if they are behind in their dues you will find that 90 per cent of their line of bunk is, in reality, nothing but a weak excuse for not being in good standing.

Insist that they come to a meeting of the union and spill their stuff where those they are attacking can answer them back.

Union men should remember that their officers can not be everywhere and that they can not always be right on the spot to defend themselves and the organization every time one of these chronic kickers spills a mouthful or has a hemorrhage.

When they are called upon for proof you will usually find that they are repeating hearsay. Well, make them tell you where they heard it and from whom. Every union man should be "from Missouri." Be a "SHOW ME" man and make them show you.

If every member of this tribe is forced to "put up or shut up," the tribe will soon be out of existence, for they do not deal in truth or cold facts.

A real union man sticks to his union regardless of whether he likes or dislikes certain members or officers in the union.

If he has any criticism to offer he goes to the union meeting to offer it and takes a good argument with him. If he fails to get the majority to agree with him he is a good sport and goes along with the majority.

Every union man worthy of the name knows that it is impossible for any officer to enforce the rules of the union without making some enemies.

All union officers who are conscientiously trying to do their duty are proud of the enemies they make, for they know that the real, worth-while, intelligent membership are back of them to a man.

Every local union should have a "SHOW ME" club and every knocker should be made to PRODUCE the goods or be shunned by all union men as if he had leprosy.

Strengthen the morale of your officers by refusing to stand idly by while they are being attacked. Always speak up in defense of your union and its officers, and if you can not do that, then get other officers that you can stand up for.

Do not allow a few disgruntled, dissatisfied, jealous, vindictive and envious backsliders to tell you how things ought to be done or who should do them. Just because they are afflicted with belly-ache from an overdose of sour grapes is no reason why you should allow them to blow their breath in your face whenever they are getting the sour gas off of their stomachs.—W. A. LOGAN, in The Auto Worker, April, 1922.

CHAT OF THE CRAFT

IN A FRIENDLY SORT OF WAY.

When a man ain't got a cent,
And he's feeling kind o' blue
An' the clouds hang dark and heavy
And won't let the sunshine thru,
It's a great thing, O my brethren,
For a feller just to lay
His hand upon his shoulder
In a friendly sort o' way.

It makes a man feel curious,
It makes the teardrop start,
An' you sort o' feel a flutter
In the region of the heart;
You can look up and meet his eyes,
You don't know what to say
When his hand is on your shoulder
In a friendly sort o' way.

Oh, the world's a curious compound,
With its honey and its gall,
With its cares and bitter crosses,
But a good world after all.
An' a good God must have made it,
Leastways that is what I say
When a hand is on my shoulder
In a friendly sort o' way.—RILEY.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

ANOTHER ONE OF THE OLD GUARD PASSES ON.

Word received from Portland, Oregon, to the effect that Brother Charles Grassman, formerly an active officer of old Local 189, had died in harness, Friday, March 18, 1922. Brother Grassman was a charter member of Local 189 and its honored secretary from the time of installation of the local, November 12, 1901, to early in the year 1916.

Since October, 1917, Brother Grassman held a position in the State Industrial Accident Commission; it was while at his desk that heart failure overtook him.

Brother Grassman left $1,000 "for the purpose of aiding families of union workmen who, by reason of sickness or unemployment, need financial assistance."

Charles Grassman was a trades unionist and American citizen; his death is a loss to the labor movement, in which movement he had made a name for himself that will live as long as organizations exist in his adopted state. Brother Grassman left no known relatives; he was buried in City View Cemetery, Salem, March 22, 1922.

Charles Grassman was a lovable and loyal friend; his work for our men and women stands out as bright as the stars that shine over his last resting place. We, too, join with his many friends in paying tribute to his memory, saying with them: He was a real man and played a man's part.

SOME CLASS TO SEATTLE UNION COOKS.

The following item, clipped from the Seattle Union Record of March 25, 1922, contains a bit of information which indicates that, when the members of Local 33, conduct an election of officers they make it next to impossible for any discontented member to come along after the election and say that some one stuffed the ballot box against their favorite. Read the item and get the news:

COOKS ELECT NEW OFFICERS.

Leo Del Mar heads Cooks' Local 33 for the next six months, as the result of a general election of officers held Friday at the Cooks' Hall, 217 Madison Street. Voting machines were used in the all-day polling. Del Mar won out over Fred Millson, incumbent, while William Hingeley was re-elected business agent by a close margin, Charles Drentwett placing second. Al G. Moffett, a veteran of the local, was re-elected vice-president by a big majority. Ed Teesdale was retired from the Central Labor Council.

Officers elected are: President, Leo Del Mar; vice-president, Al G. Moffett; secretary, Walter R. Barrett; treasurer, Ed Hollingsworth; business agent, William L. Hingeley; inspector, Margaret Turner; sergeant-at-arms, Don Cameron.

Executive board, George Rover, Peter Ballard, Walter Mitchell, Ernest Luder and Don Cameron. Local joint executive board, Robert B. Hesketh, Brothers Sullivan and Norton.

Delegate to labor council, Walter R. Barrett, Charles Drentwett, Robert B. Hesketh, William L. Hingeley, Don Cameron and Fred Millson.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

HOME.

Asked the definition of the word "home," a popular man about town said: "Home is the place we all go to when the rest of the places are closed."

That may have been the definition of the word to many of our members before organization made it possible for them to draw down wages sufficient to establish a home. But now the greater number of our members not only have a home, but devote time and effort to make it a real place and worthy the name.

"Eddie" Guest, known as the poet of the plain people, distinguishes between a house with a roof on it and a "home" in his poem, a stanza of which reads:

"It takes a heap o' livin' in a house to make it home,
A heap o' sun an' shadder, an' ye sometimes have t' roam

Afore ye really 'preciate the things ye lef' behind,
An' hunger for 'em somehow, with 'em allus on yer mind.

It don't make any difference, how rich ye get t' be,
How much yer chairs an' tables cost, how great yer luxury;

It ain't home t' ye, though it be the palace of a king,
Until somehow yer soul is sort o' wrapped round everything."

WE WANTED A CHANGE AND WE GOT IT.

We were getting a dollar six bits for our corn,
We could sell every hide from the hoof to the horn;

But we wanted a change and we got it.

Now we're getting a quarter for corn—it's so cheap

That we burn it for fuel, our toes warm to keep;
We can't sell the hides so we bury them deep,
But we wanted a change and we got it.

The poor working man pulled down eight bucks
a day,

Now he's darn glad to work for half of that pay;
But he wanted a change and he got it.

There was work and a plenty for every man's son,
And warm food and shelter when that work was done,

Now millions are idle, where before there were none;
But we wanted a change and we got it.

Mr. Wilson spent quite a long time over there,
For peace he was fighting, but did we care?
We wanted a change and we got it.

Now all we read of is golf and vacations
Gay week-ends at summer resorts and plantations,
(Not what we expect from the head of a nation);
But we wanted a change and we got it.

We were prosperous and happy, well fed and gay;
Now millions of children go hungry each day;
But we wanted a change and we got it.

Meanwhile we hear this: "It was certain to come—
"Reaction from war time"—and war three years
done!

If we wanted a lemon we sure did pick one.

Well, we wanted a change. Now we've got it!
—Selected.

Just why the authorship of the above poem should be hid behind the word "Selected" we are unable to say. We clipped it from a labor paper which used the word mentioned, but why? Who killed cock robin? How high is up?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

REAL EYES FOR THE BLIND.

Science has advanced a stage nearer the solution of the problem of blindness. By transplanting the eyes of living or newly-killed animals to blind animals, the sight of the latter has been restored!
The transplanting of eyes has been tried before, but owing to the fact that the eyes so transplanted were stitched into position, the experiments were not a success. Silk stitching proved too strong for the fine substances of the eye, and it killed the nerve.

A new method has recently been tried by a famous doctor. Eyes were transplanted as before, but no stitching was used, the nerve end being carefully joined to each other. The eyelids of the blind animals were then closed and left so for a day. At the end of the day the nerves were found to have fused together.

After three or four weeks under this treatment each eye was able to react to light, and in the case of fish and other forms of life sight was restored!

In the case of a blind rat which had new eyes given to it, the pupil reacted to light and darkness, and the movements of the creature became bolder than before. The animal actually jumped over holes and sprang into its cage.—Times-Star.

CALIFORNIA REMINDERS.

Senator Hiram Johnson voted "yes" on submitting the constitutional prohibition amendment to the various state legislatures, while Senator James D. Phelan voted "no." In Congress the following representatives from California voted
"yes" on the above referred to measure: Wm.
Kettner, Henry Z. Osborne, Charles H. Randall,
John A. Elston and John E. Raker. Congressmen voting "no" were: Denver S. Church, John I.
Nolan, Julius Kahn and Clarence F. Lea. Congressmen not voting: Everis A. Hays and Charles F. Curry.

On the Volstead law the Senators repeated.
Johnson for and Phelan against. Congressmen H.
E. Barbour, C. H. Randall, J. E. Raker and H. Z.
Osborne voted "yes," and Congressmen John I.
Nolan, C. E. Curry, Hugh S. Hersman voting "no."

Congressmen J. A. Elston, Julius Kahn, Wm.
Kettner and C. F. Lea not voting. California had a general election on the subject of prohibition; it took place on November 3, 1914, and those who favored a dry law polled 355,536, while those who favored liberal license laws and opposed fanatical dry legislation polled 524,781.

At the election held November 7, 1916, the prohibition advocates polled 436,639, whereas the liberal voters lined up and voted to the tune of 538,200. At the election held November 5, 1918, another test vote was had, the drys polling 275,643 to the so-called wet or liberal vote of 306,488.

In view of the foregoing record, the query comes to mind, Did the state legislature represent the voters of the state when they voted for the Eighteenth Amendment; and did the majority of the California Congressmen do the bidding of the voters of that state when they approved the constitutional provision and the Volstead act? When the fanatics say the voice of the people demanded the Eighteenth Amendment, what voice do they refer to?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BIG AND LITTLE GUYS.

It's proven now that anyone's a fossil
And technically he has pulled a boot,
Who claims a pitching guy must be colossal
To earn his salary in a big league suit.

Wee Lefty Kerr has duly demonstrated

That pitching is beyond all doubt a science,
Wherein fate rules a small guy can be rated
As valuable as any of the giants.

Kerr pitched all season for one Billy Gleason,
Admired by Chicago's mighty mass;
When he'd step on the mound they'd bellow, "Gee, son!

You're smallish, but you surely have the class!"

Remember when Chi's Sox received a beating
Two times from Paddy's dauntless Cincy Reds?
Then Kerr put on his act and had them eating
Out of his hand, and stood them on their heads.

Anon, when anguish filled the White Sox rooters,
And Victory was smiling at Pat's men,
This little Kerr propelled his curves and shooters,
Delaying that most fearful count of ten.

This jingle has a moral for the frantic
Who claim that little guys are born to fail—
Some oceans not as big as the Atlantic
May have within a fish known as a whale.

—GEORGE MORTARTY, in Cincinnati Post.

WUXTREE! READ ABOUT IT!

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, is in receipt of a letter from a wise fellow in Utah who states that in Salt Lake City and other smaller towns, the Republican optimists are plastering vacant walls and billboards with posters bearing slogans calculated to give a wrong impression of prevailing conditions, as follows: "Prosperity is Here." And the same wise fellow sends the Senator the following verses, which are both suggestive, sentient and sentimental:

Mark Hanna gave the dinner pail
That made us feel so fine;
Teddy used the big stuffed stick
To keep us all in line.
But Harding, in his great wisdom,
Has outdone all such feats;
He's given us prosperity
On billboards in our streets.

A quick return to normalcy,
Is the thing he's striving at;
And if we'll tighten up our belts
Some time he'll make us fat.
Instead of the full dinner pail,
Full of good things to eat,
He'll serve us with prosperity
On billboards in the streets.

For many years I served you
As puppet and as tool,
But this last stunt has wised me up—
No more a silly fool.
I may be a poor workingman,
My clothes are far from neat,
But you can't hand me prosperity
On billboards in the streets.

We scissored the foregoing from an article by Gen. Isaac R. Sherwood, of Toledo, O. The article appeared in Labor, printed at Washington, D. C., March 11, 1922.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WILL HAYS' NEW JOB.

One of the wise pencil pushers writes: "The movies have insured Will Hays for $2,000,000. Must intend to push him over a cliff." But joshing aside and speaking of insurance, how much, if any, are you carrying?

We are not going to imitate any of the sob sisters and ring in a lot of that tear stuff about the widows and orphans of deceased members, but we are writing this item for the very definite purpose of calling your attention to—(if you are one of the homeless and minus relatives you can stop right here, for the remainder of this item won't interest you). If, on the other hand, you are married or have relatives dependent upon you, you should see to it that something besides enough money to lay you away decently is left to care for them.

The "information wanted" items which we print almost every month, are in the main, cries of distress. Had the absentee performed his full duty, it's a fair conclusion to reach that we would not be asked to locate him or her, as the case may be.

Life and accident insurance can be obtained at reasonable figures, so small monthly payments can be made that they do not become a burden; yet if anything does happen and the son or husband is taken off by illness or accident, the mother or wife has at least a sufficient amount to give them a start toward something that will probably provide a living.

We are not boosting any special corporation or concern—all of them have passed the inspection of the authorities. What we are concerned in is, that you, men and women with dependents should make provisions for the time when you have stood your "last watch."

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

YOUR LITTLE WIFE.

Who plans to make your future bright?
Who works to tempt your appetite?
Your little wife.

Who tells her women friends that you
Are one grand husband through and through?
Your little wife.

Who pats your cheek when you get home?
Who smooths the thin hair on your dome?
Your little wife.

Who looks at you, her brown eyes clear,
And snuggling to you, extra near,
Says, "This is pay day, ain't it, dear?"
Your little wife.

—San Diego Labor Leader.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

FOOTPRINTS.

Many a member who jollies himself into the belief that he is going to leave footprints in the sands of time, discovers when he meets the secretary of his local union, that the one and only identification he has left is spelled suspension. Local unions can be run without money—but not for long. Local unions have been conducted without meetings, but they were what the golf fan would call fozzles. The presence of a charter on the wall of a meeting room, does not prove that the union meets or when it does that it transacts business.

Talkative members may be pests, but what about the fellows that sit around and never open their traps. The former do say a wise thing occasionally, the latter if they have anything wise to say keep it to themselves.

It is a common sight to see these silent members, talk an arm off their Buddies after meeting, since as likely as not the gabby member won't open his head until the next meeting.

It takes all kinds of members to make up a union, some good, some bad, but too many indifferent members is what makes the slide smooth going down.

The wise presiding officer invites discussion. Those who get tired hearing the other fellows talk are jealous because they can't spill conversation that can be understood.

Heard an officer advise his members to get accustomed to thinking while on their feet. Sized up a number of those present and knew he was asking the unattainable: they could not think setting down because their think works were gummed up with useless junk—rusted for lack of use.

Make footprints in the sand of time, but be sure they are not indentations at the bottom of the toboggan.

"THE GOVERNMENT TO BE."

I have listened to the sighing of the burdened and the bound,
I have heard it change to crying with a menace in its sound,
I have seen the money-getters pass unheeding on the way
As they went to forge new fetters for the people day by day.

Then the voice of labor thundered forth its purpose and its need
And I marveled and I wondered at the cold dull ear of greed.
For as chimes in some great steeple tell the passing of the hour,
So the voices of the people tell the death of purchased power.

All the gathered dust of ages God is brushing from His book.
He is opening its pages and He bids His children look,
And in shock and conflagrations and in pestilence and strife,
He is speaking to the nations of the brevity of life.

Mother earth herself is shaken by our sorrows and our crimes,
And she bids her sons awaken to the portent of the times,
With her travail pains upon her, she is hurling from their place,
All the minions of dishonor to admit the coming race.

By the voice of Justice bidden, she has torn the mask from might,
All the shameful secrets hidden she is dragging into light,
And whoever wrongs his neighbor must be brought to judgment now,
Though he wear the badge of labor or a crown upon his brow.

There is growth in revolution if the word is understood,
It is one with evolution up from self to brotherhood,
He who utters it unheeding bent on self or selfish gain,
His own doom is speeding though he toil or though he reign.

God is calling to the masses, to the peasant and the peer,
He is calling to all classes that the crucial hour is near.
For each rotting throne must tremble and fall,
broken in the dust,
With the leaders who dissemble and betray the people's trust.

Still the voice of God is calling and above the wreck I see,
And beyond the gloom appalling the great government to be,
From the ruins it has risen and my soul is overjoyed,
For the school supplants the prison and there are no unemployed.

And there are no children's faces in the factory or at the loom,
They are out in sunny places with all sweet things that bloom.
God has purified the alleys, He has made the White Slaves free,
And they own the hills and valleys in the Government to Be.

—By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

80-8-18--7--82-8-83-18-8-15

HISTORY OF LABOR DAY.

Labor Day, 1922, is the twenty-eighth annual celebration of Labor Day as a legal national holiday.

The history of Labor Day is significant of the increasing strength and progress of organized labor.

Labor day evolved from the aspiration of the labor movement; it was not handed down as a present. Its recognition as a legal holiday was won by labor; it was not given to labor.

The united voluntary efforts of the workers themselves established Labor Day as a national holiday long before any state legislature or the national legislature enacted the custom into statute law.

But the history of the statute law is in itself significant; it indicates the ever increasing influence of the economic organizations of labor over the deliberations of law makers.

The Labor Day idea was originated by P. J.
McGuire, for many years first vice-president of the American Federation of Labor.

At a meeting of the New York city central labor union, held on May 8, 1882, McGuire urged the propriety of setting aside one day in the year as a general holiday for the laboring people. He suggested that it be called "Labor Day."

The idea was adopted by the central labor unions, and it staged a Labor Day parade and festival on the first Monday in September, 1882.

The A. F. of L. endorsed the national Labor
Day holiday at its 1884 convention, held at Chicago.
The convention unanimously adopted the following resolution, introduced by A. C. Cameron, delegate from the Chicago trades and labor alliance:

"Resolved, That the first Monday in September of each year be set apart as a laborers' national holiday, and that we recommend its observance by all wage workers, irrespective of sex, calling, or nationality."

Through the activity of the state federations of labor and the central labor bodies the Labor Day demand spread from city to city and state to state.

Many municipal councils and state legislatures made it a legal holiday.

Oregon was the first state to accede to labor's demand that Labor Day be made a state holiday.
The Oregon Labor Day law was signed by the governor on February 21, 1887. The legislatures of Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York also made Labor Day a state holiday in 1887.
Connecticut, Nebraska and Pennsylvania followed in 1889; Iowa and Ohio in 1890; Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Montana, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Tennessee and Washington in 1891; Alabama, Louisiana, Utah and Virginia in 1892, and California, Delaware, Florida, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Texas and Wisconsin in 1893.

In the meantime A. F. of L. officials sought congressional legislation to make Labor Day a legal national holiday, in conformity with the resolution of the 1884 convention. The bill became a law ten years later. It passed congress on June 28, 1894.

On June 29, 1894, President Cleveland signed the Labor Day law in the presence of Amos J. Cummings, representative in congress from New York city. Mr. Cummings presented the pen and penholder used by President Cleveland to President Gompers.

In his annual report to the 1894 A. F. of L. convention President Gompers said:

"National Labor Day—It affords me pleasure to be able to report that the demand made by the A. F. of L. for making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday passed congress and was made a law on June 29, 1894."—A. F. of L. Weekly Newsletter.

The foregoing is offered now to remind local unions that the proper time to prepare for their Labor Day parade is here, that postponement may mean real disappointment.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

THE CHEESE BROTHERS.

Swiss—You should be careful when making the crossing.

Brick—The only crossing I'm scared of is double-crossing.

Swiss—You looked worried this morning?

Brick—Yes I am, just started in business for myself.

Swiss—That's good news; what kind of business?

Brick—A ham and egg farm.

Swiss—Whaddye mean, Ham and Egg Farm?

Brick—Pigs and chicken raising.

Swiss—Gee you're getting brighter every moment, thought you were a miner.

Brick—So I am, but the mine is closed. Worked in the mine last week.

Swiss—You did? I don't believe you, let me see your hands.

Brick—There they are, what's the big idea?

Swiss—Want to see if they are calloused, and they ain't.

Brick—Of course not, I'm a soft-coal miner.

Swiss—Somebody will lean on your lamps some day for that kind of stuff.

Brick—You are one of the fellows that wore out my sleeve.

Swiss—How come, wore out your sleeve?

Brick—Forcing me to rough laughter up my sleeve.

Swiss—You're getting more and more like a scissors-grinder.

Brick—What means such grinding remarks?

Swiss—Everything looks dull to the scissor man.

Brick—You remind me of a member of the crustacean family.

Swiss—None of that goes, you speak American, don't you cuss me in foreign lingo or I may try to change your map.

Brick—Just as I thought, that went over your head, regular third-base substitute, eh?

Swiss—You get off that stuff, whaddye mean by them crusty names?

Brick—Don't you know, you've seen whole flocks of 'em time and time again.

Swiss—I have eh, well you just get busy and point any of 'em you see now.

Brick—That's dead easy—come on over to the Excelsior Pool Room with me.

Swiss—What do you want to go to that dump for?

Brick—Didn't I promise to show you a flock of the crustacean; come on.

Swiss—Well, here we are you big stiff, show me or take what's coming to you.

Brick—Look through the door and see what you can see.

Swiss—Why there is no one in there but a bunch of no account lobsters that are cadging protection two ways; one from the pool room man, the other from the cooks and waiters' union.

Brick—You are a good guesser, my boy, that's what I said you resembled.

Swiss—That sounds like fight talk to me, I pay my dues to my union, and that bunch in the pool room don't.

Brick—I didn't say you were a lobster, did I? I said you resembled one of that family, for you get red in the face when you are warm and you crawl so slow that you can't even catch cold.

Swiss—I can make speed enough to warm you up so that you'll get cold feet in about a minute.

Brick—Put on a new needle, your record squeaks.—Navillus.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

FIVE HUNDRED DELEGATES IS SOME CROWD.

We are asked to render a decision relative to the number of delegates attending our conventions. One member makes the claim that he was a delegate to one of our General Conventions at which "at least 500 delegates were in attendance representing local unions."

Previous to the Eighth General Convention, which was held at Cleveland, Ohio, May 14-18, 1900, none of the conventions had in excess of 24 delegates. The Cleveland convention of the year mentioned, had 31 delegates, at the following General Convention the number of delegates was 62. The Sixteenth General, held at Boston, Mass., May 8-13, 1911, had 270 delegates representing 188 local unions. At no convention before or since that has there been in excess of the number quoted.

There have been in excess of five hundred votes cast on the floor of a convention, but not that number of delegates. Under our laws governing representation, it is possible for large local unions to cast a heavy vote, but to do so, they are required to have delegates on the floor of the convention.

Local 5, of New York City, was entitled to 10 votes at the last convention, but inasmuch as it had but one delegate they were unable to use seven of their votes. Local 30, of San Francisco, was entitled to 18 votes, but as that local had but two delegates at the last convention, it was unable to use the allotment. Local 34, of Boston, likewise lost out, having but one delegate, thus losing the power of 15 votes. It is possible that, including visitors at our conventions, we had 500 persons in the convention city who were wearing badges, but not delegate badges. We expect the Chicago convention to beat all records as far as attendance is concerned.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SQUIRREL FOOD.

"Oh, goody, goody!" yelled the convict as he was being taken to his cell to begin serving the 135-year sentence imposed as a total for a score of holdups.

"You're a joyful guy for a guy that's in for 135 years," growled the jailer.

"That's just what makes me happy, bo. I was scared stiff the judge was gonna make it life!"—Cedar Rapids Tribune.

BRAINLESS BANKERS BUTTING INTO BUSINESS OF WAGE FIXING.

Bankers as a general thing, display wisdom beyond the average in the matter of making money and accumulating that very necessary media of exchange but occasionally they tilt things in such manner as to invite criticism.

In the Casper (Wyoming) Daily Tribune, a few months ago appeared an advertisement, which for downright pinheadedness, takes the bake shop:

"After a very careful consideration," says the advertisement, "we advise that the stockmen and ranchers of this section pay not to exceed $50 per month for herders and all classes of ranch hands; effective on or before January 1; that they carefully outline their plans for the coming winter and cut running expenses to the very bone. We trust that the big outfits and those most able to pay extravagant wages be the first to establish this scale; it will be a great moral support to the smaller outfits and will tend to put the business generally on a more solid basis. We trust that the men themselves will realize that they can not expect permanent employment at a wage greater than the business can afford to pay.

"All the banks of Casper have given this matter of wages very careful consideration; we are unanimous in our decision as to this scale and we now wish to go on record to the effect that we shall not condone the payment of a higher wage."

The advertisement was signed by the following banks: Casper National Bank, Stockmen's National Bank, Wyoming National Bank, Wyoming Trust Company, Citizens National Bank, National Bank of Commerce.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHAT HAPPENED IN AN OPEN SHOP.

The printer in an open shop set up a poster to advertise an address by a militant suffragette. Her subject was, "Woman: Without Her, Man Would Be a Savage." When the speaker called for the posters the proofreader had to leave town suddenly, for the flaming sheets read, "Woman, Without Her Man, Would Be a Savage."—American Labor World.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

STARES.

The vamp went up the winding stairs,
The hick behind her follered.
She stopped and stooped to tie her shoe—
His chewing gum he swallowed.
—The Kablegram, Mount Morris, Ill.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

SINCERITY.

"Man's noblest gift to man is his sincerity, for it embraces his integrity also," said Thoreau. Membership in a local union is one thing, but sincere membership is what counts. If you scan the faces of your fellows at a meeting you can pick out the sincere members—those who pay strict attention to every word that is spoken, every move that is made. They are the men who feel honored when selected for important committee work, who devote time, study and energy in behalf of their fellows. They are ambitious to serve, to be of use to their fellow members. If you desire to secure the esteem of your fellow man, be sincere and serve faithfully. Your reward may be a long time coming, but come it will. It is as inevitable as death itself.

DAY DREAMS.

I long for the days of the barlow knife,
And the sore toe tied with yarn;
For the "mumblepeg" and the "Boston taw"
In the shade of the moss-grown barn.

I even yearn for a stone-bruised heel,
Or a back burned red by the sun;
For the old-time zest for my couch of rest
I had when the day was done.

I long for the days of the "sight unseen,"
And the peg tops spun with twine;
For my old-time place down at second base
As one of the village "Nine."

I even yearn for the finger bunged
Or the thumb with a ragged split;
Or the old-time bump on my bulging brow
That showed where the baseball hit.

I long for the days of the swimmin' hole,
And the "swish" of the old fish-line;
For the "crockries," "aggies," "glassies" and
The "nealies" that once were mine.

I even yearn for the blistered hands
That came from the old grub hoe;
For the appetite that came with night
In the days of long ago.

I long for the days that are long, long dead,
When my heart was free from care;
For the sunny hours when my boyish soul
Was as light as the summer air.

But, thank the Lord, I am living yet,
And I thank Him, too, that I
Can sit at ease when the day is done
And dream of the days gone by.

—WILL M. MAUPIN.

Bro. T. B. McCown clipped the foregoing poem from the Democrat-Herald, of Thompsonville, N. Y. Will M. Maupin carried a union card for many years and was active in the labor movement in the State of Nebraska, if memory has not gone back on us. He also published a labor paper in the city of Lincoln, Neb.—EDITOR MIXER AND SERVER.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ARE YOU AN ASSET OR LIABILITY TO YOUR UNION?

Having gotten over the spring fever, and looking forward to many nice seances at the baseball yard, suppose that you fill in the interval by taking yourself to the old bedroom mirror and give yourself a little personal conversation. Give yourself the once over; look yourself square in the eye and ask yourself the question which heads this bit of comment.

Having given yourself the double-o, what is the result, or don't you give a tinker's dam whether you weigh in light or heavy in the trade-union game? You know that there are members and members of unions; some of them good, others bad, and quite a few indifferent.

What is your number? Are you getting by with a minimum of effort, or are you one of those who believe in your union and know that, if it is given the kind of support it should have, it can deliver the goods in fine large chunks?

Probably you have no mirror in your bedroom; and then again, you may not have a bedroom. If not, where the heck do you rest up. Never get tired, you say. How about the boys that work alongside of you? Could it be that you make them tired? What do you use that hat holder for anyway?

LEST WE FORGET.

The two Senators from the State of Arizona, Henry F. Ashurst and Marcus A. Smith voted "aye," on submitting the National Prohibition Amendment to the various state legislatures for ratification. Carl Hayden, the only Representative at Large from that state did likewise when the subject came to a vote in the House. When the Volstead Law was before the Senate the Senators from Arizona voted "aye," so did Congressman Hayden in the House vote "aye." The date of the first action was: Senate vote, July 31, 1917; House vote, December 17, 1917.

Arizona had a wet and dry election November 3, 1914. The vote stood: For prohibition, 25,887; against prohibition, 22,743—a majority of 3,144 in favor of a dry state.

When the Willis-Campbell Anti-Beer bill was voted on in the Senate, H. F. Ashurst was on the dry wagon and voted for that measure; his associate in the Senate, R. E. Cameron, did not vote. Carl Hayden, in the House, voted for the Willis-Campbell measure. The vote in the Senate occurred on November 18, 1921; in the House it took place June 27, 1921.

Ashurst is from Prescott; Cameron resides at Flagstaff, and Hayden at Phoenix. Cameron is a Republican.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

EACH DOLLAR BRINGS FIVE MORE.

The U. S. Public Health Service reports that the expenditure of $50,000 for rural hygiene work on the co-operative plan in the last fiscal year led to the appropriation of five times as much by states and counties, and of a good deal more by private individuals and corporations.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

BROTHERHOOD.

The crest and crowning of all good,
Life's final star is brotherhood,
For it will bring again to earth
Her long lost poesy and mirth;
Will send new light on every face,
A kingly power upon the race,
And till it come we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.

Come, clear the way, then, clear the way!
Blind creeds and kings have had their day,
Break the dead branches from the path;
Our hope is in the aftermath—
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran;
Make way for brotherhood—make way for man.
—EPWIN MARKHAM.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

MEN TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND IN EXCESS OF WOMEN
IN JAPAN—POPULATION OF ISLANDS 55,963,053, CENSUS SHOWS.

Japan has 200,000 more men than women, according to the revised official census returns just published. The total population is placed at 55,963,053. The population of the principal cities is as follows: Tokio, 2,173,201; Osaka, 1,252,983; Kobe, 608,644; Kyoto, 591,323; Nagoya, 429,997; Yokohama, 422,938; Nagasaki, 176,534; Hiroshima, 160,510; Hakodate, 144,749; Kure, 130,362; Kanazawa, 120,265.

The total number of households in Japan is estimated at 11,223,053, Tokio leading with 446,823.

"DAM THE SECRETARY."

Members of labor unions appear to carry the impression that their organizations are alone in the matter of tolerated troubles. But in that viewpoint they are mistaken, as the following, clipped from a publication which speaks for the employing printers, the Typothetae, frequently referred to as "The Teapot." The "pome" will show:

"If your Club is on the bum,
Damn the Sec.
If your members will not come,
Damn the Sec.
Don't take hold and do your part,
Don't help give the thing a start,
Show 'em all that you are smart,
Damn the Sec.

"If the programs are a frost,
Damn the Sec.
Don't help him put the thing across,
Damn the Sec.
If the grub's not what you like,
Threaten to go on a strike,
Don't help, for the love of Mike,
Damn the Sec.

"When you get a bill for dues,
Damn the Sec.
When you're asked to help, refuse;
Damn the Sec.
Let him do it, he get's paid;
Why should he be seeking aid?
That is why his job is made,
Damn the Sec."

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

DO NOT REPEAT THIS SUMMER.

Last year, after you had worked hard and, no doubt, earned fairly good wages, spending every penny as soon as chance offered, coming along toward Labor Day you began to realize that you had not salted a dollar and were facing a long, hard winter without sufficient funds to even pay room-rent. Do you remember the mental resolution that you promised you would put in operation this year? Well, here we are on the opening of the parks and gardens; the sultry days are but a few weeks away, and some of that easy money you are so anxious to collect is in sight. Are you going to repeat your last year's mistake, or are you going to make the acquaintance of the man at the savings bank who writes your name on a little book and credits your account with a few dollars every week? Afraid of being called a tightwad, eh? Who are the fellows that you fear may call you by that name? What have they in the form of spending change? If, perchance, they became ill tomorrow, who would pay their doctor's bill and other expenses?

A little bank account is a wonderful friend when you are laying on your back and not even your old chums with time enough to visit you and ask how you are getting along. Don't be a fish all of your life; save something. Lay aside a little money for the time when you will slow up; for the time when you will want to stop tramping around the country; when you will want a fireside of your own. The fellows that taunt you with the cry of tightwad seldom carry enough loose change to buy food for a canary. You can afford to pass them up; they are useless to you. They may not know that fact, but they are on the way "over the hills."

VITAMINES NOT A CURE-ALL.

The present popular tendency to extol vitamins as a cure-all may be drawing to a close. The U. S. Public Health Service reports that efforts during the year to discover the unidentified food substance whose absence from the diet causes pellagra have excluded two of the three known vitamins. The search for the missing element is being steadily narrowed.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

"THE HOTEL LOBBY."

If you want to find out what folks think of you;
Who are your foes; what friends are true;
Pack up your bag, move in for a while,
Sit around quiet, without even a smile!
They will first look you over, then a buzz will begin,
As they wonder and ponder what line you are in.
Where you are from; how long you will stay;
Whether you're renting by the week or day?
If you spend too much money, they say you are fast;
If you don't spend enough, you also lose caste.
If you try to be friendly, they say you're too free;
If you act dignified, they all will agree,
That you are concealing a dangerous past—
And they wonder how long the secret will last!
If you act like a saint, they chide you for that;
If you make any comments they call you a cat!
And when you do try to have any fun,
Someone starts the hammer, before you've begun.
One day it's a smile; the next day a "cut"—
When all else has failed, they dub you a "nut."
They never lose interest; they do the job well—
If you want to be "panned"—just try a hotel!
—HELEN HARDY, in Seattle (Wash.) Union Record.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

ATTENDANCE AT MEETINGS PART OF YOUR DUTY.

General headquarters, as most of our members appreciate, is the clearing house for innumerable things, one of which is letters of protest from members for one reason or another. Recently a member wrote us making complaint that his local union had levied an assessment of ten cents a week for the purpose of conducting an organizing campaign.

The referred-to member wrote:

"I have not been to a meeting for several months, and the members who do attend are a regular clique who do a lot of things the rest of the members know nothing about. It is my view that all members should have a voice on whether they are willing to pay the assessment or not."

That, in substance, is the cry of the members who are quite willing to reap the benefits of organized effort, but who seldom attend meetings and aid officers and members to legislate for the benefit of the whole.

It has been our experience that members who are eternally willing to register complaint against the click, as they call it, are members for revenue only. They will take without murmur advance in wages, enjoy benefits of fewer hours of labor, or any improvement obtained through the efforts of the officers of the union, but just the moment you seek to secure from them a miserly ten pennies a week, they run wild and talk loudly about oppression of officers and abuses imposed by the click who attend meetings.

A careful examination of the alleged cliques in local unions generally discloses a body of from twenty to forty members who have the interest of the organization at heart; who are carrying the burden of administration, doing all the work on committees, and the reward they secure for their unselfishness is to have a fine hunk of Gorgonzola write general headquarters "wanting to know if we can't stop the imposition and get rid of the men who are responsible for levying the assessments." If you are a member of a local union, it is your duty to attend the meetings and, by voice and vote, help in its management. If you are either too busy or too lazy to do so, then pay your dues and keep your trap closed, for you are going to be disappointed if you expect headquarters to either offer consolation or sympathy.

Be one of the click; get right on the inside; know what is being done, and its pennies to pickles that if you do, you will know that your attitude in opposing beneficial methods is hardly creditable. Wake up and be on the inside. Majority rules in this organization all the time.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WHO'S EFFICIENT NOW?

Uncle Sam may owe arsphenamine (salvarsan) to Germany, but he has improved it a lot since he took over its manufacture some years ago. Today, says the U. S. Public Health Service, it and its fellows pass tests that are twice as rigid, which means that the drugs themselves are twice as safe as they ever were before.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LEGALIZED BOOTLEGGING.

Secretary-Business Agent Brother Ed Whissemore of Local 106, sends us a dodger, or as some call 'em, a hand bill, used by a market in the City of Cleveland, and marked one portion, which we reproduce:

PURE EXTRACTS.

Lemon, 95% alcohol,	} 20c Per Bottle.
Orange, 95% alcohol,
Ginger, 90% alcohol,
Vanilla, 40% alcohol,

These alcoholic pure extracts are sold for the purpose of baking only.

Regular price 30c.

The special sale was on for two days. Query, How many of the bottles sold at the reduced price were "used for baking purposes only?" And whether the seller of the extracts gave a hoot for what purpose they were used so long as he obtained his price?

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

TAX-DODGERS.

(Reprinted from the Congressional Record.)

Mr. President, I have known for years that whenever a revenue bill is framed here powerful and mighty influences get in operation to prevent Congress or anybody else from opening the books and reading the returns, in which not only the country, but every citizen in the country, is interested.

I am just as much interested that my neighbor should pay a tax upon his earnings as I am interested in discharging my duty in that respect. He cannot devise a scheme to protect his earnings and his property from his just share of taxes without infringing upon my rights and without taking from me that which is mine, because, if all pay their just taxes, every man will be equal with all others, and one only becomes unequal in the partnership of burdens when other men escape I know the powerful influences which attempt to influence such legislation.—Senator Furnifold M. Simmons (D.), North Carolina.

CORRESPONDENCE

LYNN, MASS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—In the course of the last few meetings there have happened a few disappointing events.

One is, the losing of some of our officers, several of them having resigned at the last three meetings. Our worthy treasurer, Brother Edward Pleau, tendered his resignation on account of going out of the business, and Brother Andrew E. Noble, our financial secretary-business agent, resigned, owing to the fact that he was to become a proprietor a short time later.

We have also been forced to refill the offices of chaplain, recording secretary and inside guard. Those who were holding these offices were Sister Helen Glidden, Sister Helen Craig and Brother Charles Welch, respectively. The cause of this was not attending meetings.

At our last meeting, April 25, we elected new officers to fill these vacancies. Those elected were: Chaplain, Sister Lottie Scott; recording secretary, Brother William Niland, and inside guard, Brother Geo. Dess.

On Monday, May 1, our agreements become effective and they are being put out just as fast as possible and we think that, without the least doubt, that nearly all of them will go through alright.

But everyone here knows that there are a lot of members who have their names on the books of this local who call themselves "union members," that do not deserve the benefits they draw by the extremely hard work of others and when the business agent comes around, all they say is: "Are you here again," and "Try and get it."

Business conditions are about the same as in the past few months, with about the same bright outlook right along.

In one of our larger houses which conducted a bowling team composed of the waitresses and boys in the kitchen, they held a B. Y. O. B. party in a local banquet hall and during the course of the meal the cooks were acknowledged the "champs."

As master of ceremonies, Brother Al. Perry proved very efficient. After the supper we all enjoyed ourselves to the best of our ability. An Indian dance was put on by Brothers "Al" Stuart and Charles Coramelas, and as a dancer, "Charlie" sure is "there."

I am very sorry to say that things are breaking bad for one of our brothers, Brother Harry Fisher, former president of Local 290, of Salem, Mass. Brother Fisher has serious illness in the family but let us hope for a speedy come-back and then things will be alright again.

With regards to you and others of the General Executive Board, especially Vice-President John W. Conley.

Yours fraternally,

EARLE M. TERRELL,
Press Secretary, Local 329.

PORTLAND, ORE.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is an extract from the T. P. A. Pocket Guide, and I thought, after reading it, that it would look very neat in our monthly Journal, THE MIXER AND SERVER, and might wake some of the members up, as there is a lot of truth connected with it:

THE SECRETARY.

- If he writes a letter, it is too long.
- If he writes a postal, it is too short.
- If he edits a pamphlet, he is a spendthrift.
- If he goes to a committee meeting, he is butting in.
- If he stays away, he is a shirker.
- If the crowd is slim at a luncheon, he should have called the members up.
- If he calls them up he is a pest.
- If he duns a member for his dues, he is insulting.
- If he does not collect them, he is crazy.
- If a meeting is a howling success, the entertainment committee is praised.
- If it is a failure, the Secretary is to blame.
- If he asks for suggestions, he is incompetent.
- If he doesn't, he is bull headed.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust,

If the others won't do it, the Secretary must.

Compliments of

CHARLES L. HOPFER,
Secretary, Nebraska Division.

Please do not follow these suggestions.

TEN WAYS TO KILL AN ORGANIZATION.

- (1) Don't come to the meetings.
- (2) But if you do come, come late.
- (3) If the weather does not suit you, don't think of coming.
- (4) If you do attend a meeting, find fault with the work of the officers and other members.
- (5) Never accept an office, as it is easier to criticize than to do things.
- (6) Nevertheless, get sore if you are not appointed on a committee, but if you are, do not attend the committee meetings.
- (7) If asked by the Chairman to give your opinion regarding some important matter, tell him you have nothing to say; after the meeting tell every one how things ought to be done.
- (8) Do nothing more than is absolutely necessary, but when other members roll up their sleeves, and willingly, unselfishly use their ability to help matters along, howl that the society is run by a clique.
- (9) Hold back your dues as long as possible, or don't pay at all.
- (10) Don't bother about getting new members, "let George do it."—T. P. A. Magazine.

Fraternally yours,

ERNST H. WILLIAMS,
Secretary, Local 189.

OAKLAND, CALIF.

Report of the Secretary-Treasurer of Local 31 for Year 1921.*LOCAL 31 AND TWENTY YEARS' ACHIEVEMENT.

Back in March of 1901 a little band of boys got together and signed their names to a declaration of independence. That declaration was a petition to the International for a charter. The first meeting was called for March 12, and twenty boys were present. The first eleven who signed their names to the petition are officially known as "charter members," but all of those who were initiated while the charter fee was open are also called charter members. There were 196 initiated under the charter in the space of twelve meetings.

Local 31 was organized April 5, 1901, by C. D. Rogers, an organizer, and the charter members were: August Voight, deceased; Perry Conwell, transferred to Bartenders; G. Morehead, suspended in 1902; J. J. Enright, suspended many times and stands suspended today; Nels Engelbret, out on withdrawal card; W. T. McGuire, suspended; Clarence Burkman, out on withdrawal card; F. Overton, third secretary, never suspended, never out of union, always paid up, and who has a fine record; W. H. Bartwell, suspended three months after he joined; W. F. Stark, suspended; B. C. Brunson, who remained a member until his death on January 23, 1922. Of these eleven charter members only two are in good standing today, and both have good records. I shall shortly make a recommendation that they be given life membership in honor of their fine records.

When the local was organized the boys were working seven days a week, twelve hours a day, for one dollar a day, and if the boss wanted you to work longer you did so. That was and still is the employers' idea of "the good old days." At the fourth meeting we went on record as being against Orientals, and at the fifth meeting went after a new wage scale.

In 1903 we obtained one day off in seven, and still have it, and by the powers of Cæsar's ghost we mean to keep it. But we were still working eleven hours in fourteen.

In 1904 we had a big strike, and in 1905 we fought the open-shop plan, so you see the open shop, or "American Plan," is nothing new with us.

In 1914 we had another hard fight against the unfair employers. In those days we had pickets and shadowers who used to follow a man home and picket him there, and tell his friends about him. Those were the days when we had a fighting chance and could fight in the open. We are so tied up with laws, court rulings and injunctions that we have to fight in secret, like all causes for the good of the people throughout history have had to do for ages.

In 1903 waiters were receiving $8 a week (a $2 raise in two years), and the cooks $11 a week. How the cooks do love those good old days! Now the waiters average $21 a week and the cooks $32.50, a gain of about 300 per cent. Not so bad, say you. Well, let's see:

	1921	1901	Increase
Rent	$115.00	$10.00	$105.00
Coal	20.00	3.00	17.00
Garbage	2.00	.50	1.50
Telephone	9.25	3.00	6.25
Doctor	75.00	50.00	25.00
House rent	75.00	10.00	65.00

From the above you can see that wages have just barely maintained pace with the cost of living.

In the case of actual living conditions, I will show that wages are 53 per cent below what they should be.

We began to give free medical attention and drugs in 1911, and Dr. Devine was our first physician. He remained our physician until 1916, when we changed to Dr. Hamilton. In 1917 we changed to Dr. A. Smith, who is with us at the present time and giving entire satisfaction.

We have tried the experiment of sick benefits, but our experience, as well as that of all other locals so far as I have been able to learn, proved that sick benefits were not a success. The amount paid in is never sufficient to meet expenses. We also found that a great many are always sick if they can just get enough to eat. These members, as a rule, pay in $1 a month and try to take out $5 a week. It is the real honest-to-God members—the workers—who have to carry the burden. Never being sick, they are always helping to carry the load.

We also tried the experiment of loaning a little money to members in need. That was a failure, as most of us know it is easier to borrow than to pay back.

We therefore decided that the free services of a physician and free drugs were the best thing for all, and the most fair, as no one wants either unless they really need them. During the years 1911 to 1921 the total amount of $11,223.86 was expended for medical service and drugs, or an average of more than $1,000 a year. Figuring on an average membership of 500 at $2 per members, this is darn good interest on the little $15 paid in by each member, even if you didn't get the benefit of it yourself. In 1914 our drug bills were six times as heavy as they are now, which fact alone shows that shorter hours and better conditions make for better health.

Another funny little thing is, one of our newspapers (The Tribune) showed in 1901 that restaurant men raised the price of sirloin steak from 30 to 35 cents, cutlets from 15 to 20 cents, and sausage from 5 to 10 cents, on account of the exorbitant demands of the cooks and waiters.

We have paid to the International in per capita tax a total of about $17,318; Central Labor Council, $4,475; State Federation of Labor, $234; a total of $22,027 in per capita tax alone in twenty years. We have paid out in rent $13,433.49, which would have bought us a home of our own and a place in the community, instead of still being gypsies as we are today. The number of people who have passed through on our books is 17,000. With the exception of several months in 1913, our records are entirely complete, including minutes, bills, and all.

From the twelve-hour day and seven-day week of 1901 we have gradually crawled into the sunlight of 6 days and 8 hours. We work 8 hours in 12 instead of 12 in 20, as in "ye good olden times." We have thus gained four hours every day to study and enjoy life as humans should, as well as an increase in wages.

I have arranged several tables showing the gain in wages and hours of Local 31 as contrasted with living conditions during the past twenty years. If there are any who believe that unions are just jobs for some officers, these tables will bear close study. In order to understand them more fully you must know that from 1886 to 1897 the trend of all general prices was downward. Then they started upward, and did not end until they reached their peak in June, 1920. They then dropped, until in April, 1921, they were at about a level with 1917. During June,

July and August they went up again, and are now at about the same level as those of 1918, thus showing that the cost of living has not dropped to any great extent, for our wage scale was not put into effect until 1920. Prices generally increased about 5 per cent during December in the Bay District, while wholesale prices have dropped until they are now below the 1914 level. The price the farmer is getting for his products is 50 per cent below that of 1914. Normalcy has aroved in the land of the farmer.

COMPARISON OF WAGES AND THE COST OF LIVING
DURING THE TWENTY-ONE YEARS OF LOCAL 31'S EXISTENCE.

	Wages		Increase in Wages	Increase in Cost of Living
	Cooks	Waiters
1901...	$10.00	$6.00
1905...	11.00	7.00	$6.00	5%
1910...	19.00	10.00	7.00	44%
1913...	20.00	11.00	9.00	11%
1917...	22.00	12.00	11.00	14%
1918...	26.00	15.00	13.00	23%
1919...	28.00	18.00	16.00	17%
1920...	34.00	21.00	18.00	17%
1921...	34.00	21.00	18.00

Thus it can readily be seen that living costs went higher each time than living wages, until in 1920 the cost of living was 195 per cent above that of 1913, and 215 per cent above that of 1901. The percentage of raise on restaurant bill of fares during the same period was, in some cases, 1,000 per cent.

MEMBERSHIP.

Our membership of 739 in December, 1921, compared with 898 in 1920, shows we lost 154 members during the year. Considering the unemployment situation and business depression, as well as the war-time workers who have left the business, this is not so bad, and are still 93 ahead of 1919 in spite of our loss during the year. We have 262 cooks, 227 waiters, 188 waitresses, 39 cafeteria girls and 23 helpers. Sixty-two waiters are employed in 6 houses, and 72 girls in 5 houses. One hundred and three members are out of town, but still paying dues. Richmond has 23 members, as against 60 last year; Rafael, 9 as against 22; Martinez, 2 as against 15, nd Bay Point none. I find that nine-tenths of the women are American-born, while only one-fifth of the men are. To show results for the past ten years I submit the following:

MEMBERSHIP CHART OF LOCAL 31.

Year	No. Members	Year	No. Members
1912.....	519	1917.....	518
1913.....	489	1918.....	613
1914.....	530	1919.....	659
1915.....	542	1920.....	898
1916.....	558	1921.....	736

During the war-time period of 1918 and 1919 the industry was at its highest and the demand for all workers the greatest. Places were running day and night, and the restaurants running full blast, yet the highest membership attained was 659.

In 1920, or two years after the armistice was signed, when factories were closed; shipyards hiring 72,000 workers were entirely closed; entire towns created during the war were entirely deserted; shipping entirely stopped; business going into bankruptcy; restaurant crews cut in half; wages slashed and unemployment at its highest; the "American Plan" smashing its hardest and business generally on the bum; Clyde, a complete city built during the war on the Sacramento River, with a population of several hundred thousand, deserted, except for the ground hogs who scuttle around the front doors and a few caretakers, and its magnificent million-dollar equipped hotel entirely still; Martinez, where we had fifteen members, a silent city, with the bosses doing their own work; Bay Point now only a country village again; Richmond, where, during the war, thousands of oil workers were employed, now a village of silent streets; 172 restaurants having gone out of business since June, 1920, still, in the face of all this, we increased our membership by over 250.

In 1921, when the tide was still stronger against us, we held our membership, our wages and our conditions.

Today our membership is composed of 90 Greeks, 119 Slavs, 30 French, 11 Italians, 122 Germans, 328 Americans, 12 Spaniards, and a few others whose nationality we could not learn. The women lead in the gain of American workers over last year's report.

During the year we issued 319 traveling cards, 197 withdrawal cards, suspended 388, initiated 218, reinstated 226, and received 287 by traveling card, a total turnover of 1,669 members.

SHOP STEWARDS.

The shop-steward system is no new invention. Back in 1904 we tried the system of having one man in each house collect dues and look after the members, but it failed, for the same reason that it has failed today, because the members don't take enough interest to do their share, but are content to let George do it; not knowing that George is dead, I guess. Then again, the boss always fires him when he finds it out. Shop stewards work fine in large houses, but in small places the help changes too often. Nevertheless, we have a shop steward in every place in Oakland today to inform us of what is going on.

AMERICANIZATION.

During the past there has been too great neglect in urging prospective members to become Americans. The fault, I find, is not with the organization, but with the employers. They don't want Americans, but they do want something "cheap." They don't care of what nationality a man comes from or what his character is so long as he will work cheap, and thus they seek to load our locals with foreign-borns in the hope that we will take them in. It's a safe bet that if you were to stand in the street of any American city and shout in any one of thirty languages, someone would understand you. It is up to the bosses to ask for Americans, for then we will furnish them, because we believe in service.

During the past year we have instructed thirty-four members in citizenship, and thirty have passed the examination successfully. This in spite of the bosses.

RESULTS ACHIEVED.

Some of the main results achieved during 1921 can be tabulated as follows:

Jobs—	Waiters	Cooks	Waitresses	Helpers	Total
Steady	63	104	212	17	396
Extra	270	127	97	..	494
Relief	73	84	400	..	557
Tot. for year	406	315	709	17	1,447

success, and we hope to maintain it as an auxiliary to teach the families of members the gospel of unionism.

We have also started to hold open meetings once a month, to which anybody may come. We invite prominent speakers to address these meetings, and they have proven to be a great success and of great benefit to the members. They now look forward to each meeting as one of the events of the month. We have had such speakers as any society would be proud to have appear before them, including Walter Yarrow, the man who lead the oil strike; Austin Lewis, noted Attorney; M. P. Scott, member of the Weights and Measures Department; Thomas Gelder, prominent contractor, and many others.

We also have debates on measures of importance, and, through our chairman on education, Mr. Altman, have an important program lined up for the year 1922.

We also helped to get started the Allied Provision Trades Council of California, which we hope, in the near future, will be one of the dominating influences in the food industry. Such an organization is most urgently needed to combat the chain hotels and chain restaurants, and to block different businesses belonging to the same men in different towns. Also to equalize wages and conditions in certain districts.

LABOR MOVEMENT.

The labor movement is not going down hill, and it is not going busted, in spite of the hopes of the "American planners." There are today about 5,000,000 organized people, and perhaps 3,000,000 who have belonged at some time or other, over 1,000,000 Socialists, and perhaps 500,000 other radical organization members who understand the trades labor movement, so you can see that on the side of labor stands 12,000,000 who believe as we do, even though they are not all within our ranks.

The labor movement today is too much divided. We have the O. B. U., I. W. W., Internationals, Marine and Transport Workers, Federationists, New Majority, Rank and File, Socialists, associations, etc., all working together, but from different angles. Some day we will all meet, and then God help capitalism.

The labor movement is composed of three kinds of people, the reactionists, conservatives and radicals. The reactionaries are cowards; they want to retreat. The conservatives are fools; they want to stand still. The radicals are great; they believe in going out and taking it, only they don't reason from the other fellow's views. The progressives are the best, because they make ground slowly but surely.

U. S. Army reports show that there are 30,000,000 adults in the United States only thirteen years of age intellectually. No wonder labor is backward. The leaders can go no faster than the army can follow, and the army of labor is a mighty slow-moving body. But sure, brother; but sure.

Further reports show that only 5 per cent of the people who reside in California have bank accounts, showing that even with so-called high wages they have not saved anything.

A late report also shows that there are 11,000,000 more white women than men, and yet some of us can't find a wife. Where are they all, I wonder. Girls, listen, reports show that only one man in about 30 earns $35 per week, and camped on the trail of each of these men are about 30 girls, 5 old maids, 3 widows, 12 divorcees, and a lot of wives looking for "something better," so you see your chances of a $35 per man is about 1 in 40. Take a hint.

A U. S. report shows there are only 12,000,000 homes among 120,000,000 people, or one home for every ten. If every married couple had a home there should 40,000,000. Of the 12,000,000 homes only 25 per cent are clear from debt, and if you take stock of tradesmen, millionaires, politicians, etc., you will find that more than nine-tenths of the people of the U. S. A. are gypsies—just living from hand to mouth. No wonder men leave home.

Professor Douglass, of Chicago University, in his report, showed that people are not living as well today as in 1890, and were worse off than they were thirty-five years ago, which proves that we are commercialized and not civilized. However, my advise to the laboring class is to work hard and help the capitalists get rich, and in the end, when you lay dying in the poorhouse, you can dream of the beautiful monument to your memory in the city park, where you will be able to see it from your grave in the potters field above.

OUR 1922 PROGRAM.

Business is still on the decline, and prohibition has hit the restaurant business very hard. Places that have been in business for years have been forced to close their doors. Other places have cut their help to the bone. One waiter who worked for one man for twenty years got laid off, and he told me, with tears in his eyes, that "the boss told him it would be a steady job when he went there."

During the year our local took charge of banquets serving 1,800 and 2,000 people, and carried them through successfully. We intend to start a catering business if possible. Unionism is the greatest co-operative agency in the world, as we all join together to better ourselves. All right, then let's start in business.

We aim to own our own home; to start a school for our members; to start a citizenship class, to reach out for a larger employment field; to arrange an exchange department; to have picnics and parties where the city-sick members can get a breath of fresh air; a co-operative enterprise, a savings club, a debate society to teach shy members how to speak, and above all, we intend to make Local 31 the most loved, most respected and best-known of all the locals on the coast.

Having written so much, I feel as nervous as Mr. Henpeck did one night. His better half used to meet him with a rolling-pin every night if he was ten minutes late, until it got to be a habit. One day she decided she'd try another method. So she met him with a smile and a kiss, helped him on with his smoking jacket and put on his slippers. After a good supper she sat on his lap and put her arms around him and said, "Don't you think this is nice, Henry?" Henry tremblingly replied, "Y-y-yes, it's nice; but I bet I get hell when I get home."

Fraternally,

R. C. CAMERON, President.

FRANK L. GRATTEAU, Secretary.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

OAKLAND, CAL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a line to let you know that Local 31, Oakland, Cal., is still in the ring, and in spite of the crving jennys and crepe hangers we are healthy and flourishing. We are just recovering from two very important events, viz: The election of officers and the Twenty-first Anniversary of Local 31. Regarding the election; while the contest for the secretaryship and two trustees was enlivened by the usual election personalities, nevertheless, it was a walk-a-way for the incumbent (call me Frank). The business representative, Fred Cathrall, was returned to office unopposed (Nuf Sed); the trustees, George Hampshire and John Altman were re-elected, as were also all of the executive board and the president, Bob Cameron. So you see when it was put to the vote of the membership, they remembered the slogan, "Reward your friends and punish your enemies," with the result as I have just stated. I trust all the officers will continue to do in the coming year as well as they have done in the past.

Now as to the celebration. Words cannot paint the picture as it really was. With the generous help of Helen Foote, Della Lynch, Marie Carmen and Alice Frost, these fine girls took the banquet room in hand and made it a modern fairyland. In the kitchen two of our locally famous chefs, Jacques Smith and Jack McClosky, with the assistance of Joe Marquette and Jim McChestney, the menu was taken care of to such an extent it was a wonder that they accomplished what they did in the short time they had and the conditions that prevailed.

The speeches by the charter members, Perry Conwell (Secretary, 1901), and C. D. Rogers (Organizer, 1901), were certainly an eyeopener to the boys and girls of the present day when they told them what the conditions were years ago without an organization. If they will only take it to heart, it will be a valuable lesson, for when prosperity is here, then as a rule, there is a laxity and let-George-do-it attitude.

After the speeches the birthday cake was cut, and bye-the-bye it was some cake, 50 pounds and highly decorated, with twenty-one candles burning on it. The cake was donated by Mr. Leighton's Cafeteria Co., a 100 per cent shop. When the cake was to be cut into small pieces for the guests it had to be taken into the kitchen, on account of its size and it was up to the cooks to cut it up, but strange to say Jack Smith and Jim McChestney were so intoxicated with joy, that they had an a la Alphonse and Gaston argument as to who would have the honor to cut the cake. Now, as the floor of the kitchen was rather slippery, the mind of the chairman of arrangements, seeing visions of the cake flying through the air, decided in a few minutes, after ponderous thought, to transfer the cake back to the dining room, so with great ceremony that befits the occasion, the famous cake was distributed to the boys and girls and honored guests.

After that we adjourned to the ball room, where we were entertained with songs and acts from the local theaters, then dancing till the wee small hours, and I tell you some of the oldtimers did shake a wicked hoof. Believe me boy, they were all saying: "Well, here's to you, Mr. Volstead," etc. So ended our anniversary.

We have had a tough winter here, but we have been able to keep most of the boys and girls working, so with the best of wishes I close this chapter.

Yours fraternally, FRED. CATHRALL,
Business Representative, Local 31.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Please print the following in the MIXER AND SERVER:

Chicago Cooks and Pastry Cooks, Local 865, have opened new Club Rooms and offices at 166 West Washington Street, Bank Floor, Federation Building. All communications pertaining to aforesaid organization should be addressed to same. Our doors are open to the allied membership and when visiting Chicago, don't forget the number.

E. M. MIEKLE, President.

J. C. STAGGENBURG, Secretary.

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—On April 5, 1922, a testimonial dinner was tendered to Brother Leopold Pollak, business agent of Local 219. The said dinner took place at Little Hungary, 257-263 East Houston Street, New York City, New York. The dinner was arranged for by Brother Charles S. Lowy, and several of our members.

Little Hungary being one of the best known places in the city, famous from the time that the late President Roosevelt dined there with the Hungarian Republican Club.

At the testimonial dinner the establishment was turned into a dreamland by the management. The food was choice, the decorations exceptionally artistic, the service flawless. About three hundred guests were assembled in the luxurious dance hall at 9:30 when the wonderful march, arranged by Brother Seidler, and led by General President Flore, of the International Union, and William Lehman, of Local 1, was played. During the march the camera done its full duty. We are now the possessors of a wonderful picture which will be safe-guarded as a memento of the occasion.

At 10:30 the guests were led to the dining-room, and were speedily responding, as Americans are bound to do, when the Star Spangled Banner is properly rendered. A few minutes later the management, as well as head-waiter, Brother Gundelfinger, marched before the table of honor with the thirty-five waiters who were to serve the dinner, and in a few but impressive words expressed regret that himself and crew were unable to participate, but were overjoyed with the honor of being able to render services.

The speaking was started by President M. Schachter, who welcomed the guests and in the name of the local presented to Brother Leopold Pollak two silver candelabras. Immediately following, the president introduced Brother Charles S. Lowy, who was announced as master of arrangements, the originator of the idea, as well as toastmaster for the evening. Brother Lowy welcomed the guests in behalf of Local 219, giving a brief survey of the activity of Brother Pollak, reciting the fact that the said brother had been elected to office for the sixth term and enumerated a number of instances where the brother, who was the honored guest of the evening, had accomplished wonders for the local union.

Brother Pollak responded in suitable as well as appreciated comment showing that he was quite some orator, in spite of the fact that for a few moments the warmth of greeting had almost put him off the track.

The ladies who participated displayed some of the latest American and Parisian fashions.

Among the guests were General President Flore, Vice-President Cozzolino, Secretary Lehman, of Local 1, as well as a delegation from that local union; delegates from Local 2 and Local 109; the Waiters' Sick and Benevolent Society Liberty. With a large attendance this institution presented its honorable ex-president with a magnificent silver set. Quite a number of employers were present, among those, Mr. and Mrs. Max Schwartz, the originators as well as owner of Little Hungary; Honorable Councillor H. Messard, who also made a brief address which was well received. Last, but not least, Brother Lowy, toastmaster, thanked all for their attendance and concluded by making another presentation to Brother Pollak, a two-foot high Sterling silver flower stand. Again Brother Pollak responded, expressing heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the gift as well as the kindly wishes bestowed on him by so many friends.

General President Flore expressed appreciation over being able to attend and predicted that Local 219, if they continued in such a friendly spirit, would undoubtedly become a more powerful and useful organization than ever.

The following is the list of committees:

Master of Arrangements—Our Secretary-Treasurer Chas. S. Lowy.

Reception Committee—M. Schachter, president; R. Lowinger, vice-president; A. Aberbach, M. Seidler, M. Bober.

Floor Committee—A. Sperling, A. Weiss, E. Blumenthal, F. Hirsch, H. Rothausen, A. K. Hertz, A. Berzcy, E. Newman.

Press Committee—Th. Rosenfeld, R. Herzog, L. Horowitz, W. Kuffler, M. Zeisler, M. Sandrowitz, L. Fried, A. Fuchs.

In passing, many compliments were paid to Philip Lander for the exceptional musical program.

The menu which follows, served as intimated by members of our organization, was greatly appreciated. Many expressing themselves as being quite willing to repeat several times a week:

Appetizer
Grape Fruit Cocktail
Soup
Cream of Fresh Mushrooms Au Croutons
Fish
Kenebec Salmon Sauce Hollandaise
 Parisienne Potatoes
 Relishes
Radishes Hearts of Celery Queen Olives
 Entree
 Sweet Breads En Cassolettes
 Champignons
 Roast
Roast Long Island Young Duckling
 Currant Jelly
Sweet French Fried Potatoes
Combination Salad Asparagus
 Dessert
Pastry Surprise Ices Individual
 Coffee Noir
 Mineral Waters
Gottsegen's Special Perfectos
 Cigarettes

Expressing the hope that all of our organizations wherever located are looking forward with similar hope and expectation as the membership of Local 219, for we really expect improved business, beginning with the first of the current month and continue for many months to come.

With cordial greetings to all, I am

Yours fraternally,

CHARLES S. LOWY,
Secretary, Local 219.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

PARSONS, KANS.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, at last we have got the fever. The same kind that a number of would-be-candidates get at the primary elections, namely, the desire to get in print, whether or not we stay there long.

At our last regular meeting the local passed the sentence and the secretary wrote it down, that the business agent write a letter for publication in the MIXER AND SERVER.

Therefore, I take my pen in hand (I am also able to use a pencil) to carry out the wishes of the praiseworthy sisters and brothers who have issued the decree.

MR. M. SCHACHTER
President, Local 219, New York, N. Y.

I would write to you about the weather, only I know that you have enough of your own, besides the weather is so changeable here that it is nothing to be bragged about.

But let me tell you about the members of Local 397. We have the nicest assortment of members you ever saw. We fight among ourselves once in awhile, but when we meet the enemy we have a solid front, everybody right behind the business agent and out of the whole number only one or two have daggers in their hand, the rest are united and sticking like glue. Is it any wonder that I should swell my chest with pride and throw my head in the air when having the honor of representing a tried and tested and found loyal bunch like that? No wonder I am able to settle most of the grievances by diplomacy when I am conscious of the fact that the power of the organization is behind me and that it will bring the proprietor to time if he refuses to be won over by a suave and persuasive manner and an appeal to his sense of fairness and justice. That if he will not submit to gentle means that a reminder of the organization will cause him to think and perhaps call to mind the bitter end of those who have tried to oppose it.

Unity is our watch-word and "stand behind the business agent," is our slogan. Hence it is a pardonable pride that I have in representing one of the liveliest, loyal, lovable locals in the world, a local, the members of which have trades unionism in their make-up, members who would rather die than scab, members who are proud to wear their working buttons, and also (now listen to this) members who try to attend meetings every meeting night when possible.

Trusting that you will see fit to publish this letter in the MIXER AND SERVER, and with best wishes I am,

Fraternally yours,

NORBERT WALKER,
Financial Secretary and Business Agent,
Local 397.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have been elected press secretary in the place of Brother Murtha, who has tendered his resignation on account of his ill health making it impossible to attend to his duties for the present time. It is then my duty and to my brothers, who have elected me to this office, which I greatly appreciate, and am writing a few lines for Local 763 that can be of interest to the general membership. We all heartily join and hope here for the prompt recovery of Brother Murtha, that he may soon be with us again to devote his time and talent for the cause which he has in the past expressed by his pen and voiced at the regular meetings, in dealing with matters pertaining to labor legislation.

Business in our craft here is at a standstill at the present time, but we have no reason to indulge ourselves in pessimism, knowing that the same prevails in every locality in the country. Our meetings are well attended and this means a great step toward making and running the affairs of the local with efficiency. The average member of this local is aware of the fact that in attending the meeting regularly, he in doing so acquires knowledge and that knowledge is power, and that there is always something worth to be learned about the doings of other labor organizations, and the sooner each and every one of us sticks to the habit of being present at every meeting, the sooner shall we find ourselves in an advantageous position to meet the storm that the future may have in store for us. One who is prepared has always the advantage over the one who isn't.

The Union Card and Label League in this city has recently been reorganized. This local has delegates to this organization and at our meeting they give their reports. Our worthy president, Bro. Arthur Bennet, is one of the delegates and his constant effort and appeal to the brothers to support the label has been and is fruitful. It cannot be denied that the general memberships of labor unions have in the past overlooked the benefits the purchasing of union labeled goods represent. True, there are brothers who are sincere to their oath and are aware of what it means to purchase union made goods and patronize business places where union labor is employed, but the writer is aware of the fact that a number of us forget too often the oath we took when we became members of this great organization. There is no doubt in my mind that the partial success of the open shopper has been made possible by our own indifference, as far as the union label is concerned. The members of this local are doing their share in helping their fellow workers in other industries and the time is not far away when the brothers here shall be one hundred per cent buyers of union made goods; at least this is my hope. We shall make our policy known to every labor organization in this city with the hope that their members in return shall patronize hotels and restaurants where our members are employed.

A few weeks ago one of the largest labor unions with locals all over the country, held a social affair in this city. A banquet was prepared for and cared for by skilled union cooks and served by skilled union waiters. Both members of this local and I congratulate this labor union for having held this affair in a strictly union house. Speech was made glorifying the principle of the trade unionist. The speaker was sincere and every word uttered came direct from his heart and as a man thinketh in his heart, so is he. Yet, in vain did I look to find the blue label on the box of cigars that was offered to the party and mind you this labor union, to which I refer, has a label and is dependent and sustained to a great extent upon the use of its own label, yet inconsistent in co-operating with other labels.

It is possible to eliminate such occurrences, as I have stated here, by devoting our time and energy in educating the members of labor unions and the general public about the symbol of the union label and shop card.

Thanking you for the space you allowed me in our official magazine and with best regards to all, I remain,

Fraternally yours,
ALBERT GASNIER,
Press Secretary, Local 763.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-18

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The members of Local 763 are looking forward with confidence, and welcome the season just entered, as it means the opening up of a number of jobs, decreasing therefore, the number of idle men in our ranks. We have managed to pass through the winter months when work was not plentiful and to maintain the spirit of solidarity amongst ourselves, knowing that better days would come, and we have done our best to help the brother less fortunate who asked for assistance. It is difficult to satisfy everybody. One of the hardest tasks for the business agents is the distribution of work amongst the brothers who are listed for extra jobs. Local 763 is gifted with a brother who performs these difficulties with mastery. He is our Brother Robert Haffey, our worthy business agent and financial secretary. He doesn't claim to content everyone; no man has done that yet, but he dealt with this particular job of distributing the extra work scientifically.

Our sick brothers are taken care of by the chairman of our sick committee. Brother Hoyden, who reports at every meeting, is a faithful worker. Our Brother Robert Haffey is now an invalid, but the last report indicates that he will soon be on the job again.

Unlike many of our sister locals, our present agreement doesn't expire until late in summer. We are in the position and have the opportunity to look and follow with interest the struggle that will be waged in the near future upon the members of our International Union. Only in such proportion as the average member of our organization understands and practices the spirit of the true unionist, shall we be able to maintain the present working conditions in our craft.

In this State the labor unions are active. They have recently been able to defeat a bill in the State Legislature which was inimical to labor organization. The delegates from different central bodies who protested in Albany against this bill, have indeed done a good job, for which every member of a labor union in this state particularly is grateful. Union labor is up against a similar bill which has just been introduced in the State Legislature, called the Knight bill. The purpose of this bill is to protect society, so the sponsor of this bill claims. Organized labor in analyzing the same found that it contained evil and could be used against labor unions disastrously while it would benefit others. I could state here very plainly how this bill, if it became a law, would be used by evil hands against peaceful citizens, but I refrain from abusing the space that I am allowed in the MIXER AND SERVER.

I mention here the doings of a Branch of our State government for the purpose of creating in the ranks of union labor the impulse of constructive work to keep pace and meet successfully the attacks that are being made from time to time, with one end in view and that is to destroy labor unions or reduce them to impotence. The general membership of our International Union must at all times be well informed of all the force that is in the field struggling and devise ways and means to defeat the principle on which labor organization is founded, and has been made practicable only after great energy, effort and sacrifice by labor unions and individuals in the past. There is a common saying that "the more we learn the more we find it necessary to learn more." If this is true, then the constant appeal that is being made upon the membership of labor unions to attend their regular meetings, should be responded quickly for there at the meeting is the place to acquire knowledge that is indispensable to make a true conscientious union man or woman. If there are brothers who think that at the meeting there are but very few and unimportant things to learn, that it is unnecessary for them to be present, that the working conditions cannot some day get worse as long as they pay their dues, this philosophy is not adhered to by the members of Chambers of Commerce, nor is it by any of the clubs, associations, etc. These organizations believe that great things for their own benefit can be accomplished in attending regularly their meetings; every chair is occupied and each and everyone planning and thinking for his own interest and detrimental to others, each one with an initiative to better his lot; in the face of this some of us who do not attend our meetings are denouncing bitterly the individuals or group who have inaugurated the open shop drive. The organizations responsible for the open shop movement are 100 per cent as far as attendance in their meeting is concerned. Why not, brother, imitate them, playing their own game by attending to our business at our regular meeting, and inaugurate a shop policy in defiance of the open shop.

Fraternally yours,

ALBERT GASNIER,
Press Secretary, Local 763.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

PITTSBURGH, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Local 237 is riding along the same as usual. It has been a hard winter and there have been a good many men out of work, which created a large extra list and very little work for them, and gave a good many of them time to sit around and find fault and complain that the world was against them.

I read in an article of Brisbane's the other day where a lady applied for a divorce, claiming that she had been tricked into marrying an inferior, as her husband claimed he was a musician when he was a waiter. He was neither. He was a coward. When a man is ashamed of his profession it is time for him to make a change as he will never become a success at it, and will soon lose his self esteem. Cowardice is born in wickedness and reared in remorse and self-pity. Worry is a false face. When you worry you give evidence of a lack of ability and confidence in yourself and you are starting to slip.

I remember a verse of T. D. Van Amberg's on cowardice which I think would help our brothers and ourselves when things are breaking bad, and help us to buck up and carry on the fight:

MR. CHAS. S. LOWY
Secretary, Local 219, New York, N. Y.

Don't hunt after trouble, but look for success. You'll find what you look for, don't look for distress.

If you see but your shadow, remember, I pray, That the sun is still shining, but you're in the way.

Don't grumble and bluster, don't dream and don't shirk;

Don't think of your worries, but think of your work.

The worries will vanish; the work will be done. No man sees his shadow who faces the sun.

—In respect to F. D. VAN AMBERG.

If we would all face the sun and keep looking ahead, and refuse to be kept down, we are bound to win out, as failure does not come from mistakes but from inability.

Know thyself and analyze your mistakes and correct them. Help your officers and brothers to see and correct theirs and harmony and success will reign among us. And none of us will be cowards and feel that we are inferior to other professions, as we are all servants to some one, even the President of the United States.

We had a very snappy meeting last week, in which Brother Edward Richardson was chosen as Delegate to the State Federation of Labor.

I am sorry to announce the death of Brother Antonio Borgna. He was buried from Flanery's Undertaking Rooms, at Sixth and Webster Aves. He was a member of the local for years and had a good many friends who were shocked at his sudden death, which occurred after two days' sickness. His funeral was attended by a large number of the boys.

Yours fraternally,

R. H. THORNDIKE,
Press Secretary Local 237.

MR. LEOPOLD POLLAK

Business Agent, Local 219, New York, N. Y.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just a few lines to the MIXER AND SERVER to let you know that we are working hard to put our local on top again. Every member is working hard and we are going to succeed for we know that in 1923 we will have good beer and wine and then watch us grow. But you must vote right, so don't forget this.

Your humble servant is on the sick list but I hope to get into harness soon and get to my local for I am proud to say that I have been a member of Local 175 twenty-three years and thirty-two days today and hope to be with the boys for a great many more for on May the 8th I will be sixty-three years old.

Our financial secretary, Charles B. Klein, has left the city for five or six months. We will miss him very much at his post for he is the right man in the right place. Brother Geo. Christman, our treasurer, is still looking for more money. Brother Wm. H. Brandt, our president, is always on the job. Brother Edw. Flore, our general president, never misses a meeting when at home. Jere, he sure does think well of his local and is one hard worker for it. Brother J. Geo. Hoeffe, our second vice-president, is a captain on the lakes in summer, but never misses a meeting when in our city. Brothers Chas. Brott, Walter Spence and Al. Roy, our trustees, are always at the meetings. Brother Oscar Geyer, our inspector, is at every meeting. Brothers Chas. Perony and S. Bolugoski are at the Moose Club, Brother Vincent Stockman is at the Bodega, Brothers Geo. Christman and Geo. H. Vogt are at Schmidts' Cafe, 389 Washington Street.

Extending to you and the membership our sincere greetings and best wishes, we remain as ever,

Fraternally yours,

FRANK BROWN,

Vice-president and Press Secretary, Local 175.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The culinary alliance, Local 815, is still holding its own regardless of all opposition from the mis-named American plan, which seems to have become one of the forgotten arts for fighting labor. We used to see the signs in all houses of business where no union was known—"This Place is Run Under the American plan"—but not now as the business men have paid very dearly for the experience they have had in a theory with no practical part but loss.

The Manufacturers' Association met here a few days ago and was addressed by one of the members of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce who referred to some of the members of the association as being men of brains. We agree with that as the men referred to do not belong to the associated industries. Mr. Reese, boss secretary, was not present, at least his name was not mentioned. Since his trip to Butte, Mont., a few weeks ago he has not been heard of; guess he must have seen his shadow while away.

We are proud to say that most of the members of Local 815 are not on the 59 days in paying their dues, but a few are a little careless, but when once they pay the one dollar reinstatement fee they become more careful in having a better memory, as no excuses go.

The Salt Lake Federation of Labor has started a campaign in the way of advertising through the daily papers, giving labor's side of the question to the public of the meaning of open shop and what it leads to, also the necessity of organizations and asking why the laboring classes should not have the same right as other American citizens to organize, also naming many business propositions that organized. The organizations claim they are not fighting labor but are protecting themselves. If this is so, then we can claim that we are not fighting capital. Why have we not the same right?

The street car men have a problem before them as the management wishes to reduce the wages as the seven-cent fare is not sufficient to pay expenses. The employees ask a raise in wages as the cost of living and transportation are still high. So look out for trouble as the car men are willing to arbitrate and are about 99 per cent organized.

We are very thankful that the locals of California have taken a lead anent traveling cooks and waiters from Salt Lake; if you are not paid up in Local 815 you had better keep right on down the road to parts unknown to California; no excuse goes. If some of the scab element happens to run that way they had better sail some other direction as the Pacific coast town has no more use for scabs than the Devil has for water.

The coal strike has not hurt prices here yet as the price is still high with some chance of going up just to help the cause along. We see by reports that the non-union miners have been educated to protect themselves so the coal barons have some other troubles to contend with. The old saying (called radical) is to agitate and educate, which seems to have been done while the so-called detective sleuths (men with principle like a snake in the grass) were asleep.

Salt Lake is going along slowly but prospects seem to look good as we are counting on some resorts which we are after but can't count on looks alone.

With best wishes for the International, the MIXER AND SERVER, and yourself, I remain

Fraternally yours,

JOHN MULLINS,

President and Press Secretary, Local 815.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—If there is anything more irritating or nerve-racking than the neuralgia it is to be compelled to listen to some of the growlers who wish to be informed of what use the union is to them. There are times when I am compelled to prove by mathematics that some people we could mention have invested their couple of megas about as wisely as a Morgan or a Rockefeller. To be sure there are a number of steady men who in their blissful ignorance imagine they are safely landed in a life-time job never give the union a tumble, and there are also a number who make a living from extra work expect to live in luxuries provided by the efforts of the union simply because they are stringing along with their ten bits a month. The up-keep of the club-rooms, the salaries of the despised and accursed officials, the sick and death benefit do not figure in the transaction at all. The union gets rent free, and although the place is always nice and cozy on a cold day, the union, in the minds of some thoughtless mortals, gets its coal and electricity for nothing. Let some people tell the story and the world would be led to believe that the unions are all flourishing and storing away coin because some poor boobies pay their monthly dues. They regard it as a one-sided affair, but all one need do is the next time one of these grouches gets busy, is to hand him pencil and paper and ask to be shown in real figures.

It is my purpose to name a couple of incidents in this letter as I believe ingratitude is a second cousin to murder. First let me relate a pathetic little event in the history of this local which occurred last summer. Harry Weinstock was our secretary, and like other secretaries and business agents, he was not credited with possessing that organ found in other mortals, namely, a heart. One sweltering afternoon an emaciated and half-starved looking girl approached him, told her pitiful story of misfortune and begged for some assistance. She was a waitress, sans funds, sans food, sans position, yea, even was not lucky enough to possess a uniform. The girl was positively on the verge of desperation. She had never needed a union before, but as a last resort, and I think I am safe in saying in this case it was a last resort, she came to solicit aid. Some person had asked her in days that had passed to join but being too prosperous she just did not need it. Needless to say Brother Weinstock did not turn a deaf ear to her pleadings, in fact he went through the building, collected from all those who were in a position to give, and union boys are not stingy, if they have it. He told this young lady to buy herself and two kiddies a meal, also purchase a uniform and he would get her a position. Two days hence she was placed in a job where she was paid fifteen dollars per week, and I am sure the gratuities were good as I have time and again seen the dear sisters cashing in up at the desk after lunch, despite the fact that I had warned them against this repeatedly. We did not mention fee for initiation, just asked the other girls to pull her, along until such time as she could pay her way. She was shown every courtesy and extended every consideration, and in about five weeks I was able after a struggle to obtain her initiation fee. She had been working more hours than even the State law allowed but this was overlooked on account of the circumstances, she merely being told that as soon as she was on her feet

GEORGE F. ANDERSON,
Financial Secretary and Business Agent,
Local 279, Philadelphia, Pa.

again she must live up to the rules as laid down by the organization.

Since that time we failed to get a renewal of the working agreement with that particular house and now once more this ingrate does not feel the necessity of the union. She may be a wonderful waitress but she has a wretched memory, and if her case is not a relation to murder I fail to know what is.

Another young lady employed in the same establishment after receiving fifteen dollars per week through the efforts of the union became sick, collected seventy-two dollars in benefits, was handed three or four individual collections ranging from five to fifteen dollars each. How she was stranded I do not know as she had been working for two years in this house, further I am doubtful as to her collection of sick benefit being legal. She also found upon recovery that the union was not a proper place for her. "Frailty, thy name is woman."

May I also add another little incident occurring only a few weeks back wherein the business agent was made to look like the biggest rogue on earth. Of course I know this happens in every local, even in Buffalo—that correct, Ed? In order to give all hands a square and impartial deal a turn list for extra work was put in action here, or to be precise, three lists were used. One list for those who had no lunch job was used for lunches only, another list for long jobs, that is serving, setting and clearing, contained names of those again who had no lunch job. Another list had all names on and ran in rotation for short jobs, serving only. So the fellow without a job had three chances to work. The meeting did not order these lists as the secretary was given right to use his discretion but this method gave everyone what rightfully belonged. As before mentioned, one of the brothers thought he was not getting his regular turn. I want to state that I can take affidavit that he was, but of course roasted your humble servant unmercifully. But that is alright, we survived the shock as usual. However I took the trouble to look over the records to be sure he had not been missed and found that from March 16, the day the list was started, until March 31, he had been given by the union (not by me) extra work amounting to fifty dollars and fifty cents. This was a sample and I am going to tell the world that at any time I am out of employment, and for half a month my local will hand me something like that I will laud said local and its officials to the skies, furthermore will show the backsliders in good cold facts what the union is doing for its membership. When all is said and done the locals do more for the members than the members do for the local.

Business has been good as far as waiters are concerned, although there has been a decided slump in the demand for cooks. I don't know the reason for this but I do want to say the cooks have not been neglected and all orders have been filled promptly and carefully when we could get the men to accept positions offered.

Am sorry we cannot inform Brother Terrill, of Local 329, as to past performances of Herman Wolson, in fact do not think he was ever attached to any organization in this town. It is possible the name is an assumed one. We should indeed be tickled to death if ye could be instrumental in finding birds of this calibre and placing them where they belong.

The officials who comply with the request of the general office and send their cuts for publication will soon know who reads the MIXER AND SERVER as they will soon hear it noised about they are getting stuck on themselves. We may take a chance ourselves as we have been informed that people who do nothing never get roasted, so there is still hope.

Trusting this will be in time for publication and will pass censor, with best wishes, I remain

Fraternally yours,

GEO. F. ANDERSON,

Local 279.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

YODER, WYOMING.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just about one year ago I heard one of our law-makers, now in Washington, D. C.—trying to fill the place of a Congressman—make a speech in the district of Texas where he is from, that if the rest of the country would keep pace with the great State of Texas, the American Plan or Open Shop Association would be in operation in every industry in this country and that the good American workers could come and go as they pleased without being slugged and their homes blown up, and without fear that some body of men would strike and stop the movement of commerce from one locality to another.

To hear this notable speaker tell what was going to happen to the unions and what a great benefit the American Plan would be to the American workers, and of the ideas he was going to place before Congress, looked like a finish for all of us.

I have followed closely this Congressman's actions in the past year. First I note that some Congressman from Pennsylvania was going to smack him in the eye for calling him a liar on the floor of the House.

Second where he was called before the Speaker of the House and reprimanded for printing or having printed, some letters that could not go through the mail. Now I see he has introduced a resolution accusing some of the members of Congress of buying poker chips, etc.

It's too bad that when he fainted in the hall after his reprimand by the Speaker of the House they did not throw him in the Potomac River to revive him and let him float back to Texas. Well, anyway, with this would-be Czar and his kind that expect to crush the workers of this country through their plan, have failed. The American worker today is reading and planning ahead more so than ever before in history. The unorganized as well as the organized know there is only one solution—combine together—and it makes no difference what part of the country you go to, or how far back in the woods you may go, the humblest plow-hand today knows what the American Federation of Labor stands for and what it has done for the workers.

American workers have stood by their unions through one of the hardest winters in years, and have not given in to any of the American Liars' plans and never will. So the time is now opportune for a membership drive and it's not going to be so hard as in the years gone by to convince the unorganized workers that our plan is the only one for they already know its meaning and object. So let us get them in the folds of the A. F. of L. and then we will be able to keep such birds from Washington, D. C. as this idle-minded would-be citizen from Texas and many others that only want to live for themselves and make slaves out of the masses of workers.

Local unions, international unions and the American Federation of Labor are just what the organized workers make them, good or bad. The United States Government is just what the American voter makes it—good or indifferent. So the one that earns his bread by daily toil is in the majority and ten times over so, why let the other fellows make laws for us to slave under.

Let us get busy and discuss facts with the unorganized worker, no matter what his vocation may be and results are bound to come.

Best wishes for success to all members of our International.

Fraternally,

JACK RICHARDS,

Member at Large.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-15

CLEVELAND, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The drive launched by Local 106 for new members is meeting with some good results, but so far it is not up to expectations. It is surprising the number of excuses some of the prospects have to offer for not embracing the opportunity of affiliating with a live up-to-date labor organization of their craft.

After a very depressing winter we have a little rift in the clouds. The Rainbow Garden opened last Saturday after being remodeled and enlarged to provide a seating capacity of one thousand. This will enable a few of the boys to gather a little coin, after having pretty tough pickings for some time past.

At this time we are framing our annual wage agreement for presentation to the employers, and as the members, apparently, are going to be quite modest in their requests, it is expected that it will meet with the approval of the "bosses" and we hope for a calm sea by July 15, when present agreements expire.

An echo of the milk drivers' strike was noted the other day, in a statement in the Plain-Dealer, to the effect that the Field Service Company sued the Tellings-Bell-Vernon Milk Company for the balance of a total claim of $172,161.07, of which $85,000 had been paid. The plaintiff is a strike-breaking agency which furnished the thugs and plug-uglies for the milk company during the strike, which the "American Plan Association" horned into, and I should imagine this affair would leave a pleasant taste in the mouths of the public, who will have to eventually foot the bills when the milk company gets ready to increase the price of their products to the consumer.

Altogether the "Open Shop" movement is entitled to the tin medal.

However, the new city administration is preparing to put the "Open Shop" plan in effect in the near future and I just wonder how much the unions in this city appreciate the splendid efforts of Brother Tom Farrell to give them a fair break during the past six years of his connection with the city government.

Well I think even "Moses" would say I have written enough for one letter, so will not take up any more space or time.

Fraternally yours,
EDW. A. WHISSEMORE,
Press Secretary, Local 106.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Just at present Local 307 is getting on in a fairly good way, and in the last week or more we have made up for some of the bad weeks of Lenten season, there being a party every day during the past week at The Narragansett Hotel, as well as a few for our leading caterer, L. M. Carr Company, so the boys all get a chance to get their share of work. From the present outlook business will likely improve.

The country at large, of course, by this time, knows of the passage of a dry law in Rhode Island that will permit local police to go in and search a place every few minutes if they wish, and no warrant necessary. Senator Saugy, our staunch friend, done his utmost to defeat the bill but the others were too strong for the Warren Senator; he most likely will again grace the senate but many others will be out in the cold after November.

Our friend, ex-Governor Beekman, is in the running for U. S. Senator in opposition to the present senator, P. G. Gerry, and will be a strong candidate, as he is very popular with all classes.

Brother John F. Ford is at present trying his best to line up the girls in the labor field; he is also getting data on the labor situation in all crafts in New England, in order to provide the same to those of our local speakers he may be obliged to use when it is not possible to get outside men of reputation to come to the Providence campaign of education; but you can be assured when the start is made anyone that will use the data that Jack collects will be listened to with interest.

Very few tourists are coming this way just now, but with the heach season at hand we may see a few later. Have your book paid up and a traveling card for J. F. Ford, for he insists on his local getting things right in everything that pertains to the International laws.

The new Biltmore is getting to look like a hotel, from the street, as curtained windows show it off much better than the bare glass. Some seven floors already have the furnishings installed, but even at that it will be some job to get it going on May 15, as intended, yet this company as a rule do as they say they will. Brother Ford, our business agent, is still on the job for the boys, and we have hopes for the best.

Fraternally yours,
GEO. K. MCKENNA,
Publicity Agent, Local 307.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I am glad to be able to write some encouraging news. I have every reason to believe Local 7 is coming into its own. Indications point that way, if I am not very much mistaken. New members and reinstatements are coming in every week and the situation looks good.

Our business agent, Wm. Emerson, has canvassed a great many of the golf clubs and roadhouses surrounding Chicago during the past few weeks and the prospects are very encouraging, and we look for a prosperous summer.

We have an efficient office force. Financial Secretary, Robert Hughes is there when it comes to taking in dues and reinstatements and give a word of encouragement to those who come to do business. He understands the art of handling the members.

I must not forget our Chairman of the House Committee, Brother Alfred O. Arnstaedt, always on the alert looking out for the interest of the local and its members.

As we have emerged from a great world's war which worked hardships to a great many, now let us take courage and hope for the best and stick to the good old ship.

The rank and file seem to be taking more active interest in the meetings and their own welfare, and that is a good sign.

I was in hopes that I would be able to write and not have to report any deaths in our rank, but it seems to be impossible. Our local buried one of its members, Bro. Louis Hoffman. Brothers, be sure and have your current month's dues paid.

A word or two for our social end, the Chicago Waiters' Association Club. They held an election on December 5, 1921; a new set of officers were elected and board of directors. The president, Robert Lee Hall, is a good, loyal union man and is working for the interest of Local 7 as well as the C. W. A. and I can say the same for the majority of officers and the board of directors. The manager, Brother Chester Buckley, is a very efficient man, and has the club working on a sound financial basis and in good running order.

Yours fraternally,
ANDREW H. DUGAR,
Press Secretary, Local 7.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Six months have passed since we lost Sister Elizabeth Maloney. We miss her more each day; it seems there is no one to take her place, as she was the one woman who could go on with organization work. A memorial services was held in her honor in Masonic Temple, Sunday, February 12, 1922. A large number of people were in attendance to pay their respects to our dear departed sister.

At the present writing we are going along the best we can during these trying times and hope for a better future.

Fraternally yours,
MARGARET SMITH,
Recording Secretary, Local 484.

CHEYENNE, WYO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—After a long silence the voice of Cheyenne is again heard in the MIXER AND SERVER and we can assure the world that Local 337 is a regular local.

The membership consists of everyone connected with the culinary craft and employed in a union house, in fact employed in any cafe or restaurant in town as we have no open houses and the only one we could not sign up was one that went out of business before we got their card. We expected to have quite a bit of fighting to do to get them all on our side, but after several conferences with the leading cafe owners of Cheyenne, we perceived that it would be possible to show them the justness of our present wage scale and establish a very cordial relationship between the owners and employees.

Every time we called on a proprietor we were received with the utmost courtesy and the meeting had the appearance of a friendly chat rather than that of a strained business call.

Especially have we to thank Messrs. Plummer and Bailey, of the Capitols, No. 1 and No 2, and Mr. Brown, of Manewal's Restaurant, owners of the leading places of Cheyenne, for their readiness to meet our representatives and listen to our side of the situation as well as explain their view of the catering trade.

Business is good all around with Spring well under way. Everybody expects it to be still better as summer approaches, then Frontiers' Day celebration and by the time that the next snow flies again we ought to feel that the good old times are back to stay.

The only thorn in our side is a number of restaurants owned by Orientals and to a great extent patronized by white people who from all appearances seem to belong to some union or other, but who as yet do not realize that by patronizing a house that employs union help only and displays the house card prominently they ultimately will help their own cause.

Our local has taken up this matter and we are now devising ways and means to bring pressure to bear to keep the trade of union men in union houses.

It undoubtedly will take time to reach all these people, but perseverance has accomplished a great many things, and we will obtain what we set out to do.

We are proud to state at this time that the officers at the head of this local all put their shoulders to the wheel and with the help of every individual member to do everything in their power to make this the finest local in the middle west, we do not see how any one can stop us.

Mr. H. W. Fox, president of the State Federation of Labor, ably assisted us at our last meeting to straighten out some misunderstandings among the members and we are proud to say that, thanks to his kindly efforts, there is now nothing but harmony in our ranks.

We enclose a correct mailing list as all of our members are anxious to receive the MIXER AND SERVER and keep informed of the movements of our craft.

Fraternally yours,

WM. ABERNATHY,
Secretary, Local 337.

TOLEDO, OHIO.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—A few lines from the Maumee City local.

Everything is running smooth. Few card-carriers are now compelled to attend meetings and pay dues before the fifth of each month or pay the penalty of getting pulled off the job and pay the fine. Business Representative Wm. Arthur Booth is, very serious and law enforcement applies, the only thing necessary for discipline of some members.

Brother Herman Kline, who some time ago became a member of this local union through traveling card and who acted as chairman at our last meeting, is very active in the affairs of the organization.

Brother Frank Wise, vice-president, and Brother George Wilson will declare war on some brothers who are not interested in the organization.

Brothers Steve Kutch, Harry Papoulias and George Pentis are the title-holders of pocket billiards of the Ohio State Billiard Parlor.

Brother Wm. "Joker" Ryan is tending bar; so is Brother Wilson.

We just heard from Brother Frank Ringlenat from Los Angeles.

Attention Brother Ed. Parlee. John Tepper, "Toledo Open Shopper," has cashed in a few days ago. Shot thrice by his ex-wife, in his St. Clair Street establishment.

Watch your step, boys, at fall election we are to vote on light wine and beer in Ohio. Start your campaign early and agitate and do not forget to support your friends. We have also the support of the American Federation of Labor, and if we should win out the end of the prohibition amendment will start and hit the rocks.

With best wishes from Local 216, I am

Yours fraternally,

TONY ADAMS,
Recording Secretary, Local 216.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-18-8-18

PEORIA, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Brother Parlee has just given us a few weeks' visit during which time we visited several eating houses here which are not signed up, but on account of the slack times we were put off until later, so seeing that our new agreements come into effect the first of May we thought it best to give them until then before we tried to push things.

We owe Brother Parlee thanks for bringing us to the realization of the condition of our local with the International, and causing us to immediately square ourselves with the home office.

Brother Sullivan, we have no corresponding secretary in our local, and reading the MIXER AND SERVER every month it makes me feel like scrapping everyone because it seems as though no one takes enough interest in the local to write a few lines to the MIXER AND SERVER for publication to let our sister locals throughout the country know that Local 327 exists and according to present conditions we are doing real nicely and hope, during this year, to sign up some houses that have never had a card before.

Hoping you will allow us this small space in our publication I will try to write something of more interest later.

Fraternally yours,

ROBT. RANDALL,
President, Local 327.

SEATTLE, WASH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, it has been a long time since you have heard from us. Most of us know that things industrially have been at a very low ebb all over the country and the depression has hit Seattle and Local 239 probably more, on the average, than other places. So Seattle is a splendid city to stay away from.

Since you last heard from us through the MIXER AND SERVER, Bro. Gene Smith has been elected Secretray-Business Agent of our local. Brother Smith formerly held the same position back in the pioneer days of our local history when Brother Bob Hesketh was testing the gravy among the pots and pans of the old Royal Cafe.

The situation regarding the culinary lockout in Seattle has not changed much lately. Since the Chauncy Wright chain of restaurants, under the management of the labor hating Titus, were forced into bankruptcy, their locations on First and Third Avenues have been taken over by the Best Ever Dairy Lunches. The three Best Ever places are signed 100 per cent union.

Clare Colegrove, who runs a chain of so-called American plan, 100 per cent unfair restaurants, ran for the city council presumably with the idea of instilling some of his reactionary ideas to the public through the medium of that august body, but Clare did not get to first base in the primary election.

Since we last wrote you Bro. Jud Stevenson, one of our old time members, has passed to the great beyond. Brother Stevenson was a good loyal member and his death will be regretted by many of his union friends throughout the country.

At our last meeting the writer was elected press secretary and we will endeavor to keep you posted on important matters regarding our movement on this field of battle.

With best wishes, I remain,

Yours fraternally,

WM. F. JOHNSON.

Press Secretary, Local 239.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

DETROIT, MICH.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Having just recently been elected as press secretary of Local 705, I will therefore make my first effort at fulfilling the duties of this office by contributing a few lines on the conditions prevailing in Detroit, particularly as they concern the Waiters' Union. In spite of the great amount of pleasure the counting out of Local 705 would give to a few people and concerns in this community, the old machine is plodding right along, gaining a few new adherents now and then, continuing with the same old fighting spirit, and generally keeping our lines intact, awaiting more favorable business conditions in order to step out and improve conditions for the boys.

Bro. Louis Koenig, our newly elected financial secretary and business agent, is surely gaining the confidence of the boys in his unceasing efforts in keeping after the delinquents and in getting on the job for the opening of any new places where he might induce the management to employ union men.

One notable result of these efforts was our success in placing an entire union crew of twenty-five waiters and bus boys in the Monte Carlo Restaurant, in spite of the fact that this place was owned and controlled by Chinese. This was rather an innovation in this city as all such places heretofore had been entirely manned by Chinese waiters. In spite of all our efforts to keep our crew on the job and demonstrate the sound business policy of this concern in placing capable craftsmen in the dining room, the patronage soon fell off to almost nothing, only through inefficient management, and as a result of which all our men were locked out and replaced by Chinese waiters. They sell these waiters, as well as the other employes, stock in the concern and consequently do not have to pay them wages until such time as the place began to show a profit. We immediately put the place on the unfair list in the Detroit Federation of Labor, as well as in our own local, and picketed the place until they were granted an injunction, when we withdrew the pickets, but have not given up the fight by any means. The musicians, who have a hundred per cent local here, are withdrawing their men, which gives additional hope that we will soon make a satisfactory settlement of this fight.

With the opening of the summer season considerable activity is being shown around the local by the boys getting themselves booked in the various clubs and roadhouses around the city. Two of the largest roadhouses have already opened up with union men and we anticipate placing our men on all the rest.

With kindest regards and best wishes for members of sister locals throughout the country, I am,

Fraternally yours,

ROBERT TRUIT,

Press Secretary, Local 705.

80-8-18--7--88-8-88-13-8-15

WILMINGTON, DEL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, as it is near time to send in another letter to be published, I have a few remarks to be sent from Bartenders' Union, Local 466, of Wilmington, Delaware. Things are not as good here as we would like them to be, only a few of us working at the business, but with summer coming on and the hot weather let us hope something will soon turn up.

Some of the members are still holding down the old bar rag. Bros. Joseph Corrigan and Chris. McKenzie are working at Carey Cafe at 7 E. Seventh Street. Bother brothers are not losing any weight; they still carry the old bay window in front of them. Bros. Patrick McConnell and George Fisher are working together at Pat Cafe, 10 E. Seventh Street. If you can beat that pair you will have to go some, because that is the hang-out for the boys, all good fellows are found at that place.

Bro. Edward Can has a place out on Fifth and Jackson. Brother Can has been sick for four weeks but we hope to see him out soon. Edward is a hard fighter for the boys of Local 466 and when you need him all you have to do is to let him know and he is on the job.

Bro. Albert J. Wood is running a place at 500 Tatnall Street. He is at all meetings, ready for an argument of some kind. Albert and Brother Can are great friends, and every now and then they take a trip to New York together and for a week paint everything red.

Bros. John Henry and Michael Riley are working things together at Second and Madison Streets. Brother Enoch Potts is working at 215 E. Front Street, right at the P. R. R. station, so when any member comes to Wilmington, drop over and see him.

Our president, James Fox is in business for himself at 432 E. Fourth Street. He is another one of the old war horses. Always smiling, he is a hard worker and always is on time to hold meetings.

We are having some crowds at our meetings which put you in mind of old days.

Well, I came near leaving one brother out. That is our treasurer, Bro. William G. Platt. Old Bill, as everybody knows, does not work because he is a lady's man, all dolled up in his pepper and salt suit. He loves his five up and five down, you guess the rest.

Yours fraternally,
JOHN J. DOWELL,
Secretary, Local 466.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—Well, here we are again. It has been a long time since the rest of the country has heard anything from Local 788, but we wish to inform our fellow craft workers in the International Union that we are on the map again and here to stay. We had a rather disastrous strike last year that temporarily put us out of the running. One month ago we were down to a membership of 27, within the 60-day limit, and owed our life and all kinds of debts. But just then International Organizer Brother Ed. Parlee dropped into town and proceeded to show us some miracles about how to come back. We did not think he could do it but he did and today we have a paid-up membership of 85 and nearly $200 worth of our old debts paid off and still climbing.

We don't propose to stop until we get back in our old position of one and one-half years ago, when we had a paid-up membership of 270 members and a balance of over $500 in treasury. Brother Parlee has left. We wish him as good success in the future as he had with our local during the past month. He certainly leaves Springfield with the good will of our membership.

We will close for this time by asking our sister locals throughout the country to keep their eyes open for our next letter, and with best wishes for success to all sister locals, we beg to remain

Fraternally yours,

C. K. SMITH,
Financial Secretary, Local 788.

JOHN P. McGRATH,
President, Local 788.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

REGION OF ABSOLUTE SILENCE.

The floor of the true ocean abysses occupy about one hundred million square miles, more than a half of the whole earth's surface.

It is a weird, wonderful world. No one has even seen it, yet we have learned a great deal about it, thanks to the patience of explorers.

We know, for instance, that there is no "deep" too deep for life.

It is a world of dreadful night, save for the fitful phosphorescent lights given forth by certain of the stranger misshapen creatures who dwell there.

Eternal silence reigns there, and eternal calm, for no sound can reach the depths, and the severest storms are unfelt there. Also it is icy cold.

When a dead whale sinks to the floor of the sea, with its flesh compacted together like pressed beef, owing to the enormous pressure of the water at extreme depths, it might lie there indefinitely, whole and perfect, were it not for the fact that it is torn to pieces and devoured by the deep-sea fishes.—Times-Star.

THIS IS INTERESTING.

An incident of recent occurrence, not an exception by any means, prompts the offering of a few words relative to the method of keeping a record and debiting or crediting local unions for remittance to the general office.

When your local union was granted a charter, that charter contained the date of issue, and while you are entitled to figure the age of your union from the date of its charter, in fact can figure your membership from the date of your initiation, it does not follow that the general accounts of the International Union, nor the accounts of a local union, can be conducted with an eye on dates which permit a division of a month or months.

When the accountancy methods of our organization were established, we made the calendar month the unit. We did not divide months in order that a record should read for the month beginning May 10 and June 10. We avoided that method of accounting by making our laws cover calendar month's activity. To illustrate: Take out your membership book and you will find in Section 57 the following words: "Said fee shall also be considered as per capita for the first month." What law is there in our Book of Laws which makes provision for calendar month accounting? Read Section 60; that answers the question. If still in doubt, peruse Section 59, which offers ample evidence that calendar month is meant; else what would be the meaning of the words, "shall, on the first of each month, mail to each local a per capita blank." Peruse Paragraph "C" of Section 64. That clinches the calendar month, for it states plainly what shall be done during the quarters mentioned.

In the last fourteen words of Section 175 the calendar month is again referred to with emphasis that allows little doubt as to meaning. True, we have a fiscal year, but not a fiscal division that divides a month. Our fiscal year is indicated in Section 119, covering audits and auditors.

Our membership book is made up for calendar-month credits. Squares are used for each month. There is no overlapping permissible. In other words, a member is not paid for part of a month; he has paid all or no money for a stamp covering a definite month and space. If there are any of our locals who are trying to carry accounts which divide a month, the quicker they get away from that method the better for all concerned, and the less confusion will be caused. The International Union has never deviated from calendar-month recording. When you submit your local union report it means that said report concerns itself with a calendar month, not equal or unequal parts of two months. Not many locals make the mistake which this item endeavors to obliterate. Those which do half or quarter-month accounting are making obstacles which may prove impassable when least expected.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-18

"IS MY HAT ON STRAIGHT?"

The editor of the Ohio State Journal must have had his habits on the day he wrote the following:

"Free speech is about the only privilege we have left, and there being nothing else to do, we will state deliberately and with full knowledge that it involves being called a paid tool of the liquor interests, that, in our opinion, any man who could become intoxicated on 2.75 per cent beer is a sissy."

QUACKS

From the first time that communities organized for their welfare and protection, down to the present day and date, energetic effort has been made to curb men and women from practicing professions which they were not educated for or fitted to follow.

In all of the professions, organizations have been formed, one of the objects of which is to run the interlopers and fakers to earth, and punish them for invading a field that they had neither moral or legal right to enter, or attempt to follow the profession.

Innumerable condemnatory names are used by the various professions to designate the fakers. In the medical profession the intruder and illegal practitioner is dubbed a "Quack," and once the public is made aware of the fact, either the law or the public make short work of their careers.

In almost every line of endeavor we find Quacks, men who assume that they possess all of the required qualifications to prescribe for whatever alleged ailment the body or organization may be afflicted.

In the labor movement the Quacks are numerous; they show under many different guises, but all of them, without exception, leave behind evidence of their lack of business acumen and training.

The labor movement, in spite of earnest endeavor to overcome the work of Quacks, is a most prolific field for the activity of these phoney prescription writers. Unfortunately, the members of labor organizations are slow to puncture the bubble which these Quacks create, and it often happens that before they discover that the bubble contains dangerous stuff, the thing bursts and spreads failure in its wake. Quacks advertise themselves in about the same manner as the "get-rich-quick" promoters; they draw word pictures of such an alluring nature that the inexperienced wage earners swallow the dope before they realize what they are doing.

Occasionally the fellows who are known by a number instead of a name by the trouble-making agencies, which pay them a regular weekly salary, employ the cloak of the trade union Quack, the better to carry on their propaganda of dividing or destroying.

These "INSIDE WORKERS" use one general line of attack, which indicates, that from a very extensive experience, the method produces the quickest and most effective results, therefore there is little need to originate new methods to destroy. At the outset they devote time and energy in gaining a foothold; they know only too well, that unless they have acquired a measure of popularity there is a chance that any criticism they may offer will meet with little favor and no response. After they are sure of their ground, they divide their work into two distinct classes—one in which they circulate among the members sympathizing with the out-of-work members, and quietly intimating that the local union officers are playing favorites. The other, boldly taking the floor at meetings and making insinuating interrogations which, on the face, seem harmless, but when given the acid test, show studied effort to plant suspicion. These "INSIDE WORKERS" or "OPERATIVES," develop quickly, for they are following instructions of a shrewd director, who has had experience in undermining organizations of wage earners, of every kind and description. From covered attack of the local union officials, to that of the general officers of a national or international union, or the plan of organization of either, is but a step, and it is taken with the knowledge, that a considerable number of members "eat that stuff" about as quick as they lick up maple syrup on hot cakes.

The formulae runs about as follows: "How much money are we paying as per capita tax to the Central Labor Union? How much money are we throwing away on the State Federation of Labor? What do we get for our per capita tax to the Local Joint Executive Board? What do they do with all the money we send to the General Headquarters of the International Union?"

These trouble makers boldly stand before the members in meetings, take from an inside pocket printed or typewritten memorandum showing data, which they put over without interruption or question. Emphasis is laid on the amount of dues being paid by the members. "We are paying," says the paid trouble maker, "one dollar and seventy cents a month dues, each and every one of us. What are we getting for that money? We are sending to another State hundreds upon hundreds of dollars during the year. What do we get for it? We paid to the Central Labor Union during the last several years many, many dollars, but what did they do for us in our trouble? We have paid to the State Federation of Labor tax, month after month, and what have they done for us fellows? We are paying all of that money out, for what? Why can't we keep that money right here and use it to fight our own battles—we know how to fight, don't we? Well, then, why waste our money in the manner we have been doing?"

That is but part of what these "INSIDE WORKERS," these "OPERATIVES" ladle out to the membership, and a good portion of it lands on receptive soil, with the result, that if the union is not induced to sever its affiliations, it concludes to "paddle its own canoe," and that is the step the Quack wants the organization to take, for he knows—and his director knows—that it is the first step toward failure.

When you hear that kind of talk in your local union, wake up; for the man who makes it is one of two things—an employe of a Union Wrecking Agency, or is being influenced by such an operative, and in many cases believes himself and co-workers a much-abused and victimized bunch. Watch 'em, boys and girls, for as sure as night follows day they are in your midst waiting to strike, preparing the rollers to put under your wage earners' organization.

Stop 'em from Quacking. Stop the Quack. Take time to ask them where they came from. Take time to dig up their records and discover who they are and who is pulling the strings.

NAMED SHOES ARE FREQUENTLY MADE IN NON-UNION FACTORIES

Do Not Buy Any Shoe

no matter what its name, unless it bears a plain and readable impression of this UNION STAMP.

All shoes without the UNION STAMP are always Non-Union. Do not accept any excuse for absence of the UNION STAMP.

BOOT AND SHOE WORKERS' UNION

246 Summer Street, BOSTON, MASS.

COLLIS LOVELY, General President

CHARLES L. BAINE, General Secretary-Treasurer

Your Library

Is incomplete without
the bound volumes of
The Mixer and Server.
A limited number may be secured at Two Dollars each.

Remit to—

Secretary-Treasurer Sullivan
at Cincinnati, Ohio

Show Your Colors

—WEAR THE—
BUTTON
OF YOUR CRAFT

Order one through your Secretary.

Solid Gold Button
$1.00

All our Buttons are Union Made

JERE L. SULLIVAN

Secretary-Treasurer

COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE BLDG.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

This Label

Is always used by us in filling your orders for Local By-Laws, Tickets,
Invitations, Programs and everything in the line of Printing. We do neat, clean, accurate work. If you like to see the label on your printing, and your local printer does not supply it, send us your orders.

Roessler Bros.
PRINTERS

528 WALNUT ST., CINCINNATI, O.

THE MIXER AND SERVER

(Registered.)

(Registered.)

This is the Official Journal of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees International Alliance
and
Bartenders International League of America

Affiliated with the
AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

Volume XXXI

Number 6.

CINCINNATI, OHIO, JUNE 15, 1922

Press of
Roessler Brothers

Commercial Tribune Bldg.,
Cincinnati, Ohio

THE ACID TEST

ASK any real catering industry employer, a man who did not have a hotel, cafe or restaurant "wished on him"; a man who knows what the words "catering to a hungry, thirsty and exacting patronage" means; what, in his judgment, and after years of practical experience, is the next most valuable asset of a worker in any branch of the catering industry besides skill as a workman, and he will tell you quickly that it is a combination of cheerfulness, tolerance and politeness, parading under the name of Courtesy. A worker at the industry might be able to supply skill beyond the average, might be able to accomplish tasks which the ordinary worker would hesitate to tackle, might in fact be a wonder, from a technical point of view, yet be utterly worthless as an employee, a liability instead of an asset to any establishment without that priceless gift called courteousness.

There may have been a time when the intolerant, impolite catering industry employee managed to retain his position and obtain his weekly pay envelope without interruption. There may have been catering establishments that tolerated awkward, rude, uncouth, ill-bred, and boorishness on the part of the employees.

But the time and the establishments are gone, driven from the field by pressing creditors, and bid "good riddance" by patrons who refused to regard their support as an imposition.

If you contemplate continuing as an employee at the catering industry; if you value your future and ever expect to reach the highest points in the industry: discard every habit which in the remotest matters of incivility; purge yourself of churlish unconcernedness, toss overboard any and every practice that savors of disagreeableness, and substitute for those soul-destroying handicapping weights, cheerfulness, tolerance, politeness.

Be warned in advance that no man or woman can expect to reach the pinnacle, whose cheerfulness, tolerance and politeness, are put on as a garment for the benefit of superiors or patrons. Habitual thoughtfulness for and politeness toward your fellow workers is the first essential step toward real gentility, a practical step forward to the goal which rewards arrivals generously, bountifully.

The men and women of our organization have won the right to add to their trinity of possessions a reputation for courteousness, thus making a splendid quartette—character, citizenship, courteousness, and skill—without which real service is impossible.

OFFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE
HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES
INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE

THE MIXER & SERVER

AND BARTENDERS
INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA

Vol. XXXI

CINCINNATI, JUNE 15, 1922.

No. 6

Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor

Published Monthly by the
GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

At Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Entered at the postoffice at Cincinnati, O., as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized on July 19, 1918.

Printed by
Roessler Brothers,
Printers, Publishers

Commercial Tribune
Building,
Cincinnati, Ohio

SUBSCRIPTION

Per annum$1.50

Matter intended for publication must be at this office by the 25th of the month preceding publication.

Correspondents will please write on one side of the paper only, and address all communications to the Secretary-Treasurer.

EXTRACT FROM CONSTITUTION

Section 140. The journal shall be issued monthly under the direct supervision of the General Executive Board, who shall act in the capacity of "associate editors." And the Secretary-Treasurer shall have the power to censor all matter for publication.

Section 152. The General Executive Board shall hold the right to refuse the publishing of any article of a personal or other nature inimical to the interests of the International Union.

JERE L. SULLIVAN, Editor

Commercial Tribune Building, Cincinnati, O.

GENERAL EXECUTIVE BOARD

EDWARD FLORE.....	President
375 Oak Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
ROBERT B. HESKETH.....	First Vice-President
P. O. Box 594, Seattle, Wash.
FRANK HOFFMAN.....	Second Vice-President
239 Second Avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn.
C. W. McCURDY.....	Third Vice-President
509 Youngerman Building, Des Moines, Ia.
JOHN W. CONLEY.....	Fourth Vice-President
133 Court Street, Boston, Mass.
A. B. HASSEL.....	Fifth Vice-President
Labor Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.
A. J. COZZOLINO.....	Sixth Vice-President
401 Hawthorne Avenue, Newark, N. J.
KITTY DONNELLY.....	Seventh Vice-President
320 Superior Building, Cleveland, O.
JOHN C. STAGGENBURG.....	Eighth Vice-President
166 W. Washington Street, Chicago, Ill.
JERE L. SULLIVAN.....	General Secretary-Treasurer
Commercial Tribune Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A.

Every member of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being interested in its welfare, inasmuch as the proceeds are part of the International funds, it therefore follows that, being the "servers" of condiments, liquors, etc., their good-will would be of marked advantage to purveyors of articles of consumption, either in hotels, clubs, cafes, buffets or bars. The membership of the International Union consists of the very highest class of bartenders, cooks, waiters and hotel employees generally.

America is more than a country. America is more than a continent. America is more than a name. America is an ideal. America is the apotheosis of all that is right.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor.

Asking members to devote all of their spare time in behalf of, their local union is, to use a rather popular expression, pressing the limit. It seems that a better plan can be offered, one that should appeal to every member who desires to advance his own interest and promote his future welfare. Dividing the day into three equal portions of eight hours comes close to being the ideal. It offers eight hours for labor, eight hours for study and recreation, and the remaining eight hours for sleep.

Asking members of our unions to take one of the eight hours left to them for recreation and study, and devote that hour—sixty minutes or 420 minutes the week—to endeavors in behalf of their local union and the trade union movement generally, is not laying upon their shoulders an impossible burden, one that they could not afford to surrender for their own good.

"One may accomplish a world of good in an hour," said President Samuel Gompers in a recent address, and if you stop a moment to reflect you will find that there is a large nugget of truth in the statement.

An hour a day devoted to your local union. Why not? Your union has given you several hours a day to employ in whatever manner seems best. If your union needs your services is it exacting something which it is not entitled to? Getting right down to brass tacks, assume for the sake of illustrating the point that you had gone out of your way, devoted some of your time to secure for a fellow worker an increase in compensation of a dollar a week—fifty-two dollars a year—and that fellow worker willingly admitted that through your efforts he obtained the amount stated in excess of what he had been receiving. Supposing that you asked that worker to devote a small fraction of the total of fifty-two dollars he was receiving over and above former compensation and he refused, in fact, told you to "sell your papers and get away from there," would you feel pleased with that worker? And yet your local union has given you better compensation and decreased your hours of labor and you do not show any inclination to strengthen the organization so that it will protect you in the enjoyment of the good things mentioned. Why?

The union label still continues to be the one best bet for members of labor organizations. You do not have to go on strike nor discommode yourself in the least to be a label booster and promoter. Just keep on demanding that the products that you use bear the union label of the organized workers, and you will accomplish a great deal for yourself and the men and women of labor generally. The member who purchases nothing but union labeled garments, hats and shoes, who will not smoke or chew non-union tobacco, who persists in patronizing only such establishments as employ union labor but who seldom attends a meeting of his organization, is in fact and practice, a better unionist than the member who is never absent, but whose union-earned money is spent with non-union concerns, and whose union membership book is held in a non-union suit of clothes, topped by a hat which was fabricated by unorganized workers under conditions which real men would refuse to tolerate.

Get the label-boosting habit, it will be beneficial to yourself and the organized workers of the country.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

BETWEEN OURSELVES.

"We missed your usual monthly letter this month, Mr. Secretary, and were wondering if the incidents which have occurred in our town have been repeated elsewhere, prompting you to 'lay off for a time.' We had a secretary who received your letters; never read them to the members at the meetings; simply filed them away after perusing them, and when asked why he did not offer them to the members at meetings said that they were too damned long-winded; and anyway, the members seldom paid any attention to letters when read at the meetings. We would never have known anything about the series of letters which came from headquarters had it not been for an auditing committee, who, while searching for a bill that had been paid by the secretary, found several of your monthly communications, not one of which had been read to the members of our union.

"We elected another secretary, who did read these letters to us, and he also read them to his employer; in fact, permitted his employer to take copies, which copies we have since learned were mimeographed and sent out to members of a catering industry employers' organization. As evidence of that fact, you will find enclosed mimeographed copy of your general letter of November 10, 1920, which came to me from a friend in another city. Need I add that the stool-pigeon, for that is what he was, made his get-away before we got to him, and now we are comparing notes which compel the conclusion that this foxy individual was a sure-enough 'plant' in our midst. We found that he was known by at least three different names, and the chances are he has taken another one by this time."

Before we received the letter from which the foregoing is quoted we had been advised by one of our local union officers that every one of the general letters posted on the bulletin board of their local union headquarters mysteriously disappeared. Possibly the fact that one of our houses printed the following announcement may give one an idea of where the letters finally landed:

NOTICE TO EMPLOYEES.

"Success has never been coaxed into existence by a bunch of Buckpassers; and what's more, it never will arrive by that route.

"What is a Buckpasser? That is a simple question, ain't it? If you are a Buckpasser, you won't last long here."

If your memory is good, you will recall that, in the general letter of May 10, 1921, right down at the bottom of the first page, will be found the notice as printed in the previous paragraph, with the exception of the final sentence. Is that laying the ghost, or barking up the wrong tree?

Add to the foregoing the information, in effect, that approximately few of our members either heard or had the privilege of reading the general letters, prompts us to print those which we feel should be in the hands of every member of the organization. We shall start with the one which, according to information indicated previously, has been reproduced and sent to many employers; it is dated November 10, 1920.

Dear Sir and Brother—During a recent strike the union involved furnished us with newspaper clippings supposedly covering the strike and the attitude of the employers. In one of the clippings submitted to us we noted where one of the members of the union used as an argument that the employers were making money; that for instance "a bushel of potatoes that cost $2.25 sells for $30." On the face of it that statement might convince, but "one bullet never won a war" nor will one item from a bill of fare upon which excess profits has been gleaned convince the public of the justness of your cause. Supposing that your union became involved in lock-out or strike tomorrow, what would you have to offer to the public to convince said public that your demands for increased compensation or reduction of hours is worthy of consideration. Telling them that they have been gouged by the catering industry employers may carry weight, but unless you have additional facts the public can't see your side of the case with a magnifying glass, and as a consequence your battle must be won by your efforts and without aid or sympathy of the public. Don't get the idea too strongly imbedded in your mind that the public don't give a hoot for you or your case, for you may be mistaken. Public opinion is the big thing in this country; it is a greater force than any we have knowledge of, for once it becomes active in your behalf nothing can resist it. The public is sick and sore on the animal we call the profiteer, but if the public can't put their combined finger on that individual, he slips by unmolested and continues to pick off more and more of the public's money. Are you in a position to go to the public and inform it that cooks prepare and serve edibles that cost $100 for which the public is required to pay $500? Are you in a position to advise the public that the average sales of your members per eight or ten-hour day is $50, $75, or $100? That the average check runs 75 cents to one dollar and that the total sales of this, that or some other house for one, two, three or four weeks was so and so much money? Are you prepared to show the public that the eggs for which they paid 15 cents each were sold on the market for 50 cents a dozen; that the small steak weighed half a pound before it was cooked and cost the house 16 cents, whereas the patron planked down 50 cents for the same bit of meat? Picking out one or two items of a bill containing a hundred more or less standard dishes may look convincing to you, but not to the patrons or the public whose sympathy you seek to secure.

Dishes infrequently called for, something that must be carried in stock for which a stiff price must be charged in order to make both ends meet, are poor items to pick out and offer as examples of profiteering.

Look up the standard dishes, the ones called for with unceasing regularity; show the cost as the housewife would buy it; show how many portions each pound will make, and then tell the public how much in excess of reasonable profits they are paying. That is the kind of argument that makes the bosses look up and take notice. It is the kind of information they don't want the public to secure, and will probably ask for settlement if they recognize the fact that you intend to "spill the beans."

Many years ago the writer undertook to secure a wage scale for a local union of which he was a member. At the outset he promised the members that if they would collect the information which he wanted, there was little doubt but what better wages could be secured. What kind of information did we ask for? First of all, we required the cooks in that house to keep memorandum of the things brought into the kitchen, the market price of them, and the number of portions to the pound. In the dining-room each waiter kept a memorandum showing the number of persons served during each meal, as well as the amount each check called for; and at the end of the day their total sales. That information was obtained for two weeks; then a week was allowed to pass and the gleaning of information carried on for another two weeks.

We had a mass of information to tabulate; but, with the aid of one of our members who was fairly fast at calculations, the task was finished in a few weeks, devoting a few hours each evening to the job. We made a guess at the probable cost of fitting up the establishment. We also guessed the amount of rent, as well as every item of overhead expense. We allowed 12 per cent on the investment, that being in those days regarded as being about the limit of reasonableness. And when we finished our task we took the result, along with our wage scale and agreement, to meet the man whom we expected to have trouble with. While treating us with a fair amount of courtesy, he asserted, with emphatic frequency, that he "could not" stand an increase of wages—we were asking one dollar a week raise—nor did he propose to give our request serious consideration.

My colleagues reached for their hats and were ready to depart. Not so with yours truly. Digging into an inside pocket we laid before the employer "copy" for a proposed statement to the public. In that statement we set forth, in simple language, that the figures we had collected were positively genuine; that the profits being made were admittedly approximate. But even if they were 50 per cent out of the way, the wages paid for the services rendered were as close to stealing service for nothing as to be entitled to that name. The employer naturally showed anger. He did not mince words in telling us that it was none of his employees' damned business how much his stuff cost, nor how much he charged for it; he owned the place and, by the great Jehova, he was going to run it to suit himself.

After he had all the venom off his chest, the question was put to him: "Will you pay the wages asked, or shall we call a strike" and then tell the public our story as outlined in that proposed circular? Again he exploded, and we made up our minds to get out and away from the tempest. But we had failed to size our man correctly. We did not reach the door to the outside before he asked us to let him see what it was that we wanted. He agreed to pay the wages. He probably thought that he would get rid of the crew, put in another, and pull the new men down to the old wage scale. It took him about four weeks to discover his mistake, and after that he played fair, because he feared printers' ink and the story it could relate.

Our members waste time and energy approaching employers unarmed with unquestioned facts. Wage scale committees can not possibly deal fairly with the wage question unless they have the kind of information that their men and women can collect and file at headquarters of the local union.

Employers seldom hesitate to make the statement that they can not afford to pay better wages. In instances they may be justified; but too often they are simply using the old bromide of poor returns on investment. When we are armed with facts, we can divulge enough to make them sit up and do a solemn thinking stunt—the kind which usually converts.

Solid, substantial facts are convincing material. They can be collected, and without any trouble or noise. No waiter is so all-fired busy that he is unable to keep track of the number of people served during each meal. It takes but a moment to make a pencil memorandum of your sales, and you can do that without attracting attention or advertising what you are doing to the world. Asking officers or committees to meet the employers to represent you, yet furnishing them with nothing in the form of unquestioned facts, is equivalent to asking men to go into battle with fish-horns to scare the enemy; it may work, and then again it may not—most likely not.

Of course, it takes time to peruse such a lengthy letter, but don't overlook the fact that it took a longer time to construct it—to write it so that you and the members of your local union might take time by the forelock and make the required preparations for expected differences with their employers. Old bills of prices used before the war, some that were "pumped up" during the war, and others issued and used since the signing of the armistice, are cracking fine bits of evidence to have handy for reference.

If you want the market quotations for commodities, more than likely the daily papers in your city carry the market reports. From them you will be able to find the approximate prices for the things your members prepare to sell to the public. Your committee does not have to be expert accountants. There is no mystery in addition, multiplication or subtraction, and most of our boys and girls can make the distance when it comes to figuring out the cost and profit of articles used. This letter does not pretend to cover the subject in its entirety. Just a few necessary suggestions. The rest is up to the members and their chosen leaders. Know the facts; don't be forced to guess your way through. That's the dope, and it can be made to win.

Collected facts need not be made public. The union has any number of records which are held confidential from outsiders; and the same can be made to apply to collected facts and figures relative to sales and approximate profits of employers of our kind of labor. Employers may resent what they may be pleased to call espionage of their business, but you won't break any laws by making memorandum of what you are selling and how much you get for salesmanship. If this letter seems too long for the membership to soak up at one sitting, there is nothing to prevent its being reread as often as the members think necessary. We are not looking for any bouquets. We are trying to earn the money we are paid for holding down this job, and we are firmly convinced that what is set forth in this rather lengthy letter is worthy of consideration, as well as suggested action. We do not recommend trouble. On the contrary, we want to avoid it. And with unquestioned facts to use the Boss will wake up and conclude that we know what we want and what we are talking about.

With greetings to all, I am

Yours fraternally,

JERE L. SULLIVAN,
Secretary-Treasurer.

We have concluded that, for the time being, we shall discontinue sending monthly letters to our local unions. Perhaps the membership may find time to peruse some of the letters "which have been submitted but not read."

In the letter herewith reproduced there is sufficient food for several hours' reflection and consideration. The writer is convinced that there is no stronger ammunition than knowledge—trade facts and figures with which to meet selfishness and greed.

JERE L. SULLIVAN.

80-6-18-7-83-6-83-13-8-15

THIS PRIMARY ELECTION—WHAT IT IS ALL ABOUT.

Father Didn't Know or Care, So Mother Herself Found Out.

"Ma, I see in the papers that there is going to be a primary election soon. What kind of an election is that?" This question was asked by fifteen-year-old Tom.

"I don't know, son. I've only voted once, and did not notice whether it was a primary election or some other kind of an election. Father ought to know. He's been voting for years."

"I'm no politician," father said. "I'm a business man. I have all I can do to attend to my business without bothering about the different kinds of elections."

"Well, you vote at all elections, don't you?" asked ma.

"Of course not; I haven't time to vote at every election. I only vote for President, governor, mayor and judges."

"Well, are you going to vote for all of them at this primary election?"

"No; they don't elect a President at a primary election. And, let me see, it wasn't so long ago that they elected a mayor, so I hardly think they are going to vote for one at this primary election. Anyhow, I'm not going to worry about it. The newspapers will tell what the election is about when the time comes."

"Well, I want to know now," said ma, "and I am going to find out." So she called up the mayor's office and was referred to the Board of Elections, and in a very short time she knew all about the coming primary election from Secretary Charles H. Woellner. And this is what she found out:

The word "primary" means "first," in that a primary election is the first or preliminary election, at which each political party "nominates" the candidates of the party for the general election to be held in November. The primary election in Ohio is held on the second Tuesday in August, which this year is August 8. The coming primary is for the purpose of selecting candidates for members of the House of Representatives, called congressmen; for a United States senator and for State and county offices. The only persons who will be actually elected as officials and not merely as candidates in the primary will be Republican and Democratic county and State Central committeemen. Each party has its own set of candidates for these places. The primary election is held in each of the eighty-eight counties of Ohio.

The State offices for which candidates are to be nominated at the election are: Governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of State, treasurer of State, attorney general, two justices of the Supreme Court, members of the State Senate, of whom three are to be chosen in Hamilton County, and members of the State House of Representatives, of whom eight are to be chosen in Hamilton County. The voters in the Cincinnati Appellate District will also nominate candidates for one place on the Court of Appeals.

County offices for which candidates are to be nominated are: Sheriff, one county commissioner, clerk of courts, county treasurer, county recorder, county surveyor, county prosecuting attorney and county coroner.

When a man or woman enters the polling place to vote at the primary the election officers ask whether the voter desires a Republican or Democratic ticket. Only Republicans are permitted to vote the Republican ticket, and only Democrats may vote the ticket of that party at a primary. The candidate receiving the highest vote becomes the nominee of his party for that office.

Any elector can file a nominating petition with the Board of Elections. This petition must be certified to by five other electors, and must be filed not later than sixty days before the primary election. The last day for filing petitions for the coming primary will be June 9, and the Board of Elections will remain open until midnight on that date to receive such petitions.

The controlling committee of a party is known as the "Central Committee." The County Central Committee is composed of one member from each city ward and one member from each township in the county. In Hamilton County there are 47 members of the Central Committee, composed of 26 from the 26 wards of Cincinnati, 4 each from Norwood and St. Bernard, and 13 from the townships. Each one is considered the party leader in his ward or township, and each has lieutenants, known as "precinct executives." The Central committeeman names the precinct executives. The man elected chairman of the Central Committee is usually the political leader of his party in the county, but not necessarily so. Sometimes the real political leader keeps himself in the background. The Central Committee is the real political power in the city and county, as its indorsements practically determine not only who will be the party nominees for public office, but also most of the appointees in city, county, State and Federal jobs. The State Central Committee is the controlling committee of the party for the State. It consists of one member from each of the twenty-one Congressional Districts of Ohio. Two State committeemen are to be elected from Hamilton County, one from the First and one from the Second Congressional Districts. The County Central Committee will practically determine who they will be. Of the twenty-one candidates for Congress to be nominated by each party at the primary elections, two will be from this county, one from the First and one from the Second District.—ISAAC PICHEL in Times-Star.

Section 141. All official announcements printed on the Official Pages of the Mixer and Server shall be read at the first meeting after the journal has been received by the Secretary, and a copy posted at the local union headquarters for the benefit of all those who may have been absent from meetings.

HOW THEY STAND.

California	31
Texas	29
New York	28
Illinois	23
Pennsylvania	23
Washington	19
Ohio	16
Massachusetts	15
New Jersey	14
Missouri	12
Canada	11
Oregon	11
Oklahoma	10
Wyoming	9
Wisconsin	9
Minnesota	8
Connecticut	8
Montana	7
Colorado	7
Kentucky	6
Indiana	5
Arizona	5
Idaho	4
Louisiana	4
Tennessee	4
Michigan	4
Utah	3
Iowa	3
Maryland	3
West Virginia	3
Nebraska	3
Kansas	3
North Dakota	3
Arkansas	2
Rhode Island	2
New Hampshire	2
New Mexico	2
District of Columbia	1
Virginia	1
South Carolina	1
Nevada	1
Maine	1
Alabama	1
Canal Zone	1
Delaware	1

DEATHS DURING MAY, 1922.

Local 1:—M. Roth, Lcp. Fuld, B. Taustein.
 Local 14:—Lee Huie.
 Local 18:—Chas. Vallancourt, John Kennedy.
 Local 30:—Ike Bernstein, John A. Cavanaugh, H. Griffin, Louis Kalazich.
 Local 115:—Corney William.
 Local 131:—Gilbert Whitehead.
 Local 181:—John B. Knoebel.
 Local 239:—R. W. Stevenson.
 Local 279:—Chas. Kessler.
 Local 286:—O. O. Gooch.
 Local 468:—J. H. Folsom.
 Local 487:—William R. Cody, Robt. Fairbanks.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

LOST MEMBERSHIP BOOKS FOR MAY, 1922.

Local 72—Harry Binder.
 Local 392—Calvin Richardson.
 Local 402—Agnes Brown, Mack McClester, Henry Pryer, I. A. Randolph.
 Local 577—J. E. O'Brien.
 Local 865—William Edward Steele, Fred Ferguson.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

CHARTERS ISSUED DURING MAY, 1922.

165 M, Pioneer, Tex.....Joe French
 265 M, Bristow, Okla... John Tamm, O. H. Lauck
 505 M, Columbus, OhioRobt. Lyons
 522 M, Chattanooga, Tenn.....R. E. Croskey
 593 M, Minneapolis, Minn.Leslie Sinton
 634 M, Minneapolis, Minn.....Leslie Sinton

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

There is a letter at the General Office for George M. Bruce, bearing postmark of Rock Island, Illinois. Any one knowing present address of George M. Bruce please advise, and letter will be forwarded.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

INFORMATION WANTED.

Wanted present address of Harry C. Watson, last heard of in the city of St. Louis. He works as cook and waiter. Height, about 5 feet 6 inches, blond hair, large blue eyes. Any information members may have will be appreciated by Mrs. H. C. Watson, 300 Court Street, Marion, Illinois.

A LETTER TO ORGANIZED LABOR

From National Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee.

To All Organized Labor, Greetings:

The primaries this year will largely determine whether misrule shall hold sway for another two years or more in Congress and state legislatures or whether the people will be represented by those who believe in progress and even-handed justice.

All hope of remedial legislation of a really constructive nature by the present Congress was lost months ago. Subsidies for railroads and ship owners, relieving the well-to-do from taxation by placing the burden through a Sales Tax on those least able to bear it, remission of fines for food profiteers, adding to the number of judges in order to make the jobs more worth while and the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes more easy, have constituted the ruling passion of the reactionaries in Congress. At the same time reactionaries just as active have held the reins in state legislatures, some of which have attempted to pass legislation as vicious as that in which Congress has been interested.

It is therefore most imperative that the wage earners of our country awaken to the serious dangers ahead. It will require the greatest unity of action and determination to defeat those who, because of their lack of regard for the interests of the people, will have all the antagonistic, reactionary forces united in their support.

Upon the shoulders of those who control legislation must rest responsibility for the present unemployment. Through no fault of their own more than 5,000,000 wage earners are idle. They are all willing and anxious to work but they can not find work. The same influences that are striving to break down the standards of Labor have also chosen as victims the farmers of our country. Not only are the wage earners crying for relief but the farmers have their backs to the wall and are just as earnestly and insistently demanding of Congress to do something to save them from bankruptcy.

The American Federation of Labor Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee therefore appeals to all organized labor and to all justice loving citizens without regard to political party affiliations to unite to defeat those who have proved false to the people, and to support those who have proved by their public acts that they will work and vote for no legislation that will injure the many in order to benefit the privileged few.

The injunction abuse with its attending contempt proceedings has become so flagrant that even a judge here and there has called attention to attending dangers. Members of the United States Senate have declared, in open session, that federal courts (except the U. S. Supreme Court) should be abolished as they are not only duplicating the work of the state courts, but are definitely recognized as "rich men's courts." Hon. William H. Taft, now Chief Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, has declared there is "no more important question than the improvement of the administration of justice," and to accomplish that end he advised:

"We must make it so the poor man will have as nearly as possible an equal opportunity in litigating as the rich man, and under the present conditions, ashamed as we may be of it, this is not a fact."

The president of the Carnegie Foundation in the introduction to a report on "Justice and the Poor," said:

"The very existence of free government depends upon making the machinery of justice so effective that the citizens of a democracy shall believe in its impartiality and fairness."

The chief justice of the municipal courts of Chicago also adds this warning:

"When litigation is too costly the result for most persons is a denial of justice. Such denial or partial denial of justice engenders social and commercial friction. The sense of helplessness this causes incites citizens to take the law into their own hands. It causes crimes of violence. It saps patriotism and destroys civic pride. It arouses jealousy and breeds contempt for law and government."

These warnings, however, failed to appeal to a West Virginia Federal Judge. He granted an injunction which forbade not only the lawful right of the workers to organize but evicted several thousand boycotted and nearly destitute men, women and children from their homes. Judges in the fifteenth century did not assume more arbitrary power.

Then there is the persistent demand of unfair employers that involuntary servitude should be once more established in the United States. This is to be brought about by compulsory labor laws, which would compel men and women in industry to work for whatever their employers are willing they shall have or be imprisoned. Every effort has been made to prohibit the normal activities of Labor. Such laws would make wage earners the wards of their employers, and they would no longer be free men and free women.

The people are permitted no voice on the most important issues that come before Congress and the state legislatures. This was most flagrantly demonstrated in the passage of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act. Believing that this should be called to the attention of the people, the Executive Council issued a statement on February 25, 1922, as follows:

TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE:

The American Federation of Labor, as the spokesman of the unorganized as well as the organized toilers, having in mind the interest and the welfare of our people, decided by unanimous vote in its convention held in Denver, in June, 1921, that the Volstead Enforcement Act must be modified so as to promote the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines.

Before this decision was reached the Executive Council of the A. F. of L. had caused to be made an exhaustive investigation of the effects of the Volstead Act. It was shown by this investigation that there had been:

1. A general disregard of the law among all classes of people including those who made the law.
2. Creation of thousands of moonshiners among both country and city dwellers.
3. The creation of an army of bootleggers.
4. An amazing increase in the traffic in poisons and deadly concoctions and drugs.
5. An increased rate of insanity, blindness and crime among the users of these concoctions and drugs.
6. Increase in unemployment due to loss of employment by workers in forty-five industries directly or indirectly connected with the manufacture of liquors.

7. Increase in taxes to city, state and national governments amounting to approximately one thousand million dollars per year.

Having in mind these results of the extreme interpretation of the prohibition amendment contained in the Volstead Act, as well as the enormous expense of the attempt to enforce that unenforceable legislation, it is our conclusion that the act is an improper interpretation of the prohibition amendment, that it is a social and a moral failure, and that it is a dangerous breeder of discontent and of contempt for all law.

Something of the economic effect of the Volstead Law may be seen by considering the fact that in 1918, according to government statistics, $110,000,000 worth of farm products were consumed by breweries, and that the transportation of these products to the manufacturer and thence to the consumer necessitated the use of 133,666 railroad cars. In addition to this, breweries in operation in 1918 consumed 50,000 carloads of coal. It must be obvious that the total economic effect of the destruction of this industry is tremendous.

The American Federation of Labor always has been the advocate of law and order and always has endeavored to create conditions which would make possible the highest type of citizenship.

We do not protest against the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which now is a part of the fundamental law of the land. We do not protest against the principle established by the Eighteenth Amendment. It is our contention that the Eighteenth Amendment under a reasonable and proper legislative interpretation would be beneficial to our country and would have the support of the great majority of our people.

The Eighteenth Amendment, however, under the present drastic and unreasonable legislative interpretation has a destructive and deteriorating effect and influence in every direction.

We seek no violation of the Eighteenth Amendment but on the contrary, we declare for a reasonable interpretation of that amendment in order that the law may be enforceable and enforced, and in order that the people of our country may not suffer from an unjust and fanatical interpretation of the Constitution.

We urge, therefore, that all citizens, in every walk of life demand from their representatives and senators in Washington immediate relief from the unwarranted restriction contained in the Volstead Act; and we likewise suggest to the citizenship of our country the wisdom and advisability of bearing in mind the attitude toward this issue of office-holders and aspirants to office in coming elections in order that there may be restored to the people the lawful use of wholesome beer and light wines, which, under the provisions of the Eighteenth Amendment, can and should be rightfully declared as non-intoxicating beverages.

It is to the issues hereinabove presented that the people of our country must direct their activities. If they do not replace the present members of Congress and the state legislatures who have brought on these conditions they will have another two years of struggle and sacrifice.

Therefore, the American Federation of Labor Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee directs the attention of the wage earners and their sympathizers to two principles that should be followed in the campaign. These are:

No freedom-loving citizen should vote for a candidate who will not pledge himself to oppose any form of compulsory labor law.

No justice-loving citizen should vote for a candidate for any office who will not pledge himself to oppose injunctions and contempt proceedings as a substitute for trial by jury.

Let your slogans be:

No judge-made laws.

Abolish the injunction abuse.

Make justice blind in fact as well as in theory.

Amendments to the Constitution of the United States should guarantee rights, not take them away.

No compulsory labor laws.

No Sales Tax.

No wage earners or farmers to be enslaved.

No subsidies for the privileged few.

No remission of fines to food profiteers.

These issues, upon all of which depend the future of our republic, should be discussed with the organizations of farmers.

Whatever injures labor injures the farmer.

Whatever benefits labor benefits the farmers.

Whatever is the interest of labor and the farmer is for the best interest of all the people except the privileged few. We urge you to be up and doing. The democracy of our republic must be maintained by labor and the farmers and all others who believe in good government.

By authority and direction of Executive Council of American Federation of Labor.

SAM'L GOMPERS.

FRANK MORRISON.

JAS. O'CONNELL.

Executive Committee,

National Non-Partisan Political Campaign Committee.

80-8-18-7.-83-8-83-13-8-15

TO OUR CAPTAIN.

(Adrian C. Anson.)

They have waited—waited yonder for their Captain of the past,

And the time was long in passing—but the Captain comes at last—

He has joined his old companions, mighty victors in the fray,

Men who stood beside their victor in an old and glorious day!

Clarkson, king of the pitchers; Williamson, loved of the fan.

Flint, McCormick and Corcoran, "the smart little bit of a man"—

Burns and Goldsmith and Pettit—ah, but the crowds loved them well—

Sullivan, Darling and Luby—and the greatest of idols, King Kel!

Such were the men he commanded, kings in the grand game of ball—

He was the first and the oldest—yet he outlasted them all!

He coped with Rusie and Radbourne, he met the swift shots of Keefe—

All of them tested his mettle—all of them yielded in grief—

His was a name filled with magic—his was a wonderful prime—

Warrior and masterful leader, lord of a glorious time!

Honest and loyal and kindly—a big man, tender and true—

Such was the towering commander—such was The Captain we knew!

—W. A. Phelan in Cincinnati Times-Star, April 15, 1922.

REPORT OF THE INTERNATIONAL AUDITING BOARDApril 30, 1922*HOTEL AND RESTAURANT EMPLOYEES' INTERNATIONAL ALLIANCE AND BARTENDERS' INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF AMERICA.

CINCINNATI, O., May 19, 1922.

To the Officers and Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America:

FELLOW MEMBERS—In accordance with Section 119 of the International laws of our organization, we have, with a certified public accountant representing the bonding company, made an examination of the receipts and disbursements of the secretary-treasurer for the six months ended April 30, 1922.

Receipts from locals have been checked in detail and we find same regularly deposited and properly accounted for.

All disbursements have been carefully examined by us, said disbursements being represented by cancelled checks and receipts on file.

Bank accounts were reconciled and found correct.

Bonds and certificates were examined, and we find same duly deposited in safe deposit box of the secretary-treasurer.

The statement as submitted, in our opinion, correctly shows the receipts and disbursements for the six months ended April 30, 1922.

We find the affairs of our International Union conducted in a most thorough and efficient manner, and the system of accounting and records well kept.

S. P. OPLINGER, Local 14, Denver, Colo.

R. M. FARRIS, Local 152, Minneapolis, Minn.

H. B. KEITH, Local 332, East St. Louis, Ill.

STATE OF OHIO, HAMILTON COUNTY, ss.

Be it remembered that on the nineteenth day of May, nineteen hundred and twenty-two (1922), before me, a notary public in and for said county and State, appeared the persons who signed the foregoing document, and severally made oath that their names are S. P. Oplinger, R. M. Farris, H. B. Keith, and that the statements of said document are true, as they verily believe.

Sworn to before me and subscribed in my presence.

CHARLES J. FITZGERALD, Notary Public, Hamilton County, Ohio.

CINCINNATI, O., May 19, 1922.

To the Officers and Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America:

GENTLEMEN—Complying with Section 119 of your Constitution, examination has been made of the books, records and accounts of your secretary-treasurer, in conjunction with your Auditing Committee, for six months ended April 30, 1922, and we submit herewith Statements of Receipts and Disbursements, Cash Balance and Reconciliation of Bank Accounts, all of which have been duly verified.

Respectfully submitted,

Certified Public Accountant.

STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS

SIX MONTHS ENDED APRIL 30, 1922

RECEIPTS		DISBURSEMENTS
Per capita tax	$50,836.65	Death benefits	$ 6,900.00
Initiation	1,381.45	Defense	9,652.93
Reinstatements	1,803.80	Bulletins	13,910.00
Initiations and reinstatements allotted to General Fund	7,413.06	Organizers' salaries and expenses	15,068.04
Miscellaneous	2,557.20	Supplies	3,483.61
Supplies	3,850.20	Charters and outfits	69.12
Charters and outfits	180.00	Buttons	547.36
Buttons	611.90	Edward Flore, President, salary	2,100.00
Bulletins	723.38	Edward Flore, President, expenses	553.27
Interest on deposits	647.69	Jere Sullivan, Secretary, salary	2,400.00
Interest on bonds	2,205.67	Office salaries	1,928.00
Protested checks	811.57	Office rent	1,072.05
		Office supplies and expenses	43.73
		Postage, etc.	545.47
		Expressage and telegrams	306.19
		Tax, American Federation of Labor ..	2,684.33
		Tax, Union Label Trade Department ..	600.00
		Auditing books and reports	407.00
		Insurance	27.58
		Protested checks	781.37
		Janitor, wages	90.00
		Miscellaneous	187.50
Total Receipts	$73,022.57	Total Disbursements	$63,357.55
Cash Balance October 31, 1921	35,210.94	Cash Balance April 30, 1922	44,875.96
Total	$108,233.51	Total	$108,233.51

MONTHLY STATEMENT OF RECEIPTS AND DISBURSEMENTS

SIX MONTHS ENDED APRIL 30, 1922

RECEIPTS		DISBURSEMENTS
November	$11,527.37	November	$10,838.78
December	14,591.49	December	12,655.65
January	11,921.77	January	10,827.85
February	10,793.48	February	10,962.54
March	12,611.83	March	9,694.97
April	11,576.63	April	8,377.76
Total	$73,022.57	Total	$63,357.55
Cash Balance October 31, 1921	35,210.94	Cash Balance April 30, 1922	44,875.96
	$108,233.51		$108,233.51

STATEMENT OF ASSETS AND CONDITION OF FUNDS

APRIL 30, 1922

General Fund	$ 4,130.39	Represented by
Death Fund	139,812.67	Cash in bank	$44,813.90
Defense Fund	163.87	Cash in office	62.06
Convention Fund	1,204.10	Liberty Loan Bonds (par value, $96,150)	95,460.07
		Canadian Bonds and Certificates (par value, $5,161.50)	4,975.00
Total	$145,311.03	Total	$145,311.03

STATEMENT OF CASH AND RECONCILIATION OF BANK ACCOUNTS

APRIL 30, 1922

Balance as per statement, Fifth-Third National Bank, open account	$10,026.02
Less—Outstanding checks	1,981.23—	$8,044.79
Balance, Fifth-Third National Bank, Surplus Account.....		3,513.09
“ Fifth-Third National Bank, on deposit		10,287.23
“ Pearl Market Bank, Cincinnati.....		20,475.70
“ Royal Bank of Canada.....		2,493.09
Total Cash in Bank.....		$44,813.90
Cash in office.....		62.06
Total Cash		$44,875.96

INTERNATIONAL AUDITORS.

GUY H. KENNEDY
Certified Public Accountant

HUNTER B. KEITH
Local 332, East St. Louis, Ill.

S. P. OPLINGER
Local 14, Denver, Colo.

R. M. FARRIS
Local 152, Minneapolis, Minn.

THREE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

“No freedom-loving citizen should vote for any candidate who will not pledge himself to oppose any form of compulsory labor law.

“No justice-loving citizen should vote for a candidate for any office who will not pledge himself to oppose injunctions and contempt proceedings as a substitute for trial by jury.

“No freedom-loving citizen should vote for any candidate who will not pledge himself to vote for legislation abolishing child labor.”

PRESIDENT'S PAGE

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—For months we have been painting the picture of optimism and urging organization of our boys and girls. The results of those efforts have not been as successful as we would like to have had them; the response to our appeal was not as enthusiastic as we anticipated; the vigor and spirit necessary did not enter into the campaign and there seemed to be a lack of something that spelled success. However, if we did not move forward, we at least, to some degree, have succeeded in stopping the backward slide and the wheel of progress is now slowly turning itself in the opposite direction; its movement in that direction is distinct to be continuous and steady from now on and the application of the right kind of energy will set it going at a speed that will marvel us and with it will come a new day filled with inspiration and a determination which will force our organizations out of the rut that they were traveling in and put them on the road that will carry them back to their former status numerically, and the momentum will be so forceful that it will carry our International union to the goal that we sought before the eighteenth federal amendment or the depression in business as an aftermath of the war, disfigured this beautiful country of ours.

Stop crowding! There is plenty of room for all of us to get in our work. If we all do a little and co-operate with each other, none need be crowded out and all will share in the great accomplishments that will follow.

Can we take proprietors into our union? Certainly you can. A proprietor may be elected to passive membership. He must file a regular application (marked passive member) and it must go through the same channels as an application for active membership, investigated and balloted on, and if it receives a majority vote of the members present at the meeting the applicant becomes a passive member without any further ceremonies. There is no initiation or obligation for an employer to assume after being accepted into passive membership; his obligation is contained and assumed when he signs the application for membership. In that he agrees, if elected, to conform to the rules, abide by the regulations, and extend sympathy, aid and relief to the needy, distressed or persecuted members of the union, as in his ability lies. This obligation, however, does not entitle him to attend the meetings of the local, or to a voice or vote in its affairs. His status of membership differs from that of a passive member who assumed the oath and obligation of membership when assuming active membership in the local, in that if he should cease to be an employer and desires to assume active membership, that he would have to then assume the regular oath of membership as provided by the ritual of the International Union.

Why did our convention in Cleveland decide in making proprietors eligible to passive membership? It was done for the purpose of caring for the men and women who operate small establishments where no help is employed; or, for those who form a partnership or corporation for the purpose of conducting a hotel, restaurant or beverage business and who do all their own work. The labor movement in some cities has held that if an employer or employers do their own work and the local union of their trade denies them admission to membership, that an unfairness can not be issued against their establishment. In order to meet that condition it became necessary to provide a way by which such men and women could apply for and secure limited membership which would entitle them to the recognition of our fellow trade unionist, as union men and women, and so long as their establishments are conducted in a manner that would not detract from the standards set by our international and local union, they could, upon the signing of an agreement that accompanies our labels, secure a house card.

Organization is the essential thing. Not only the organization of the hotel and higher type of restaurant employes, but organization of all types of hotel, restaurant, beverage and catering employes, whether employed on land or sea, on the railroads or in the more modern method of travel—the air—if they are a part of the catering industry, we are concerned about organizing them, and if they can meet the standards set for membership by our International Union, then they should be urged to become a part of our institution. Men and women of labor can not always look to the higher type of catering establishments for their food; they must of necessity, sometimes, look to the more moderate price establishments, and they have a moral right to insist that they be catered to in those establishments by men or women who carry a union card of our International Union. Therefore, we must give careful thought and study to the organizing of the workers in the small and moderate price houses. We should display just as much interest and enthusiasm in securing the membership of the employes in those establishments as we would in seeking the membership of those of the other type of establishments. We can not look with contempt upon the little fellow; he may only be working in a lunch room today, but tomorrow may find him an unorganized competitor for your job. Get him in the early stages of his activities in the industry and make a trade unionist out of him; educate him and establish within him a character and understanding, so that you need never fear that he will become an unfair competitor for your position. They have ambitions and desires, and if they are cultivated in the right direction, they make splendid and enthusiastic members—the kind that help to make conditions better for all—and with their aid and co-operation, the men and women in the catering and beverage industry will secure for themselves the things in life that are now denied them.

Let us express the hope that all our ambitions in life will be forthcoming to us and that through our activities and aid we may succeed in bringing to all the workers in our industry, freedom and remuneration that will not alone care for the present, but provide for some of the comforts that we must look forward to for the future.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

May—
13—To Toronto	$4 42
14—To Buffalo	4 42
21—To Toronto	4 42
22—To Buffalo	4 42
Postage	4 00
Telegrams	1 63
Traveling expenses	14 00
Total.....	$37 31
Fraternally submitted,
EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1152.

May 5, 1922.

MR. WILLIAM B. JOYCE, 48 Tyson Avenue, Floral Park, N. Y.:

DEAR SIR—I have before me your appeal from the findings of the Local Joint Executive Board of New York City, which board sustained the action of Local 3 and denied your appeal.

Your appeal is based upon the following grounds:

"(a) That the said board was not properly or legally constituted;

"(b) That appellant was deprived of the right and privileges guaranteed to him by the constitution of the United States and of the State of New York, in the following respect:

"(1) Representation of counsel;

"(2) To be judged by his peers;

"(3) To be faced by his accusers;

"(4) To a fair, just and impartial hearing.

"(c) The judgment of the Local Joint Executive Board is inconsistent, in that it provides 'That the actions of Local 3 in this case be sustained' and also provides 'Your appeals are therefore denied,' and said findings are therefore contrary to law."

The Local Joint Executive Board of New York City submits the following under date of April 24, 1922, in answer to your appeal:

"(1) That none but legally seated delegates were present when the vote on the appeal was taken;

"(2) That Joyce was given the privilege to have counsel with the provision however, that such counsel must be a member of our International Union or of the American Federation of Labor. He refused to avail himself of this privilege, but demanded to be represented by outside counsel, which was denied to him."

Upon a careful study of the testimony and briefs submitted in connection with this appeal, I find that while there were members of the International Union present at the meeting of the Local Joint

Executive Board while the testimony and arguments were being presented to said Board, who were not accredited delegates, that before the vote was taken, those members were requested to withdraw from the meeting room, and did withdraw, and that none but accredited delegates to the Board were present when the vote was taken. That the appellant was invited and requested to be present at the said meeting and did appear and because he was denied the right of representation by legal counsel, he refused to accept of the privilege accorded him and withdrew.

The claim of the appellant that he was denied the right and privilege guaranteed him by the constitution of the United States and of the State of New York, in that he was denied the right of legal counsel; to be judged by his own peers; to face his accusers; and to a fair, just and impartial hearing, is not borne out by facts. The right to be represented by counsel was not denied him, so long as such counsel was a member of the International Union or the American Federation of Labor. There is no law in the constitution of the United States or the State of New York which guarantees to a member of an organization the right of representation by counsel other than members of its own constituent part, within the tribunal of its own organization. The right to be judged by his own peers was not denied him, in that the delegates to the Local Joint Executive Board were men of his own peer. The right to face his accusers was not denied him, in that his accusers were present at the meeting to which the appellant was invited. The right to a fair, just and impartial trial was assured the appellant when he was given notice of the time, place and date of such meeting at which his appeal was to be heard and his refusal to take part in such meeting cannot be construed as warranting the implication that a fair, just and impartial trial was not given the appellant.

It is the judgment of this office that you were given every opportunity guaranteed you under the constitution of the International Union, to defend your position before the Local Joint Executive Board on your appeal to that body, and that no right or privilege to which you were legally entitled was denied you. Your appeal therefore is not sustained.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1153.

May 9, 1923.

MRS. MARGARET SPRINGER, Local 14, Hotel Washington, San Francisco, Calif.:

DEAR MADAM AND SISTER—I have before me the charges filed against you by Local 424, of Klamath Falls, Oregon, for accepting employment in an unfair restaurant in their jurisdiction; we also have your plea in connection with the same. We hereby adjudge you guilty of the charge and penalize you in the sum of $25 and to stand suspended from membership until the same is paid.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,
General President.

Decision No. 1154.

May 19, 1922.

MR. FRED WILTHAGEN, Local 30, 828 Mission Street, San Francisco, Calif.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me the charges filed against you by Local 542 of Modesto, California, and your statement in connection therewith. We are also in receipt of a statement from Local 30, advising that as far as their records show, you have never been suspended and that they have never had occasion to discipline you for any infraction of their laws.

Your acknowledgment of guilt with qualifications does not appear to be a frank statement of the truth. We cannot assimilate the thought that you with several years of membership to your credit, could work in an unfair establishment for a number of months without having full knowledge of the wrong that you were doing. Your efforts to criticize the activities of Local 542 in connection with the establishment in question, is not accepted with any thought of sincerity.

You are therefore adjudged guilty of the charges entered against you and penalized in the sum of $25. You are given thirty days in which to pay the said fine or stand suspended from membership in this International Union.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1155.

May 24, 1922.

MR. H. A. NICHOLS, 209 A. N. Tower Avenue, Centralia, Wash.:

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—I have before me your appeal from the decision of Local 316, of Centralia, Washington, which local union expelled you from membership, the same having been temporary set aside, so that you could enjoy the rights of membership pending your appeal. We have had an investigation made of your activities in connection with the subject matter referred to in the charges and find that those activities warranted the conclusion reached by Local 316. We therefore withdraw the temporary setting aside of their action of expulsion and approve of the judgment rendered by them.

Your appeal is not sustained.

Fraternally yours,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

Decision No. 1156.

May 25, 1922.

MISS MAY HOLDEN, East Seventh and Yamhill Streets, Portland, Oregon:

DEAR MISS—I have before me your appeal from the decision of Local 305, which local union expelled you from membership (the Local Joint Executive Board passing appeal on to this office without rendering judgment).

After a careful review of the testimony offered, we find that the evidence and facts presented to Local 305 warranted their action and we approve of their findings.

Your appeal is not sustained.

Yours truly,

EDWARD FLORE,

General President.

IN THE DRIFTWAY.

Since writing in a disparaging way of the Congressional Record as a work of literature, numerous protests have bobbed up to assert that this sedate Washington daily is filled with more thrills than the "Arabian Nights" and more humor than the comic sections of all the newspapers of the country combined. Maybe it is, but as the Drifter rarely reads anything but headlines—and the Congressional Record has none to speak of—he can hardly be expected to know all this. However, the Drifter has lately been burrowing into the pages of this heretofore unesteemed and misprized contemporary and he admits there is gold to be found amidst the dross of words and figures. Take the speech of the Hon. Bill G. Lowry of Mississippi, for instance, on military appropriations. The Hon. Bill began delicately by suggesting that "those gentlemen who claim not to know what a bloc is should study the part of their anatomy above their necks." Thereafter he rambled on with various ideas—some pat and some patter—until finally he hit into a Negro fable, to tell which was apparently his chief excuse for rising. That it was a good excuse the Drifter admits, and hastens to reprint the fable herewith:

Ole Mistah Billy William Goat
Had all the whiskers he could tote,
And when he tuck and shaved 'em off
He got pneumony and a cough.

He sent for Doctah Rambo Sheep
Who said, "Dat cold am mighty deep,
But," says he, "maybe you kin pull
Thru if you wrap yo'self in wool."

Then Doctah Gander come along
And say, "Dat cold am mighty strong;
My 'pinion is you sho' is dead
Ef you don't git a feeder bed."

An den old Doctah Turtle come
And say, "You gwine to yo' long home;
You sho'ly never kin get well,
Ef you don't git yo'self a shell."

And den ole Billy William cuss
And say he don't know who to trus',
But dey's all dead an' gone an' quit
And ole man William's livin' yit.

Taken as a whole the debates in Congress remind the Drifter of an incident at a meeting which he once attended. At a most inopportune moment a rather obtuse person stood up and began to speak. Fixing him with a chilly eye, the chairman asked sharply: "For what purpose does the gentleman rise?" Nothing daunted, the gentleman replied with the easy assurance of one who knows exactly what he is about: "I rise to talk."—THE DRIFTER, in The Nation.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-13-8-15

WAY DOWN EAST.

In the State of Maine the voters take it for granted that whomsoever they send to Washington shall vote with the drys, at least that was the mental attitude before the operation of the Volstead law. The records in the Senate and House do not show a wet vote from July 31, 1917 to June 27, 1921.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER FOR MAY, 1922

Local No.		Local No.		Local No.
1 W, New York, N. Y.	Apr., 1922	188 B, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Apr., 1922	384 SCP, Oakland, Cal.	Feb., 1922
2 W, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Apr., "	189 W, Portland, Ore.	Apr., "	387 M, Ft. Dodge, Ia.	Apr., "
3 B, New York, N. Y.	Apr., "	190 B, Bethlehem, Pa.	Jan., "	389 B, Carnegie, Pa.	Jan., "
4 B, Hoboken, N. J.	Apr., "	195 M, Kingman, Ariz.	Mar., "	391 M, LeGrande, Ore.	Jan., "
5 W, New York, N. Y.	Mar., "	196 W, Buffalo, N. Y.	Mar., "	392 MC, Mobile, Ala.	May, "
7 W, Chicago, Ill.	Apr., "	197 B, Hamilton, Ont., Can.	Apr., "	394 M, South Chicago, Ill.	Aug., "
8 B, Denver, Colo.	Apr., "	199 B, Jamestown, N. Y.	May, "	395 M, White Plains, N. Y.	Jan., "
10 W, Hoboken, N. J.	Apr., "	200 B, Hartford, Conn.	Mar., "	397 M, Parsons, Kan.	Feb., "
11 WC, New York City	Apr., "	201 M, Haverhill, Mass.	Apr., "	398 M, Manchester, N. H.	Apr., "
12 M, San Antonio, Tex.	Apr., "	203 C, St. Louis, Mo.	Apr., "	399 M, Ranger, Tex.	Apr., "
14 W, Denver, Colo.	Mar., "	207 C, Portland, Ore.	Apr., "	400 M, Spokane, Wash.	Apr., "
17 W, Los Angeles, Cal.	Mar., "	208 RRM, St. Louis, Mo.	Mar., "	402 M, San Diego, Cal.	Apr., "
18 C, Denver, Colo.	Apr., "	210 M, Abilene, Tex.	Apr., "	403 M, Breckenridge, Tex.	Apr., "
19 W, Kansas City, Mo.	Apr., "	213 M, Herrin, Ill.	Mar., "	405 M, Bonham, Tex.	May, "
20 W, St. Louis, Mo.	Apr., "	215 M, Bristow, Okla.	Feb., "	407 M, Manchester, N. H.	Feb., "
22 M, Butte, Mont.	Apr., "	216 M, Toledo, O.	May, "	413 M, Tucson, Ariz.	Apr., "
23 C, Omaha, Neb.	Apr., "	217 B, New Haven, Conn.	May, "	420 B, Kansas City, Mo.	Apr., "
25 M, Hot Springs, Ark.	Apr., "	219 W, New York, N. Y.	Apr., "	424 M, Klamath Falls, Ore.	Apr., "
28 M, Vancouver, B. C.	Apr., "	220 M, Eureka, Cal.	Apr., "	425 M, Sherman, Tex.	May, "
29 B, New York, N. Y.	Apr., "	222 B, Dayton, O.	Apr., "	426 M, Wallace, Idaho	Apr., "
30 W, San Francisco, Cal.	Apr., "	223 M, Des Moines, Ia.	Feb., "	427 C, Missoula, Mont.	Apr., "
31 M, Oakland, Cal.	Apr., "	224 B, Erie, Pa.	May, "	429 B, Portsmouth, O.	May, "
32 M, St. Joseph, Mo.	May, "	226 M, Lincoln, Neb.	Mar., "	436 M, Chico, Cal.	Mar., "
33 C, Seattle, Wash.	Mar., "	228 B, Albany, N. Y.	Apr., "	437 M, Indianapolis, Ind.	Feb., "
34 M, Boston, Mass.	Apr., "	230 M, South Bend, Tex.	Mar., "	438 B, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.	Apr., "
39 M, Pittsburg, Kan.	Apr., "	234 C, Detroit, Mich.	Apr., "	440 M, Montreal, Que., Can.	Apr., "
41 B, San Francisco, Cal.	Mar., "	236 M, Goose Creek, Tex.	Jan., "	442 M, Raton, N. M.	Jan., "
43 M, Pueblo, Colo.	Apr., "	237 M, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Apr., "	449 B, Altoona, Pa.	Apr., "
44 C, San Francisco, Cal.	Mar., "	239 W, Seattle, Wash.	Apr., "	451 M, Everett, Wash.	Apr., "
45 M, Reno, Nev.	Apr., "	240 WS, Seattle, Wash.	Apr., "	457 MS, Butte, Mont.	Apr., "
48 WS, San Francisco, Cal.	Apr., "	242 M, Charleston, W. Va.	Apr., "	458 C, Minneapolis, Minn.	Mar., "
		246 M, Oklahoma City, Okla.	Mar., "	459 M, Victoria, B. C., Can.	Mar., "
				466 B, Wilmington, Del.	Apr., "
50 M, Fairmont, W. Va.	May, "	248 WS, St. Louis, Mo.	Apr., "	468 C, Los Angeles, Cal.	Apr., "
51 B, St. Louis, Mo.	Apr., "	251 M, Dickerson, N. D.	Feb., "	470 W, Schenectady, N. Y.	Mar., "
58 W, New Orleans, La.	Apr., "	253 B, Alliance, O.	May, "	471 M, Albany, N. Y.	Apr., "
59 M, Milwaukee, Wis.	Apr., "	254 W, Waterbury, Conn.	Apr., "	472 M, El Reno, Okla.	Feb., "
61 M, Tacoma, Wash.	Apr., "	258 RRM, New York, N. Y.	Jan., "	474 M, Edmonton, Alta., Canada	Mar., "
62 M, Fresno, Cal.	Apr., "	259 B, Edwardsville, Ill.	Mar., "
64 B, Milwaukee, Wis.	Apr., "	261 WC, Louisville, Ky.	Mar., "	475 M, Lawton, Okla.	Mar., "
66 C, Buffalo, N. Y.	Apr., "	262 B, Newcastle, Pa.	Apr., "	476 M, Marshallfield, Ore.	Apr., "
68 B, Cincinnati, O.	Apr., "	264 M, Lake Charles, La.	Apr., "	479 B, LaCrosse, Wis.	Apr., "
69 M, Galveston, Tex.	Apr., "	265 M, Bristow, Okla.	May, "	480 DSM, Ft. Worth, Tex.	Mar., "
70 B, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Apr., "	266 C, Kansas City, Mo.	Apr., "	482 B, Butler, Pa.	Mar., "
72 W, Cincinnati, O.	Apr., "	269 B, South Norwalk, Conn.	Apr., "	484 WS, Chicago, Ill.	Apr., "
74 M, Aurora, Ill.	Feb., "			485 RRP, Memphis, Tenn.	Mar., "
76 B, Syracuse, N. Y.	Apr., "	271 M, Petaluma, Cal.	May, "	487 SDD, Seattle, Wash.	Apr., "
77 B, Boston, Mass.	Apr., "	273 M, Springfield, Mass.	Mar., "	488 B, Jersey City, N. J.	Apr., "
78 B, Uniontown, Pa.	May, "	279 W, Philadelphia, Pa.	Apr., "	489 M, Galesburg, Ill.	Apr., "
79 B, Louisville, Ky.	Apr., "	284 B, Los Angeles, Cal.	Mar., "	490 M, Tucumcari, N. M.	Mar., "
81 B, Holyoke, Mass.	Apr., "	285 B, Providence, R. I.	Mar., "	491 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Mar., "
85 B, Lowell, Mass.	May, "	286 B, Peoria, Ill.	Mar., "	492 M, Quebec, Que., Can.	Apr., "
89 B, Chicago, Ill.	Apr., "	290 M, Salem, Mass.	Apr., "	496 SDD, Portland, Ore.	Apr., "
92 B, Marlboro, Mass.	Apr., "	294 M, Yakima, Wash.	Apr., "	503 WS, Kansas City, Mo.	Apr., "
93 B, Haverhill, Mass.	Mar., "	295 M, Wheeling, W. Va.	Mar., "	505 M, Columbus, O.	May, "
100 B, New Bedford, Mass.	Mar., "	298 M, Wenatchee, Wash.	Apr., "	508 M, Atlantic City, N. J.	Apr., "
101 M, Great Falls, Mont.	Mar., "	299 M, Burkburnett, Tex.	Apr., "	509 M, Chickasha, Okla.	Apr., "
102 B, Granite City, Ill.	Apr., "	300 W, Toronto, Ont., Can.	Apr., "	510 M, Pocatello, Idaho	Apr., "
106 M, Cleveland, O.	Apr., "	303 M, Electra, Tex.	Mar., "	511 M, Orange, Tex.	Jan., "
107 WS, Cleveland, O.	Apr., "	304 M, Hartford, Conn.	Mar., "	512 CM, Bonham, Tex.	Apr., "
109 M, Newark, N. J.	Mar., "	305 WS, Portland, Ore.	Apr., "	513 M, Baird, Tex.	Mar., "
110 M, San Francisco, Cal.	Mar., "	306 M, Williston, N. D.	Apr., "	516 B, Chillicothe, O.	Apr., "
111 M, Oatman, Ariz.	Apr., "	307 M, Providence, R. I.	Apr., "	521 M, Mandau, N. D.	Feb., "
112 WS, Boston, Mass.	Apr., "	308 M, Portland, Me.	Apr., "	522 M, Chattanooga, Tenn.	May, "
115 B, Philadelphia, Pa.	Apr., "	310 M, Portland, Ore.	Apr., "	523 B, Kenosha, Wis.	Mar., "
117 B, Belleville, Ill.	Apr., "	311 M, Astoria, Ore.	Mar., "	524 M, Miles City, Mont.	Mar., "
118 M, Akron, O.	Apr., "	312 B, Chattanooga, Tenn.	June, "	528 MF, Seattle, Wash.	May, "
119 M, Silverton, Colo.	Apr., "	315 W, Montreal, Que., Can.	May, "	529 M, Bellingham, Wash.	Apr., "
120 B, Utica, N. Y.	Mar., "	316 M, Centralia, Wash.	Apr., "	531 M, Jefferson City, Mo.	May, "
124 B, Trenton, N. J.	Feb., "	318 B, Putnam, Conn.	May, "	532 B, Baltimore, Md.	Mar., "
126 B, Oneonta, N. Y.	June, "	319 M, Siouxville, Ia.	Jan., "	536 M, Minneapolis, Minn.	Apr., "
128 M, Superior, Wis.	Apr., "	322 B, Racine, Wis.	Apr., "	538 RRM, Seattle, Wash.	Apr., "
131 B, Newark, N. J.	Apr., "	323 M, Palestine, Tex.	Apr., "	539 CC, Charleston, S. C.	Apr., "
134 B, Scranton, Pa.	Apr., "	325 M, Duncan, Okla.	Apr., "	542 M, Modesta, Cal.	Apr., "
135 M, Tulsa, Okla.	Apr., "	326 C, Pittsburgh, Pa.	Apr., "	544 M, Douglas, Wyo.	Mar., "
141 M, Visalia, Cal.	Mar., "	327 W, Peoria, Ill.	Mar., "	548 M, St. Paul, Minn.	Apr., "
142 M, Eldorado, Ark.	Apr., "	329 M, Lynn, Mass.	Apr., "	550 M, Bakersfield, Cal.	Mar., "
143 M, Omaha, Neb.	Apr., "	330 M, Twin Falls, Idaho	Feb., "	552 CC, Richmond, Va.	Apr., "
149 B, Newport, Ky.	Apr., "	331 M, Greenville, Tex.	Feb., "	556 C, St. Paul, Minn.	Mar., "
150 W, Syracuse, N. Y.	Mar., "	332 M, East St. Louis, Ill.	Mar., "	557 M, Greebuhl, Wyo.	May, "
152 B, Minneapolis, Minn.	Apr., "	335 WS, Toledo, O.	Feb., "	560 M, Vallejo, Cal.	Apr., "
154 M, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.	Apr., "	337 M, Cheyenne, Okla.	Apr., "	561 M, Sacramento, Cal.	Apr., "
156 B, Paducah, Ky.	Apr., "	338 M, Knoxville, Tenn.	Apr., "	567 M, Olympia, Wash.	Mar., "
158 W, Wichita Falls, Tex.	Apr., "	347 WS, Buffalo, N. Y.	Apr., "	568 RRM, Portland, Ore.	Mar., "
159 B, Meriden, Conn.	Mar., "	349 M, Auburn, Wash.	May, "	569 B, Harrisburg, Pa.	Apr., "
161 M, Brockton, Mass.	Apr., "	353 WC, St. Louis, Mo.	Apr., "	571 M, Idaho Falls, Idaho	Apr., "
165 M, Pioneer, Tex.	May, "	356 B, New London, Conn.	May, "	572 M, Stockton, Cal.	Apr., "
167 C, Cleveland, O.	Apr., "	357 WS, Rochester, N. Y.	May, "	575 W, Jersey City, N. J.	Mar., "
168 M, Amarillo, Tex.	Apr., "	361 B, Allentown, Pa.	Apr., "	577 M, Mexia, Tex.	Mar., "
171 B, Rochester, N. Y.	Apr., "	364 M, Pendleton, Ore.	Apr., "	579 M, Dayton, O.	Apr., "
172 M, Henryetta, Okla.	Apr., "	365 M, Sapulpa, Okla.	Mar., "	581 M, Ogden, Utah	Mar., "
175 B, Buffalo, N. Y.	Apr., "	376 B, South Chicago, Ill.	Apr., "	584 M, Topeka, Kan.	Mar., "
177 C, Cincinnati, O.	Apr., "	378 B, Bakersfield, Cal.	Apr., "	586 M, Coalinga, Cal.	Apr., "
180 M, San Jose, Cal.	Apr., "	380 M, Bisbee, Ariz.	Mar., "	588 M, Shreveport, La.	Mar., "
181 B, Easton, Pa.	Apr., "	381 C, Brooklyn, N. Y.	Apr., "	589 M, Bloomington, Ill.	Apr., "
185 W, Bicknell, Ind.	Jan., "	382 RRM, Louisville, Ky.	Mar., "	590 B, Fond du Lac, Wis.	Apr., "

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Local No.	Date Local		Date Local
582 M. Winnipeg, Man., Canada	1922	1 634 Rein. of local.....	16 50	8 Leslie Lancaster, M. A.
583 WS, Minneapolis, Minn., May	1922	1 458 Mar., supplies, buttons.	75 20	8 L.
585 M. La Junta, Colo., Feb.	"	2 89 April, supplies	23 80	8 12 April
587 M. Calgary, Alta., Can. Apr.	"	2 286 March	10 00	8 Rein. W. P. Bridges,
600 C. Duluth, Minn., Mar.	"	2 436 Feb., Mar., bound M. &	24 80	8 Local 58
604 MC, Orange, Tex., Feb.	"	2 437 February, supplies	33 20	8 303 March
605 MC, Indianapolis, Ind., Jan.	"	2 763 March	59 80	8 815 Bound M. & S., supplies
611 MC, Williamsport, Pa., Apr.	"	2 842 Supplies, buttons	7 50	8 391 Buttons
612 M. Helena, Mont., Apr.	"	2 Rein. L. E. Jewett, Lo-	7 50	8 488 April
615 M. Paris, Tex., Apr.	"	2 cal 557	28 80	8 522 Charter and outfit
616 HM, Sacramento, Cal., Mar.	"	2 854 Feb., Mar., Apr.	2 00	8 183 Charter and outfit
618 M. Anacortes, Wash., Apr.	"	2 Bud Larson, M. A. L.	5 60	8 259 March
626 M. Walla, Walla, Wash. Mar.	"	2 78 May	2 80	8 835 Dec., Jan., Feb.
627 B. Cairo, Ill., May	"	2 93 March	13 25	8 510 March, supplies, stamps
630 WS, St. Paul, Minn., Jan.	"	2 Rein. I. F. McDonald,	92 80	9 45 Supplies
634 ML, Minneapolis, Minn., May	"	2 Local 755	68 40	9 49 April
637 B. Manitowac, Wis., Apr.	"	2 188 April	3 20	9 177 April
638 M. Haynesville, La., Mar.	"	3 5 March	11 20	9 240 April
639 WS, Los Angeles, Cal., Mar.	"	3 8 March, April	1 25	9 253 May
659 M. Dallas, Tex., Apr.	"	3 32 April, buttons	44 60	9 311 March
670 M. West Frankfort, Ill., Apr.	"	3 39 Supplies	25 30	9 413 April
673 M. San Bernardino, Cal., Apr.	"	3 77 April	57 80	9 Rein. Frank Wilson, M.
676 SDD, Vancouver, B. C., Apr.	"	3 471 April, supplies	10 20	9 A. L.
680 M. Miami, Ariz., Apr.	"	3 754 March	2 60	9 457 April
681 M. Long Beach, Cal., Apr.	"	3 852 April, May, June.	17 80	9 748 Buttons, supplies
685 B. Eau Claire, Wis., Mar.	"	3 531 May	137 50	9 492 April, bound M. & S.,
690 B. Owensboro, Ky., Apr.	"	3 587 March, bound M. & S.	7 05	9 cash
692 M. Virden, Ill., Apr.	"	3 589 Supplies	36 20	9 639 Supplies
703 M. Anaheim, Cal., Jan.	"	3 150 March	6 00	9 794 April
705 W. Detroit, Mich., Apr.	"	3 Interest	32 20	9 262 April, bound M. & S.
709 M. Mt. Clemens, Mich., Apr.	"	3 120 Jan., Feb., Mar., bal.	8 00	9 581 March
714 B. Joliet, Ill., May	"	4 due supplies	11 25	9 338 April
717 W. Baltimore, Md., Apr.	"	4 161 March	5 40	9 181 April
719 C. New York City, Mar.	"	4 222 April	20 80	9 487 Buttons
720 M. Hammond, Ind., Dec., 1921	"	4 438 April	10 60	9 76 April
721 B. Salt Lake City, Utah, Mar., 1922	"	4 509 April, supplies	11 80	9 85 April, May
728 WS, Detroit, Mich., Apr.	"	4 579 April	2 40	9 115 April
730 M. Bremerton, Wash., Apr.	"	4 586 March	115 40	9 152 April, supplies
737 B. York, Pa., Apr.	"	4 848 April, buttons	198 60	10 322 March, April, bound M.
739 B. Brownsville, Pa., May	"	4 261 March, cash	6 20	10 & S.
742 B. Southbridge, Mass., Apr.	"	4 332 March	35 20	10 337 Stamps, supplies, but-
748 W. Ft. Worth, Tex., Apr.	"	4 101 March, supplies	10 60	10 tons
753 M. Desdemona, Tex., Jan.	"	4 102 April	10 60	10 17 Supplies
754 M. San Pedro, Cal., Mar.	"	4 479 April	74 70	10 197 April
762 B. Harrison and Kearney,	"	4 480 February	23 40	10 213 Stamps
N. J., Apr.	"	4 826 March	1 25	10 Rein. Stella Walker, Lo-
763 W. Rochester, N. Y., Mar.	"	5 17 March	83 40	10 cal 668
771 M. Taft, Cal., Apr.	"	5 110 March	8 40	10 58 April, supplies
777 M. Beaumont, Tex., Apr.	"	5 209 April, buttons	10 60	10 349 April
781 W. Washington, D. C., Apr.	"	5 337 April	5 50	10 811 April, cash
788 M. Springfield, Ill., Mar.	"	5 357 May	5 00	11 177 Balance due supplies
791 M. Aberdeen, Wash., Mar.	"	5 550 March, supplies	5 00	11 337 Error April report
792 M. Denver, Colo., Apr.	"	5 375 Bound M. & S., bal. due	27 80	11 361 April
794 M. Linton, Ind., Apr.	"	5 March report	4 75	11 659 Supplies
797 B. Cristobal, Canal Zone	"	5 31 Error March report	4 30	11 119 April, supplies
801 M. Joliet, Ill., Apr.	"	5 310 April	9 40	11 223 February, supplies
806 M. Houston, Tex., Apr.	"	5 Charles McLaughlin, M.	44 10	11 300 On account
808 M. Lewiston, Mont., May	"	5 A. L.	42 60	11 815 March
810 WS, Atlantic City, N. J., Mar.	"	5 781 April	10 50	11 522 Supplies
811 M. Altoona, Pa., Mar.	"	5 485 March	7 40	11 81 April
815 M. Salt Lake City, Utah	"	5 777 April	2 00	12 261 Supplies
826 MC, Atlantic City, N. J., Mar.	"	6 111 Stamps, supplies	36 80	12 861 April
831 MC, Asbury Park, N. J., Feb.	"	6 189 April	75 20	12 167 April
836 WC, Baltimore, Md., Mar.	"	6 865 Supplies	5 40	12 405 May
842 M. Casper, Wyo., Apr.	"	6 7 Supplies	21 40	12 673 April
844 B. Staunton, Ill., June	"	6 237 April, supplies	3 00	12 Victor Tenny, M. A. L.
845 B. New Kensington, Pa., Mar.	"	6 680 April	17 73	12 524 March, supplies, cash.
846 M. Sheridan, Wyo., Apr.	"	6 199 May	80 40	12 279 April
848 M. El Paso, Tex., Apr.	"	6 489 April	378 80	13 30 April
852 B. Tiffin, O., June	"	6 612 April, supplies	1 00	13 135 Buttons
853 WWC, Boston, Mass., Mar.	"	8 1 April	31 20	13 39 April
854 B. Jeanette, Pa., Apr.	"	8 25 April	4 00	13 271 April
857 B. Laramie, Wyo., Mar.	"	8 45 April	33 40	13 298 April
861 M. Billings, Wyo., Apr.	"	8 61 April, supplies	9 20	13 584 March
862 M. Rawlins, Wyo., Apr.	"	8 70 April	5 60	13 876 April
865 C. Chicago, Ill., Apr.	"	8 106 April, supplies	6 80	13 142 April, supplies
876 M. Laramie, Wyo., Apr.	"	8 175 April	45 40	13 201 April, supplies
		8 216 April, supplies	13 40	13 203 April
		8 246 March	7 30	13 599 April
		8 273 March	11 60	13 397 March
		8 316 Supplies	20	15 30 Error April report
		8 347 March, April	15 20	15 43 April
		8 451 March	16 90	15 172 April, supplies
		8 542 April	10 40	15 290 March, April
		8 590 Feb., Mar., Apr.	40	15 402 Bal. due March report
		8 626 Jan., Feb., Mar.	16 30	15 403 April, supplies
		8 638 March	33 90	15 427 April, supplies
		8 680 Supplies	50 75	15 451 April, supplies
		8 714 May	11 80	15 480 March, bound M. & S.
		8 762 March	35 00	15 529 March
		8 771 April, supplies, buttons,	55 60	15 659 April
		stamps	3 60	15 670 April
		8 842 April	59 80	15 763 Protested check
		8 American Railway Ex-	6 25	15 Rein. Edward Nichols, press Co.		Local 52

RECEIPTS FOR MAY, 1922.

Date Local
1 100 March, bound M. & S.	$71 60
1 143 March	19 80
1 158 March	22 60
1 266 March, cash	55 80
1 285 March	11 40
1 325 March	16 60
1 402 Stamps	20
1 506 March	11 60
1 548 April	17 80
1 718 March	23 00
1 809 April	12 60

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date Local		Date Local		Date Local
15 230 March, dues Walter Bullock, Tom Wilson, D. R. Linsey, F. A. Marcus	14 00	22 72 April, stamps, buttons, supplies	65 50	31 508 April	23 00
15 Rein, Albert Gieri, Local 895	5 25	23 31 April	180 40	31 627 March, April, May	7 20
15 808 Rein, B. Bellah, Local 445	13 25	23 572 April	57 20	31 728 April, buttons	48 20
15 505 Charter and outfit, buttons, supplies, stamps	20 00	23 681 Buttons, supplies	11 00	31 730 April	37 20
15 490 Supplies	60	23 51 April	72 60	31 Leonard Bryant, M. A. L.	2 25
15 542 Supplies	1 50	23 739 March, April, May	15 00	31 Tom Simmons, M. A. L.	2 25
15 557 May	9 20	23 Mrs. Helen Clark, M. A. L.	2 00	31 216 May	10 00
15 597 April, buttons	20 20	23 207 April	114 80	31 271 May	21 00
15 618 April	3 80	23 216 Buttons	2 50	31 480 Supplies	1 50
15 315 Dues Joseph Merlin	1 50	23 709 April, bound M. & S.	6 00	31 69 April	33 40
15 168 April	11 80	23 865 April	89 80	31 32 May, supplies, buttons	18 20
15 242 April	15 60	24 117 April	4 20	31 68 April	41 60
15 429 April, May	11 60	24 239 April, supplies	52 80	31 112 April	22 40
15 510 Supplies	2 50	24 364 April	11 80	31 349 May	4 00
15 Fred McKelvey, M. A. L.	7 00	24 476 March, April	17 20	31 378 April	8 20
16 30 Error April report	20	24 536 April	7 40	31 523 Supplies	25
16 224 May	14 80	24 676 April	3 00	31 577 March, supplies, cash	48 85
16 316 April	25 00	24 580 April	23 10	31 Interest	16 86
16 426 April	20 20	24 318 May	2 00	Total	$10,380 14
16 561 April	115 20	24 690 February, March, April, bound M. & S.	7 40	EXPENDITURES FOR MAY, 1922.
16 230 Dues Daisy Burch	3 00	24 Rein, J. H. Budde, Local 805	3 25	Date
16 48 April	170 40	24 294 April, supplies	23 70	1 Rent	$206 00
16 50 May	17 40	24 306 April, supplies	5 80	1 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 659	20 00
16 Interest	21 26	24 529 April	29 80	5 Seals	6 25
16 171 April	15 60	25 23 April	20 40	5 Tax	419 71
16 156 March, April	6 80	25 261 Buttons	2 00	5 Label Trades Department, tax	100 00
17 41 March	24 60	25 305 April, supplies	100 45	6 Clerks	72 00
17 217 May	12 40	25 381 April	8 20	6 Homer James, defense, Local 242	30 00
17 424 April	11 00	25 593 Stamps, buttons, supplies	8 80	8 R. M. Ferris, acct. auditor	50 00
17 634 Stamps, buttons, supplies	5 50	25 185 April	20 80	8 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., L. J. E. B., Dallas, Tex.	20 00
17 637 April	2 60	25 692 April	2 00	10 Protested check, Local 763	59 80
17 593 Charter and outfit	16 10	25 Joe Smith, M. A. L.	1 10	13 Clerks	72 00
17 560 March	22 60	25 Rein, H. R. McPherson, M. A. L.	13 25	15 R. E. Crosby, Intl. Org.	150 00
17 249 April	60 60	25 126 May, June, bound M. & S., supplies	11 15	15 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org.	130 00
17 325 April	17 60	25 H. O. Reinhart, M. A. L.	4 00	15 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org.	150 00
17 670 Supplies	37 20	25 329 March	31 34	15 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
17 135 April	37 20	26 135 Supplies	1 00	15 A. E. Martel, Intl. Org., defense	150 00
17 586 April	6 60	26 307 April	37 80	15 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org.	150 00
17 615 Supplies	3 60	26 392 May, supplies	28 50	15 Olida Rondeau Legasse, Death Claim No. 11260, Local 201	50 00
18 3 April, bound M. & S.	38 20	26 Daisy Burch, M. A. L.	25	15 Joe Lane, Death Claim No. 11422, Local 721	50 00
18 128 April, supplies	17 00	26 Rein, Nellie Collins, Local 411	10 25	15 Timothy Jones, Death Claim No. 11440, Local 413	50 00
18 717 April	19 00	26 59 Supplies	2 00	15 Gilbert Whitehead, Death Claim No. 11442, Local 131	50 00
18 115 Error April report	20	26 425 May	13 00	15 John B. Knoebel, Death Claim No. 11444, Local 188	50 00
18 220 April, bound M. & S.	34 80	26 496 April	33 80	15 Isaac Bernstein, Death Claim No. 11445, Local 30	50 00
18 310 Supplies	1 00	26 748 April	53 20	15 John A. Cavanaugh, Death Claim No. 11446, Local 30	50 00
18 326 April	81 00	26 29 April	5 00	15 Chas. Gerbert, Death Claim No. 11447, Local 51	50 00
18 380 March, supplies	3 85	26 Rein, L. P. Rose, Local 796	13 25	15 Chas. Kessler, Death Claim No. 11448, Local 279	50 00
18 400 April, supplies	86 40	26 64 May	4 20	15 Claude Smith, Death Claim No. 11449, Local 181	50 00
18 516 April	5 40	27 19 April	42 20	15 John Kennedy, Death Claim No. 11450, Local 18	50 00
18 638 Stamps	2 00	27 34 April	233 20	15 Thomas A. Gormley, Death Claim No. 11454, Local 115	50 00
18 299 Cash	15 00	27 468 April	170 00	15 Russell Richardson, Death Claim No. 11455, Local 72	50 00
18 34 Supplies	5 00	27 552 April	7 40	15 Emil K. Mueller, Death Claim No. 11460, Local 865	50 00
18 118 April, buttons	19 80	27 810 March	7 60	15 Richard Griffin, Death Claim No. 11461, Local 30	50 00
18 308 April	49 00	27 510 April	14 80	15 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., L. J. E. B., Dallas, Tex.	20 00
18 Ben Mott, M. A. L.	3 00	27 154 April	17 80	15 Henry Gartner, L. S. O., Local 167	20 00
18 528 May, cash	1 80	27 2 April	113 00	15 T. A. Harris, defense, Local 509	25 00
18 398 April	4 80	27 7 April	220 60	18 Guy Kennedy, auditing books	150 00
18 210 April	4 40	27 4 April	5 80	18 John J. McDevitt, acct. delegate A. F. of L. Convention	200 00
18 539 April	8 40	27 66 April	33 40	19 H. B. Keith, account auditor	92 50
18 43 Buttons, supplies	9 15	27 111 May, buttons	12 20	19 R. M. Farris, account auditor	94 84
18 440 April	8 80	27 180 April	35 80	19 S. P. Oplinger, acct. auditor	195 90
18 20 April	48 20	27 196 March	50 00	20 Clerks	72 00
18 347 Supplies	2 00	27 234 April	48 80	20 Printing and mailing M. & S.	2,335 77
18 509 Balance due April report and supplies	2 50	27 228 April	5 60
22 10 April	15 00	27 266 April	52 60
22 18 April	37 60	27 279 Error April report	20
22 134 April	27 40	27 353 Mar., Apr., rein. of local	47 80
22 219 April	47 40	27 378 May, June	6 00
22 264 April	2 80	27 399 Supplies	1 00
22 402 April, supplies	74 30	27 420 April	3 00
22 449 April	12 20	27 705 April, cash	60 30
22 503 Buttons, supplies	5 00	27 792 April, supplies	21 60
22 681 April	3 00	27 802 March, April	17 80
22 D. H. Cole, M. A. L.	8 00	27 808 May	66 60
22 323 Jan., Feb., Mar., Apr.	8 00	27 315 April, May	49 60
22 387 April, bal. due March report	6 70	27 Rein, Mary White, Local 782	7 25
22 487 April, buttons	30 00	27 28 April	67 70
22 809 May	11 20	31 59 April	36 00
22 Int. Charles Oliver	7 50	31 62 April	130 00
22 265 Charter and outfit, supplies	18 50	31 131 April, supplies	19 20
22 Rein, John Tamm, Local 230	3 25	31 143 April	20 00
22 571 April	9 00	31 161 April, cash	63 40
22 592 April, supplies	13 60	31 254 April	5 00
22 808 Supplies	15 90	31 484 April	102 60
		31 503 April	39 80

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY-TREASURER—Continued

Date		Date
22 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., L. J. E. B., Dallas, Tex...	20 00	31 Wm. R. Cody, Death Claim No. 11453, Local 487.....	50 00	Cash on hand May 1, 1922..	$ 44,675 96
22 Henry Gartner, L. S. O., Lo- cal 107	20 00	31 Jack A. McCarthy, Death Claim No. 11456, Local 298	50 00	Liberty Loan Bonds.....	95,460 07
22 Leslie Sinton, L. S. O., Local 458	20 00	31 Calla E. McCarthy, Death Claim No. 11457, Local 298	50 00	Canadian Bonds	4,975 00
22 F. D. Guarde, L. S. O., Local 12	20 00	31 Alphonse Volkmann, Death Claim No. 11458, Local 10	50 00	Receipts for May, 1922.....	10,380 14
22 E. Kovesleski, acct. delegate A. F. of L. Convention....	200 00	31 Wm. Walsh, Death Claim No. 11463, Local 22.....	50 00	Total	$155,691 17
23 Jere L. Sullivan, acct. trip to Chicago, funeral Elizabeth Maloney	38 26	31 Henry Hoffa, Death Claim No. 11465, Local 266.....	50 00	Expenditures for May, 1922	9,653 82
24 Buttons	64 85	31 Howard M. Engle, Death Claim No. 11466, Local 466	50 00	On hand June 1, 1922.....	$146,037 35
24 R. B. Heskeith, member G. E. B., postage and telegram	25 00	31 John O'Connor, Death Claim No. 11467, Local 106.....	50 00	In Death Fund May 1, 1922..	$139,812 67
25 Hazel Kopacz, L. J. E. B., Detroit, Mich.	50 00	31 George Meyer, Death Claim No. 11468, Local 31.....	50 00	Appropriated to Death Fund, May, 1922	2,086 65
25 Floral piece, Vice-President Donnelly's mother	10 00	31 Frederick Miller, Death Claim No. 11469, Local 84	50 00	Total	$141,899 32
26 T. A. Harris, defense, Lo- cal 509	25 00	31 Mario Massoclio, Death Claim No. 11470, Local 34	50 00	Drawn from Death Fund, May, 1922	1,750 00
27 Clerks	72 00	31 Ulyssis Gorham, Death Claim No. 11471, Local 34	50 00	In Death Fund June 1, 1922	$140,149 32
27 State Insurance Fund.....	5 39	31 John Schwerin, Death Claim, No. 11472, Local 41.....	50 00	In Defense Fund May 1, 1922	$ 163 87
29 G. W. McDonald, L. S. O., Local 748	20 00	31 Fred Leske, Death Claim No. 11473, Local 59.....	50 00	Appropriated to Defense Fund, May, 1922.....	1,341 10
29 Henry Gartner, L. S. O., Lo- cal 167	20 00	31 Geo. Eisenhut, Death Claim No. 11475, Local 561....	50 00	Total	$1,504 97
29 Leslie Sinton, L. S. O., Lo- cal 458	20 00	31 May Brentson, Death Claim No. 11464, Local 101....	50 00	Drawn from Defense Fund, May, 1922	1,375 38
29 F. D. Guarde, L. S. O., Lo- cal 12	20 00	31 Otto Schuenke, Death Claim No. 11476, Local 12.....	50 00	In Defense Fund June 1, 1922	$129 59
29 F. Dickenson, L. S. O., Lo- cal 572	80 00	31 Edward J. Mingle, Death Claim No. 11477, Local 77	50 00	In Con. Assmt. Fund May 1, 1922	$1,204 10
31 Edward Flore, Gen. Pres....	460 29	31 Supplies	116 45	Appropriated to Con. Assmt. Fund, May, 1922.....
31 R. E. Croskey, Intl. Org....	176 26	31 Jere L. Sullivan	400 00	Total	$1,204 10
31 Thos. J. Durnin, Intl. Org....	158 77	31 Janitor	15 00	Drawn from Con. Assmt. Fund, May, 1922.....
31 W. E. Horne, Intl. Org....	150 00	Stamps	41 90	In Con. Assmt. Fund June 1, 1922	$1,204 10
31 Robt. Lyons, Intl. Org....	154 74	American Railway Exp. Co.	8 35	In General Fund June 1, 1922	$ 4,554 34
31 A. F. Martel, Intl. Org....	161 87	Office supply	6 82	In Death Fund June 1, 1922	140,149 32
31 E. W. Parlee, Intl. Org....	157 11	Towel supply	1 15	In Defense Fund June 1, 1922	129 59
31 Wm. H. West, Death Claim No. 11451, Local 61.....	50 00	Telegrams	2 84	In Con. Assmt. Fund June 1, 1922	1,204 10
31 Robt. Fairbank, Death Claim No. 11452, Local 487.....	50 00	Total	$9,653 82	Total	$146,037 35

THE EXCUSE FACTORY IS CLOSED ON US.

In the catering industry when the workers are short of tools, it is no unusual thing to hear a worker turn loose a strident voice which, when understood by the initiated, reads "Silver Up."

Other cries there are, numerous enough to cover almost all of the "tools" used in service. The demand is met, as a rule, by speeding up on the part of the S. O. S. (Service of Supplies).

In the matter of men and women workers at the catering industry, there is little need for any one to yell "cooks up" or "waitresses wanted." And if that be true with regards to those two units of the workers in the catering industry, it is equally true with regards to bartenders, waiters and catering employes generally. But, these workers are not all organized, in fact counting every known society which pretends to seek catering industry employes as members, and including our International Union's membership, we have barely tickled the surface, and have an immense field to cultivate.

According to fairly reliable returns printed in publications which appear to have obtained the facts from the Census Bureau, there are in the United States alone approximately three million four hundred thousand beverage and food dispensers. By that we mean that there are that number of men and women employed in the catering industry—officially designated by the Census Bureau as domestic and personal service.

There is no need for us to yell "Prospects Up," for they are right in front of us, they are in every town and hamlet in the United States, and no doubt waiting for one of our men or women to invite them to become members.

Do we need those three million four hundred thousand workers as members of our International Union? We do. Then let's go and get 'em.

WHAT OUR ORGANIZERS ARE DOING

ALBANY, N. Y., May 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the month of May:

April 28-29—Worked in one of the large kitchens as night garde-manger.

April 30—Visited the Brauns Lunch, talked to the chef, second cook and two counter men, also one waitress; the Twentieth Century Lunch, where I had an interesting talk with the proprietor; the Central, Sterling, Electric, Crescent and Morris Lunch Rooms. Then I met Brother Hoffman of Local 228 and made the rounds with him.

May 1—Visited the two Belmont Lunches, the Kenmore Hotel, the Union Depot, the Brauns, the Morris, the Electric, Keelers' Broadway. In the afternoon I had a talk with some of the cooks of Keelers' State Street. In the evening went to the home of one of the Keelers cooks and got his promise to join.

May 2—Visited Jack's, the Globe, Keelers' Broadway, Morris Lunch and Belmont. Attended the meeting of Local 471 and canvassed with Secretary Hoffman of Local 228. Got the application of Keelers' pastry chef and the night chef of one of the Belmonts. These two were the first cooks to join Local 471.

May 3—Visited the Morris and received the application of one order cook; the Union Lunch, the Washington Lunch, Cafe Boulevard and Grand Palace. At 2 p. m. waited for the waiters outside of Keelers and at 1 a. m. waited for the night crews.

May 4—Visited the Grand Palace and had a long talk with the proprietor who does not favor unions. Also went to the Essex Restaurant, the Belmont and the Morris. At the Essex the four girls are paid $6.00 per week. Practically all waitresses working here at the present time say that they will go to the mountains next month, but someone must take their places. At 2 p. m. met the cooks of the Ten Eyck. At 9 p. m. I visited the home of the chef of the Cafe Boulevard.

May 5—Again to the Essex after two cooks and two counter men. Visited the Elks Club, the Kenmore, the Schlitz Bar, Club Bar and Murray Bar. In the afternoon I met some of the cooks of Keelers' State Street.

May 6—Visited chef and cooks of Union Depot, the Twentieth Century, Jack's, Belmont, and in the afternoon met several cooks. Got applications from three in Keelers' Broadway and two in Keelers' State Street, all being department chiefs.

May 7—Sunday—Visited the Globe and the Elks' Club. In the afternoon addressed the meeting of Typographical Union No. 4, afterwards visiting Mr. Cassiano's home where I met several more cooks, getting his application.

May 8—Visited the kitchens of the Hampton Hotel, the Ten Eyck, Albany Club, Brauns, Boulevard Cafe and Keelers' Broadway, where I got the application of the second cook. Went out with Secretary Hoffman.

May 9—Got the reinstatement of a waiter at Keelers' Broadway and also the application of a waiter at Keelers' State Street. Met culinary workers from different houses.

May 10—Visited the Farnmont, the Morris, the Presto, the Opera and the two Belmont Lunches. In the afternoon met cooks of Keelers' State Street and got the application of the chef entrepreneur.

May 11—Waited for the Ten Eyck cooks, the Kenmore, Jack's and the Globe; all promises.

May 12—Went to Boston where I met Vice-President Conley. In the evening attended a special mass meeting for cooks.

May 16—Arrived in Albany; met some cooks of Keelers' Broadway and initiated two of them.

May 17—Visited the Presto Restaurant, got the second cook's application and also the second of Brauns Lunch. Waited for the Hampton Hotel cooks and visited the chef of the Union Depot who had previously called up for a cook.

May 18—Met several cooks of the Ten Eyck; visited the Essex, Morris, Union and Electric Lunches.

May 19—Secretary Hopper, of Local 470 of Schenectady, came here and asked me to come to his city on the 22nd, for a conference, which I promised. Waited for the Keelers' State Street cooks in the early morning, in the afternoon and at night.

May 20—Had some orders for cooks, a chef, and had to hunt some up. Met the chef and second of the Globe and the chef and two cooks of Jacks. Got the application at the latter place.

May 21—Sunday—Visited the homes of three cooks and got in touch with quite a number of them, mostly all promising to join.

May 22—At the Ten Eyck where I got the application of one fry cook. Attended the meeting of Local 471 and then proceeded to Schenectady where we conferred on the local situation. It was agreed that I should appear at the Trades and Labor Assembly meeting on the 24th, which I promised to do.

May 23—Visited the Ten Eyck, Grand Palace, Cafe Boulevard, Brauns, Jacks and Globe, getting one application at the Grand Palace, a cook. At night I waited for the night crew of Keelers' State Street.

May 24—To the Elks' Club, the Vermont Lunch and the Opera Cafe. Proceeded to Schenectady, where I addressed the Trades and Labor Assembly and had a conference with the labor leaders. We decided on an organizing campaign and a committee of five was appointed to work with a committee of Local 470. I feel I can handle Schenectady and Albany at the same time and if possible will include the City of Troy.

May 25—Visited the Kenmore, Albany Club, Farnhams and the Hampton.

The ice is broken here but it takes constant hammering at them every day. They realize they need an organization but in many instances they are scared. All this has to be overcome. Many of the waiters who formerly belonged to our International Union will come back when they see the cooks in the organization. I will do everything possible, so when our labor representatives come to the capitol at the next session of the legislature they will find the majority of eating places thoroughly unionized. I realize it is a tough nut to crack, but where there is a will, there is a way.

My expenses for the month are as follows:

May—
 22-24—Schenectady to Albany.....$ 1.20
 Postage80
 Total$2.00
 Fraternally submitted,

A. MARTEL,
 International Organizer.

P. S.: During the month we have initiated 13 cooks and 4 waiters, and reinstated 5 waiters.

80-8-18--7--88-8-83-18-8-15

COLUMBUS, OHIO, May 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

April 26—I arrived in Springfield, Ohio, and addressed the Trades Council.

April 27—Canvassed the restaurants and hotels, also the soft drink places, but could not interest any of the workers; left for Columbus.

April 28 to 30—Canvassed the hotels, restaurants and cafeterias; found quite a few ex-members of our International from different cities; some said they would reinstate. I told them I would write to their locals and see what I could get them fixed up for.

May 1 to 3—Got out cards announcing mass meeting, and distributed them in all the places where food and drinks are served, and five waitresses and one cook showed at the meeting. The girls were afraid they would lose their jobs if they joined.

May 4—Held a conference with the manager of the Southern Hotel, and he assured me he would not discharge any of his help if they joined the union; also stated he used to be a union man himself.

May 5—Got busy with the girls at the Southern Hotel, and they promised me they would be at the next meeting. Canvassed the coffee shops in the Deshler and Chittenden Hotels, and waited that night at the Labor Hall and only four showed, but I got them to sign the charter blank.

May 6—Canvassed the Scioto Country Club and Columbus Country Club.

May 7—Left for Springfield. Got in touch with Brother Myers, a member-at-large, and he promised he would assist me in getting a local started there.

May 8—Called on Organizer Rich, of the Trade Council, as I had left a charter blank with him when I was there before, but he said he didn't have the time, so Brother Myers and myself tried, but it was in vain, so I got the seal and charter of the bartenders' local and sent same back to the general office.

May 9—Arrived in Dayton and installed the newly elected officers of Local 579, and I am pleased to report this local in the future is going to be a real labor organization, which it has never been in the past. Suspended members and outsiders had more privileges than the members who were paying dues, but from now on they must be in good standing to gain entrance. Attended the Local Joint Executive Board meeting and it was the first they have had in some time.

May 10—I left for Columbus.

May 11—I located the charters of the two old locals, but the bartenders' charter was used to protect a so-called club, and I had to show them the laws in regards to registered articles by the Government before I got it.

May 12—Went to Buckeye Lake and located the ex-secretary of the bartenders, Michael Tierney, who had failed to send the books and seal back to the general office. Came back to Columbus and received enough applications for a culinary charter.

May 13 to 19—Assisted the striking bakers. Attended Trades Council meeting and 70 delegates were present, I requested them to form a label league and only one delegate said he would assist. There is something wrong with the labor movement here; they had better wake up or some of the crafts will be in the same condition as the culinary workers. Held two meetings with the new local; initiated three waitresses.

May 20 to 26—I have canvassed the restaurants on High Street, and the former members of the old local don't understand what a union is formed for, as they want some individual to spend several hundred dollars in fixing up club rooms; as that was the case before and one man got all the benefits, the local got nothing but expenses. Conditions of hours and wages are not considered with them at all, and the ex-members of out-of-town locals have joined the Fraternal Order of Glue, for I have been extended favors from the locals in Ohio, and out of the State as well, lowering the reinstatement fee for those birds, and now I cannot get the few paltry dollars it would cost them to get right. They also want a gambling club and not a union.

During the month I have appeared before the following unions and distributed two thousand cards with our button, seeking their moral support, which they promised: Carpenters, painters, iron workers, lathers, bricklayers, machinists (two locals), tailors, hoisting engineers, stationary engineers, bakery workers, Pennsylvania shop crafts, boilermakers, blacksmiths, trainmen, barbers, hod-carriers, plumbers, cement workers. Nothing doing with the colored culinary workers; satisfied to work 365 days every year.

There are two new places opening up about the 15th of June and can use 30 first-class waiters; they must come with a paid-up card. I have written to out-of-town locals, but business must have picked up for no one will come.

The following is my expense account:

April—
 26—Columbus to Springfield and return.. $3 24
 May—
 7—Columbus to Springfield..... 1 62
 9—Springfield to Dayton and return.... 1 50
 10—Springfield to Columbus..... 1 62
 12—Columbus to Buckeye Lake and return 1 00
 Postage for the month..... 75

Total..... $9 73

Yours fraternally,

ROBT. LYONS,
 International Organizer.

SPRINGFIELD, MASS., May 25, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month:

From April 26 to May 17, my time was devoted in the interests of Local 201, Haverhill, Mass. I am pleased to report that the controversy between the hotel and restaurant proprietors and Local 201 has been satisfactorily adjusted. Local 201 has gained a victory in their fight against the newly formed Restaurant Keepers' Association, inspired and manned by a few proprietors, the master mind of the association. The proprietors refused to sign the 1922 agreement, declaring for an open shop, a reduction of wages and lengthening of hours. Had no further use for the union house cards, etc. At the expiration of the old agreement, April 16, Local 201 was obliged to remove the union house cards and declare a strike in all the establishments. Our members responded to the call with the exception of about sixteen or eighteen Greeks who listened to the master's voice and in most cases were advised by the bosses they would stand back of them. All kinds of promises were made, if they would do their bidding. Suffice to say that Local 201 took proper care of those individuals at the proper time. It was quite noticeable how the Chamber of Commerce wanted to show their love and esteem for organized labor, as intimated from reports of the proprietors' meetings. They were advised they must reduce wages, lengthen the hours and particularly declare for the open shop. Some of the proprietors closed their doors and advertised in the Boston and Haverhill papers for strike-breakers, without success. The officers of the Central Labor Union and Mr. Fred Knight, representing the Board of Arbitration and Conciliation, arranged a meeting between both parties. Mr. Knight presented an agreement in the interests of both parties, which our committee could not accept. The proprietors also submitted a counter proposition which attempted to dictate the policy of our organization, what should be charged for initiation fee, etc., which our committee refused to consider. After a lengthy discussion pro and con, the committee in charge declared negotiations closed with the Association and proceeded to sign up the individuals. Within a short time they were successful, in fact, they had the committee working overtime, as they seemed rather anxious to get their union house cards back. After most all the houses were signed up, further trouble started. The Greek proprietors were not living up to their part of the agreement. Secretary Flanagan, Business Agent Emery and the undersigned, were kept busy getting after them on account of the number of partners in excess of the two working proprietors recognized by the local and our laws, as well as the so-called working managers and their employees who refused to come out on strike when called. After considerable delay we were successful in getting all matters cleaned up. Our agreement stands as originally presented, with no changes whatever. Our boys and girls back to work and wishing to work in harmony and in the best interests of the proprietors, to meet with the individual proprietors and try to adjust any differences that may arise in the future. I don't believe the proprietors will attempt to start a similar fight with Local 201 when negotiating for a renewal of agreement, but will meet them as business men should. The last report that we have heard from the newly formed Restaurant Keepers' Association is that it went up in smoke. I regret that space will not permit to enumerate the names of our girls and boys that rendered such splendid work during the strike. They were on the job from start to finish. The officers and loyal members of Local 201 are to be congratulated for the success that has been achieved.

Other important matters were attended to. The former Secretary and Business Agent W. J. Kiley was expelled from Local 201 for absconding the funds of the local. Officers were elected and installed. Arranged for the bonding of the new officers. Attended two meetings of the Haverhill Central Labor Union. Newly elected delegate seated. Straightened out two pending death claims. Attended two meetings of Local 201, as well as meetings of the Executive Board. Twenty-seven new and twelve reinstated members. Notwithstanding the deplorable condition that the former secretary left the local in, Local 201 is today in better condition financially and numerically than ever before, with a good live president, secretary and business agent on the job, I can predict future success. During my time in the city, evenings, my time was devoted to visiting the various labor organizations in the interests of our labels and buttons.

May 15—Manchester. Meeting of Local 407. The local is in fairly good condition under existing circumstances, with the chief industry of the city, the textile mills, on strike for the past two months.

May 18—Held conference with the officers of Local 161 on new agreement, and pleased to report that the local is in A-1 condition, proprietors and the local working in harmony. New agreements signed up for another year. Brother Frank McGlone deserves due credit for the valuable work that has been accomplished for Local 161.

May 19—Left for Springfield to take up work in behalf of Local 273.

From the 20th to date, my time has been devoted in making a general canvass of the hotels and restaurants as well as visiting the various labor organizations in the interests of our labels and buttons.

The following is my expense account:

May—
8—Boston and return.....	$2 38
15—Manchester and return.....	2 50
18—Brockton	1 91
19—Springfield	4 52
Total.....	$11 31

Yours fraternally,
THOS. J. DURNIN,
International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-12-8-18

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 28, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report for the past month.

April 27 at Bloomington, Ill., where I canvassed the culinary workers in all of the places and held conferences with the officers of Local 589 and the officers of the Central Labor Union. Also attended a meeting of Local 589, at which two were initiated.

May 3 went to Centralia, Ill., and called upon the officers of the Central Labor Union, addressing that body in the evening.

May 4 to 7 canvassed the culinary workers in the eight eating establishments in Centralia and found them unwilling to join an organization at this time. Only two showed up for a meeting I had arranged for them on May 7.

May 8 went to St. Louis, Mo. Visited the headquarters of Locals 20, 208 and 249, and had a conference with the Executive Board of Local 20. Also conferred with Sister Olive King, financial secretary of Local 249, and with Bro. Charles Crabbill, secretary and business agent of Local 203, on organization matters.

May 9 visited the headquarters of Local 51 and conferred with Bros. Hugh Malloy, president, and George Wiesemann, financial secretary, on organization matters. Attended a meeting of Local 20. In company with Bro. Conrad Schott, secretary and business agent of Local 20, visited the waiters in several places and secured two reinstatements. Attended a fine meeting of protest against the Volstead enforcement law which was addressed by several good speakers, and at which several thousand people were present.

May 10, in company with Brother Schott, canvassed seven of the places in St. Louis County, unionizing three of them and securing three reinstatements. Also attended a meeting of Local 249, at which seven were initiated and two reinstated.

May 11 canvassed the culinary workers in five places in St. Louis County.

May 12 attended a meeting of the Executive Board of Local 51. Conferred with several of the members of the St. Louis Waiters' Club, asking them to become reinstated in Local 20. All of them promised to do so, and so far three of them have made good.

May 13 held a conference with the proprietor of the Lasale Restaurant, where Local 249 has a strike on and has been picketing for several weeks. Could not come to an agreement, but made an appointment to see him again. Visited the members of Local 51 in nine places.

May 14 addressed a meeting of the St. Louis Central Labor Union.

May 15 to 21, in company with Brother Schott, of Local 20, canvassed the culinary workers in twelve places in St. Louis County and fifteen places in the city. We secured the booking for steady and extra employees in all of the places we visited in the county, and gathered in eight reinstatements and two applications.

May 22 visited the headquarters of Local 353, conferring with three of the officers and arranging for a meeting of the local on Friday, May 26. Visited the headquarters of Local 208 and arranged to attend meetings to be held on May 31 and June 1. Attended a meeting of Local 249, at which five were initiated and two reinstated.

May 23, in company with Brother Schott, held a conference with Mr. Abe Anhauser, manager of the Anhauser-Busch Brewing Co., and arranged to meet him again. Attended a meeting of Local 20, at which three were initiated and eleven reinstated.

May 24, in company with Bro. Charles Baird, business agent of Local 51, canvassed the bartenders in twelve of the places, receiving one application. Canvassed the cooks in three of the places.

May 25, in company with Brother Schott, held a conference with Mr. John Clancy, president of the St. Louis Hotel and Restaurant Keepers' Association, and made arrangements to meet him again. Attended a conference of the Executive Board of Local 20.

May 26 held a conference with the executive officers of Local 353, attended a meeting of Local 353, and a meeting of the Executive Board of Local 51.

May 27 worked with Brother Baird in the interest of Local 51.

My expenses for the month were as follows:
 Railroad fare, Bloomington to Centralia, Ill. $4 98
 Railroad fare, Centralia to St. Louis, Mo. 2 52
 Postage for month..... 60

Total$8 10

Fraternally submitted,

E. W. PARLEE,
 International Organizer.

80-8-18--7--83-8-83-18-8-15

ATLANTA, GA., May 26, 1922.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER—The following is my report.

April 27, after canvassing the culinary workers of Chattanooga, Tenn., called a meeting for this date, seven members only appearing. Decided to call another meeting, as many who were favorable were working. At the meeting I was ably assisted by President Gus Ensinger and Secretary William Bork, of Bartenders' Local 312, and President Paul Aymore of the Central Labor Union.

May 4 held an organization meeting and secured eighteen applicants for a charter, which was sent for.

May 9 installed Local 522. Louis Myers was elected president; Albert S. Whitehead, secretary and business agent, along with a full set of officers. I was again assisted by Brothers Ensinger and Bork, of Local 312, to whom my thanks are tendered for the many courtesies and assistances given me. Brother Whitehead is a former president and business agent of the Stage Employees' Union and a very energetic and capable man. A number of old union men of other crafts are members of this new local.

Nearly all the cooks in this section of the country are colored, as are also the hotel waiters, and show no desire for organization, which confines organization work to the white waiters and waitresses, who are now nearly 100 per cent organized in Chattanooga. I succeeded in signing up and placing our union house card in fourteen restaurants, and five more places are ready to sign when cards arrive, so that we have nearly all the places which employ white help. The delegates from the new union were very warmly welcomed and seated in the Central Labor Union on May 22. Weekly meetings have been held and twenty-one additional candidates received.

I also attended all meetings of the Central Labor Union. On May 8 the ladies of the Woman's Relief Corps, G. A. R., presented a silk American flag to this body, which tends to show the esteem of the people of this community for organized labor.

May 24 arrived at Atlanta and am canvassing the city. So far can only report that the Greeks seem to be in command of the restaurant business here.

My expenses have been:
 May 23, Chattanooga to Atlanta.....$4 94
 Postage 73

Total$5 67

Fraternally submitted,

R. E. CROSKY,
 International Organizer.

THE FORUM

I SEE BY THE PAPERS.

"Off to a good start," as they will be saying out at Latonia during the month of June. In other words we are off after tendering the usual "glad to see you boys and girls—you are welcome to be one of the bunch, etc."

Years ago when May Irwin made more frequent visits to the several states than she has been making of recent years, she had a song, the conclusion of which was "Always leave them smiling when you say good-bye." And to the credit of May let it be said, she invariably did leave her audience with a smile and a fond remembrance of having enjoyed her entertainment.

Just for the nonce—get that nonce? Been out circulating among the returned members of the American Editorial Association—we shall try to get "you all" started with a smile, to do so we herewith reproduce a story grabbed out of Forbes, for April 29, 1922. The story is very appropriate in view of the statement made to the press not many days ago, in effect that Gould, the one the story is on, never had anything to do with a railroad which he did not put on the blink, or words to that effect. But here is the story which we feel carries a smile or two:

ONE ON THE MISERY PACIFIC.

When George Gould was president of the Missouri Pacific, that road did not stand as high in the public estimation as it does today. The story goes that Mr. Gould was making a trip over the road, and when the train stopped at a certain station, he stepped out on the platform. Accosting a son of Erin who was oiling the axles, he asked: "Well, Pat, how is the rolling stock?"

"Rotten," said Pat, "but I reckon it'll hold up for this trip."

"And what do you think of the road-bed," continued Gould, hoping for a more encouraging reply?"

"It's bum; but I guess we'll be able to get over it."

"Do you know who I am?" explained Mr. Gould.

"Sure, I know. You're Mr. George Gould, the president of the road. Oi knew your father before you, and, begorra, he'll be head of this road again soon."

"Why, man," exclaimed Mr. Gould, "don't you know my father is dead?"

"Sure, I know thot; but this road's going there, too."

Here is another, though to the uninitiated it won't bring a curl to the lip:

Wayne B. Wheeler, General Factotum for the Anti-Saloon League came out in a statement April 7, 1922, in which the following paragraph appears:

"The Anti-Saloon League of America, is the only national non-partisan organization which files a report under the law relating to Congressional elections."

That and much more of the same brand of bushwa was offered as an effort to overcome the bawling out given to Wheeler and his aggregation by Congressman Tinkham, of Massachusetts, mention of which was made in last month's survey.

To convince some of the doubting Thomases, who persist in carrying the impression that the MIXER AND SERVER is the only publication printing so-called wet and dry stuff, we offer two editorials from the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Daily Times, of April 29, 1922:

One's confidence in the good and the true is shaken by the report from Sheridan county, Kansas, to the effect that recently twenty-seven arrests for violations of the prohibition law were made; that six stills had been destroyed and that a councilman of the county seat had been forced to resign because of complicity in the bootlegging activities of the community. If this can be true of Kansas, what is to be hoped of the benighted regions round and about.

That's one, a little one 'tis true, but expressive of several things. The other, a more extended one, takes an able-bodied crack at the reformers, who are making it less difficult for the voters of the country to demand a change:

DISASTER THREATENING.

We published a letter the other day from a prominent and thoughtful woman of Brooklyn, N. Y., commending the attitude of The Chattanooga Times toward the rights of the States and the guarantees of liberty to the citizen in the constitution. We are now in receipt of another letter from an earnest, modest, but nonetheless interested woman of this city who writes to "indorse, approve and commend in every needed word I can command, precisely what Mrs. Morton, of Brooklyn, says. The rush to Washington for everything; the presence of federal myrmidons in our States and in our local communities spying upon the people and the constant encroachment of federal authority upon our local rights and privileges, is going to end in destroying, as you have well said, not alone that respect we once held for the national government, but is going to bring federal authority into contempt and cause a widespread hatred of its laws, its usages and its representatives. When patriotism shall have been transformed into contempt and loyalty to suspicion and disregard of the obligation of citizenship, then, indeed, will the republic be in danger."

The sentiments uttered by this studious woman are finding expression all over the country and are ominous of some impending disaster, unless there is reversal of such policies as have been put into execution during the past few years. Congressman Wingo, of Arkansas, speaking of one of the many bills pending in the congress to extend federal meddling in the affairs of the people of the States, said that he had recently made inquiries in his own State and had "found federal agents nosing into our little fruit gardens, even into the flower beds of the little children at the schools. They are going into the bathrooms, into the pantries, into the business houses; they are nosing into the books; and today, I say, in the State of Arkansas there is a greater number of these federal agents being supported by the taxpayers of America than there are state, county and municipal officers!"

There may be those who, for selfish reasons, for considerations of bigoted beliefs or for no reasons except that they rejoice in seeing their fellowmen coerced and put in leading strings, who do not see danger in these manifestations of un-American despotism, but to the thoughtful and faithful adherent of the doctrines of the fathers and to the firm believer in liberty and freedom as the only hope of felicity for the people and the perpetuation of the republic, there is nothing in it but final disaster unless checked and brought to a full stop.

The amusing part of the foregoing—to us at least, is the attitude of Congressman Wingo, of Arkansas, who voted for the submission of the Prohibition Amendment to the State Legislatures, voted Aye on the Volstead Law and yes on the Willis-Campbell Anti-Beer Bill. Possibly he has had his ear to the ground and heard the rumbling of the liberal voters of the Fourth Congressional District. Wingo gave the professional meddlers the boost they wanted when it done the most good, and he can spill all the crocodile tears he has in stock, but the voters of his District can well afford to give some other fellow a chance to be among those present when the Volstead law is given the boot.

From Secretary-Treasurer John J. Manning, of the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, we obtain the following brief but excellently written epic on the Union Label under the caption of "The Conquering Power":

Out of strife and struggle came the union label. It is a sacred gift to us from those early trades unionists who fought fearlessly and unceasingly that the workers who came after them might enter the ranks of labor better equipped for future victories. It is a priceless gift of power and helpfulness.

Therefore, we must be guided by the firm conviction that the label is of supreme worth to us. Bear in mind that it is the aim of the label to advance all those who toil. It stands for fellowship. It helps to encourage, to inspire, and to uplift. It recognizes no obstacles except neglect.

Most of our troubles grow from a tiny seed—indifference. Cease to be careless and neglectful and learn to be constant. Cease to blame others. Take the matter home to yourself. Make use of every opportunity given to us to advance ourselves through the label.

We are not creatures of circumstance. We are creators. We make our own impediments and handicaps. All growth is from the center outward. To those who recognize the true scope and usefulness of the label, its value can not be overestimated. Keep this in mind when spending money, and then watch results. Experience will reveal what explanation can not.

Remember, the value of the label is the use we make of it. Consider the present status of the label, and you will readily realize what is the cause. Then array yourself for battle and begin to create desirable conditions. Your purchasing power is your weapon. Learn to wield it.

It is indeed a priceless gift of power and helpfulness, there is no agency extant which compares with spending your union earned money for union made products, when that lesson sinks in and is heeded by the wage-earners, they will be able to command instead of beg, for the things labor stands for.

Front page space was accorded to the statement made by President Gompers, of April 30, 1922. Students of world affairs recognize that what President Gompers avers is solemn truth susceptible of verification without a great deal of effort. His assertion that "Russia is on the bargain counter, behind which stands Lenine as a bandit merchant, to take what he can and what will serve his purpose in exchange for the heritage of a people rendered helpless by him and his," hits the target right in the center, according to newspaper men and students of current events.

All of which reminds us of a brief bit clipped from the Columbia (S. C.) Record, which reads:

LENINE'S DISEASE.

The report that Lenine has an incurable disease is a bit misleading; Lenine is an incurable disease.

The attendants at the Genoa Conference will have a real chance to get the insides of the situation in Russia, for the several men who will speak for Russia, know the situation and will divulge the facts if pressed by the proper methods. Russia's spokesmen are clever and exceptionally educated men, a fact that will be made evident before the Conference is many days in session.

They may come loaded down with whiskers on their faces, but there is reason to believe that those who imagine they have any hairy appendages on the brain are going to be disappointed.

If further evidence was needed to convince some of our fellows that the Dry Law issue is not dead and buried, that evidence is offered by the Anti-Saloon League which sent out a call on April 30: "To the friends of prohibition enforcement, to defeat all candidates for Senate and House of Representatives who favored modification of the Volstead law. The situation which confronts the voters in the primaries between now and October to nominate 435 Congressmen and 35 United States Senators is a challenge to the friends of law and order."

The statement further says that, while two-thirds of Congress would be required to resubmit the Eighteenth Amendment, a bare majority could weaken or repeal the enforcement law, the committee declared that "thirty-four avowed national organizations are now at work to discredit the prohibition amendment to the Constitution of the United States, to nullify its purpose and to defeat its enforcement by the nomination and election of wet Congressmen and United States Senators.

Are you registered? If not get on the job.

More than an unusual amount of space was devoted to the subject matter of the Income Tax in the early months of the present year, but so far as we recall, but few publications gave attention to the enormous amount of untaxed or tax free securities. The following from the St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press is information which is well to have handy when subject of taxation is being discussed:

EVIL OF TAX-FREE SECURITIES.

The Federal land bank system appeals to the farmer because he is compelled to pay interest rates on farm mortgages. It was developed at a hearing before the ways and means committee of the house that the capital once available at fair rates for farm loans became more and more scarce as the special taxation was loaded upon it. The man with enough money to bring him under the operation of the surtax found he could get a better return by investing in tax-free securities than in farm mortgages, though at a lower interest rate. Farm mortgages totaling more than $8,000,000,000 are outstanding and the Federal land banks are carrying only $415,000,000, or about 5 per cent. Ninety-five per cent of the farmers are paying a higher interest rate because the tax system has driven money out of the mortgage market. It seems incredible that the farm interest should desire to perpetuate this system, to say nothing of making it worse.

In some labor circles there is a similar attitude to excess profits and surtaxes and it is equally incredible. The building trades have been struck a hard blow because there is no money to go into building investments and encounter strenuous taxation. It is safer and more profitable to invest it in the tax-exempt securities with which the country is flooded. Public utilities, ready to expand and furnish wider employment, are stopped by the same conditions. It was stated before the same house committee that companies had been obliged to pay 8, 10 and even 12 per cent for money which otherwise would have preferred the securities which paid only $4\frac{1}{2}$ and 5 per cent, but escaped the grinding taxation which these farm and labor interests would like to restore.

The current number of the Bache Review says the amount of tax-free securities issued in 1921 totaled $1,305,868,916, and the amount now outstanding foots up anywhere from sixteen to thirty billion dollars! Think of the difference if only a good-sized fraction of this inconceivable sum of money were available for the purpose of the farm and factory, for expansion and development in commerce, industry and construction. But there it is and there it will continue to go as long as practical tax operations are dictated by impractical theorists.

.

The old bromide about "appearances are sometimes deceitful," must have brushed across the thought-pan or cylinder of O. McIntyre, when he sent the following to the Commercial Tribune:

He wore a nut brown overcoat, white spats, pink striped shirt with collar to match, gray derby and lemon-colored gloves. He carried a cane that has an elephant's tusk as a handle. Quite intriguing, very. My guess was that he was advance agent for a circus. Two friends with me who saw him were equally sure he was an ocean liner card sharp. At the desk of the hotel in whose lobby we saw him it was learned that he was "one of the shrewdest bankers in London." Another illusion burst with a bang. My idea of a London banker was a fat little roly-poly person with side wheel whiskers, shaggy eyebrows, severely plain clothes—black or gray—high hat and a pronounced conversational grunt.

.

In the old days—Before the Drought—when a newspaper needed a filler all they looked for was an item about a saloon scrap or an item about a saloon employee pulling off a rough-neck stunt.

Nowadays it's different, the newsroom hook usually contains several articles similar to the following:

PASTOR, UNDER CHARGES, FOUND TIED AND GAGGED LYING ALONG HIGHWAY.

Lawton, Okla., April 30.—The Rev. Thomas Irwin, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, who, several days ago was ordered tried by his presbytery on charges of conduct unbecoming a minister, was found bound and gagged lying in a ditch near the Medicine Park gate, twelve miles east of here, by a party of motorists today.

Observe, if you please, that there is no reference to hooch or booze in the item—keep in mind that the victim was gagged, what he may have said later on about those who assaulted him being intoxicated, etc., is left for the reader to surmise.

.

The passing of the red light as a danger signal seems imminent. In an article to the Cincinnati Post recently, Dr. L. S. Colter, Auto Club secretary had the following interesting bit of comment to offer:

Editor The Post: Recently there appeared in The Post communications criticising color of blinking lights of the safety posts on Gilbert Avenue and suggesting authorities be requested to change them so they will flash red signals.

Red being the generally accepted signal of danger, many seem to think a mistake has been made by installing a yellow blinking light.

Some time ago the National Association of Automobile Engineers and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce formulated a code of traffic signals and lights for universal use. Twenty-six of the large cities adopted this code, and the blinking yellow light on Gilbert Avenue was erected by the Automobile Club in conformity to this code.

According to the code yellow is the proper color to use. The meaning of the different colors in the lights are as follows:

RED—Danger. Do not pass.

YELLOW—Pass with caution.

GREEN—Pass with safety.

Red should be used as the color for the light only in those places where the light should not be passed because of a distinct danger just beyond the light.

It is the desire of those interested in a universal code of signal lights to have the municipalities of United States adopt this uniform code, so that a motorist from one city motoring in any other city will at once know the meaning of the signal lights in the particular city he may happen to be in. If red were used in the lights on Gilbert Avenue a motorist from some other city would be very apt to interpret it to mean to stop and not pass.

The Post can do the public a service by assisting in educating it as to the significance of the different colors used in these blinking safety posts.

If you have a Fliv, and quite a few of our girls and boys own one, you probably are interested in the subject matter of protection, even those who have preferred to invest in other lines of amusement and recreation should keep in touch with the meaning of signals.

.

One of our boys located in Ottawa, wants to know if it is a fact that Briand, when he visited the United States professed to be a dry?

The best we can offer as a reply is an item that appeared in many of our daily papers on the date indicated in the dispatch, December 3, 1921:

QUEER "WATER" FOUND BY BRIAND IN "DRY" U. S.

Paris, December 3.—American prohibition is not so bad, according to Premier Briand. When the premier was asked, today, what he thought of the American "dry law," he replied: "Conditions are different from what I supposed they would be. I do not know if it was done out of courtesy for me, but I drank water sometimes that reminded me of Bordeaux, and sometimes I actually thought I was drinking Burgundy. It may be that my imagination helped me, however."

A friend, to whom we had written, informing him of what a California prune had done to our dining-room furniture, says: After you get another tooth working, ask the wife to put over the following, it's great when you do not feel overly hungry. We pass it on to the rest of the family with the assurance that it is good:

PRUNE COFFEE CAKE.

Two eggs well beaten; 1 cup sugar; ½ cup milk; 2 cups sifted flour; 2 teaspoons baking powder; ½ cup melted shortening; 1 teaspoon vanilla extract. Beat eggs, add sugar, sift flour and baking powder; add to mixture gradually with milk, beat until smooth, then add melted shortening and extract. Pour into 2 greased layer cake pans, cover entire top with uncooked pitted prunes. Bake in a moderate oven.

The primaries which are to be held in your voting district should not be ignored. See that regular fellows are nominated for office then you can feel like a voter on election day, having a choice between two candidates whose supporters believe in. Citizenship means more than being a citizen, it exacts action and unless you do use your rights as a voter you are no more useful to a community than the non-citizen. Trades unionism means responsibility on the part of members and to be a real trades unionists you must exercise your voter's privilege, help nominate and elect to office the right kind of men to make the right kind of laws and administer them when enacted. Use your voting power to protect your job and the industry which gives you employment. You may try to excuse yourself by saying that your employer doesn't give a hoot, and why should you. But that is a poor alibi for a liberty-loving American. Do your duty as your conscience dictates, let the other fellow ignore it if he wants to, he is the one that loses, not you.

Help the applicants for citizenship to complete the job so that they can joint with you on election day to relegate the fanatics to oblivion.

Newspaper kidders occasionally put one over which the public swallows and seems to enjoy. The following is a sample of joshing that worries the dry aggregation:

RUM RIVER, STILL WET, MAY BE CHANGED TO VOLSTEAD

Washington, D. C.—Out in Minnesota there is a river which has long been known by the ancient and honorable name of Rum river. History does not tell how it got its name and until recently it has continued on its career without causing any stir in the outside world. But times have changed.

Among the choice bits of news that have filtered into prohibition circles in, Washington was the information that a formidable movement is under way in Minnesota to change the alcoholic name of the inoffensive river, which contains between its banks nothing but the purest water, to the Volstead river, after the famous author of the prohibition enforcement law, himself a representative from the State of Minnesota.

The movement has caused an anonymous native bard to break into song. His verses have been printed in Minnesota newspapers and have just reached Washington. They follow:

THE VOLSTEAD RIVER.

Do you recall that night in June,

Upon the Volstead river?

We listened to the jazziest tune,

We watched the moonlight quiver.

I oft since then have quaffed the moon,

But never, boy, oh, never

Can I forget that night in June

Upon the Volstead river.

Our boat rocked wildly without oars,

The bottles bobbed in batches:

The drunkards dancing on the shores

Sang ribald songs in snatches.

I know not why the old jazz rang

Through all my soul, but never

Can I forget the songs they sang

Upon the Volstead river.

There is a Snake river in Minnesota and there are snake rivers in other parts of the country. Thus far no movement to change their names has been reported.

The efforts made by Californians to celebrate the days of the pioneers vividly, brought to the surface a move which secured the co-operation of many male workers "to stop shaving until after the big doings," thus offering a whisker wearing aggregation. Information comes that some of the base ball tossers objected, saying that a man could not play ball with his face loaded down with spinach. Evidently, if the news item is true, and we doubt it, the baseball players have overlooked the bunch of men from the House of David—all of whom have long hair and whiskers galore, and play ball, they sure can do that stunt and do it right. The following appeared in a recent number of Leslies:

WHEN PLAYERS WORE WHISKERS.

Base ball playing rules differed greatly prior to 1845. The games that had left their impress on the elemental game of base ball were handball, barn ball, one old cat, two old cat, three old cat, four old cat, town ball and round ball, or the New England game. Town ball was played with from 10 to 20 on a side. The influence of hand ball was shown in the fact that when the first rules of base ball were adopted by the Knickerbocker base ball team in 1845, and played up to the first convention of ball players, a game consisted of 21 counts or "aces."

The desire for some form of outdoor sport seemed to follow the nation's drift toward manufacturing. As cities were built up, something was demanded which would afford both exercise and relaxation to the thousands in those new centers of American life. In one of his earliest articles written on the subject of the possibilities of base ball, Mr. Chadwick said:

"The physique of Americans has long been a vulnerable point for the attacks of foreigners on the weaknesses of our countrymen, and hitherto we have only too well merited the palpable hits made by our healthy outdoor-sport-loving cousins of England. * * * Base ball will bring back the physical standards of our forefathers, whose well-exercised muscles enabled them to lay low the forests of the Western wilderness."

Many illustrations were brought up, showing the relation of base ball and temperance. Said one editorial writer in an early-day guide:

"Base ball demands the skill of billiards without the necessity of remaining in a heated room, with the temptation of a drinking bar ever before one's eyes."

In one of the first of the guides, before the professional era, one finds the initial imprint of slang as applied to the game. There are elaborate explanations of such items as "a liner," "a hot one," "a muffed ball," and "a grounder." In such fashion did the base ball "language" have its beginnings. Base ball readers of today require no keys to colloquial descriptive articles which are shrouded in deepest gloom so far as the uninitiated are concerned.—ARTHUR CHAPMAN, in Leslie's.

Base ball guides and publications seldom make reference to the old days without offering pictures of the Champions—the old Cincinnati Reds—of fifty years ago. Whiskers had a chance among that bunch.

Speaking about base ball recalls the recent demise of Captain Anson of the old Chicago White Socks. Adrian Anson was a fine sample of sportsman, a real ball player and a gentleman. He left his impress on the national game. His name and prowess will be remembered long after the money bags of his day and time have passed into oblivion.

* * *

Here is a straw which indicates that the wind is still blowing in a liberal direction:

GOVERNOR'S AG'IN IT.

Oklahoma City, April 26.—Enforcement of the prohibition law is a failure.

So says Governor J. B. A. Robertson of Oklahoma, who declares he was a prohibitionist before the Volstead act. But he has no corrective measure to offer, he says. He "just wants the folks all to know some facts and leave the answer to them."

* * *

Reference in a previous survey relative to President Gompers' attack on W. Z. Foster, brought us a request that we print the item.

GOMPERS SCORES FOSTER AND THE "ONE BIG UNION."

(Associated Press Dispatch.)

Chicago, April 13.—William Z. Foster, who directed the steel strike, is charged by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, with being the instigator of the so-called "one big union" movement in the labor organization. The charge came in an address before presidents of various unions in the Chicago Federation of Labor, and followed a session in which the "one big union" movement was assailed and defended.

The Chicago federation recently passed a resolution petitioning the American Federation of Labor to call a conference to discuss the feasibility of amalgamating all unions in any industry into one central body.

"Back of that resolution," Mr. Gompers charged, "is the propaganda of radical revolution to overthrow the constituted Government of the United States. To do that, as Lenine himself said, the American Federation of Labor must be overthrown and William Z. Foster wants to become the autocrat of America."

The Labor Herald, of which Foster is editor, Mr. Gompers described as a "monumental, brazen publication," and the Trades Union Educational league, of which Foster is the secretary, an "organization attempting to dictate the policies of the labor movement."

"Lately," he continued, "Foster has been in Russia with Lenine and Trotsky. Judging from his own statements, no man visiting the Soviet was ever treated better, and yet in the few weeks that he was there he lost thirty pounds."

* * *

The following brief bit makes good on a statement made in these pages some time ago to the effect that the big hotels of the country do not employ citizens. We clipped this item from the Times-Star of April 12, 1922:

CLASSES IN ENGLISH FOR CHICAGO HOTEL EMPLOYEES.

Chicago, Ill.—Three large Chicago hotels have opened classes in English at their buildings for their employes, according to the Chicago Association of Commerce. The hotels are co-operating with the Americanization committee of the association.

* * *

Here is one from the Smoky City which may be added to your assortment of Judge Made Laws and Regulations:

JUDGE ASSAILED.

(By United Press.)

Pittsburgh, April 12.—Asserting public sentiment is against the coal strike, Charles P. Orr, federal judge, has refused final citizenship papers to several striking miners, C. P. Fagan, vice-president of District No. 5, United Mineworkers, charged today.

Judge Orr by this action "cast a reflection on every American citizen," Fagan said.

"Public sentiment is against this strike," Judge Orr told applicants for American citizenship, according to Fagan. "Go back to work and I'll grant you your papers."

Fagan said hundreds of striking miners are anxious to become naturalized, but Judge Orr's action prevented this.

* * *

The following information may come in handy to members who make it a practice to pick a nice cool job in the mountains for the summer season:

OPEN SEASON IN NATIONAL PARKS.

(Associated Press Dispatch.)

Washington, April 13.—Opening and closing dates of the tourist season in the National parks for 1922 has been announced by Secretary Fall as follows:

Great Lake National park, Oregon, July 1 to September 20.

General Grant National park, California, May 24 to October 10.

Glacier National park, Montana, June 15 to September 15.

Grand Canyon National park, Arizona, open all year.

Hawaii National park, Hawaii Islands, open all year.

Hot Springs National park, Arkansas, open all year.

Lafayette National park, Maine, June 1 to November 1.

Lassen Volcanic National park, California, June 15 to September 1.

Mesa Verde National park, Colorado, May 15 to November 1.

Mount McKinley National park, Alaska, no official season (summer only).

Mount Rainier National park, Washington, June 15 to September 1.

Rocky Mountain National park, Colorado, June 15 to October 1.

Sequoia National park, California, May 24 to October 10.

Wind Cave National park, South Dakota, June 1 to September 30.

Yellowstone National park, Wyoming, June 20 to September 15.

Yosemite National park, California, open all year.

Zion National park, Utah, May 15 to October 15.

On the opening date the park hotels and camps will be prepared to accommodate visitors and the first scheduled motor trips will be operated with daily trips thereafter until closing date. Reduced round-trip summer rates with stopover privileges have been announced by the railroads, effective June 1.

From the Enquirer of April 24, 1922, we glean information to the effect that the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks seriously consider the erection of an office building at the cost of from $350,000 to $500,000. Had we put that penny a month assessment in operation when the "Story of a Cent" was being printed, we could have had an office building worth not less than $800,000 and pretty nearly paid for at this date. Will we ever get on the job and own our own home?

Do you recall an incident of a few years ago when a man who paraded under the name of Death Valley Scotty, backed all the rest of the spenders off the board for a brief period of time. Here is an article from the Times-Star that will interest you, for it offers information about the place where Scotty was supposed to have cleaned up his coin.

HADES MAY BE NO HOTTER THAN DEATH VALLEY, CAL.

Washington, April 28.—Death Valley, California, is the hottest region this side of —, certainly the hottest region in the United States, if not on earth. The Weather Bureau says so, basing the claim on the records established at Greenland Ranch, Weather Bureau sub-station in Death Valley. The average of extreme maximum temperature reported since 1911 has been 125 degrees Fahrenheit. At Greenland Ranch temperatures of 100 degrees or higher occur almost daily during June, July and August. The hottest month on record is July, 1917, when the mean temperature was 107.2 degrees F. The temperature of 134 degrees observed on July 10, 1913, is believed to be the highest natural-air temperature ever recorded. Death Valley is from two to eight miles wide and about a hundred miles long, lying between high mountain ranges. It is the deepest depression in the United States, its lowest point being 178 feet below sea level. The normal annual precipitation in the valley is less than two inches. There is a group of springs at Greenland Ranch whose water has a temperature of about 100 degrees, and which is sufficient to irrigate more than 70 acres.

When you are wiping the perspiration—low-brows call it just plain sweat—from off your manly forehead, think of how lucky you are in not having to sign out with that Greenland Ranch aggregation.

From the same publication we scissor the following more than interesting bit about a beverage which most of us insist upon having in order to get a good start for the day:

MANY HUMAN HEADS SAVED BY COFFEE-DRINKING WORLD.

Washington, April 27.—"An island which approximates the area of Missouri and has a coast line longer than that of the United States exclusive of our Gulf States and Alaska is Celebes, of the Dutch East Indies," notes a bulletin from the National Geographic society's Washington (D. C.) headquarters. Discussing the island as one which has been especially inconspicuous despite the wide attention recently paid to South Pacific lands; and only emerging into interest because of the failure of a few agitators to make headway with a Dutch Indies "Separatist Movement," the bulletin continues: "Celebes has been compared to a star fish with one of its five rays missing. The name has a plural form because navigators long believed it to be an archipelago. It is as if our peninsulas had been tied together at the base. It would not be playing with words to describe Celebes as an island that is all peninsula."

"A baboon without a tail, a wild cow whose front teeth curve back to its ears, and a bird that breaks its shell and runs off to the woods, never seeing its mother, are some of the freakish features of Celebes. Butterflies, some almost transparent, all exceedingly colorful, and cuckoos with red and yellow bills and purple tails, are among its beauties; while green snakes and red ants are two of its principal pests."

"By demanding your morning coffee you helped stop head hunting among the natives in north Celebes. If you are depressed by too many murders on the first page of the paper propped behind your coffee cup; be cheered by the good news that the chiefs of Minahassa no longer decorate their houses with skulls nor demand that their relatives place two newly cut-off human heads upon their graves. All of which came about because you, and many millions more, insist upon coffee for breakfast."

"The practical Dutch realized that the kite-like northern tail of Celebes would grow coffee. They brought seeds and Javans to plant it. They offered the Celebes chiefs five per cent of the produce for overseeing the native cultivation. The Dutch did not talk much, it would seem, about the infamy of cutting off one's neighbor's head; they effectually appealed to the acquisitive instinct of the natives."

Do you recall the old days when you borrowed the paper-backed thriller from Skinnay and hid away until you absorbed all the ups and downs of the hero and finally landed the villain? Well, the man who made life worth while in the old days passed in his checks as set forth in the following news item:

New York, April 27.—"I can't stand the gaff, Joe, so I'm going out. Everything has gone to smash, and me with it."

That was the note left by Frederic Van Rennsalaer Dey, creator and author of the famous "Nick Carter" novels, who committed suicide in a hotel room here. His body was found by Deputy Police Commissioner Joseph Faurot, an old friend, to whom the note was addressed, and who received in it the first notice of the suicide. Dey turned out "Nick Carter" thrillers at the rate of one a week for twenty years. He had not written anything for two years. His later ones were under the nom de plume of Varick Vanardy, with the hero another detective, "Crewe."

BLIND GIRL SEES WITH HER NOSE AND HEARS WITH HER FINGER-TIPS.

Chicago, April 28.—Lacking eyes that see and ears that hear, Willeta Huggins, 17, an inmate of the Wisconsin school for the blind at Janesville, yet can hear and see through her nose and her finger-tips. She demonstrated her almost supernatural powers before 500 persons attending a meeting of the Chicago medical society.

By placing her hands on the wrist, chest or head of any person, Miss Huggins can tell exactly what that person is saying and can carry on an intelligent conversation. Once she "hears" a voice through her fingers she does not forget it. By holding her fingers over the receiver she can carry on a conversation by telephone.

Through her finger-tips she "read" the headlines of a newspaper and by rubbing her nose over a page she told how many persons were in a photograph. She could tell that two were men and one was a woman, she said, "because there were white spaces between the men's legs."

Miss Huggins told the colors of skeins of silk, the shades of hats handed up by women in the audience and the denominations of paper money. It just smells different," was her explanation.

Physicians pronounced the demonstration of her strange powers given by Miss Huggins as the most remarkable they ever had witnessed. They took every precaution to guard against illusory tactics and all of them, among them many of the leading physicians and surgeons of Chicago, pronounced the girl's gift genuine.

We clipped the following from the Garment Worker of recent date:

WOMEN'S WAGE CUT AROUSES EDITOR.

Sacramento, Calif.—Editor Cook of the Sacramento Tribune joins with organized labor in flaying the State industrial welfare commission and its woman member, Mrs. Katherine Phillips Edson, especially, for reducing the women's minimum wage from $16 to $15 a week.

Mrs. Edson presented figures to show that a working woman can live on $14.93 a week. Editor Cook says:

"Who the Hades authorized Mrs. Edson to obtain figures of the lowest point of existence for working women? Could this work not just as well have been left to interested employers? Is it part of her secretarial duties to compile data to be used as propaganda for employers? If so, then the welfare commission is not a body beneficial to working women and its abolishment cannot be brought about any too quickly."

"We have known Mrs. Edson for a number of years and her manner of living has evidenced an income exceeding $14.93 per week she recommended for wage working women. In fact, Katherine has feasted on the fat of the land and adorned her willowly figure with all the 'glad rags' of prosperity."

"Suppose some one recommends cutting the salary of Mrs. Edson to $14.93 per week? Would there be a weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth? O, Rachel, you know it!"

"Know what happened to Little Johnny Jones and his sister, Sue, who ate the apple of emerald hue? Well that wouldn't be a circumstance to the noise Kathy would make if she were compelled to eke out an existence on $14 per."

One of our boys, who has been making London his temporary stopping place, sent us the following, clipped from the London Post, and which we call—

COCKNEY ENGLISH.

"Ho, yus, 'Erbert, yer don't 'arf see some funny fings a-comin' 'ome late o' nights, not 'arf yer don't. In the faroff I sees a lummikin' 'um-guffin' trampoosin' and squirmin' arahnd an' when I gets near there 'e was, a regular 'uman compass, wiv' is timber toe deep dahn a plug-ole, a-doin' a steady 4-mile a' hour an' a-drovin' as pritty a 4-foot circle as ever yer sees in yer nat'ral. My! It was a blinko—a fair ferrica-douzer! 'Doin' a circ'lar tore, matey?' I yaffed, friendly. 'No,' says 'e, 'just goin' 'ome to the bosom of my fambly, like you.' An' the gol-lumpus kep' goin' rahnd agin. 'Tike yer all night like that,' says I, an' I hikes the kivey aht, puts 'im on the straight an' says, 'So long, mate!' 'Toodle-oo,' says 'e, an' off 'e goes, dot an' carry one, right as rain and 'appy as a sandboy."

Sounds nutty, eh? But wait a moment, Old Top, until you have had a chance to soak up some of the squirrel food contained in the following, printed in the Cincinnati, Ohio, United States of America, Times-Star, of March 29, 1922:

WHANGDOODLE—FLAPDOODLE.

New York, March 29.—Department stores, school principals and various uplift organizations have declared war on the "Shifters," that organization for graft that apparently sprang from nowhere and which has embraced thousands of the city's youth in its membership.

At one of the large high schools for girls there is or was the Flapdoodle Chapter, Society of Day Shifters. Much mystery attached itself to this unit of the mysterious order. One of the former members explained to a reporter that the term "Day Shifters" had been adopted to distinguish it from as well as relate it to a boys' club known as the Whangdoodle Chapter, Society of Night Shifters.

When a Flapdoodle meets a Whangdoodle a most remarkable conversation ensues, according to the ex-member of the former chapter. A female hopper becomes a sap and a floor flusher (the male of the species) is referred to as a sip. The flapper is invited to shake it or dance, whereas should the girl do the inviting, the Whangdoodle is asked to drag a sock.

Scathing reference is made to some acquaintance who is too frugal for joyfulness. He is a slat who slimps, or a one-way guy. In other words, he has fishhooks in his pockets and nothing that ever goes in sees again the light of day—a tightwad, to be precise. An over nice boy is a cake-eater or crumb-gobbler, and a weasel is the philanderer who seeks to alienate the affections of a flapper's slat or a slat's flapper.

A wurp is a killjoy or a boy or girl taking a too serious view of life. Nothing could be lower in the human scale than a slunge, and a weed is a flapper or a slat who is given to doing the rash and unexpected thing. If a flapper or a slat quarrel, reference is made thereto as a flat shoe. If a reconciliation takes place they are said to have stepped on it. A sharpshooter is one who dances well and spends money freely. A goof is a boob.

After putting all of that before the printer-man, we shall sort of keep out of sight until after those two items are set up. It is tough to inflict it on men who show friendship, but we had to keep step with the procession.

From the Globe-Democrat, St. Louis, Mo., May 4, 1922, the following was clipped. We are going to let it ride without loading it with any comment:

TIME TO RECOGNIZE RIGHTS OF EVERY ONE WHO DOES NOT BELIEVE IN PROHIBITION, EPISCOPAL BISHOP TELLS CONVENTION.

Boston, Mass., May 3.—Bishop William Lawrence of the Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, in his annual report to the Diocesan Convention, today asked whether it was not time to recognize the right of every citizen who did not believe in constitutional prohibition to say so and in public.

"Hundreds of thousands of working men who found solace and comradeship after the day's work in what they felt to be their innocent glass of beer had it snatched from them," the bishop said, "and thousands of reputable citizens found their personal liberties and domestic habits broken in upon."

"Surely it is competent for every citizen to speak, work and do everything consistent within the law to have a law either amended or rescinded."

Bishop Lawrence considered the effect of prohibition on industry and asked:

"How are those directors and officers who drink liquor going to answer the question of men under their employ? Why is that which is bad for our efficiency not just as bad for your efficiency?"

"The plain people who have invested their earnings in these corporations are also asking these questions and they have got to be answered," the bishop said.

In the language of the days not quite forgotten, "Fill 'Em Up Again." We do so by submitting the following from the Cincinnati Enquirer, of May 16, 1922:

ALCOHOL FREED OF BLAME IN CAUSING HARDENING OF ARTERIES.

"Alcohol does not cause hardening of the arteries or any of the diseases of the vascular system," said Dr. Martin H. Fischer, professor of physiology, College of Medicine, University of Cincinnati, and an internationally known scientist, author and research worker, before the Cincinnati Academy of Medicine last night.

Dr. Fischer substantiated his statement by saying that statistics compiled showed that alcohol is not a factor to be dealt with in the treatment of such diseases. Although this theory of Dr.

Fischer is not new to the medical profession and scientific research workers, a large number of laymen have been of the opinion that alcohol was one of the determining factors in hardening of the arteries.

Dr. Fischer's statement was corroborated by Dr. David I. Wolfstein, professor of psychiatry, College of Medicine, University of Cincinnati, following the general discussion on the floor of the academy on the address of Dr. Fischer.

In an interview Dr. Fischer said he was not advocating the use of "hard liquor" for the public, but that he saw no harm in light wines and beer, and that he was in favor of both.

After perusing Doctor Fischer's statement, it may be well to state that the College of Medicine, of the University of Cincinnati, takes no back-seat from any of the world's famous medical schools; in fact is so close to being considered the leader by the men who know, the medical men themselves that the layman has no choice but to agree. One by one the images constructed by the fanatical drys are being shot to smithereens.

Here is a belated article, one that we did not have room for until the present time; it was printed February 13, 1922, by the Times-Star:

Associate Justice John H. Clarke of the United States Supreme court, addressing the alumni of the New York University Law school, at the annual alumni dinner, Saturday night, said: "The Eighteenth amendment has placed an unprecedented and demoralizing strain upon its country's laws. It required millions of men and women abruptly to give up habits and customs which they thought not immoral or wrong but which, on the contrary, they believed to be necessary to their reasonable comfort and happiness. The end is difficult to see."

The declaration of Justice Clarke might well go hand-in-hand with an utterance quoted recently by an ex-army chaplain, at a meeting of members of the American Veterans of Foreign Wars. This is the quotation: "Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself, for it goes beyond the bounds of reason, in that it attempts to control a man's appetite by legislation, and makes crime out of things that are not crimes. A prohibition law strikes a blow at the very principles on which our Government was founded."

The man who uttered those words, originally, was Abraham Lincoln.

Here is a neat bit for which James M. Allison, in charge of the Times-Star Bureau in New York, is responsible:

My friend from the East Side who brings me in a bit of humor now and then, has just described to me a spirited court scene, in which the defendant sought to aid his attorney.

The defendant was on the witness stand, being questioned by the attorney for the plaintiff.

"Where were you on Chuly d' nineteen?" the attorney asked.

"I opchecht!" interrupted the attorney for the defendant.

"Lettim esk me! Lettim esk me!" said the witness. "I ken enser!"

"I opchecht, y'r honer," reiterated the attorney for the defendant. "Id hes nutting t' do wit' d' case."

"Lettim esk me!" repeated the defendant. "I should worry if he esks me vere vas I on Chuly d' nineteent!"

An argument of such a spirited nature followed that the court was compelled to intervene several times. Each attorney was contending for his point, one asserting that the question was not germane and the other that he would show it was germane. At intervals the witness protested that he hadn't the slightest fear of the question. "Lettim esk me!" he said.

The court finally ruled that the question was permissible.

"Hah!" said the attorney for the defendant, ponderously and impressively, "Vere vere you on Chuly d' nineteent?"

"Hah!" said the witness, "I don' rememper!"

Newspapers which devote a lot of attention and space to alleged European atrocities, seldom give consideration or space to articles such as the following scissored from Labor, Washington, D. C., May 6, 1922:

ORGANIZER JAILED BY CORPORATION POLICE.

Berwind-White controlled officials of Somerset, Pa., arrested and jailed Powers Hapgood, organizer for the United Mine Workers of America, because he refused to leave that town when ordered to do so by Burgess Sober. Sober is an employe of the Berwind-White Company, and takes his orders from the headquarters of the company.

Hapgood has been working in the Somerset mines for several months and has written a book detailing his experiences among nonunionists. To him is given credit for the organization work carried through during recent weeks in Pennsylvania's nonunion stronghold.

Mr. Hapgood is a son of William Hapgood, a business man of Indianapolis, and a nephew of Norman Hapgood, one of the nation's best-known writers. He is a graduate of Harvard and has been giving all his attention to the study of labor problems.

Do you recall the trick shows of a decade ago? Hanlon's Fantasma, Superba? Here is an item that we clipped from an exchange January 14, 1922. A perusal will bring to mind the old saying about the unexpected being the thing that usually happens:

Dispatches from Atlanta, Ga., this week told of the death of the Rev. Michael J. Byrne, chaplain of the Federal prison in that city. Before becoming a clergyman he was none other than one of the famous Byrne Brothers, comedy acrobats, who toured the country for a number of years in a piece called "Eight-Bells," well known to old-time playgoers.

By the way how would you like to see one of those old-time shows again? You and me too.

Those of you who peruse this department every month will recall that we made a prediction to the effect that the railroads would direct their efforts toward changing the Adamson Law or obliterating it entirely. The following news item was printed in the Times-Star, of May 12, 1922, and if one were to dig deeper into the matter, no doubt they would see the fine hand of a railway Baron holding the tiller and directing the course:

ADAMSON LAW'S REPEAL URGED BY LUMBERMEN.

A resolution urging the repeal of the Adamson eight-hour law and other similar legislation enacted by Congress since 1916, which, it is said, has added hundreds of millions of dollars to wages, increased freights and taken from the railroad management control over labor, was adopted by the Appalachian Logging congress in the Hotel Sinton.

The resolution urges that the railroads be again given the right to make individual contracts and to adjust rates of pay and hours of service with their employes. The railroads, it is declared in the resolution, are forced to pay more for labor than the normal rate of pay, and a revision of railroad men's wages is urged. The lumbermen seek lower freight rates on low-grade lumber. It is needed, they declare, if this type of timber is to be brought into the market. The congress closes Thursday night with a banquet at the Hotel Sinton.

The activity of several of the large labor organizations in promoting and establishing banking institutions is what is getting the House of Dollars a bit uneasy, they know that if the wage earners absorb the idea that they can do their own banking it won't be so many years before a change for the better will ensue. Mr. John Thomas Taylor, legislative representative of the American Legion, in a letter to Senators urging passage of bonus legislation said: "The banks of the United States made a war-time profit of $1,747,605,000, which they still retain. These enormous bank profits of nearly one and three-quarter billions of dollars are in addition to the profits which were retained, such as dividends, extra dividends and bonus payments to their own employees during the war period." It is stated that profits of these banks is three times greater than for a similar period prior to the war.

From a letter to the president of the Iowa State Federation of Labor, under date of April 28, 1922, President Stone of the Engineers' Co-operative Bank at Cleveland, said:

"The bank was organized November 1, 1920, therefore it has been in existence, on May 1, eighteen months.

"It is the only co-operative national bank in America—and by 'co-operative' I mean exactly what I say. We pay 4 per cent interest in savings deposits compounded quarterly; we limit the dividends to our stockholders never to exceed 10 per cent. The first year of our existence we paid 6 per cent dividends to stockholders, 4 per cent interest on savings, compounded quarterly and in addition we paid a savings dividend of 1 per cent to all savings depositors, making 5 per cent for the year. We believe that the savings depositors who, by their deposits make the bank possible, should share in the earnings of the bank.

"Co-operative banks are quite common in Europe. This is the first one of its kind in the United States. It is also the first labor bank in the world that ever issued a national bank note, and of course we are quite proud of that.

"The thing that appeals to me is the opportunity it gives to the workers to save their money and conserve their resources, and if we could get each of the labor organizations to do this, within ten days we could dominate the financial policy of the United States.

"Think what it would mean if each organization had a bank, or group of banks, that was operated in the interests of organized labor, and by the combined power of all these banks we could practically dictate what the policy would be, and a lot of these wild-cat schemes and a great deal of the gambling carried on, on the boards of trade, could be stopped. "I think eventually the co-operative plan of banking will revolutionize the banking institution of America."

The statement was also made that the above bank had deposits on March 10, 1921, of $3,994,565.86; whereas, on March 10, 1922, it had deposits of $11,431,849.22.

If the time ever comes—and it is in sight, according to some—when union men and women place their funds in their own banks, we will see the bankers pulling the heaving-chest stunt, like a movie actor. And they will have more reason for inhaling and exhaling air than the aforesaid movie heroes.

A lot of conversation has been distributed relative to the wages paid workmen and working-women before the war, as well as the alleged increase since. The following exhibit will be of interest, as it gives the reader a grasp on the situation which, at best, has not been made any too clear. The statement made is that of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, in the United States Senate, and the comparison (wage and living cost increases) is made with 100 as the base of 1913:

Year	Union Rate of Wage	Cost of Living
1913.....	100.....	100
1914.....	102.....	103
1915.....	102.....	105.1
1916.....	106.....	118.3
1917.....	112.....	142.4
1918.....	130.....	174.4
1919.....	191.....	199.3
1920.....	189.....	216.5

Just keep that memo handy for reference; it may be useful when you are called upon to discuss the attitude of employers who seek to shove all the blame for the excessive cost of living on the wage-earners.

Would business men attempt such a shift as intimated in the previous section of this survey? Well, there are business men that are on the level, and then again there are a number who—but peruse the following from B. C. Forbes, in Forbes' Magazine of recent date, and you get a view which is not common reading matter by any means:

FIRES ARE A GOOD BUSINESS BAROMETER.

"Would this ever have occurred to you? Fire insurance people know in advance the lines of business in which there are to be an excessive number of failures. How? Their records show that, when things are moving towards disaster in any line of business, the number of fires in that particular line increases inordinately. A Hartford fire insurance official tells me that their records on this score are tremendously interesting. They watch most keenly daily records of fires, classify and tabulate them carefully; analyze them thoroughly and learn a lot from them.

"His talk reminded me of the story of the two merchants who met in Chicago. 'That was too bad; I was sorry to see that your store burned down last week.' 'No, no; not last week; next week,' was the reply.

"Fire losses in New York last year reached $40,000,000, against $25,000,000 in 1920, and a good deal less in 1919. The losses are amounting to new maximum figures every day. The records clearly reveal that when prices of all merchandise were advancing, fires were few. Since prices began to fall, fires, like failures, have multiplied.

"We sometimes boast of how far our business morals have been raised above former standards. But evidently the millenium is not yet with us."

As a companion bit of news peruse the following, which tells its own story, and lays a foundation for repeating what editor Forbes said, with trimmings to suit yourself:

WALL STREET HAD A "TIP" ON OIL LEASE.

Washington, April 28.—An advance "tip" given speculators on the New York Stock exchange that the Government had leased the Wyoming Naval Oil reserve to a private company caused trading in the company's stock to jump to more than $30,000,000 in three days, while official information was withheld from the newspapers and the public by Secretaries Fall and Denby, charged Senator Robert M. LaFollette, Republican, of Wisconsin, in the Senate today.

And yet you will hear some two-legged air-churner rise from his chair at a "cold water banquet" and "tell the world" what labor organizations are and how few of them live up to the letter of the contract. Business morals, eh? Oh shush.

Critical surveys of the prohibition situation have been made by men who imagine that they see things, but who are prone to recite the thing they want to convey—to in fact convert the reader to their viewpoint. Here we have a brief recital from the pen of a man who was associated with the late William Marion Reedy, of St. Louis, Mo.: Mr. Charles J. Finger, is one of the real writers of the country, oldtime readers of Reedy's Mirror, will remember many of his exceptional contributions. Mr. Finger is now editor and proprietor of a monthly publication on the order of Reedy's Mirror; it is known as "All's Well," printed at Gayeta Lodge, Fayetteville, Arkansas.

If you have a two-dollar bill that you feel like investing, you can be a monthly reader of "All's Well." The item which we herewith offer is scissored from the May, 1922, number:

DRY AMERICA.

Reports have it that in this city and in that, beer, wine and whiskey "flow like water." That I hold to be the poetic exaggeration or a poltroon lie, according to the motive of the speaker. Still, for those who know where to get it and have the price, liquors may be had. I visited the homes of some dozen friends, and am very glad to say that in each and every one my heart was gladdened with an aperitif of one sort or another. Then, too, we have become a nation of distillers, and hospitable and generous men have learned how to manufacture excellent wine. But commercially speaking—in one place I saw displayed for sale what was listed as "Grain Alcohol" and it looked very much like moonshine whiskey. It was priced at less than a dollar a quart bottle and was sold for medicinal purposes only. Still, there seemed to be an astonishingly large number of sick people abroad, for there were many purchasers. Then again, in the lobby of a hotel, I heard a man offer to "lay down" a case of whiskey for $90, but it was new stuff. The price of a bottle of Old Crow is $11 or $12. But it is very excellent. Best of all my memories in this line is the drinking of a glass of full rich, golden Benedictine. Then indeed did my soul lift itself to the heavens so that I was lost in a moment of exultation. For in that was the life of the earth, and the sea, and the glow of the sun, and for a brief space, I happily forgot the asceticism that has been imposed upon us, asceticism that is the vilest blasphemy.

In Cleveland, a friend offered to lead me to a blind tiger, so we parked the machine near a church where were being held Good Friday services, and, by short cuts, soon reached a minor street of very wretched houses. Loafing lads with hang-dog looks lounged at corners and in doorways, and unkempt children played in the streets. At windows were patched and crookedly hung shades and now and then, from the opened doors came whiffs of foul air laden with the smell of frying fat. Sometimes a furtive, crumpled figure hurried out of one door and into another. For it was a world of darkness and of ugliness, of filth and of disorder. It was a place of pain and of nastiness.

We knocked at a door and it was opened by a fellow with a patch over his eye and a long and curved nose. About him was the aura of spring onions, the which I heartily detest. No word was said and my friend led the way down a dark and narrow passage at the end of which was a door. This he opened and so we came into a kitchen where three old women sat about a stove. One of them with a nod, motioned to a door, and through that we went and came into a lighted room. In there were four small tables about which sat people, as I suppose, "seeing life." There were eight in all, mainly young fellows who might have been barbers, so well were they dressed. There was also a fat fellow in evening clothes and with him were a couple of lust cats for companions. All were smoking bad cigarettes and drinking. Sitting alone reading the "funny sheet" of a paper, was a highly painted woman more than thirty, with bare and brawny arms, who, seeing us, tried to act the part of a lascivious kitten. She made overture with malicious smile and frantically signalled, whereupon the owner of the joint, the fellow with the eye-patch, produced wine in a milk bottle and demanded a dollar in payment. So, having seen what we desired to see, finding the air intolerably filthy and being neither goatish nor thirsty, we paid our footing and were shown out by a rear door, although to be sure, there was an expression of disappointment on the proprietor's face. "But Lord," as old Pepys would have said, "what a company of sad, idle people they are and to what this prevention of drink hath brought us."

The editor of the New York World enjoys nothing quite so keenly as taking the spokesmen for the Anti-Saloon League into camp and slipping to them what we used to call when we run around with stone bruises—some dressing down. Get this from a recent number, which comes by way of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Times, of May 22, 1922:

A SINISTER "PLOT."

The Maryland Association, Against the Prohibition Amendment has committed the unpardonable offense against anti-saloon league principles. It has voted in convention for an alteration of the Volstead act to permit "light wines and beer for beverage purposes." Its action, therefore, has all the aspects of a plot and has been immediately characterized by Wayne B. Wheeler, the league's counsel, as a deliberate attempt to accomplish the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. It seeks to "pledge candidates to this unlawful program" and in effect asks them to promise to "nullify the constitution."

If an association against the interstate commerce act or the transportation act sought to obtain pledges from candidates to modify those measures, nobody, of course, would regard the action as unlawful. It would be considered an entirely justifiable exercise of the free right of citizens to combine to effect the orderly repeal of legislation. Even the anti-saloon league would not scent a plot in it.

But what in the opponent of an ordinary law is only a choleric word becomes flat blasphemy in the opponent of the Volstead act. Any attempt to interfere with the perfect work of prohibition becomes by that token nullification. The Maryland association may freely attempt the alteration of any other statute, but in acting against Volsteadism it is liable to prosecution for treason.

While referring to Chattanooga, we reproduce herewith an news item from the same paper that printed the World comment; it is dated May 22, 1922, and Brother Croskey, who supplied the item wrote on the top of it:

NOT SO BAD FOR PROHIBITION!

The regular Saturday night drunks, most of whom remained sober two or three weeks after the death of Rufus Patrick, who died from alcohol poisoning a month ago, have recovered from their fright and are again partaking generously of the juice of the corn. Fifty-one "plain drunks" were arrested during the eighteen hours from Saturday-noon to 6 o'clock last night. Of this number, fourteen were taken by police. Deputies arrested the remainder.

The total number of arrests for the eighteen-hour period was seventy-four. Forty-nine of this number, or two-thirds of the total, were arrested by county officers. The police register shows but twenty-five entries.

Widespread discussion is the seeming order of the day, leading papers with here and there an exception, are taking the hide off the dry law and holding the "holier than thou" bunch to merciless scrutiny and condemnation. Here is an editorial from the Chicago Tribune of recent date that shows the trend of the times among the opinion builders of the country:

PLAIN TALK ON PROHIBITION.

The reign of abuse which has kept respectable people from venturing to differ in the least particular from the dictates of the prohibition zealots is passed. Three university presidents, men of distinction, men occupying positions most sensitive to public attack, have failed to accept the prohibition formula.

Prof. Fisher, of Yale, believes that a majority of students are opposed to it. Prof. Hopkins, of Dartmouth, believes that under the present method of enforcement it is breeding disrespect of the law. President Harry Pratt Judson, of the University of Chicago, believes that the law was premature and that "there ought to be a wider basis of public opinion before attempting any such radical change."

Unquestionably, prohibition as interpreted and conducted under the reign of the bigots is losing ground in public opinion. Unless a more temperate attitude is taken a strong reaction seems quite possible.

From the same publication we clip another editorial, which we feel may interest readers who endeavor to keep in touch with current events. Bishop Lawrence was generally quoted as being opposed to prohibition, but he did not quite go that length; however, he did say a mouthful, and some of his associates in the conference, so we are advised by newspaper comment, squirmed during Dr. Lawrence's address. The editorial we referred to follows:

FREE SPEECH UPHELD.

Bishop Lawrence, of Massachusetts, in a report to the diocesan convention, asks if it is not time to recognize the right of every citizen who does not favor prohibition to say so and in public. "Surely it is competent for every citizen to speak, work and do everything consistent within the law to have a law either amended or rescinded."

There can be but one answer, it seems to us, to such a question. But the very fact that an eminent churchman puts the question involves a serious implication. Bishop Lawrence obviously feels as many others do, that a sort of denial of free speech exists in the case of prohibition, not by act of authority but by a certain public coercion. It seems that to criticize prohibition is to open oneself to the charge of being almost immoral or irreligious.

Undoubtedly the organized movement for prohibition was moralistic and drew its strength from religious feeling. People of the most conscientious character were drawn to the cause because of the degradation of human lives through drunkenness, and this evil, apparent in so many manifestations, procured for the idea of absolute prohibitory law a force it could not have had without moral and religious emotion.

But moral and religious emotion sometimes passes into moral and religious tyranny or becomes the unconscious ally of oppression. Bishop Lawrence's query indicates that a sense of unjust repression has reached the point of protest and we think this is inevitable. Prohibition is a drastic measure, against which the instinctive individualism of the American is bound to rebel and has rebelled with very widespread and serious consequences. The inference that men and women of responsible character and religious devotion must not voice doubt or dissent is breaking down. They are hesitating less and less to express publicly their concern over the effects of prohibition or even their disapproval of the principle itself.

Certainly discussion should be free, and especially, we think, in the churches; for if the tide is turning against prohibition, it is most desirable that an intelligent opinion, developed by free discussion without fanaticism, shall protect the country from a return to the saloon and help to work out a system of control which shall be acceptable to the general conscience and therefore enforceable and effectual.—Chicago Tribune.

Just by way of adding variety to the literary dish, we present herewith several clippings with headings as we found them:

EMPHASIS ON FIGHT.

All Ireland asks is a fighting chance.—Wall Street Journal.

WILL IS A BRIGHT BOY.

Will Hays hitches his wagon to several stars.—Asheville Times.

PERFECT GENTLEMAN.

A telephone pole never hits a motor car except in self-defense.—Canton Press.

NOT SO GOOD.

The rep that Germany is getting out of reparations is a bad one.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

ALWAYS ON DECK.

Even though you keep on discharging your duties, you never get rid of them.—Greenville Piedmont.

HOW COME?

English law prohibits a man from marrying his mother-in-law. This is our idea of the limit of useless legislation.—New York American.

ACTION.

An easterner who lately saw the Yellowstone geysers observed that somebody had been putting too many raisins in them.—New York Tribune.

SURE.

Friends of prohibition should reflect that the only laws that ever enforced themselves are of the kind that Isaac Newton discovered.—Boston Herald.

NOW, GEORGE.

W. L. George, British novelist, declares there are 65 species of women—no more. However, Mr. George has been married but a short time.—Detroit Free Press.

One of our boys on the West Coast wants to know if Attorney Untermeyer criticized Wall Street when the Lockwood committee was holding its hearings last fall. We have a number of clippings relative to the hearings, the one herewith reproduced being from the New York Globe, of December 29, 1921, gives a fairly comprehensive account of the incident:

The New York Stock Exchange came in for sizzling comment by Samuel Untermeyer today, when he announced that the Lockwood committee would not compel unions in the building trades to incorporate under a State act.

"So long as our State and federal governments are content supinely to tolerate and the courts continue to enforce the despotic decrees of that Monument of Monuments to the folly and incompetency of government in the person of the New York Stock Exchange, which remains unincorporated and unregulated, and whose self-made laws in the support of legalized gambling are above and beyond the law, and so long as the Stock Exchange can continue to successfully resist all forms of regulation and restriction upon its pernicious activities, and so long as employers may combine in unincorporated associations, unregulated by law—any attempt to enforce incorporation and regulation of labor unions can be justified only by their defiant continuance of existing abuses and illegality in their practices," Mr. Untermeyer announced.

In the same letter from the referred to member which produced the previous clipping, is another query relative to Dr. Frank Crane's attitude on Valsteadism. The best answer that we can offer is to print a letter clipped from the New York World of July 26, 1921:

FRENCH TEMPERANCE.

To the Editor of The World:

Everybody drinks here but there seems to be no drunkenness. The French, as far at least as the traveler observes, do not get drunk. They have few strong liquors but a vast number of mild drinks. The thing that strikes an American is the cheerfulness of all the people. They enjoy life as they go along.—Dr. Frank Crane, July 22, 1921.

Could column upon column of space offer a more eloquent and sensible reason for light wines and beer than the above, coming from one of our strongest advocates of the Volstead act? Let's hear from Anderson, Crafts & Co., now.

New York, July 24.

T. J. L.

.

There has been a lot of incomplete press matter offered to the readers of daily papers in connection with the Governor of Oklahoma's criticism of the Volstead law. The following from the Daily Oklahoman, Oklahoma City, tells the story with accuracy:

VOLSTEAD TAKES THE "COUNT."

Volstead act took the count Tuesday when Gov. Robertson swung a vicious assortment of adverbs in a one-round boxing contest before the luncheon meeting of the Rotary Club at the Huckins Hotel.

Gov. Robertson declared the enforcement of the prohibitory law has utterly broken down. The state executive said he had no corrective measure to offer. He said he was a prohibitionist before the enactment of the act and never, under any condition, would he tolerate the open saloon again, but he said he wanted to give the folks some facts and leave the answer to them.

"I think any man, whether he is in public office, the pulpit or in private life, is a coward who refuses to express himself on the facts regarding a law that he sees making criminals of thousands of good men who are decent citizens in every respect save one," Gov. Robertson asserted.

Here are a few of the Governor's remarks on prohibition as it is today in Oklahoma:

"Nearly every home in Oklahoma has its own hooch, or corn, or whatever you want to call it."

"You can get corn whisky in every county in Oklahoma. You can step right out of the Huckins and get it. You can't go to a picnic or get-together in the country without some fellow having a load of it on the hip."

"You don't need to tell me that every one of the seventy-seven sheriffs in Oklahoma is a crook. I know better. Most of the sheriffs and most of the county attorneys are trying to enforce the law, but they make it faster than the peace officers can break it."

"There is a horde of federal revenue men in Oklahoma fighting the bootleggers, but they don't seem to be getting anywhere."

"The jails of the counties of the state are filled with men thrown in for offending against the liquor laws and those jails that are not full ought to be. My mail is cluttered daily with appeals for the release from jail of men with families who want to get out to go home and put in a crop."

"The penitentiary at McAlester has more than 1,700 men in it. The reformatory at Granite has more than 700 boys locked up—a lot of the individuals in both places there on account of violating the liquor laws."

"Congress slipped up on our blind side during the war and put this prohibition legislation over."

.

There are some of the roosters on the side lines who habitually look a gift horse in the mouth, who are now spilling language which means that the call to the White House means that the Gary crowd were about due to make material changes and it looked good to garner a little loose political dope for the fall elections; therefore and whereas, it was good dope to make it appear that the chief executive of the nation was making inquiries as to the relationships existing between employer and employee. The twelve-hour day was good stuff to get rid of for several reasons, not the least of which was that the poor devils engaged in the industry of fabricating steel were being burned up faster than substitutes could be supplied to take the vacancies. Remember that old bromide about "Politics make strange bed fellows?" Well, it's working overtime right now, for the coming elections are "the most important since before the world war," as was stated in a political caucus or conference recently held at Columbus, Ohio.

Wait and see what happens in the next five months; you'll be surprised unless you are immune to that sort of feeling.

.

Quite a lot of interest is shown by the newspaper reading public about the new ocean record which it is expected will be made by the Majestic, which in addition to other freight, is carrying a special consignment of meats from Chicago, in an effort—so it is said—to beat all previous records.

Readers who are interested in equipment will peruse the following news item with more than passing interest:

BIG FORTUNE SPENT IN OUTFITTING SHIP.

Southampton, England, May 23.—The outfitting of the liner Majestic, 56,000 tons, which made her maiden trip to New York this month, was a colossal affair and quite on a par with her size, which is the largest in the world. Seventeen tons of blankets, 16 miles of sheets, 10½ miles of bed covers were being utilized for the sleeping apartments.

For the dining rooms there were 19 miles of table cloths and 29,000 pieces of glassware. China and earthenware totaled 80,000 pieces.

The electro-plate and cutlery consists of 50,000 pieces, with an extra 5,500 pieces for the French restaurant.

The crew of the ship will wear something like five and one-half miles of aprons during a passage.

We clipped that item from the Times-Star, of May 23, 1922.

.

